FOREVER NEW

"Behold, I make all things new."—Revelations 21:5

By WILLIAM ROBERT CATTON

Decatur, Illinois

Here is our message today: "The Christian Is Always Hopeful!" If you are discouraged today; if you are disillusioned; if you are tired; will you hear this message, "The Christian Is Always Hopeful." The Christian is always hopeful, because he has abundant reason for his hope.

His hopefulness is based on Faith in God. He does not need to be disillusioned, because he never needs to build his life on illusions. The truth, the reality of life, is ample ground on which to build. God is. This is God's world. God loves people. God loves you, and has a plan for you. There is a glorious destiny for all the sons of men. The Christian believes this. God's word has told him this. Jesus of Nazareth has told him this. His own conscience and his growing experience have told him this. He has good reason to be hopeful. He need not build his life upon the shifting sands of fond illusion: he builds it on the solid rock of truth, and Christian faith, and against all the shocks of disappointment, disillusionment and doubt, the storms of life that wreck the shallow hopes of other men, the Christian stands secure. He has reason for his hope.

And Christian hope is based on more than this. It is grounded in our Christian good-will for one another. The joyous buoyant, exuberant mood is sustained by our friendships with one another. It is the solitary person who grows despondent. Those who love, and are busy serving those they love, are the happy ones. It was to his very closest friends that Jesus spoke this great secret of the happy, hopeful life, "Whosoever would become great among you must be the servant of all." The more people you love, the more you give yourself to those you love, the greater your own soul; the happier you become.

And the Christian hope is based on more than this. It is grounded in the reality of the eternal life. The Christian understands that he is always young. He is always looking forward. The future is infinitely greater, for the Christian, than the past. He does not live as those for whom the joys of life are fading. They are forever new.

This world is fundamentally good! The more we really know it the better we will like it. The people of the world are fundamentally good: the more we really know them the better we will love them, and the more we love them, the more joyous our own lives will be. Life for each one of us is fundamentally good: the more of it we live, the more surely we will know this. Our heavenly Father is the father of a splendid family, a young and growing family, an eager, hopeful family. Our living Lord is "making all things new." We are eternally young!

News Flashes

Dr. and Mrs. F. C. Lester are the lesson writers for the new Adult Students' Quarterly.

Rev. Emmanuel S. Hedgebeth has been elected president of the Daytona Beach Ministerial Association.

Dr. Howell D. Davies, whose article appears in this issue, will be a visitor at Elon College, January 23-25.

The Mid-Winter Meeting of the national boards and organizations of our Congregational Christian denomination will be held at Cleveland Hotel, Cleveland, Ohio, on February 7-10.

Rev. Philip Gordon Scott of New Haven, Connecticut, will succeed Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer at Mt. Pleasant Church, Washington, D. C. In its new setting the church will be known as the Westmoreland Church.

Franklinton Winter Institute is in session during January. Each of the following representatives of the Home Boards will give a week of instruction at the Institute: Ira D. Black, Philip Widenhouse and Stanley U. North. Ralph Woodward of Yale will be among the instructors also.

The Annual Study Conference will be presented by the Commission on Evangelism and Devotional Life in First Church, Springfield, Mass., January 31 - February 1. Lecturers include Robert I. Eddy, Fred S. Buschmeyer, Allen I. Lorimer and Theodore M. Green.

Miss Harriet Summerville, whose article appears on page 16, is a missionary representing our Reidsville Church. Rev. Joe A. French, pastor, writes: "Our church folk are proud of the work Harriet is doing and believe that she is a real able missionary working in a field where she has interest."

The Honorable William Zimmerman, Washington, D. C., acting commissioner of U. S. Indian Affairs, and Mrs. Harper Sibley, Rochester, N. Y., prominent church woman and president of the United Council of Church Women, will be among the principal speakers at the annual meeting of the

A letter has been sent to President Truman from the Congregational Christian Council for Social Action expressing the earnest hope that the military not play a dominant role in our relations with other countries and commending his insistence upon the development of atomic energy primarily by civilians. It was signed jointly by Arthur S. Wheelock, Chairman of the Council's International Relations Committee and Herman F. Reissig, its secretary. The letter expressed good wishes for the President as he faces heavy responsibilities and expresses the wish that in the event of any changes in the official family Mr. Truman will "look for leaders whose background and habit of mind completely exempt them from the charge that they 'think primarily in military terms.'"

The National Executive of the American Christian Palestine Committee, meeting in executive session on December 30, unanimously adopted a resolution hailing the new State of Israel and its increasing international recognition, and called for the consolidation of a separate political existence for the Arab part of Palestine. The strongly-worded resolution also demanded the withdrawal of all invading Arab forces from the State of Israel and called upon Great Britain to forsake her unfriendly attitude toward the new Israel. Praising the government of Israel for the "scrupulous manner" in which it respected the sanctity of the shrines and Holy Places, the Christian group especially singled out the recent Israel action which "in the midst of a war . . . offered all facilities for the Christians in Israel to celebrate the Holy Day of Christmas in keeping with the dignity and tradition of that revered festival." The statement was issued by the Rev. Karl Baehr, Executive Secretary and Dr. Carl Herman Voss, Chairman of the Executive Council.

SUFFOLK CHURCHES MAKE HISTORY.

The following article was carried by the Suffolk News-Herald, and the Norfolk Virginian-Pilot announcing an unusual Watchnight Service which was held in Suffolk:

"Presbyterians, Methodists, Episcopalians, Congregational Christians, and others will join in the celebration of the Holy Communion as the central feature in a union Watch-Night Service to be held in Main Street Methodist Church, Friday night at 11:00 and closing at midnight. A Southern Baptist minister and an Episcopal Church rector will stand alongside clergymen of other churches of Suffolk as the Lord's Supper is administered to their united congregations.

"The spirit of community unity and brotherhood will be further symbolized by the presence of a Jewish Rabbi—Dr. Murray Kantor—and members of his congregation.

"A committee from the Suffolk-Nansemond Ministers' Association composed of the Rev. John A. Winslow, rector of St. Paul's Episcopal Church; Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor of the Suffolk Christian Church; and the Rev. John Blakemore, pastor of Main Street Methodist Church, is in charge of arrangements. It is believed that in the more than two hundred years of Suffolk history this is the first time such a service has been held.

"Combined choirs of the Suffolk churches will assemble one hour before the time of the service, and hold a rehearsal of a special musical number in readiness for the opening of the service at 11:00 o'clock. Mr. David C. Babcock, minister of music of the host church will preside at the organ; and the host pastor, the Rev. John Blakemore, will preside over the service of worship, which will be broadcast over WLPN. The services will be open to all whether one wishes to receive the elements of the Holy Supper or not.

"For the convenience of the assembled congregation in following the service the order of serving the Lord's Supper will be that which is printed in the Methodist Hymnal. The ministers have expressed the desire that members of all faiths will feel free to attend the service closing the old year and welcoming in the new."

RELIEF AND RECONSTRUCTION.

Information received from Dr. A. D. Stauffacher, Executive Secretary of The Missions Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, sets forth the plans of our denomination for continuing the work being done for world relief through the Congregational Christian Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction.

Promotion for CWVR as such ended December 31, 1948, but the tragic need for relief still exists to an alarming extent throughout the world. The General Council has provided for a budget of $1,000,000 annually for Relief and Reconstruction as a part of "Our Christian World Mission." In state conferences outside of the Southern Convention these funds will be provided through a unified budget. Since our funds are all designated in the Convention, we will give to Relief and Reconstruction as a designated special just as we have contributed to CWVR.

Beginning January 1, 1949, the Mission Board of the Conention will promote Relief and Reconstruction gifts for world relief just as it has through CWVR. These gifts will be a part of the special gift portion of the Mission Board budget adopted by the Convention at its session in 1948, but not a part of the apportionment.

Many of our churches have contributed to CWVR through the sacrificial Giving Plan and by special offerings. These should continue for Relief and Reconstruction. Envelopes will be provided by The Missions Council, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y., for these gifts as in the past for CWVR. Please write The Missions Council for envelopes and promotional literature for Relief and Reconstruction.

Many of our churches and individuals have contributed CARE packages and other relief gifts to individuals in wartorn areas. Others have contributed money generously to Church World Service and other non- and inter-denominational relief agencies. These gifts did not receive denominational credit

In the future all such gifts (CARE packages, etc.) should be sent through denominational channels. These gifts will be credited to the local church for Relief and Reconstruction.

This is important—Churches and individuals are urged to send Relief and Reconstruction giving to whatever purpose (such as CARE and other non- or inter- denominational agencies) as well as regular gifts for world relief as a part of Relief and Reconstruction through the Convention. Designated gifts will go to the purpose designated and credit will be given therefor to the Convention and churches from which they come.

It is urged that all Relief and Reconstruction gifts be sent to The Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., though they may be sent direct to Mr. Harold Belcher, Treasurer of Relief and Reconstruction Funds, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Executive Secretary, Mission Board.

GIFTS FOR C.W.V.R.

Mrs. Hawley Willson, Executive Secretary of the Congregational Christian Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction has sent an urgent memorandum to all Conference Chairmen asking them to notify churches and church organizations that gifts to C.W.V.R. must be in the hands of the Convention Treasurer no later than January 15 to count on the 1948 goal.

Church treasurers of our Convention are urged to mail their church contributions without delay to: Dr. William T. Scott, Supt., Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, Elon College, N. C.

Treasurers of Women's Societies of our North Carolina Churches should send their "Thank Offering" contributions to: Miss Susie D. Allen, Treasurer, 612 West Lane Street, Raleigh, N. .

Treasurers of Women's Societies of the Eastern Virginia Churches should send their "Thank Offering" contributions to: Mrs. W. B. Williams,

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MAN OF THE YEARS.

One influential publication has followed its established custom of announcing a "Man of the Year." From the American view point, only a few people will quarrel with Time's selection of President Truman for this current distinction.

This modest publication would, however, submit another name; man of the year and of the years: Jesus of Nazareth. By every adequate test, he is the man of the year and of the century. His influence is limited to no one country, year or century. His popularity is contingent on no particular election or loss of election. Indeed, Jesus Christ seems to grow morally and spiritually taller with each succeeding generation. He increases with the ages. Make way, all ye succeeding generations, for Jesus the Christ!

Dr. John R. Mott speaks out of a wide experience when he declares that "there are today millions more men and women than a few years ago who have come into an authentic, firsthand knowledge and experience of Christ." He concludes that "Christ has never been better preached and better lived than at the present fateful time in lands where we may have least expected it."

Yes, for millions of people Jesus has been the man of the year. In his name the hungry have been fed and the naked clothed. Remembering that Jesus declared that those who lose their lives for his sake find them, thousands of Christians have believed that if they are to deserve his name they must give themselves fully in the kind of service which Jesus rendered to his fellows. Through Jesus has come to multitudes a vision of an eternal life of moral and spiritual transformation with the love and adoration of God as at once its means and its goal.

Jesus remains the man of the hour. Every hour countless comrades look to him for guidance, and go forward with the discharge of difficult duties in his strength. The sun never sets on his vast empire. As crucial problems arise in many lands, solutions will be sought and found in the spirit and teachings of Christ. For six months Christians all over the land will be studying the life of Christ. Out of this reverent and painstaking study will come new insights and achievements. Son of Man, Son of God, Man of the ages and the hours; his going forth is from the ends of the earth.

TIME MARCHES ON.

Amsterdam and Columbus should assure 1948 a permanent niche in religious history. The continued ministry of the churches through overseas relief was impressive and praiseworthy. A substantial number of missionaries, thoroughly furnished unto every good work, went out to represent Christ and his church on distant frontiers. New and more adequate churches were erected to the glory of God. These special emphases are in addition to the regular but massive programs of the various churches and denominations.

Many heart-warming and soul-stirring events have been reported. Here is an announcement that the Rev. Jacob Deshazer, member of the 1942 Doolittle Tokyo raiders, has arrived in Yokohama as a missionary. The 35-year-old ex-Air Force bombardier went back to Japan "to return good for evil" and to realize a decision made during 34 months confinement in China—"to rescue the people through love of God."

But all is not well. Few of our churches are filled regularly to capacity. Prayer and church attendance have been crowded off the agenda in countless homes. Many nominal Christians have no consistent program of stewardship. Consequently our Kingdom enterprises progress at a retarded rate. Maximum efforts are required to produce minimum results. The expansion of the church at home and abroad is notable only by the exception rather than the rule.

The 1948 Report of the State Board of Corrections of the Commonwealth of Virginia states, "It is truly remarkable that the number of commitments to jail, on charges involving drunkenness, continues to increase month after month and year after year. The total commitments for being drunk, or drunk and disorderly for the first nine months of this fiscal year totaled 36,157, or an average of slightly more than 4,000 per month. These figures, of course, do not include those confined in overnight police lockups for the various towns and cities of the state for which the figures are not available." In addition, 3,085 were confined for operating motor vehicles under the influence of intoxicants during the first nine months of this fiscal year. In 1943, 14,902 people were sent to Virginia jails for liquor offenses and 1,003 of this number were charged with driving under the influence. In 1947, just four years later, 46,614 Virginians were committed for drunkenness and 4,155 were charged with drunken driving.

Communism abroad and secularism at home threaten the foundations of our long-established gains. "What shall we say to these things? If God be for us, who can be against us? . . . Nay, in all things we are more than conquerors, through him that loved us."

NEW YEAR OPTIMISM.

In the chorus of gloomy predictions as the New Year approaches there comes a refreshing note of optimism in a statement made by Arthur S. Wheelock of White Plains, New York, Chairman of the International Relations Department of the Council for Social Action: "Despite the perils of the present situation there is in the Christian faith a basis for continuing and realistic peace action. It is important for Christian churchmen to keep a clear perspective today in the struggle for world peace and justice and not yield to the mood of despair. For Christians, a premature despair is even less excusable than a premature optimism."

"The tide has begun to turn toward free, cooperative societies in Europe, and the constructive elements of the European Recovery Program have begun to count. It provides encouraging evidence of America's willingness to meet her international responsibilities.

"The atom bomb, China, Palestine, and many other problems still press for wise solutions. There is a long way to go before a world of free men can stand on their own feet, healthy, strong and without fear or despair. But Christmas has reminded us that the saving power of God's love is still at work in the world. Christ was born in a time of terror and darkness, but He came with tidings of great joy for all people, tidings that the Almighty and Everlasting God has entered human life.

"Christians can go forward with hope and courage. We do not know what the year 1949 will mean for mankind, but, we who believe that in Jesus of Nazareth God revealed His love and power, may be sure that His purpose is finally beyond defeat."

Our Christian Orientation and Prospect

By REV. HOWELL D. DAVIES, D. D.
Mid-West Regional Secretary of The Missions Council.

Our simple, common conception of the Kingdom of God is an order in which God is recognized, in which plans, motives and goals are referred to his will, a world of changed character as well as ideal blueprints, a world of prevailing ideas like those of Jesus.

It would seem a simple thing to get one's bearings with reference to this order, but the very first glance around reveals an almost hopeless confusion of understanding and counsels. The Barthians say we should sit back and watch God do things. There is a babel of opinions and tongues as to what is Christian and unchristian. There is a sickening superficiality of comprehension, standards and the conception of Christianity as of the spirit rather than of the letter. There is disillusionment. Standards considered unchangeable by one generation are flung aside by the new generation which considers itself as good as the old. There is cynicism because of intransigent human nature and humanity's fairly regular lapse into heathenism after a try with some noble ideals. There is the "well, I give it up" feeling in the presence of difficult tasks and difficult people. Futility hangs over Christian workers like a pall and they wonder and ask, "Are we after all accomplishing anything?"

I.

How can a Christian get his bearings in a hurricane like that of our generation—of war, materialism, race prejudice and a thousand varieties of selfishness, individual and social? Without bearings a Christian has no heart to carry on. Here are some suggestions for him as a serious but questioning worker in the vineyard of the Lord, especially the larger vineyard of the world of many countries and many peoples.

1. Let him take himself in hand. He just can't sit back without ceasing to be a Christian. He knows that God can be doing only as he and his fellow Christians are doing. He is like a bicycle. He must keep going or fall. He has to make his choice between going on with his hope, faith and effort or cease calling himself a Christian. This consideration should be of some help to him as he remembers that to the degree that he stops, so does the Kingdom.

2. Let him choose between two beliefs—that the Kingdom is surely coming, however slowly, or that the world is headed for the pit.

3. Let him remember what has happened regularly with the Kingdom since the day of Jesus, so that he will know what to expect in the way of faithlessness, desertion, hindrances, frustrations, and open hostility, as well as victories and sweeping advances.

4. Let him fill his mind with certain axioms such as: Truth crushed to earth shall rise again; clouds can hide but cannot blot out the sun; Christ calls nobody to go on a fool's errand, though even the twelve disciples felt that way at times; Rome wasn't built in a day, much less can the Kingdom of God; a sovereign never abdicates, so the Christian won't quit until God does.

5. Let him appraise afresh "the power of God unto salvation."

6. Let him remember that the struggle at the beginning of the process (and that is just where we are—we are closer to the cross end than the crown end) is just as important as the pre-victory effort, anticipation and thrill. It is less exciting to dig around in the vineyard and to prune dead branches, but it is just as important as gathering the fruit.

7. Let him know how to appraise the difficulties. They are so great that only the grace of God channeled through consecrated followers of Jesus is "sufficient for these things." Literature, educational techniques, radio and other things are useful tools, but they alone cannot Christianize the world. Any optimism based on underestimated difficulties is inviting disillusionment.

8. Let him train his eyes to see where God is winning out and have Sherwood Eddy's joy as he said, "I saw God do it." There are individuals, Christian groups and churches powerfully moved of God.

II. What Is the Prospect Before Us?

1. Continued recovery and gain in the war-torn countries. The fellowship of the Christian churches in Germany, organized under Niemöller, represents 35,000,000 Protestants. This "cooperative fellowship of Christian Churches" was formed March 10, 1948, the first time for virtually all non-Roman Catholic churches to be related to each other in a co-operative movement. The first post-war missionary went from Germany April 1, to China. The German delegates to Whitby last year declared there was no hope for Germany except in the Gospel. They reported "Collections for missions were reaching phenomenal totals" and meetings were crowded to the doors. Four times as many missionary candidates were forthcoming as could be accepted. Of Germany's pre-war 1,560 missionaries, 400 are still at work,

SUFFOLK LETTER.

At Christmas time the pastor of a good and friendly people has many things to make him happy, to bless his own life, and to bring joy to the home in the parsonage. But how about the minister who is giving full time service such as our Convention Superintendent, or our College President, or anyone of several fulltime secretaries in our denomination who give of their best throughout the year and miss much that comes to the pastor and his home at Christmastime? I have never known how much or how little they may or may not share in the overflowing kindness of their people at such times. I am afraid they miss something to which they are entitled. For instance, we may rally to the Christian Orphanage, and make glad the hearts of the Superintendent and matrons by our devotion to the Orphanage, but isn't there something "personally extra" that makes one feel that one's constituency appreciates one? Well, I do not know. I have a feeling that somebody could wonder at times. Let's you and I, as we read these lines, sort of make a mental note and find some occasion to say to our "beloved servants" a kindly thank you that will make their hearts glad. And it is not at all necessary to wait until next Christmas.

It takes so little sometimes to lift a load. And just as little in neglect, or unkind criticism, or unthoughtfulness can add considerable to life's burdens. If all of us could only remember to be grateful and loving how much happier our own lives would be, and how much more joy there would be for others with whom we come in contact. So often we are not our best selves, for at no time would we throw a stumblingblock in anyone's path—we would not think of doing so, but there is always that inner battle within ourselves. Paul knew it and confessed it, "For what I would do, that I do not; but what I hate, that I do. . . . When I would do good evil is present." Perhaps in the very beginning of this New Year we should all think about these things. When Paul observed his own wretchedness and wondered how he was to be delivered from it a light shone on his page and into his heart, and he said, "I thank God through Jesus Christ our Lord."

Paul was not made smaller by looking in at the citadel of self, and then looking up to Him for whom he was willing to suffer all things, but rather he became big enough to catch the spirit of greatness as few mortals have ever caught it. Let us set out in this another year to see how much we can do for others. What good things we can say about them. How much good we can see in our Church, our College, our CHRISTIAN SUN, our Mission Board, our Board of Superannuation, our Board of Christian Education to praise. Let us see how much we can help our Superintendent in all his work, his goings, and comings, his planning and promotion, and all the work ad workers in our Convention office. May we not begin right at home with a spirit of appreciation and gratitude? No good advice or counsel; no, nor New Year's resolutions, will matter much unless we have the spirit of Christ—unless like Paul we come to the way of knowing that he is our Deliverer, our Saviour and our Lord. Paul put it, "Making melody in your heart . . . giving thanks always for all things unto God."

NEWS FROM THE VALLEY.

The Committee on the Ministry and ginia Valley Central Conference met at Bethel Church, near Elkton, Va., at Bethel Church near Elkton, Va., at 6:45 o'clock, Thursday evening, December 30, for the purpose of examination of James W. Madren (son of Rev. and Mrs. Silas E. Madren), ministerial student at Elon College, whose application for license to preach had been duly received. The Committee on the Ministry voted unanimously, recommending that James be licensed. The Executive Committee acted upon the recommendation and authorized the president of the Conference to proceed with the ceremony of licensing of the candidate.

A number of friends had assembled at the church for the occasion and following a brief worship period, the Rev. R. E. Newton preached the sermon, the Rev. Clyde Koon read the scripture, the Rev. Roy D. Coulter gave the charge, and the Rev. S. E. Madren offered the prayer, following which the president of the Conference, Rev. Robert A. Whitten, licensed the candidate to preach the Gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ wherever the providence of God may call him.

It is our earnest prayer that God may call laborers into the harvest that by the power of His Spirit and the service of His ministers there may be light instead of darkness, peace instead of war and healing for the world's wounds. We pray also that those whom God calls and sends forth into His vineyard may ever prove faithful to the sacred task.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

I. PETER.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

Simon Peter was the son of a successful Galilean fisherman named John. He was born in the little town of Bethsaida which was on the northwest side of the Sea of Chinnereth just to the south of Capernaum which later became Peter's home. Bethsaida may be translated to mean "house of fishing."

Peter, like his brother, Andrew, was originally a friend and follower of John the Baptist before coming to know Jesus and it is more than probable that he witnessed the baptism of our Lord. He was married and in later years his wife was his companion on his missionary journeys.

This man Symeon, the Greek name by which he was known, was vigorous, courageous, resourceful and particularly during his younger years, very impulsive. Shortly after their first meeting he was the companion of Jesus on a journey through Galilee but when the journey had been completed Peter returned to his work as a fisherman and did not actually accept the call to "follow" the Master until after the miracle which was wrought in his own home: the healing of his mother-in-law.

After Peter had accepted his "call" to the discipleship it is likely Jesus stayed regularly in his home whenever he visited Capernaum.

Peter's journeys carried him to Syria, Asia Minor, the ancient city of Babylon, and finally Rome. There is a legend that Peter lived for twenty-five years in Rome and served as minister of the church there but this is not historically substantiated; in fact there is evidence to the contrary. We do not know how he met his death but it is quite certain that he was martyred shortly after a great fire in Rome during July of 46 A. D.

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

I. IN THE HOME.

Superintendent Scott invited me to attend a special meeting of the Executive Committee of the Western North Carolina Christian Conference. The committee met in Asheboro in December, 1948. Among other items of business, the present status of THE CHRISTIAN SUN was discussed. Mr. W. H. Freeman, a member of the committee suggested that in his judgment, members of the church would be glad to have more written in THE CHRISTIAN SUN on the subject of Christian living. This occurred to me as a good suggestion and I am preparing a series of four articles on this subject for publication in THE CHRISTIAN SUN:

1. Christian Living in the Home.
2. Christian Living in the Community.
3. Christian Living in the Church.
4. Christian Living in the World.

This article deals with Christian living in the home. What do you mean by Christian living? What kind of living is Christian living? How does a Christian conduct himself in his home? How does he spend his days? What does he do day in and day out?

Assuming that he is the head of the house, the father of the family, his first duty is to make sure that he is a Christian, then, to inform himself as to what is expected of him and what his duties and responsibilities are.

His principle source of information is the Bible, the record of the revelation of God to man. In the Bible, the way of life is made plain so that no man need err therein. If he is a Christian, he will make the Bible his daily companion. He will hide its truths in his heart that the strength of the Almighty may augment his strength that he will not fail in any undertaking. No Christian will rely on his own strength but will look to God for ability to achieve in his name.

He will surely learn that his help is in God—that men have found God in prayer and that if he wants to know God and His power promised to man, he must come to Him in prayer. God is our strength and help. Prayer is the means by which He may be found. If a man shall come to God in prayer believing, not doubting, he shall have those things for which he prays. The professed Christian who neglects to read his Bible and to pray daily need not be distressed when he fails to overcome temptation but rather is overcome by temptation. Faith is the victory that overcomes the world. Prayer is the power that changes the world.

There are simple fruits of Christian living that should be self-evident: gentleness, kindness, patience and forbearance. The true Christian will hold himself in tow, control his temper and bridle his tongue. He will not behave himself unseemly. His language will be chaste, never harsh or profane. He will not be given to idle words but to sanity and to good judgment approved unto God. It will be his purpose to portray the spirit of Christ in his daily living.

He will realize fully his responsibility in the home and to the other members of his family—that it is his responsibility to instruct in the things of the spirit, to help to make plain the way of life and to guide all members of his household in the ways of righteousness, himself leading the way. As one of old he will say from his heart, "As for me and my house we will serve the Lord."

In this day when there seems to be so many enemies of the home—divorce, strong drink, infidelity, useless extravagance, sabbath desecration, and down right sin, a man who would be a Christian in his own home and keep his home Christian needs fresh supplies of grace daily. He must have the conscious presence of Christ and the sure guidance of His spirit that he himself may evade the pitfalls of life and guide his family and home safely through the treacherous snares of time.

Yes, there is such a thing as Christian living even in this materialistic age. It is possible for a man to live the Christian life in his home and in society. Bible reading, prayer, Christian consideration, kindness and love, are unmistakable evidences of the Christian life. May these Christian virtues be found in you for they add up unto eternal life and to everlasting happiness.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The first of the New Year is a good time for resolutions. Resolutions may be kept or they may be broken. I believe that it was Benjamin Franklin who said, "I spend New Year's day making resolutions and the remaining 364 days breaking them." Resolutions amount to very little unless they are put into effect. This is a good time for the Sunday schools and churches of the Convention to resolve to give their college, the only institution of higher learning that our Southern Convention has, more generous support. We close 1948 short of the goal set by the Convention. This is most unfortunate. In this day of higher salaries and cost of operation, increased funds are required if the college is to balance its budget and stay out of the red.

Some of our churches set good examples. They pay their entire apportionments for the college at the beginning of the year. This is advantageous to the church and the college and makes for more satisfactory operation as the days pass. The college expresses gratitude for the support given by our Sunday schools and churches during 1948 and expresses the hope that this same generosity will continue through 1949.

Reports received by the United Board for Christian Colleges in China indicate that the majority of the faculty members of China's Christian colleges are remaining at their posts, despite recent Communist military victories which have placed some of these institutions in Communist territory. Administrators of these mission-supported colleges have reported that they plan to carry on their work as long as they are permitted substantial academic and religious freedom.

A LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

Shaowu, Fukien, China,
December 9, 1948.

DEAR FRIENDS:

It has been a long time since we have written to you. The past few months have been full of changed plans for the present and uncertainty about the future. According to the radio, the Communists are getting closer each day to Nanking. What the fall of Nanking will mean to North Fukien is anybody's guess. It is predicted that bandit bands in the mountains may take advantage of the opportunity to come into the town on pillaging expeditions. Shaowu is a sizeable town (population, about 400,000), but there are only a few "Peace Preservation" soldiers here. There are over 2,000 wounded soldiers quartered in the city who, if their pensions are stopped because of the fall of the Nanking government, may create a serious problem.

If Nanking falls we are not certain what effect it will have on us. We have heard from North China that, at present, the Communists, when they first arrive, are not molesting foreigners and are proclaiming freedom of religion. The North Fukien churches have not yet recovered from the last Communist invasion. The withdrawal of foreign financial aid and personnel may prove too much for the infant churches. So, at present, if evacuation seems necessary, Dorothy and Lewis will probably leave (presumably for USA), while I stay in Shaowu to encourage and help the church in its troubles. We may have decided on some other course of action by the time this reaches you, but this is our present plan.

Communist control will probably mean the cutting off of all foreign financial support as well as letters, newspapers, etc. Our Chinese friends say that if I stay they will find some way to provide the necessities of life. Mrs. Kao, a nurse in the hospital and an earnest Christian, said to us recently: "Please don't leave us. Once I had four beautiful children. When the hospital was closed because of the previous Communist invasion, two of them died for lack of medical care. The two that are left are so gifted and faithful to the church it would break my heart to lose them." Several years ago, when her daughter Susan was at the point of death from plague, her father, not then a Christian, asked her what he could do to please her and make her well. The seven-year-old girl replied, "If you will believe in Jesus, I will be very happy." This simple request of his desperately ill daughter touched the father's heart. Susan recovered (a rare thing), and Mr. Kao started to think about Christianity. Formerly in the military, he had spent most of his time gambling and living a dissolute life. Now he has returned to his home and they are a happy family. Several weeks ago Mr. Kao was baptized and he is a changed man. He gives his time and money generously to help others. Mrs. Kao said to us, "The church and the hospital mean a great deal to us. If you will not leave we will find a way to take care of your needs."

During the past week we have held the annual meeting of the North Fukien Synod. Dr. Harold Matthews, the American Board China secretary, and his son, Alden now in the Foochow Mission, came up river for the occasion. The meeting was in many ways a discouraging and trying experience. As Pastor Huang put it, "People's hearts are not at rest now." Remembering the atrocities of the past, the present Communist threat inspires fear in the hearts of all. The atmosphere of our meetings was tense—even little decisions were made with difficulty. More than one delegate resorted to tears. The election of a chairman of the Executive Board required two days. Who would want to be the head of a Christian Church connected with Americans if the Communists come? The third person elected finally agreed to take the responsibility.

Some important questions were faced and important decisions made, however. On Sunday morning a service of worship was held in the East Gate Church attended by about 200 persons. Pastor Liao and I conducted the Service of Communion. Several new members were received into the church. After the service, one of the new Christians came up to me and said, "Do you remember the big fire we had last Christmas at North Gate. Our house was burned and you let us all stay in the building in front of your house. Then the Christians raised money and gave to all of us. I began to think about Christianity for the first time then, and now I am a Christian."

Christmas will soon be with us again, but we find it pretty difficult to get up any enthusiasm for this usually joyful occasion. The plight of thousands of refugees streaming out of the North, the concern of everyone for the future makes the heart heavy. Every morning a deacon of the East Gate Church comes by to ask what is the radio news from Nanking. His son and family are there in government service and he has had no word from them for weeks.

We all need Christmas more than ever this year. For a season we shall sing again the beautiful carols telling of the birth of the Christ Child. As we watch the Christmas play enacted by our Han Mei students, we shall witness again the proof of God's love for sinful, suffering mankind. This Christmas, I'm sure, will help us think of ourselves and our work in Shaowu as part of the great plan of redemption. (Continued on page 14.)

TIMOTHY CHANG VISITS WINSTON-SALEM.

It was our pleasure to have Timothy Chang as our guest for a short visit during the Christmas holidays at the parsonage and church in Winston-Salem. This is one of the privileges of being a minister's family. We get to meet and entertain many interesting and likeable people. I would certainly count Timothy among these.

Timothy seemed just one of the family all the time, and made me want to look forward to the time when my son will be that age. He is certainly a person whom you take to your heart without realizing it. He is an attractive young man with very good manners and a fine understanding and liking for people. Timothy is proof of the very good judgement of Dick Jackson in picking a young man to be the recipient of our scholarship fund. He should be of infinite help in our Shaowu Mission when he returns after completing his training in the U. S. We pray earnestly that we as Christians here may give him something worthwhile to carry back home.

We took Timothy to our Christmas services at the church on December 19. At five o'clock in the evening, we all enjoyed an old-fashioned Christmas with Santa Claus and gifts for everyone. Timothy received several useful gifts, in addition to the camera presented to him by the Winston-Salem young people. On Sunday morning he had been to Pfafftown, where the young people out there presented him with a tennis racquet and balls. He was so overcome at receiving these gifts he was almost speechless. He did manage to say that he didn't deserve them, and hoped that while he is in America he would be able to repay us by doing something for us. We have already been repaid.

Timothy told us that the young people at Elon College had given him a radio prior to his visit to Winston-Salem. He felt that his Christmas was already full enough to be complete, but I know that he had a grand time the remainder of his holidays. He was to visit in Dorothy Jackson's home in Washington, D. C., and from there he would go to spend a few days with the Charles Storrs in Philadelphia before returning to school at Duke University.

It thrills our hearts to know that we have a stake in this boy's future. Best wishes to Timothy as he begins his work again! CAREY ANDES.

YOUR PRESIDENT.

How old is your President? Maybe she won't tell her age. Maybe she will if she thinks she might win a "jackpot." Anyway, Mrs. F. C. Lester, 840 Sunset Ave., Asheboro, N. C., our North Carolina President, wants to know what society has the oldest president. She would also like to know the youngest president and the president who has held office for the longest term of years. If you think you can win in either of these categories, drop a card to Mrs. Lester. Prizes were not mentioned.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

A happy New Year to all my readers—big and small! I'm writing you on New Year's Day. By the time some of you read this, you will have gone back to school and others of you will be enjoying your Christmas toys. I do hope that you have put some of them away for a special time or when you are sick or have company. It makes Christmas last longer! Here is a prayer for putting toys away: "Dear God, who is the friend of all children, we thank Thee for Christmas and its joys and play. Now we tuck away some of our treasures and help us remember to share our toys and be friendly all the day. Amen."

Today we have taken down our tree. It always seems sad but then I think of the many times they have been used and the happy family occasions. We take the ornaments down with care—some of them belonged to my family before I was born and we pack them gently and carefully. Next comes the creche—the little figures of the Christmas scene. I began collecting mine twelve years ago, starting with Mary, Joseph and the Christ Child. Now I have some 20-odd figures and even tiny earthenware pots from Ecuador. I wrap these with gentle care, too. Do you say a prayer when you take your tree down? Here is one: "Heavenly Father, who made the trees to grow, we thank Thee for our tree. It smelled so sweet and looked so gay. Now take it away. Amen."

This one is for the Manger figures: "Dear Father in heaven, we lay away the manger scene. We have seen it in the candlelight and it reminded us of the first Christmas. May we have Christmas in our hearts throughout the year. Amen."

It makes me happy to recall that the first Christmas tree in Richmond was in the home of a Lutheran minister who brought the tradition of the tree with his family when they came from Germany. I know your tree is down but I thought you might like these prayers to use next Christmas.

It is good to have a whole year stretching ahead in which to grow, work, study and play. And if you do exciting things won't you write and tell me so that I can share your activities with others?

OBSERVING YOUR CHILDREN.

By JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY.
(American Mother for 1947.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association

"We bought Jean a new coat yesterday," said her mother. "Every little while today I've found her standing in front of me with that coat on!"

"Of course," said the neighbor. "She wanted you to talk about the coat—to tell her how nice she looks in it."

"Oh, I never thought of that," her mother replied. "I kept telling her to take it off and to go away and play. That was a pity. I remember now, she seemed disappointed each time."

Too often mothers are so absorbed in their own interests that they brush their children's affairs aside as of little consequence. I have one mother in mind, however, who has made it a practice to sit down quietly and observe her children, even arranging for other boys and girls to come in regularly, so that she may have a group to study. Her children will have a great advantage over boys and girls whose early influences are like those of two lads who lived near me.

David, the elder, was self-effacing, while John was always wanting to occupy the center of the stage. Their parents emphasized these characteristics by talking about them before the boys. The mother for instance, would say, "John, you can tell the clerk what I want better than David can."

Fortunately for David, when he entered kindergarten John was not old enough to go. The teacher soon observed that David was painfully shy and always giving in to others, so she began commending his work at the tables, asking him to choose the game, and expecting him to take his turn.

One morning his mother visited the kindergarten. The children were dramatizing "The Three bears" She was surprised when David was asked to be the big father bear and more surprised when she heard David's "big gruff voice."

After the session the teacher explained what David needed. The mother had her eyes opened to the fact that she had been accentuating the faults of both boys and that each should have been treated in exactly the opposite way from what the family custom had been.

From that day the parents stopped speaking of David's shyness, invited company especially for him, encouraged him to go alone to his friends' homes, drew him into conversation by making it easy for him to express himself, and took it as a matter of course that he would stand up for his rights in the home and among the children of the neighborhood.

With John, their problem was to divert him from himself and to interest him in other children, so that he would not interrupt and override them. It was true that John had superior ability, but his parents ceased to mention it. They were advised to buy him tools and to encourage him to make things. This gave a vent for his superabundance of energy and initiative and lessened his desire to "boss" everything and everybody.

A mother has much to gain by visiting the kindergarten. She can observe her child as he does his part and compare him with the others. Then, too, she can confer with the teacher, who is an impartial and trained observer and everready with suggestions as to the best method of dealing with each child.

OUR CHRISTIAN ORIENTATION.

maintained by Orphaned Missions funds.

Kagawa's evangelistic campaign in Japan has resulted in 150,000 converts. He says, "The ideal we pursue is that of making Japan a State with which God can be pleased." Michio Kozaki, Moderator of the Church of Christ in Japan (which includes 85 per cent of the Protestant Churches) says, "There cannot be any true democracy without Christianity, which is the very basis of democracy. Christianity is on the increase and the minds of the people are receptive." The people are now freed from the fear of the "nightmare of Empire." There are few suicides. The country is experiencing the blessing of the "catharsis of defeat." (Of O. T.) The Church has gained by its record of "complete identification with the people in all their suffering." Since the war American Christians have sent two million Testaments to Japan, by which the Gospel enters the grass-roots of the country. General MacArthur asked for 1,000 Christian workers to come to Japan but we have not risen to the occasion. Of 1,340 missionaries in Japan, 1,120 are Roman Catholic. We are not improving our Protestant opportunity.

The situation in China is very difficult because of Communism. Dr. Judd says Christianity in communist areas must "go underground, return to the catacombs if necessary." Forty missionaries were flown out of stations in the path of the communist advance. Our missionary, Alice Reed, is appalled by the steady spread of increased communist activities. But in spite of everything, she says, "The hopeful conditions are real." Thousands of students in our six mission middle schools are being influenced. It is a tragedy when the vacuum in China resulting from decay of traditional beliefs is being filled with communism instead of Christianity. However, there is determined evangelistic effort with a three-year Christian forward movement.

2. A new opportunity for Christianity because of the growth of literacy. Twenty-five thousand have learned to read through Dr. Laubach's efforts since 1920. But what shall they read? Dr. Laubach calls for a School of Christian Journalism to produce suitable material. If the present trend continues, we shall have 500,000,000 new readers in fifty years.

3. New mutual encouragement through the recently organized World Council of Churches. Members of churches everywhere will have the consciousness of belonging to the total Christian group in the world. President McKay of Princeton, said the World Council was the product of missions.

4. The improved situation of orphaned missions. The German missions in Africa have been carrying on in a good way, thanks to support from the International Missionary Council. Interned missionaries have returned to their fields.

5. Our heroic colleagues in South America are carrying on bravely. Protestant growth in Brazil has inspired a Bible reading campaign among the Catholics. Cardinal Mota designated the last Sunday in September as Bible Sunday. The hierarchy sees that one reason for the expansion of Protestantism is the widespread reading of the Bible. The Roman Catholic Church strongly supports totalitarian Argentina. There is evidence of Roman Catholic revival in Mexico and pressure for religious uniformity. We rejoice in the work of our German Congregational churches in Brazil and Argentina in the face of difficulties of entry and work. Latin America in general is wide open to the evangelical message. But it will take a tremendous amount of aggressive, spiritual effort to counteract the political campaign of the hierarchy. The only answer to Catholicism is better Protestantism.

6. The battle royal with communism, Christianity's greatest rival religion. The battle of ideologies goes on and while we seek a sympathetic understanding with the proletariat of Russia that are not the dictators and that would normally respond to Christianity we are only foolish to suppose that those in power will not use every opportunity to hamper and crush the religion that is wholly opposed to their own religion of materialism, force and absolutist control.

7. Perhaps an even more deadly and subtle enemy of Christianity is secularism, which the Catholic Church considers the source of communism and other evils. We face an "increasingly secular world." Ignoring God and panning life on the basis of the every day world has consequences that are serious but not alertly realized. This means the deification of man.

Secularism has a social suicidal tendency. There is admitted growth of secular emphasis on the material and finite, mechanization, delight in control over the physical world, indulgence of every sort. We hear the warning voices from every quarter. D. R. Davies in his book, The Sin of Our Age, sees three terrible consequences of this deification of man, (1) the abolition of otherworldliness, that is the imprisonment of man in mere space and time, (2) the dissolution of spirit and the domination of matter, (3) the degradation of the individual into mass-man. Secularism calls for preventive missionary work, preventing our own land from becoming pagan. There is the encouraging fact that first class authors are writing about religion, compared to their ridicule of it in the 1920's. And the circulation of church papers has increased 65 per cent since 1940. And church membership is now at an all-time high of 53 per cent, compared to 22 per cent in 1890. In Iowa 78 per cent of the adults are church members, five out of ten attending practically every Sunday. In 1946 $32,829,804 was spent on overseas mission work by 100 Protestant boards. We rejoice in this, but we deplore the fact that our giving to church and related benevolences in 1933-45 decreased over a billion dollars, compared to the 13-year previous period, or 19 per cent, and this when our national income increased 136 per cent. With a windfall of $4,800,000,000 through tax reduction this year, a man with a $4,000 net income will have $124 as his share. We repeat the plea of Toynbee to "put the secular superstructure back onto religious foundations."

8. A renewed battle on the temperance front. The Anti-Saloon League has become the Temperance League of America. The Methodists are campaigning for 8,000,000 total abstainers. Every member of the Southern Baptist Sunday Schools over ten years of age was to be given an opportunity on May 30 to sign an abstinence pledge. Rev. Louis H. Evans of the Hollywood Presbyterian Church is President of the California Temperance Federation. He says that the alcohol problem is so acute in Hollywood that his church with five pastors is able to help only one-tenth of those seeking aid. Interestingly, prohibition was predicted for Madras by October. And Pakistan is moving toward prohibition. One-sixth of India will go dry this year—Dnyanodaya.

9. More stewardship emphasis, from necessity and for spiritual reasons. With our own rank of 19th among 21 denominations in denominational benevolences and 17th in total benevolences, we can rightly expect more attention to this vital matter.

10. The increasing call for the Bible. In South America the demand is so great that double and treble the amount could be sold if obtainable. In Germany the number wanted is larger than it is possible to supply during the next years with an immediate need for 8,000,000 copies.

11. A new generation of world-minded young people. Pastors have no trouble interesting them in missions.

SOURCES OF OUR KNOWLEDGE OF JESUS.

LESSON II—JANUARY 9, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: These are written that ye may believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing you may have life in his name.—John 20:31.

LESSON: Mark 2:13-14; Luke 1:1-4; John 20:30-31; 21:25; Acts 1:1, 20, 35; I Cor. 11:23-25; 15:3-8; Colossians 4:14; I John 1:1-4.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Hebrews 2:1-9.

One of the striking things about the life of Jesus Christ is the very meager information which we have about Him. Most of the source material about Him is to be found in the New Testament, and as we shall see, this is not at all complete. But there is enough material to reconstruct a picture of our Lord from the cradle to the Cross and beyond. And more important than the amount of this material, is its trustworthiness. Never were documents subjected to such critical study and such careful examination and never did documents emerge from these processes with stronger claims to credence. When we read the life of our Lord we do not follow "cunningly devised fables," but solid, historical facts.

Sources of Our Knowledge of Jesus Outside the Scriptures.

Strangely enough, there are only a few references to Jesus in secular history from His day. Tacitus in his Annals refers to him briefly thus: "The founder of this sect was one Christus who was put to death in the reign of Tiberius by the procurator Pontius Pilate." He goes on to say that this act checked for a time "this pernicious superstition" but that it broke out again not only in Judea, but also "in the capital, to which place, everything that is hateful and shameful flows from every quarter and there meets with sympathy."

Josephus in his Antiquities also makes several references to Jesus. The Talmud, a collection of rabbinical teachings and laws, refers to Him. Other references to Him are to be found in "The Teaching of the Twelve Apostles," in Justyn Martyr's works, in the writings of Origen and Clement, and in papyrus found in Egypt. These isolated and individual references are about all that we find about Jesus outside the Bible itself.

Sources of Our Knowledge of Jesus In the Bible.

The first source materials about Jesus came from the letters of Paul. It may come as a surprise to many people to know that several, in fact a number, of Paul's letters were written before the gospels were written. And, of course, there are many references to Jesus in Paul's letters, but even at that they give but little information about the life of Jesus itself. And, of course, the letters of the other writers in the New Testament have many references to Jesus. The same thing is true of the Acts of the Apostles.

But the greatest portion of our knowledge of Jesus comes from the Gospels, Matthew, Mark, Luke, known as the "Synoptic Gospels" and the Gospel of John. And when one discovers that these gospels deal, with but few exceptions with His public ministry which lasted only about a year and a half or two years, and that in two of these Gospels from a quarter to a third of the story, is concerned with the last week of Jesus' life, one sees just how comparatively little source material we do have. For thirty of his thirty-two or three years of life, we have only a few references, the Infancy and Early Childhood stories, and from the time He was a boy in Nazareth until He began His public ministry, almost thirty years, only one reference. These are facts well attested by scholars and by the Bible itself.

Back of the Gospels are the oral traditions, or the spoken word. The disciples and the followers of Jesus told the stories of what He did, and they repeated what He said. They used this material for teaching and preaching purposes, and it was repeated and remembered and became well fixed as to content and form. Then there came the time when some of this material was reduced to writing to make it permanent. There was one collection now called the "Q" document of such material, which formed the background for the fuller gospel stories.

Mark undoubtedly wrote the first gospel. It is composed for the most part of what Jesus did, rather than what He said. It depicts Jesus as the Son of God, a man of mighty works and forthwith action. It forms the outline of the other gospels.

Matthew's gospel came next. He used Mark's gospel as an outline but he had a great deal of material which Mark did not have or did not use especially many of the sayings of Jesus. The theme of Matthew's gospel is "That the scripture might be fulfilled." He wrote showing Jesus as the Messiah, as the King, and he wrote for the Jews as Mark wrote for the Romans.

Luke, a careful historian, wrote the next gospel. Luke was a Gentile, a Greek physician, and a man of culture and keen mind. He sets forth Jesus as the Perfect Man. Luke's gospel is the gospel of the common man, of the poor, of prayer. It is in the thinking of many people the most beautiful book ever written. It was written for the Gentile world as well as the Jews.

John's gospel is the "most spiritual gospel" in the right sense of that word. He does not give us a detailed account of the life of Jesus, but rather takes certain incidents from the life of our Lord and draws a spiritual lesson from them. He wrote that men might believe that Jesus was the Christ, the Son of God, and that believing they might have life through His name.

The gospels have different viewpoints. They differ in many places in details. But their central theme is Jesus Christ and Him crucified. And as has been said, they are trustworthy records, fully accredited by the exacting tests to which the people of their day and the centuries have given them. In them are the words of eternal life through Jesus Christ.

THE NEED AND THE PROMISE.

A Sermon

By ALBERT BUCKNER COE.

Where is the God of judgment?
—Malachi 2:17.

Thou shalt bring forth a son, and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the son of the Highest.—Luke 1:31-32.

Four hundred years before the birth of Christ a prophet lived named Malachi. He taught the people of Jerusalem. He was deeply concerned over their sins. They were unbrotherly—"Why do ye deal treacherously every man against his brother?" They were forgetful of God—"Judah hath profaned the holiness of the Lord." In this consciousness of the people's forgetfulness of God, Malachi yearned for assistance. In his anguish he cried aloud: "Where is the God of judgment?" In figure the prophet lifts his voice out over the turbulent years between the Old and New Testaments and with his eyes upon the future calls: "Where is the God of judgment?" The cry is answered. Back across the distance that separates the Old and the New Testament, back from the gospel of Luke, the reply comes clear and strong: "Thou shalt bring forth a son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the son of the Highest." Jesus Christ is the promise which answers the need.

Behold the need in the broken characters of European youth! Behold the promise in Christ through the Christians of America.

Where do we hear the urgent cries of need today? They make a conglomerate sound as we delve into our own lives, as we walk the streets of the city, as we hear voices of despair and hunger coming across the ocean, as we hear men and women and children crying for mercy out of the debris of bombed cities, as we watch cultured families in displaced persons camps caught like rats in a trap, all crying, "Where is the God of judgment?"

Our world is in need. The war has been over for three years and still whole continents are physically and spiritually hungry. The countries of Europe are still heavily rationed. England is not starving, but is still short of some essentials of food, such as eggs and butter, not to speak of the general need of fats and sugars. Her people are discouraged and "hope" is a well nigh forgotten term. France is short of food and particularly those necessities for making food rich, such as fertilizer and farm implements. More than that, French character has deteriorated. There is no mutual confidence among people. They do not trust each other. They do not trust their government, which explains in part why their governments come and go in quick succession. All of this because France has largely lost her religion and her morals. Of the forty million people in France, only seven million are professing Christians—the remainder are fit subjects for atheism. Czechoslovakia is hungry. Most of her people are not communists, though they struggle under a government that is Communist. The people walk the streets in fear and wonder when the way will turn and they will be returned to normal democratic living. Poland is still buried under the debris of bombed cities and her people till the soil as best they can with few farm implements. There are homes for old people and orphanages for children, but the masses of people see through a glass darkly and wonder what next. Germany is still bombed. Her people are for the most part undernourished. They are short of fats and sugar. Disease breaks out largely because of inadequate rations. And to make matters worse, there are settled on her soil today millions of displaced persons who wait for a day of liberation either to go to a foreign country or return to their own after the threat of Russia has passed. Yes, from these countries and from all countries of the world, the cry goes up: "Where is the God of judgment?"

The Promise of Hope.

To all of this need the promise comes back—a promise of hope—"Thou shalt bring forth a son and shalt call his name Jesus. He shall be great and shall be called the son of the Highest." We rejoice with exceeding joy. Jesus Christ, center of the world's most beautiful story, born in a manger, watched over by the shepherds, adored by the wise men, "an infant tender and mild," is the promise for Malachi and the promise for us.

Jesus, there is no dearer name than Thine
While Time has blazoned on his mighty scroll;
Nor wreaths nor garlands ever did entwine
So fair a temple of so vast a soul.

What is there in Christ that can meet our needs? He was a man of compassion. He loved all men, even those who opposed him. Little children were dear to him. Sorrowing parents were comforted by him. The deaf, the dumb, the halt, the blind found a response in him. The weak eagerly sought him though sometimes they were pushed aside by the throng. A blind man, named Bartimaeus, was one of those left by the roadside. He waited, knowing that Jesus would pass. The surging crowd came on. Bartimaeus cried out in the midst of the din: "Jesus thou son of David, have mercy on me." It was such a piercing cry that Jesus heard him. He answered, "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?" "That I might receive my sight." Quickly came Jesus' response of mercy and love: "Go thy way, thy faith hath made thee whole." What compassion! And that compassion working through us can bless our world today. Christ, the compassionate one knows our sorrows, is acquainted with our grief and seeks to make us whole.

With what consecration he lived—and died! It would have been far easier for him to lead a sheltered life. He could have passed his time in rest and quietness in Bethany. But he would not. He was God's son. He had a mission. He was under compulsion to reveal God to men. The consecration can permeate our distraught world.

"Wonderful, Counselor."

Jesus, the Savior, is ours to receive. However we may conceive of radiance, he is more radiant. However we may comprehend love, he is greater love. However, we may know devotion, he exceeds it. Wonderful, Counselor, Mighty God, Prince of Peace. We must receive him into our lives at Christmas.

Having received him into our lives at Christmas, we must be his instruments of compassion and courage and devotion. The world's hungry people both physically and spiritually cry to us across the broad oceans. In the name of our Christ we must cup our hands and call back to them our promise of aid.

We have a means whereby we may send our help. Our Congregational

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

We are holding our books for one more report which will close the Orphanage business for the year, 1948. We are quite a distance from our goal and will have to receive checks in an abundance to get enough to reach it by January 6, the day our final report for the year, 1948, will be made. So far, from the churches and Sunday schools we have receive the sum of $20,920.17. From special offerings we have received the sum of $22,393.73, making a grand total of $43,313.90. We still lack $6,686.10 of being to our goal. In our next letter we will give you full details for the year, 1948.

The Orphanage children had a very happy Christmas. All were happy. The student body at Elon College played "Santa" to all of them, and all the children were given nice presents and were happy. I think the student body got a real joy out of the occasion.

The Burlington Church invited all the children down to the Burlington Church and put on a Christmas program for them, which they thoroughly enjoyed.

tion. We shall thus be enabled to face the uncertain future without fear and frustration, knowing that the future is in His hands.

By the time this letter reaches you, Christmas will probably have passed. We hope it has been a meaningful one for you. We earnestly desire for each of you that 1949 may be a year filled with happiness and spiritual blessing. In our moments of decision and in whatever the future brings, we covet your prayers.

THE NEED AND THE PROMISE.

Christian Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction started out three years ago to raise $4,300,000. This was not too large a sum when we compare it with the sum of $27,000,000 sought by the Presbyterians. To date we have raised three and a half million dollars of the amount we sought. Now with our Committee completing its work on January 1, 1949 and going out of existence as far as its leadership is concerned, we request from the church of our denomination $800,000 to complete our task. In the name of the lonely, hungry despairing people we appeal to our members to help us complete this task. In the name of Christ, who never failed to touch the eyes of the blind and lift up those who were fallen, we appeal to our Christian friends to help us meet the overpowering demands upon us for help.

Nothing will ever take the place of simple, unobtrusive, old-fashioned courtesy.—Matthew S. Sloan.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

information about His public ministry. When one reads the lesson material for today he realizes how appropriately the first thirty years of Jesus' life can be called "the hidden years." There is, of course, the surpassingly beautiful story of His birth as told by Luke the beloved physician, and a brief account of the first few days of His infancy. There is also a very brief reference to His birth in connection with the visit of the Wise Men and the flight into Egypt as told by Matthew. But from the time of his earliest infancy until He was twelve years old, there is a break in the record, absolute silence in regard to the days of his boyhood. Then after Luke's illuminating story in connection with His trip to Jerusalem at the age of twelve—the age at which every Jewish boy became a "son of the law" until He was thirty years of age or thereabout, there is another break in the record, absolute silence in regard to the years of young manhood and young adulthood. It seems unfortunate, almost tragic, that we have such a limited or fragmentary record of this, the greatest life that was ever lived.

Much in Little.

We have but little, but that little tells us much. If one reads the records closely he will learn much about these "hidden years." The few bold strokes that the writer-artists do draw, tell us much. The picture can readily be filled in without drawing on the unrestrained imagination. There is much that we would like to know but there is little more than we need know. The infancy and childhood and youth of Jesus were all a revelation of the divine plan for the children of men.

Providentially Preserved.

Matthew plainly states that the infant Jesus was providentially preserved by God. Here was the child of promise, the fulfilment of prophecy, the promised Messiah, the Son of God, the Agent of divine purpose, the Saviour of the world. And God saw to it that His unique Son was protected and preserved until He had fulfilled His purpose. Thus in His infancy and childhood He was preserved against the murderous intent of the monster Herod, and again and again during His ministry He was kept until in fulfilment of the divine promise and purpose He gave Himself on the Cross for our sins. Here is drawn out in living letters the story of the mysterious ways in which God performs His wonders.

Religiously Nurtured.

Even a casual reading of the story of the early years of the Master's life reveal the fact that He was cradled and nurtured in a religious home. Here was a virgin, chaste in spirit and reverent in attitude and obedient to the divine vision, who through those hidden years wielded a wholesome and determinative influence over His life. And the record indicates plainly that Joseph, His foster father was a man of reverent spirit and religious faith, as well as of sensitive spirit. His parents were regular attendants at the feasts, and were faithful in the performance of their religious duties. There was religious instruction in the home and better still a religious atmosphere in the home. And when in later years the call of God came, Jesus could interpret it in terms of the sane and simple and sound life of the home.

Growing Symmetrically.

The Son of God lived and grew as the son of men. He was in this respect like unto all the sons of men. He grew in bodily strength and skill and resiliency into a man of rugged, robust health and bodily vigor and strength. He played as a boy, and worked as a young man, undoubtedly as a carpenter. He had tasks to do in and around the home and learned the discipline of work and self-denial and cooperation. He also grew in wisdom. His mother taught him out of the great wealth of the treasury of the religious history of His people. He undoubtedly attended the synagogue school and He had to learn as did any other boy. He had to learn to observe, to think, to reason, to speak—it was not a gift poured ready-made into His mind. He grew, too, said Luke in favor with God and with man. We may be sure that he practiced the social graces which are the marks of a true gentleman. One can be sure that He was no prude, or stuffed shirt or high hat. One suspects that He was one of the most popular boys in the village, and one of the best liked young men in the community, simple, sincere, sound, modest, polite and popular even if serious beyond many of his fellow-townsmen. And Luke adds that He grew in favor also with God. It is a mistake to think that His knowledge of God and His discovery of the Father's will came to Him all of a sudden. It is more in keeping with the facts to assume that the religious consciousness dawned gradually and developed normally. But there was an eagerness to learn and a glad response to each new revelation or discovery of God. He was always obedient to the heavenly vision. It is to be noted, too, that He was subject to His parents. He was no free lance, no passionate individualist going His own way regardless of the counsel of His parents and the rights of others. He learned obedience and practiced it. As a boy He played eagerly, fairly joyfully—we may be sure of that. As a young man He was a workman that needed not to be ashamed—we may be just as sure of that. The latter years of His public ministry were but the flowering and the fruitage of the hidden years of his boyhood. Here was the ideal for boyhood and youth.

Definitely Called.

As stated above Luke breaks the silence of the thirty "hidden years" with the story of the boy Jesus' first visit to Jerusalem at the age of twelve. It is too familiar to need retelling. It has many interesting sidelights as well as highlights. There is the significant fact that the last place his parents looked for Him was in the Temple—it evidently did not occur to them that He would be found there. But perhaps the central fact is the evidence that at that early age, the boy Jesus had already felt the divine call, had felt the hand of God upon Him, had sensed a divine mission that had laid hold on Him and made it imperative that He should be about the Father's business. It is not likely that His sense of His Messiahship came suddenly. It probably came gradually. But God's spirit had already spoken to the boy and there was a glad response in His heart. It is significant, too, that after the experience in the Temple, He returned with His parents to Nazareth, "and was subject unto them." Obedience to His parents was an integral part of His obedience to His heavenly Father.

Patiently Working and Waiting.

And then another long silence in the record—at least eighteen years more, before there is another word concerning Him. They were years of working, while waiting. It must have made heavy demands on His patience. But He bided the time until God's clock struck the hour, the meanwhile working, and thus doing the work of the Father even as later He did more spectacular works in the Father's name. It was all of one piece. He could not have done the one if He had not done the other. Truly this man was the Son of God.

LETTER FROM AFRICA

Missao de Dondi
C. P. 28 Bela Vista
Angola, Africa

Dear Friends:

First of all I want to thank you people who have been so kind at responding to my request for pictures. I wish there were some way to tell you just what a help they are in the Bible classes. It is so impossible sometimes to try to explain things but when one can say, "Look; it is like this," what a wealth of information he has given. And how the students love to have a picture or two in their book to take home. Or even one for the cover is a treasure to them. Then in turn use them in their teaching.

Four weeks ago today I arrived in Dondi with full intentions of getting a letter off the first week. But instead I spent it finding a new girl for the house, teaching her to do some of the work and doing most of it myself. My house mate, Amy Schaffler promised to be here to help set up the house but she got word her sister was to arrive so instead of finding Amy I found a note saying, "I'll be back in a week." I unpacked, scrubbed floors, made curtains, laid rugs, cleaned windows and made beds all hours of the day and night. In between I wrote lessons for a teachers conference.

Three weeks ago today Amy came back bringing her sister, Dorothy, and another missionary for a week's visit. The next Monday I started teaching in the teachers' conference, having four hours every morning and supervising work periods in the afternoons. That kept me busy to say nothing of the company in the house and something special on every night.

Two weeks ago we saw our guests off on the train and I was ready to settle down and write some lessons for the school year. But no such luck. One of the missionaries, Margaret Halliday, has been ill for some weeks. The girl who was to help us, Muggy Dawson, went out there to take over the work and care for Margaret. What with some of our girls already here and the rest due on Wednesday, there was nothing to do but take care of every immediate job as it came along. Anyway the week flew with jobs of registering, feeding, distributing books, examinations and acting as general handy man.

The next thing I knew last Monday was here and classes were underway. I had managed to get some lessons ready for the other teachers in Bible but find taking over Muggy's Bible class with a five-minute warning a little difficult. However, we have gotten through the first week and I have my lessons at least a day ahead now instead of just one hour, so perhaps I shall get a good start this week. We are now well into the classes with 165 girls present. We are still holding our breath for fear smallpox breaks out. We thought the scare was over but heard yesterday that 25 of our girls were traveling together and one was taken sick and sent back. She now has smallpox. What about the others! Time will tell!

I'm really having the time of my life this year. There is no doubt but that I'm busy, but being a person who likes work that suits me fine. I thought I'd be teaching the Life of Paul as I did last year and for which I had all kinds of material and lessons but when Muggy left I had to give my well-planned schemes to native teachers and take over her group for which I can't even find lessons in Umbundu most of the time. Their work is a series of short courses on worship, women's and girls' work in the villages, "How We Got Our Bible and Church History." Then I have a lesson once a week with them on "How to Teach in the Sunday School." Also have two other groups each of which are taking "Life of Christ and Worship." I also supervise the other Bible Classes and have been doing my share of trying to help get the academic classes started. It is all great fun, especially when you don't know quite what it is all about. My out-of-school hours are even fuller than my in-school ones as I have the boarding—which includes feeding the girls and taking care of the dormitories. And I'm general handy man of extra curricular activities and gym. The time in the latter is filled trying to plan for Founder's Day on December 1. The other includes two nights of social room a week where the girls sew, crochet, read, knit, etc. There is also to be one girls' club a week and we hope to start a couple of ball teams and a dramatic club. These will be for after-school hours.

Greetings to all from one who misses you and your intimate friendship but who wouldn't be any other place for the world!

"Greatest Story Ever Told" Receives Another Honor

John K. Hough, right, director of advertising for The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Company, accepting plaque from M. Simmons, publisher of Magazine Digest, honoring Goodyear's public service radio program, "The Greatest Story Ever Told," as the outstanding radio program in the religious category.

The program, broadcast over the ABC network every Sunday at 6:30 p. m., EST, is a drama based on the teachings of Christ, and carries no commercial announcement. "The Greatest Story Ever Told," now in its third season on the air, has received more honors, awards, and commendation than probably any other radio program.

News Flashes

We learn with regret of the passing of Brother V. O. Kitchens of Roanoke, Alabama, who died on Tuesday, December 28. Burial was at Antioch Church on the following Thursday.

We received New Year's greetings last week from Rev. G. D. Hunt, our veteran minister of Wadley, Alabama. We return his greetings and wish for him a very, very Happy New Year.

Rev. H. A. Ironside, a Bible scholar-author and preacher of fifty years experience, is holding services at the First Church, Portsmouth, Va., during this week, at 3:30 and 7:30 p. m. The final service will be held on Sunday evening, January 16.

Busy ministers and teachers may find help in preparing their sermons and lessons for Race Relations Sunday, February 13, 1949, in materials available from the North Carolina Commission on Interracial Cooperation, Box 1208, Raleigh, N. C. It will be sent free upon request.

BURLINGTON FOUNDATION GIVES $8,500 FOR ELON COLLEGE GYMNASIUM.

Contribution of the sum of $8,500 toward the construction of a new gymnasium for Elon College has been announced jointly by Dr. L. E. Smith, President of the College, and the trustees of the Burlington Foundation, donors of the gift.

Granted by the Burlington Foundation, a trust established by Burlington Mills Corporation for educational, charitable and other purposes, the gift to the college was presented to Dr. Smith by Hinton Rountree, Elon alumnus, who is now associated with the cost control department of Burlington Mills.

In accepting the gift, Dr. Smith expressed his appreciation for the "generous consideration in our efforts to provide facilities for physical education on our campus at Elon College." Noting that the school has been in need of a new gymnasium for sometime, he stated that "I want you to know that the board of trustees, faculty and students are all appreciative of this generous assistance."

The trustees of the Burlington Foundation, commenting upon their INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS SECRETARY APPOINTED.

Fiction best sellers and modern art exhibits seem to indicate that the artists and authors see no meaning in life, says Herman F. Reissig of New York City who has just been appointed International Relations Secretary of the Congregational Christian Council for Social Action. "It is not the artists who have lost all sense of direction, however," Mr. Reissig believes, adding, "they are merely the sensitive barometers, as they ought to be, of the mood of their times."

Reading fiction best sellers and attending modern art exhibits is, therefore, a good way to estimate the job ahead of the Christian Church in our time, according to Mr. Reissig. He believes also that one reason our international situation is so serious is because "Marxists do not believe man is a sinner and we in the so-called Christian countries have forgotten it. This means there is no humility, only pride and self-righteousness on both sides." The Christian teaching concerning repentance, forgiveness and love may not be easy to translate into terms of concrete international problems, says Mr. Reissig, but we will not have a much saner world until we relearn these things for ourselves and apply them to our social problems.

In this new work as International Relations Secretary, Mr. Reissig, whose home is at 56 West 36th St., New York City, will conduct a program of education and action on international relations, the United Nations and American Policy, for the Congregational Christian Churches of the U. S. A.

Born in a United Lutheran Manse, the son of a minister Mr. Reissig is a graduate of Wagner Memorial Lutheran College and Mt. Airy Seminary. Ordained into the Lutheran ministry, he transferred to the Congregational ministry in 1925. His pastorates have included the West End Congregational Church, Bridgeport, Conn. (1925-30); King's Highway Congregational Church, Brooklyn, N. Y. (1931-36); and the First Congregational Church of Quincy, Ill. (1942-47). From 1947 until the present he served as Field Secretary of the American Committee for the World Council of Churches. Between 1936 and 1941 Mr. Reissig made five trips to Europe as exchange preacher and relief director.

TO THE EDITOR.

The December 16, 1948, issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN has just come and, as usual, I enjoyed reading through it.

Two items attracted my special attention and I want to thank you for them. The first was the report by Rev. Kenneth Register concerning the organization of Men's Club at his church in Union (N. C.). I was particularly impressed by the closing paragraph and sentence of his report. He said that the men really mean business and I can truthfully say that men all over America are feeling the very same way.

The second item was your editorial on the "Federal Council, 1908-1948." I read that with interest, particularly the comment on Mr. Taft's address to the meeting. Having traveled in Europe this summer and seeing the state of the church in twelve countries, it is easy to become concerned that the same lifelessness, at least in the state churches, shall never come to our churches here. I am convinced also that a wide-awake laity, practicing every day the principles of Christianity and seeing to it that their churches are effective and efficient, can be a big help all over America.

Please express my warmest greetings to all your staff, your ministers and lay people and I hope that all of you will have enjoyed the Christmas season and that 1949 will be one of the best years you have known.

MASSACHUSETTS MAN COMMISSIONED FOR NATIONAL POST.

Rev. R. Norris Wilson has been appointed to the post of Associate Minister and Associate Executive Secretary of the Missions Council. He was commissioned on Monday evening, December 27, in the First Congregational Church of Wakefield, Mass., by six national and international heads of the denomination.

The sermon was preached by Dr. Douglas Horton on the subject, "Weather Forecast for Christendom."

Mr. Wilson began his new work on January 1 with headquarters at 287 Fourth Avenue, New York City, and will make his home, with his wife and two children, in General Wayne Village, Madison, New Jersey. He was born in Hinsdale, Illinois, and is a graduate of Olivet College and Chicago Theological Seminary with graduate work at Yale Divinity School. In 1936 Mr. Wilson was in Summer Student Service work in the states of Washington and Oregon, and in 1937 he attended the historic Oxford and Edinburg Conferences in Great Britain.

His pastorates in the Congregational Christian ministry have included Pulaski, N. Y.; Sterling, Ill.; Wakefield, Mass., where he has been since 1945 pastor of the First Congregational Church. He is a member of the Prudential Committee of the American Board of Foreign Missions and a Trustee of Olivet College and the American University at Beirut, Lebanon.

In his new national job Mr. Wilson will share in certain administrative tasks but primarily he will be responsible for assisting State Conferences in planning a comprehensive program of promotion integrating conference staff leaders, committees on promotion, and Pilgrim Fellowship leaders and Religious Education Directors into a unified promotional team.

He will direct the activities of the National Committee on Missionary Education, Stewardship and Promotion. One of his immediate jobs will be to interpret in the pulpits, in conferences and in forums the Christian World Mission of the Congregational Christian Churches which has now under way the raising of a benevolence budget of $6,280,000. Mr. Wilson will promote especially the item of Relief and Reconstruction in the unified budget of this Christian World Mission.

"The clock has stood at 'five minutes to twelve' so long that we are almost convinced that it has stopped there. Crisis is commonplace," says Mr. Wilson. "Perhaps in a way it has stopped. We are told that revelation is progressive and that God does not give us the next lesson until we have earned the last. Sympathy will not heal the world and generosity will not feed the hungry. It will not satisfy the kind of hunger with which the world is hungry now. What will heal the world and meet its hunger is a right and living answer to that most

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

APOLOGIA FOR BLUE PREACHER.

Poor fellow! Our Blue Preacher, who voiced his doubts and anxieties in our December 23 issue, has been properly excoriated. Blue preachers usually suffer in silence. Occasionally they weep on one another's shoulders. This unusually blue preacher inadvertently blurted out his pent-up lamentations. Now he has been put very properly in his place, reprimanded for his temporary weakness, and buttressed with the theology of perfectionism.

Wonder how he feels now? Of course the answers given in this issue are true. But they apply primarily to that phase of the pastor's problem which might be summarized in the test: "And David encouraged himself in the Lord."

The stark facts mentioned by the dejected preacher—and others—remain. The disparity between profession and practice, the ethical obtuseness of some who are prominent in church circles, the persistence of the status quo, the financial stringency under which most church work must be done, anti-progressive cliques, unenlightened and authoritative church leaders, laxity in church attendance, etc.

No layman responded by saying: "We are to blame, preacher. No wonder you are discouraged. You preach a dynamic gospel while we persist in our lethargy. Many of us have become so habituated in our secular living that we are practically immune to the religion of Christ. Many of our attitudes are formed and decisions are made as democrats or southerners rather than as Christians. We have inadvertently—almost unconsciously assumed the attitude that Christianity is something to be preached, not lived. I am not surprised that you are discouraged and disillusioned. I am surprised that you have not given up long ago." Such a confession would bring cathartic tears to the preacher's eyes, warm his lonely heart, and send him back to the pulpit with a renewing gospel.

The preacher is a human being, not a god. He has this Treasure, but it is in an earthen vessel. Must he be banished to the ministerial dog house for indulging temporarily in a bit of mild self-pity? Blue Monday is an ancient institution in the ministerial fraternity and it is observed by ministers of all denominations. It will be news indeed if we succeed in abolishing it overnight.

RELIGION AND ECONOMICS.

To develop an informed and active concern within the churches for Christian principles in economic life, the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America, has designated the week beginning with the third Sunday of January as "Church and Economic Life Week." The first annual observance will be held January 16-22, 1949.

Announcement of the observance, approved by the Executive Committee, was made by the Rev. Cameron P. Hall, executive secretary of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life.

"Christians will match the demands of the times as they accept their responsibility before God for what each can do individually and together, in his economic activity and relations," said the Rev. Mr. Hall.

"In urging the local church and the local community to join in this observance, the Department of the Church and Economic Life recognized that vast numbers of church people are confused and hesitant about what is required of them as Christians in economic life.

"Genuine progress toward economic justice has been made but in these confused and chaotic times there is much insecurity and fear. The consequences of failure to achieve constructive solutions of these problems would be national and worldwide disaster.

"Our nation's efforts to encourage European and world recovery are endangered by vast inflationary pressures at home. Any serious decline toward a depression would lead to disillusion and desperation here and abroad. The solution of economic problems needs not only people of technical competence but also calls for people with conviction and understanding of what it means 'to do justly, and to love mercy, and to walk humbly with thy God,' in economic life.

"'Church and Economic Life Week' will provide an opportunity for church people to grow into and build upon their responsibility before God for what they do in economic life—as people who buy what others make, or who produce what others buy; who make deposits in banks and who draw income from investments; who have the power to employ others or who depend for an income upon being employed by others."

THOUGHT FOR TODAY.

"Thus speaketh Christ, Our Lord."

"Ye call Me Master and obey Me not,
Ye call Me Light and see me not,
Ye call Me Way and walk not,
Ye call Me Life and desire Me not,
Ye call Me wise and follow Me not,
Ye call Me fair and love Me not,
Ye call Me mighty and honor Me not,
Ye call Me just and fear Me not;
If I condemn you, blame Me not."

Looking backward, it appears to me that nearly every piece of good luck I ever had led directly to a bad result; and all the things I thought were bad luck when they happened, in the end turned out to be the foundation of opportunity.—Colonel E. M. House.

Our Christian World Mission--At Home*

By REV. ROBERT M. KIMBALL.

As we gather here today, December 7, 1948, my thoughts go back to a more momentous December 7—December 7, 1941—the day that the Japanese fleet bombed Pearl Harbor, and the war that we had hoped and prayed might be avoided, began. December 7, 1941, marked the beginning of a new era—overnight life changed for hundreds and thousands of people. For others, the change appeared to come more gradually, but for all of us, today, seven years later, now that the turmoil of the war has subsided, we are conscious that in many respects we are living in a new or different world.

People who have been made homeless and penniless by war's destruction know that the world will never be the same. Families who have lost loved ones in battle are poignantly conscious of the change, but for many of us the changes have been less drastic, more subtle. There are towns which, gradually in this period of seven years, have become "ghost towns" because families have gone to new localities to seek employment. Other communities have been overcrowded and cannot meet their housing needs because of the tremendous growth in population; schools and colleges are overcrowded, in many instances school buildings are inadequate; the "teacher problem" has long been acute; on every side we hear discussion of the increased rate of juvenile delinquency. The tremendous increase in the cost of living has brought many face to face with new economic problems, and with it all, we are conscious of an undeniable wave of worldliness and secularism that is pervading our land. As we look out upon our world there are some who may be saying, "Happy Days Are Here Again," but many people are harassed and distressed by new problems brought about directly or indirectly by the war.

Standing in the midst of this new or different world is the Christian Church—the physical evidence of the Spirit of Christ upon earth. Never has the church been challenged as it is being challenged today to present a program that will be adequate for the material and spiritual needs of people. What an opportunity, what a responsibility lies before us as Christians!

Our denomination has termed this opportunity and responsibility "Our Christian World Mission." Just what does that mean? What is involved as far as the local church, its pastor and its members are concerned?

In the first place, it is our Christian World Mission to endeavor to bring into active participation in the program of the church every member on our church roll. As we know, most churches have a lot of "dead wood" among their membership. Why is this true? Maybe some people were never really converted, didn't really give their hearts to the Lord when they united with the church, so that while they allowed their names to be placed on the church record, they never took their vows seriously. Their social life and other interests have taken precedence over the church. Truly, most churches need a revival of religion.

Some people have never found a place where they really fit into the program of the church. There are men and women and young people who are naturally shy and need a great deal of encouragement after they unite with a church. Each new member needs a "sponsor" so to speak, some well established church member who will see that the newcomer is kept informed of all the church events, invited to attend meetings of the various organization, made to feel at home in these meetings and so on. It has been said many times, that it is much easier to bring new members into the church than it is to absorb them into the program of the church, and that is certainly true.

Then some churches haven't a streamlined program to meet present day needs. Some churches don't even have a program! Every church needs goals—goals for the men, goals for the women, goals for the young people, goals for the Sunday school, goals for the church as a whole. We have got to be on our toes and know about all the new helps which our denomination is offering, know what ideas are working well in other churches, and have suggestions to offering for improving the work and service of every department in our church.

And then, let me say this, we need laymen and laywomen on our church committees who are open to suggestion, who are willing to face realistically the needs of the church and community, and adapt the program of the church to meet these needs. Most of the time the Official Board or Church Council, or whatever may be the name of the governing body in a church, is made up of faithful, reliable, wholehearted, Christian men and women who will support the church regardless of its program. However, sometimes loving your church a great deal can be a drawback. You become satisfied, you can't see its weaknesses, you can't see why anything needs to be changed. In order for a church to fulfill its Christian World Mission it must have a program that is keyed to meet the needs of every group in the church—children, young people, men and women.

In the second place, a wholehearted effort must be made to reach the unchurched. There are a great many people in every community who are not members of any church. Every true Christian should have a genuine feeling of concern for those outside the Christian fellowship. And it should be an active concern—the kind that constrains men and women to go out and work and continue to work until people are won to Christ. As Christ sent His disciples out two by two on an evangelistic tour, church members need to go out frequently visiting in homes, carrying on a program of personal evangelism. Laymen and laywomen need to be trained for this service. Winning people for Christ is certainly a great part of our Christian World Mission today.

In the third place, in order to fulfill our Christian World Mission we must give more money than we have ever given before to meet the growing needs of the local church. We all know about the high cost of living, and know that it takes more money to operate a church today than it did ten years ago. You need more money to run your household today. Likewise the church needs more money if it is to fulfill its Christian World Mission. Now this is a real problem for most churches. But I think we can honestly say that every church could raise a great deal more for home expenses and for benevolences if only it followed a well-worked-out system, if it had each year a competently directed and executed Every-Member Canvass. Too often churches rely upon the large contributions of a few substantial members to underwrite their church budget, they have not taken very seriously the "little

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The new Elon College catalogue is beautiful. It is printed on lovely soft paper, and bound in the Elon colors—maroon and gold. However, it is that which is between the covers that counts. We can be very proud of that, too. Especially do I like that announcement on the fly-leaf: "Member of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools; the Association of American Colleges; the North Carolina College Conference; and of the North Carolina Conference of Church-Related Colleges." I like that phrase "Sixtieth Annual Announcement." To me the fact that our college is a member of the accrediting association, and that it has attained to the age of sixty years means something. Most important is its rating, and to see that is standard A-grade should make us all very happy and very anxious to keep it that way.

Sixty years! I have not yet seen one of the new Alumni Directories, but I know that its story is of immense importance to our Church. Only think of the men and women who studied at Elon. Think of the professors who have taught there, and those teaching there now. Think of the training received in those sixty years by thousands of young men and women. And think of the service they have rendered as ministers of the Gospel, doctors, lawyers, teachers, business men and women—and perhaps some of the greatest service rendered by men and women of Elon has been rendered in farm homes throughout this Southland. At Elon they caught a vision, of that we can be proud.

Yes, the new catalogue is quite a book. It contains 130 pages of important information. It lists twelve departments of instruction, which I state briefly: English and Dramatics, Business Administration, Social Sciences, Education and Psychology, Philosophy and Religion, Languages, Mathematics, Natural Sciences, Health and Physical Education, and Fine Arts. Many of those departments are broken into several divisions, as is, for instance, the social and natural sciences. And just remember that the equipment for teaching all these subjects, and the teachers who teach them, must be standard grade to get the rating. All that, and the spirit of friendship and spiritual concerning which is fostered at Elon.

But I had to sort of rub my eyes when I saw that my college of 1917 now lists one hundred twenty-nine seniors, one hundred fifty-six juniors, two hundred twenty-two sophomores, and two hundred seventy-six freshmen—almost an average of two hundred for each of the four classes! I know that would make the founding fathers very happy! May God bless to our memory those men of really great vision, and help us to measure up in doing our part now. They have given us a great heritage in more ways than one. I intended to tell you that additional students not included in the above classes brought the total fall-of-1948 figure up to eight hundred thirty. Even the brief history, the description of the buildings, the listing of the faculty, the description of the courses, the names of all the students with their home addresses—all these things made interesting reading for me. There are so many good reasons that it should be so.

SOUTHERN CONVENTION LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP.

Following is a report from the chairman of the Laymen's Fellowship Committee of the Southern Convention to the National Committee on Laymen's Work of the Congregational Christian Churches:

We have accomplished some things in our efforts to organize the Laymen of the Southern Convention. We have been well impressed and encouraged by the response of the average layman to an appeal for cooperation in developing the local church as well as our churches as a whole. We should like to mention a few of the things that have been accomplished in the Southern Convention:

1. Every church has a chairman and a vice-chairman. The most of these were elected by the laymen; although in some cases appointed by the pastor or Superintendent Wm. T. Scott.

2. Every conference has a chairman and vice-chairman. The chairman of each conference along with the Laymen Committee of the Southern Convention forms the council that governs the work in our convention.

3. Many of our churches had special meetings for the laymen, and some have local improvement projects under way sponsored by the laymen of the church.

4. We had a very large attendance of laymen at the meeting of the Southern Convention in May, 1948. In addition to a special program during the Convention, we arranged for a banquet at which time between 150 and 175 men met for about two hours to enjoy a program at which time Honorable Thad Eure, Secretary of the State of North Carolina, and a member of our fellowship, spoke to the group.

5. We planned for a Churchmanship Institute in North Carolina and Virginia. We held our Churchmanship Institute at Elon College for the North Carolina group, but due to the polio epidemic the attendance was not as large as we had expected. About 50 individuals attended this Churchmanship Institute which was very profitable to our people.

6. We observed Layman's Sunday on October 17, and the majority of our pastors used laymen as the speaker or in some way gave them special recognition on this occasion. We were especially encouraged by the cooperation of our ministers and with the fine programs put on by our laymen.

7. During the year we have mailed out several bulletins or News Letters. We have not been as consistent in this as we would like. We hope to do better in the future.

Again, we wish to say that we are encouraged by the interest of our laymen, but we are conscious of the fact that they are looking for someone to lead them. There is some doubt in our minds if sufficient leadership can be furnished without a fulltime employee. Men with jobs that tie them down each week-day cannot make the necessary contacts and meet with enough local church groups to get the job done as it should be in the Southern Convention. Some of us have hopes our Convention Office will find it possible to put on a fulltime man to work with the Laymen's Fellowship and promote stewardship and evangelism.

GEO. D. COLCLOUGH,
Chairman.

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

II. IN THE COMMUNITY.

A community is composed of a number of families living in homes located in a given area. These homes may be closely related as to location or widely separated. It is the people who live in the houses and not the houses themselves that make the community. The character of the people determines the character of the community. If the people are good the community is good. If the people are bad the community is bad.

No community in this country is considered complete or desirable without a church and school facilities for introducing the children to the realities of life through instruction and training, and preparing them to take their places in the community and to make their contributions to the on-goings of society. In a Christian country one cannot be his best or give his best separate and apart from God. The church with its hymns, its inspirations, its prayers, and its prophecy is essential to the individual in his search for God and the forces that will help him to build a good life for home, community, and country.

No one spends his entire time in his own community. Interest and necessity take him beyond its borders. As he goes out and comes in, family and neighbors observe his steps. If he is honorable in his going out and coming in, he is respected, honored and loved. He becomes a benediction to his home and a blessing to his community. He has found the secret of living in Christ and the power that makes him victorious over self and conqueror of evil with its blight.

When we think of our responsibility to help the children in our community to discover the best that God has given them and to make it possible for them to be the men and women that God expects them to be, surely, we want to grow up in a community with right influences, high ideals and compelling opportunities.

This sounds good, but it is not easy to build a community of this character today. There are so many evil institutions and influences that are determined to force their way into every community and entrench themselves in the habits and life of the people.

Amusements and games, perfectly harmless of themselves, but when they consume the Sabbath of these individuals who give themselves to them they become a desecration and the breeders of irreverence and distrust. The saloon, the A. B. C. stores, and the houses of ill fame go hand in hand. Where one is the other will come. These defame good names, wreck characters, and destroy souls in time and for eternity. Only yesterday, I read a story in a daily paper published in a great city, telling of the determination on the part of the city fathers to close up the houses of ill fame and drive out the prostitutes. This was not true in that city in prohibition days. That which deadens the mind and inflames passion is dangerous to character and corrupting to morals.

Are we aware that at this particular time legalized liquor, with all of its evils is fighting its way back into the community and society under the pretense of increased revenue that may be used for playgrounds, recreational facilities, and better schools? That may be true, but who wants these added advantages at the price of homes, of decency, of character, of human life, and of the souls of men! Would any community consider paying such a price for added revenue regardless of its financial stringency.

In our day old communities are being extended, new communities are being formed, and population is on the increase. There are many more people alive and much more living being done in the world than ever before. May we make sure that this increased living is Christian living—where those with plenty shall share with those who otherwise would exist in want; where the strong will protect the weak; where, as of old, “everyone helped his neighbor and everyone said to his brother, Be thou of good courage;” where the Christian shall make available to the non-Christian every Christian grace and persuasion that he, too, may become Christian and give his service and influence of Christian living that the whole community may be Christian.

If you would have your community be a good community, be sure that your life is a good life. Faith begets faith and Christian living becomes a transforming influence for good in any community.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

We are now in the conference period as designated by the Convention. During January and February, the Convention has directed that in churches and Sunday schools, information should be given concerning the college, its opportunities, its responsibilities, and its needs. That the Sunday schools and churches should be given to understand their responsibilities in the matter of the support, financial and otherwise, of our college. In 1947-48, we failed by $553.90 to send to the college its full apportionment.

We start the new year with one contribution from one church in the Eastern Virginia Conference, our church at Franklin. This is a good start. Many of our churches in the Convention could do as much and I am sure that others will as the weeks pass. We are grateful for the support given the college during the past year and earnestly pray for the continuation of the same.

decision to grant the gift, noted that the Burlington organization has shown a continuing interest in the progress of Elon College. Not only have substantial contributions been made by the Foundation in previous years, but the college also has been the beneficiary of gifts from the May-McEwen-Kaiser Company, now a division of Burlington Mills.

The trustees of the Burlington Foundation, in making available the money for the gymnasium, pointed out the close connection which has existed between Burlington Mills and Elon. At present, more than twenty-five alumni of the college are employed by the company. In addition, the physical plant of the college is located near a large number of Burlington Mills plants in Alamance and Guilford counties.

The gift, as the trustees have set forth in a statement of policy, is part of a continuing program of “developing youth and furthering the basic ideals of American life through helping the privately-endowed Christian colleges.”

SEEING OUR MISSION DOLLARS IN ACTION.

By DR. W. W. SLOAN.

Have you been in Alaska, Hawaii, the Canal Zone, Puerto Rico or the Virgin Islands, outlying possessions of the United States which are our home mission study theme this year? Mrs. Sloan and I hadn't either, except for the Canal Zone. Therefore, we asked, why not investigate for ourselves? We could be away from the College two weeks and the Shallow Ford Church would be glad to be rid of us a little while, so why not go to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands for Christmas?

Consequently we left Raleigh at 8:00 Sunday night, December 19, and the next afternoon took a plane from Miami to Puerto Rico, more than a thousand miles southeast, arriving at San Juan airport at 10:30 Puerto Rican time. A Puerto Rican girl, Carmen Rodriguez, who was a student at Elon last year met us and took us to Robinson School, a splendid grade and high school founded by the Methodists. The next morning after a walk in which Mrs. Sloan held numerous conversations in Spanish we were met by Dr. Charles I Mohler, the superintendent of the United Evangelical Church of Puerto, a union of Congregational Christian and Evangelical-United Brethren Churches. He had worked out an extensive itinerary for us whereby we were able to see much of the Protestant work on the Island. Dr. Mohler first introduced us to Dr. Florencio Saez, our Congregational Christian faculty member of the Evangelical Seminary of Puerto Rico, the school in which all Baptist, Methodist, Presbyterian, Disciples of Christ as well as United Evangelical ministers are trained. Dr. Saez, who is dean of the Seminary, was most generous in taking us about the Seminary and the University of Puerto Rico, then showing us points of interest in the ancient walled city of San Juan and introducing us to various leaders.

Wednesday we started around the Island, going to the western extreme where at Mayaguez we visited the work of the Presbyterian and the Episcopal schools and churches and the Marina Neighborhood House. We also went up into the mountains and saw the rural community work being begun by the Presbyterians. Our next visit was to San German and the Polytechnic Institute, a college much like Elon, organized by the Presbyterians but now inter-denominational "Poly" is the only four-year liberal arts college on the Island apart from the University and is doing a great work in developing leaders.

The day before Christmas we went to Ponce (named for Ponce de Leon whose tomb we had visited at San Juan). Here the Christian Church work was started many years ago by Dr. D. P. Barrett now retired and living at Chapel Hill. We saw several churches started by him and spent the night in the home of Rev. Juan R. Romero who was baptized at the age of thirteen by Dr. Barrett and is now pastor of the church he joined at that time. Mr. Romero did not tell us, but a few days later a celebration was held honoring the 25th anniversary of Mr. Romero's ordination.

In the summer of 1947 Mr. Romero was sent to the Deering ministers conference in New Hampshire. He showed us a little book of greetings to him made at that time. Among others we found well-wishers signed by our CHRISTIAN SUN editor, Mr. House, and Rev. Raymond T. Grissom then of Sanford.

Our third Puerto Rican Christmas program, one of the best we have ever seen, was attended at one of our Ponce churches. We also went to Christmas Eve midnight mass at the cathedral and found one of the numerous influences made on the Roman Church by our Protestant work—congregational singing. The Puerto Ricans love to sing, but only recently has the Roman Church given them a chance to sing in church services.

Christmas morning we saw the extensive printing plant where all the church literature of the various Protestant churches on the Island is printed. That afternoon we crossed the southeastern corner of the Island by the old Spanish military road to the headquarters of our denomination's work, Humacao, where we were guests of Superintendent and Mrs. Mohler at Ryder Memorial Hospital. The Mohlers were away for part of Christmas. While eating supper at a restaurant on the hot paved plaza we heard above the Spanish voices a juke box blaring in English, "I Am Dreaming of a White Christmas." We wondered what this meant to a people who had never seen a snow flake.

Sunday was a busy day visiting churches and making addresses through an interpreter. Mrs. Sloan had a great advantage. She could say twice as much in a given time as she spoke in Spanish. I have preached through many interpreters in various parts of the world but my richest experience came Sunday night when Mrs. Sloan stood beside me in the pulpit and translated my sermon into Spanish.

Part of Monday and Tuesday was spent at Yuquiyu our new rural work in the mountains of the northeast corner of the Island. The work here was started by the Friends or Quakers as a Civilian Public Service camp in which conscientious objectors made a very definite contribution to a more Christian world. Since the war two of these families have stayed on and a third has been added under the sponsorship of our United Evangelical Church which is doing so much to evangelize the people of the eastern end of Puerto Rico.

A "publica" (cross between bus and taxi) enabled us to complete the circle of the Island, bringing us through the city of Carolina to San Juan where another busy period, including an address to the nurses of the Presbyterian Hospital and dinner at the home of our former Elon student, proceeded a visit by plane to the Virgin Islands, another night at Robinson School and our return to the States by a plane that made stops in the Dominican Republic, Haiti and Cuba. Our plane's reaching Miami an hour late necessitated a wild rush across the city to catch our train north in time to attend a New Year's party of our Shallow Ford young people after five thousand miles of travel in thirteen days.

What values did we find in our Protestant work in Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands? I shall attempt to answer this next week. We took quite a few motion pictures. If they turn out to be any good we may be able to share them with some of our church groups.

ANGIE CREW'S NEW ADDRESS.

Angie Crew (along with all other missionaries in Japan) has been registered and given an A. P. O. number. This means that packages can go to her as to soldiers (up to 70 lbs.) without bother about custom tags, listing what is in them, etc. It also means that air mail letters may be sent to her for 6c, as to any place in the U. S. This is a great help to us and clears up any confusion about how to send mail to Angie. This makes it much simpler to send packages to Angie and gives us more assurance that they will reach her promptly. Now perhaps we can send more packages and letters to her. This is her address:

HAW RIVER SOCIETY.

The Women's Missionary Society of the Haw River Congregational Christian Church held its regular monthly meeting in the home of Mrs. W. J. Pearson, Monday evening, December 13, 1948.

The meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. Artelia Poole. Mrs. J. R. Barker read the scripture lesson after which Mrs. J. W. Simmons led in prayer. The program which centered around Christmas was given by the pastor, Rev. E. T. Farrell.

Christmas carols were sung by the entire group, with a special solo by Mrs. Frank Bain.

The society is planning a basket for an old lady and an invalid daughter to cheer them up for Christmas.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess after which Christmas gifts were exchanged.

NEWS FROM INGRAM, VIRGINIA.

The Missionary Society of our church has made a good start on the new year's work. We meet in the homes of the members sometimes and sometimes we hold our meetings at church.

We are using the program material in the packet and find it very interesting and helpful. We have used this material for several years and recommend it to societies not using it.

We observed World Community Day at our church, inviting the other churches of the Community. Our pastor, Rev. Robert T. Woodruff Jr., assisted by Rev. Wiley Hogue, pastor of the Oak Level Presbyterian Church, led the program. We felt challenged and inspired to do our best to help make a chaotic strife-torn world a little better. We sent eight "Pack-a-Towel" bundles from our church. The other churches sent theirs through their own fellowship.

We have two bags from Church World Service, which we plan to fill and send in the very near future.

On Tuesday evening, November 7, Mrs. Wiley Hogue of the Presbyterian Church reviewed in a very interesting way the book On Our Own Doorstep at our church, with the members of the societies of both churches invited.

We felt a deep sense of responsibility for the spiritual welfare of the people of our out-lying possessions.

For our December meeting we met at the Church School assembly room. An interesting Christmas program was presented and after the program and business were over, gifts were exchanged and refreshments served.

For our January meeting, we had a brief study of the brochure, "Report on China." Later in January we will have our review of China—Twilight or Dawn, by Mr. F. C. Whellon, one of our members.

Our pastor plans to teach the book of Galatians in a series of lessons beginning in the near future.

CHILDREN'S WORK.

An Interdenominational Workshop of Children is being planned by the regional denominational leaders of Christian Education in North Carolina to be held on February 25 and 26, 1949, at the First Presbyterian Church, Durham. All those who work or would like to work with children in church schools are invited to attend.

This workshop is to provide practical training and experience in methods and techniques of creative teaching of children and to give opportunity for sharing ideas across denominational lines.

The Workshop begins on February 25 at 10:00 A. M. and closes at 1:00 P. M. February 26th. The delegates to the Workshop will divide into three age groups—Kindergarten, Primary, and Junior to consider how to teach creatively their respective age

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

When a little girl was asked what she had in her mouth, she replied, "I do not have no something in my mouth." Her answer was complete if not correct speech. One of the problems all boys and girls must face is that of speaking good English. Children in the South also need to learn to speak without drawling and dropping the ends of their words. It is all right to have a southern accent, but use good diction!

There is another problem—that of slang. Some slang expressions or words of local use have real meaning. I recall Dr. N. G. Newman telling of the man using "tote." To carry is proper, but "to tote" means to grasp the article (heavy though it be) tightly in one's arms and take it to its destination. I like goobers for peanuts, too, but please young users of slang—what does "jeepers" mean? Has it to do with jeeps? A few slang expressions may add color to conversation but—"Ah, yeh, no foolin', huh? hones'?" jeepers, ye did, golly," etc., are poor substitutes for good strong, useful words. I do not agree with people who think all words must be short and simple. The majority of vulgar and profane words are four-letter words. Not enough people use expressive words. Words like pungent, arid, patina, etc. Why not use them?

There is the matter of using profanity, the bad words. I don't believe in mouthwashing with soap. Tell your mother or father not to use bad words and you won't! Of course, some of them are learned from playmates or school friends, but if mother will not keep reminding you, you may soon forget them. Perhaps she should tell them to you and then tell you some better words of exclamation. A few weeks ago I heard of a young woman who had a new system for bad words. Instead of blurting them out—she practiced relaxing the ugly wrinkles that came to her face as she strained and frowned to say them. It is easier to splutter and shout than to unhook the tiny muscles controlling brows and mouth. I haven't heard of anyone who was helped by their explosion. Often the person will clap a hand over their mouth in a horrified apology. But it is too late. Never used, no problem with this set of words.

We learn the words we hear about us. Some little folk learn more quickly than others. We learn words by hearing stories and reading them. As we grow older, we learn to look for unknown words in the dictionary. Do you know the old, old nonsense rhyme: "Poor old dromedary, Swallowed a dictionary!"?

There are several dictionaries for the very small. One of these is called "A Child's First Picture Dictionary" and may be ordered from The Methodist Publishing House, Richmond, Va., or Wonder Books in New York for 59c. There are pictures explaining each word. It has the 380 words that are the basic ones for reading in the first and second grades.

Let me say as I have many times before, that the words of the King James Version of our Bible are beautiful and useful. Learn them! Do you know that in addition to meaning, words have stories? We can learn how they got to be words. The word tawdry which means bright, gay and somewhat shabby, came from St. Aubrey's Fair.

It became necessary for me to learn many medical terms and words when I was past college age, and the spelling was difficult, but I am glad that I learned them.

No one is ashamed of knowing good words. Our days would be empty if we could not read or write or talk. Your parents can help you by answering your questions and explaining new words. I heard a little boy at Christmastide say to his mother, "Oh, look at the beautiful leaves on the Christmas tree." Then she answered, "It is beautiful but they are not leaves, but needles. There are needles on the trees that stay green, or 'evergreen' as we say. There are needles for sewing, and the needles used by doctors." Do you see how she was helping him? There are those who regret we have words with more than one meaning but since we do, let's learn them and use them!

FATHER KNEW BEST.

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

It was Sunday afternoon, and Mr. Merkle was reading the sports section of the paper and feeling nicely relaxed and comfortable.

His wife was fondly watching their small son, Billy, who was trying to build a house with his blocks. His childish fingers had not yet learned how to carry out some of these new wishes of his, and every little while the structure would tumble down and he would have to begin all over again.

Mrs. Merkle tried to read, but her attention wandered to the absorbed youthful architect, and when his house toppled for the fourth time, she laid her book aside, a helpful gleam in her eyes, and started to rise. "Mother'll show—" she began.

"Don't!" said her husband unexpectedly, looking over the top of his paper.

"Don't what?" she asked uncertainly.

"Don't do it for him," Mr. Merkle answered with a quizzical smile.

"I was just going to show him how," his wife protested, flushing.

"But he knows how. He knows he has to put one block on the top of another. All he has to learn now is to balance them properly so they'll stay in position."

"Well—can't I show him that?"

"He's learning how to do something by himself, dear, and that's very important. He'll succeed, too. Maybe it won't be a nice, straight house like you would build for him, but it'll be his very own. Don't you see?"

Reluctantly Mrs. Merkle settled back into her chair. "Well, perhaps you're right," she conceded, "but—"

"Take my word for it, Claire, I am right. Mother was like you—like most mothers. She wanted to do things for me. Sometimes such help is all right, but there are other times when a mother should keep 'hands off' and let her child work out things for himself.

"I remember I was to make a paper knife in my Boy Scout work. I was awkward at handwork and, after cutting a few slivers from a piece of wood, I complained, 'Shucks, I can't make this knife!'

"Let me see it," Mother said. In a very short while she made the piece of wood look like a knife. I cut at it a bit more and handed it in."

"What was wrong with that?"

"Can't you see, Claire? Can't you see that Mother took away my initiative and denied me the satisfaction of accomplishment? The knife itself did not matter. It was the doing it that counted. That was the purpose of (Continued on page 14.)

JOINT MEETINGS AT GRAND RAPIDS.

Of the many inspiring features of the Grand Rapids Meeting of the United Christian Youth Movement, in my opinion the fine fellowship experienced between the Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Christian delegates was tops. From the time we arrived until we bid fond farewells the spirit of union was in the air. In fact, within a very short time "mergers" were being consummated between individuals within our two groups.

In addition to the morning program which included the entire Conference there were denominational meetings held in the afternoon. Tuesday afternoon each denomination met as a unit and became acquainted with one another from the various sections of the country. Plans were discussed pertaining to the present status of the denomination.

Wednesday through Saturday the delegates from the CC and E&R churches met jointly to discuss and plan for the coming merger. The Spirit of these meetings was one of high hope for the consummation of the union. Wednesday afternoon interesting skits were given depicting the beginnings of the two youth organizations. Discussion of the mechanics of the merger were thoroughly discussed and plans were made to bring these into reality.

Thursday through Saturday the delegates were divided into four groups as follows: Group 1—Projects; Group 2—Program Materials; Group 3—Social Action; Group 4—Summer Programs.

A very comprehensive survey was made in each of these groups of the problems confronting the youth of our denominations in these fields. Specific recommendations have been made and will be used in formulating policies of our merged organizations.

Friday night the ball room of the Rowe Hotel in Grand Rapids was packed with the delegates from our churches. Games were led by recreation directors from our two denominations. A royal time was enjoyed by each person present. The climax came with the "formal wedding" of Mr. E. & R. and Miss CC. This wedding was complete with everything from the irate father of the bride to the weeping relatives of both the bride and groom. However they were weeping for joy instead of sorrow. The evening was well spent and the memories of that time of fun and fellowship will long remain in the minds of the delegates.

Sunday after the service of the Holy Communion we started back to our local churches realizing that "the fellowship of kindred minds, is like to that above." Grand Rapids not drops of water, little grains of sand." But just as drops of water make a mighty ocean, so the small, regular contributions to the church make a surprising difference. Nothing will prove of greater benefit to the life of your church than to have each member giving as he is able to the work of Christ. To have church members realize their stewardship responsibility is one of the most important goals of our Christian World Mission today.

Finally, we must give more generously than ever before to support the Missionary Enterprises of our church. Since the war the calls for missionary aid have increased on every hand. If we would share in our Christian World Mission at Home, we must be ready and willing to support to the fullest the Home Mission Projects of the Southern Convention. That means Elon College, the Christian Orphanage and the work the Christian Missionary Association is doing.

Our denomination as a whole, is being called upon to build twenty-five new churches each year and to lend support to many existing churches. The Christian Missionary Associations of the Southern Convention are assisting in the work in a creditable way. When we consider the work done and the progress being made by the churches in Eastern Virginia to which we give aid, we are glad for the privilege of sharing in this worthwhile enterprise.

As we go back to our homes, and back to the work of our local churches, I hope that each of us will be conscious of the fact that our denomination is launching a mighty, new campaign to help win the world for Christ. This new campaign is called "Our Christian World Mission." Every church member is being called upon to share in this new enterprise. To be a part of this great forward moment means that we will have to give of our time, our talents and our money more generously than ever before. It is a great responsibility, but also a great privilege to be working with Christ to build a Christian world. Let us pray for strength and courage sufficient for our task.

Before I started on my trip around the world, someone gave me one of the most valuable hints I have ever had. It consists merely in shutting your eyes when you are in the midst of a great moment, or close to some marvel of time or space, and convincing yourself that you are at home again with the experience over and past; and what would you wish most to have examined or done if you could turn time and space back again.

JESUS AND THE PREPARATORY MINISTRY OF JOHN.

LESSON IV—JANUARY 23, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: "Repent for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand.—Matthew 3:2.

LESSON: Mathew 3; Luke 3:1-23a; 7:18-35; John 1:19-34.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 1:59-67, 65-80.

The Herald of the Kingdom.

John the Baptist was the herald of the Kingdom. Set apart from his birth, indeed even before his birth, to the service of God, he had lived most of his life in the outlying districts, in the barren, bleak places on the edge of the desert, known as the wilderness. His simple fare and his rugged, outdoor life had given him a sturdy body and a strong constitution, and a raw courage, both physical and moral. Living much alone through all those years amid the silence and the solemnity of the desert, he had thought and brooded over the ways of men, and the will of God. As a boy he had undoubtedly been told the stories of the strange circumstance of his own birth and the story as told later in Luke's gospel, of the prophecies concerning the birth and mission of his cousin, Jesus. And also of his relation to the coming of the promised Messiah, the Christ of God, and of his mission as the herald of His coming, the one who should prepare the way for Him. Somehow—we know not just how—but somehow, and surely the conviction deepened within him that God's hour had struck, and the striking of the hour galvanized him into action. He came forth from his seclusion and began to preach in the wilderness of Judea. His words crackled and blazed. Like his illustrious predecessor of old, Elijah, he was a prophet or preacher of fire. His words had a snap and a sting in them that stirred the consciences of those who heard him. Folks began to talk about him, and soon great crowds of people were flocking to hear him, even though they had to go even as far as from Jerusalem to hear him.

The Coming of the Kingdom.

"The kingdom of heaven is at hand." As stated above John felt that God's hour had struck. The new order was at hand. The kingdom of heaven was about to be ushered in. God was about to fulfill His promise to work a new thing. To be sure John did not understand all the implications of the term, the kingdom of heaven. And he thought it would come in a different way in which it was, and is, to come. But Jesus himself said that it was with the preaching of John that the Kingdom of God was preached (Luke 16:16 and Matthew 11:12) and that in a sense it began with him.

Getting Ready for the Kingdom.

"The kingdom of God or of heaven is at hand" that was only a part of John's message, the last part. The first was "Repent." When John came preaching he said, "Repent ye; for the kingdom of heaven is at hand." The word means literally "change your mind" or "purpose differently." Its fuller meaning might be stated in this sentence which I quote from another writer, "Repentance is primarily a change of mind which issues in regret and in change of conduct." True repentance is deep and thoroughgoing. It means a changed life. And a changed life has the witness of works suitable to repentance. The Baptist was not asking people to be emotional or sentimental about their sins; he was summoning them to an about-face, to a changed life within that found a changed expression without. They were not ready for the coming of the kingdom. And a great many of us have got to change our lives before the kingdom of heaven can come either in our own lives or in the community and the world in which we live.

"Gentlemen, the King."

The Kingdom was embodied in the King. John himself knew that and proclaimed it. When men asked him about it all, he frankly said that it was not in him or of him. He was simply the forerunner, the herald of the King. And with a graciousness not always conspicuous in some servants of Christ, John was willing to decrease in order that Christ might increase. Unlike many leaders, John sought to turn men to Christ, rather than to win a personal following. Ministers need to take care lest people "join them" instead of joining the church or joining Christ. It is significant, too, that John pointed to Jesus not so much as the King as the Lamb of God. "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world," said he as he pointed out Jesus to his disciples.

The King Consecrates Himself To the Task.

We need not suppose that Jesus had not committed himself to the Father's will and work until his baptism. Even as a lad of twelve, as we have seen in a previous lesson. He felt that He "must be about the Father's business." But at His baptism He publicly and permanently consecrated Himself to His divinely-appointed and self-accepted ministry. It goes without saying that He was not baptized as a symbol of the washing away of His sins, for He was sinless—"in Him was no sin." But at His baptism He identified Himself with our humanity, and He publicly and irrevocably consecrated himself to do the Father's will. And God sealed the covenant by confessing the Son even as the Son had confessed the Father. "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased," said the voice out of heaven." Jesus had the proper credentials. God put His stamp of approval on His Son. We will do well to hear Him.

The King That Was Different, and the Kingdom That Is Different.

Everything started out so well. John was so enthusiastic and so successful. But as we read on we come to a strange interlude. We find that the man who had been sent to prepare the way for the Christ, now sends a delegation of his friends to ask Jesus if after all He is the Christ. Somehow or other He didn't seem to fit in with the picture. He was no man of fire. He did not have an axe hewing right and left and laying things waste. He was not overthrowing the enemies of Israel from without, or overpowering the forces of evil within Israel forcibly. He was not acting like a king, if He were the King. "Art thou he that should come, or look we for another?" was the plaintive and pathetic cry of this same John who a little while before had so courageously and so confidently heralded the coming of the King. We must remember that John was then in prison, inactive, shut up, and shut off from the freedom of the wide open spaces, like and even worse than an eagle in a cage. And Jesus was not doing the things that John had said He would do, and that John thought He should do. The

Replies to "A Blue Preacher on a Blue Monday"

By REV. BERNARD V. MUNGER,
Chapel Hill, N. C.

So—you get discouraged when you see the disparity between the glorious promise of the message God wants proclaimed and the results which follow its proclamation? You get discouraged when you compare the transformation your God promises to be possible, with the transformation which actually takes place in men about you? And, to meet this discouragement, you want a word from your brethren. Let me humbly suggest my "word" to you.

Go get your Bible, friend. There's a book called Jeremiah in the Old Testament. Get very well acquainted with the man whose name that book bears. You'll soon recognize that your problem was his problem, your discouragement was his discouragement. If you get to know him well, and do as he did with his problems and discouragements, you'll discover that his God can be your God, too, and that will be one true answer to your questions.

There are four books in the New Testament called Gospels. Get very well acquainted with the Central Figure in those books. Can you think of anyone who taught more truth, and was more misunderstood? Can you think of anyone who made greater proclamations of promise, and had listeners who laid hold of so little of what was promised? Can you think of anyone who spoke and lived more lovingly, and yet whose followers did not love Him enough to pray with Him an hour in a moon-lit garden, whose followers didn't love Him enough to be with Him in His hour of trial, whose friend Peter denied knowing Him, and whose disciple Judas betrayed Him? Can you hear Him on that occasion when His discourse upon the Bread of Life ended as His hearers walked away from him, and when He turned to His friends, saying: "Will you also go away?" As you have followed Him thus, has it been made clear to you that He set His will to the business of doing His Father's Will, and, let whatever circumstances and results follow, He continued faithful unto the end, finding His strength, and His joy, in doing that single thing? When you get discouraged, remember Jesus your Lord, and renew your fellowship with Him, that His Spirit might be in you!

Please permit me to answer the questions asked by "A Blue Preacher on a Blue Monday." The title of this article in last week's CHRISTIAN SUN is, "How Can a Man Continue to Preach."

First, we start with God. "In the beginning . . ." we're told, God created our world. If we actually believe God, we'll accept all of His written word. Then start from there.

A beautiful lily just blooms—one stalk pointing to our Master. We can be like the lily, and the fragrance of Christ-like character permeates our being, so that others "see Jesus in us." As we enter a shady grove of trees we don't see the lilies, yet we are conscious of the dainty perfume, and we reflect the Christ by faith and trust.

Because God in Christ is our pattern, we keep our eyes on Him, spiritually, and refuse to hear siren suggestions that torment us, and try to cause us to doubt. Our Father, and His abiding peace. We put our lives on the altar, and God accepts our gift, then we determine to put into action that which we know, viz.: "Jesus saves to the uttermost." The world-renowned missionary, Carey, preached seven years before one convert was saved for Christ. Then before that in his shoe shop, mending shoes, he'd walk nineteen miles on Sunday to preach. How can we doubt God, when His word is true.

Why do we search for a sign? We have the word become flesh. It would often encourage us to have our hearers listen and accept our message immediately, yet even Jesus was hindered from doing some mighty works in His own village because of unbelief. We wish to witness for God, when He calls us, and even the least of these are most precious to their Lord, and are bought with a price. Suppose we were in the days of John Wesley. There have been circuit riders who made every appointment by horseback, over mountains and across streams, often hungry, sometimes living for days on berries. The early days of Salvation Army, and many other leaders of long ago endured hardness as a true soldier of God, never living to see any reward of their efforts, yet praising God to the highest with their dying breath.

Paul writes to the Philippians 1:9 (Moffatt's Translation): "Have a sense of what is vital." My deepest conviction arises from the stark truth of this timely assertion, that now of all times the greatest need is for the resurgence of the Gospel, interpreted in its broadest sense into terms of thought and action directly bearing upon the times in which we now live.

Those of us who feel that we still want to preach, can only do so if we determine to "have a sense of what is vital" at all times. Central in the sense of what is vital should be our caution and purpose to keep our lives of spiritual communion clear, so that thought and pathos (feeling) from the Godhead reach us freed from prejudice and ignorance.

To accomplish this art so necessary to the vivified expression of eternal truths, it is a must that we be dominated with the sense of our mission to the ever-increasing tempo of souls on the march! Indeed, we must feel that we are the channels through which heaven flows.

Has there ever been a time when the Eternal God employed other than the means of human agency to convey His enlightenment and purpose to the world? Was there ever a time when Jesus was not obsessed with the sense of His mission, its purpose, and the Sender?

What would have happened in post-ascension days if the disciples and apostles had lost their sense of what was vital? Or if Saul of Tarsus had stubbornly remained at the feet of Gamaliel, and continued in fierce opposition to the followers of Jesus? Or further, if he had not heeded the goadings of his conscience, and his mind had remained clouded to that glorious revelation on the road to Damascus?

Answering then this query, "How can a man continue to tell the Christmas story of the birth of One who will save His people from their sins, when sinfulness so abounds in the lives of those who know the story best?" it is well to repeatedly recall the human testimony of the Scriptures whose great characters would have been voiceless in this or any other age had they not prepared to yield major considerations to the inner shrine of their natures, in order to meet the true

DEAR FRIENDS:

This financial report brings our reports for the year, 1948, to a close. Our next letter will be in regard to the year, 1949. You will notice from our financial report that we did not reach our financial goal, which I regret very much. It is the first goal I have ever set and failed to reach. I did want to reach this one so badly and make the year, 1948, the best year yet; but not so. I assure you that we did our very best to reach it.

We received from the churches during the year, 1948, the sum of $21,786.01. We received from Special Offerings, offerings from others outside our churches, the sum of $22,628.73, making a grand total of $44,414.74.

I want to express to our church people and friends our heartfelt thanks for their loyalty and cooperation during the year, 1948.

having me make it—achievement. Every time a child accomplishes something by himself, he has done a little to shape his character correctly—to make him more able to stand alone, on his own two feet."

Just then Billy gave a little crow of delight, and his father and mother saw that he had indeed completed his edifice—a shaky one to be sure, but it stood. Billy gazed at it gravely and sighed with satisfaction.

"See?" observed Mr. Merkle.

"I give in," smiled his wife, "and I'll remember to keep my hands off."

REPLY TO "BLUE PREACHER."

By REV. BERNARD V. MUNGER.

There are several other books, "The Acts," and many "Epistles," all of which will serve to remind you of the work of Paul. Get very well acquainted with him. Compare your situation with his, compare your congregation with his Corinthian congregation! Then go through his letters and be simply overwhelmed by the triumphant nature of his faith, the sturdiness of his confidence, and the perseverance he exhibited. Recognize that the victorious life of Paul, can be yours. That is what Paul wanted his hearers and readers to know. That is why he shared his experiences so freely with them. That's why they are all there in those New Testament records.

When you are doing this reading, you'll want to be praying. Let me suggest that you find a place for the following prayer in your devotions, at least once each week:

"O God, I go out each day into a world where it is not easy to remember Thee. But, so did Jesus. I am tempted to believe in the power of evil as stronger than the power of God. But, so was Jesus. I walk in the midst of crowds to whom the reality of this world alone appears convincing. But, so did Jesus. I am so often disappointed in someone whom I had believed I could trust. But, so was Jesus. Help me to remember Him. By His unshaken faith, help me to keep faith. By His unswerving righteousness, help me to keep trying to do right. By His witness to the power of Thy world of Spirit and Life, keep me from this worldly thinking and lift my affections up to the highest that I know. By His patience with those who disappointed Him, help me to be patient and forgiving, conscious of my shortcomings, and most of all concerned that my Master need not be disappointed when He looks at me. In His Name, I bring this prayer. Amen."

condition of spiritual hearing and discernment. Sinfulness will always be present while mortals are flesh-clad. It will abound where ignorance and intolerance are. It will remain a factor in every human life as a thing engendered by abuse and misuse of the laws of God. It is the spawn of the finite and earthly.

Its dispeller and enemy is light and enlightenment whose rays are strong or weak according to the faith and perseverance that goes into the act of containing the all-source by raising mental and spiritual antennae to the point of blending! The day of Pentecost happened just that way, and by its upheaval the ministry of the Christ mind was further assured a marching world. The world march is on! With rhythmical militant step they mark epoch after epoch, only by those things which meet and measure the ebb and flow of good into men's souls, and translated into thought and deed for the common welfare!

We lose the power to persuade when we lose our faith in God as the Source of all supply. And virtue is gone from us when the belief in angels is gone. Hosts invisible, whose charge we are, fail to inspire us, for we are then without vision! We should rejoice daily in the expectancy of continued revelation because we have kept our lines clear, and the birth of Christ is a daily advent in our lives.

To answer this question of "How can a man continue to preach the transforming power of God in Christ, when he can't discover the fruits of that power in the lives of his parishioners?" it is well to remember that he who imparts knowledge of the Godhead, can only do so, speaking from the background of his or her experience. If that experience includes a constant sense of vital contact with God, and the mind is not biased by the coldly intellectual outreach of academic pursuit, then will the windows of the soul be opened to the inspirational out-pourings of Divine truth. The transforming power of God in Christ will lay hands upon them, and they will become living demonstrations.

The truth is that our personal scrutiny of others, is limited to the finer range of vision that exists within ourselves. Beyond that we cannot see! Therefore, to see the power of God at work transforming the lives of others to whom the truth is preached, we must first see the fruits of that power at work within our humble selves!

Blue Preacher's Monday should never come, For each day brings us "one more day nearer home."

If sometimes people seem self-centered, and thoughtless, too, Remember the Fifth Gospel is the one written according to you!

You can preach if you're "called,"
God's power will bring increase,
No one can afford to doubt, ever—
His word will not return void! No, never!

On this Highway of Life, as we travel,
We find others stumble, often on the way.
The blessing will come to us—
If we give each one a helping hand today.

When we think we have patience,
Or that we're quite a nice person, too,
That leaves God out of the question—
So, what is the Gospel according to you?

My heart desires to be unseen of others,
Yet take my place when God calls,
And He'll give me the Word
To say to others, as I humbly pray: Help me, dear Lord!

So cheer up, Blue Preacher, Seeds planted for souls, will yield fruit some day, we know;
Let's trust God, prove Him, 'tis His Word,
And praise His name through weal or woe!

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

Master with that spiritual genius and insight and sympathy did not break the bruised reed or quench the smoking flax. He told John's messengers to take a look around the place and then tell their leader what they saw—the blind were seeing, the lame were walking, the sick were being healed, and the poor had the good news preached to them. There is a message there for those today who think that the Kingdom is coming in some great cataclysm, in some catastrophic intervention, by some divine overpowering. The Kingdom cometh not with observation, said Jesus later. The Kingdom is not dependent upon or correlative with some special political or social or economic theory, and it will not be brought in by military alliances or physical power. It is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Spirit. Jesus shall rule, but He shall rule by love. He shall conquer through suffering and sacrifice. And He shall reign forever and ever. Amen.

The King and the Herald of the Kingdom.

Jesus held John in high regard. In His opinion of all those who had been born of women, there had not risen one greater than John the Baptist. But John was under law and the Master quickly added that "he that is least in the kingdom of heaven is greater than he." (John the Baptist.)

Happy salesmen not only multiply their volume of business and their income, they also multiply themselves.

The Christian Workers Conference at Elon College

Official notice is hereby given that the second annual Christian Workers Conference will be held at Elon College January 23-27, inclusive. At the suggestion of some of our ministers, the program has been shortened so as to close on Thursday night.

We are presenting an unusually strong program. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Dean Emeritus, Hartford Theological Seminary, Hartford, Conn., will speak to the ministers. Dr. Howell Davies, Stewardship representative of our United Church, will bring a series of addresses on Stewardship. President Allan S. Meck of the Theological Seminary of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, located at Lancaster, Pa., will deliver a series of addresses on Evangelism. Dr. Meck is one of the foremost ministers of the day and a leader in his denomination. Dr. Elbert Conover, International representative on church planning and architecture, will address the conference on Church Building, planning, and landscaping. Dr. Sylvester Green, editor of the Durham Herald-Sun, will address the conference on "Publicizing the Christian Gospel." He will give instructions as to how the minister and the local church may cooperate with the public press in the matter of getting church news to the community and to the public.

We feel that this will be a most helpful program and trust that the pastors of our churches may find it possible to attend. It certainly would be a profitable experience to any minister.

EXPENSES

Registration	$1.00
Room and board (per day)	3.00

"We Would Be Building"

Ground-breaking ceremonies were held at our church in Sanford, North Carolina, on Sunday morning, January 9. As members of the congregation watch, A. H. McIver breaks ground for the new building. Others standing in foreground are (left to right): Rev. C. C. Dollar, pastor; Mrs. Ralph Cline, chairman of the building fund committee; and Miss Stella Stout, treasurer of the building fund. Mr. McIver is supervisor of the building program and chairman of the church's board of trustees. Work has been started on the building. Plans call for a two-story addition to the present structure to facilitate an adequate program of education and recreation, the brick veneering of the present building, together with a face-lifting job on the church front and spire. The cost of the completed building, unfurnished, is estimated at $33,000. The completion of the job is anticipated by late spring.

News Flashes

The annual meeting of the Virginia Council of Churches will be held in Richmond, January 25-26.

Assurance comes from Rev. R. A. Whitten that Winchester will reach its goal of fifteen new subscribers.

A service of presentation and dedication of the Rowland Memorial Library was held in First Church, Greensboro, on December 20, 1948.

The Southern Baptist Theological Seminary at Louisville, Ky., is erecting a new $60,000 apartment building for use by furloughed missionaries.

Rev. B. J. Earp of High Point has been ill with the flu but is out and going again. Good reports are continually coming from our church in High Point.

Rev. Joe A. French resigned Sunday, January 9, as pastor of the Reidsville Church, to become the pastor of the Lanett (Ala.) Congregational Christian Church.

The Eastern Virginia ministers in session Monday at Suffolk, heard messages by Supt. Scott and Rev. Emerson Smith, director of the department of race relations of the Virginia Council of Churches.

Rev. Thurmon Bowers, pastor of Happy Home Church, reports that the church added twelve new CHRISTIAN SUN subscriptions to its present list of twenty-five. What this fine rural church did, others can do if they will but try.

Miss Ruth Helen Gunn, a member of our Happy Home Church, has returned from the Camp Sutton Hospital for polio victims and is thriving at her home. She attended church last Sunday, January 9, for the first time since last summer when she was stricken.

Santa Claus not only treated the children of the Winston-Salem Sunday school, but every member. The old folks enjoyed it more than the children. Approximately one hundred people attended both the Christmas party and pageant held the same night. A Candlelight Service was held here and at Pfafftown.

Salem Chapel (located near Winston-Salem) is using in a methodical way the church envelopes for each member's giving to the church. This promotes regular individual giving. Belews Creek Church, located near by, has adopted a better financial plan this year and both churches are happy to have Rev. Allan Hurdle as their pastor.

SPECIAL MEETING OF GENERAL COUNCIL CALLED.

The Executive Committee hereby calls a Special Meeting of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches to convene at The Cleveland Hotel, on Friday, February 4, 1949, at 9:30 a. m., in Cleveland, Ohio.

This meeting is called to determine, in accordance with the vote of the General Council on June 22 1948, whether the percentage of the churches voting approval of the Basis of Union with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and of the Interpretations of that Basis of Union adopted by the General Council on June 22, 1948, is sufficient to warrant the consummation of the union; if the percentage be found sufficient, to take the steps necessary to consummate the union; and to consider and act upon such other business as may properly be brought before it.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

GUIDANCE IN CHURCHMANSHIP.

The ministry and laity need guidance in evangelism, church architecture, stewardship and religious publicity. The hope of our church lies in the proper orientation and motivation of evangelism. Architectural guidance is essential during this unprecedented renaissance of church building, and those who have a zeal for God in this particular but not according to knowledge may inadvertently have the sins of the church fathers visited upon the worshipping children to the third and fourth generation. How can our Christian World Mission become a glorious reality unless it is undergirded with a sound program of stewardship? The church in every age must seek adequate means of publicizing the gospel.

Does your church have all the answers to these questions? Is your organization functioning with maximum efficiency along all these lines? If so, the rest of our churches would like to sit at your feet. If not, your church should be represented at the Elon Workers' Conference.

A wealth and variety of leadership beckon us all to Elon. Dr. Conover brings the vast wisdom and experience of the Interdenominational Bureau of Architecture to the Southern Convention. Dr. Davies speaks out of a wide experience with the large churches and conferences of the Midwest. Dr. Meck represents a communion with a commendable and enviable record of churchmanship. Dr. Potter hails from the citadel (or one of the citadels) of Congregationalism. Dr. Green has had marked success in varied fields of Christian service.

The editor covets for every church the privilege of sharing in this important conference. All roads should lead to Elon next week.

IN PRISON AND . . .

St. Luke 16:16 gave us this remarkable statement: "The Law and the Prophets were until John; since that

Rev. Emmet Frazer, director, was re-elected. Commendable work has been done. Let us continue to preach the Kingdom of God.

There is a tendency among prisoners and patients in State institutions, the Rev. Mr. Frazer explains, to feel that nobody cares whether they are dead or alive. This, he claims, makes them careless and cease desiring to lead better lives.

Sunday morning finds Chaplain Frazer setting out to visit institutions and to conduct worship services according to a definite schedule.

On the fourth Sunday of each month, he holds a service at the State Farm from 9 to 10 a. m., visits patients in the hospital there until 11, returns to the penitentiary at 11:45 a. m. to supervise three students from Union Theological Seminary who are doing field work there as a part of their ministerial training.

After lunch, Chaplain Frazer and one of the students from the seminary drive to the Peaks Industrial School for worship service at 2:30 p. m. and from there to the Hanover Industrial School for 4 p. m. services.

On the first Friday of each month, Chaplain Frazer visits the Blue Ridge Sanatorium for tubercular patients at Charlottesville. He spends the entire day going from bed to bed, answering questions and noting letters that should be written.

Similar programs go on at the Lynchburg State Colony and the State Industrial Farm. The chaplain praised the youth program at Peaks Industrial School and the work of the Rev. George Ossman, who visits the ill at the Medical College of Virginia Hospital. The writer accompanies Mr. Frazer to the State Farm for Women on first Sunday afternoons for preaching engagements.

On the third Friday, Chaplain Frazer, goes to the Piedmont Sanatorium for tubercular patients at Burkeville. At this institution, he also provides a program of moving pictures in the evening.

The Foundation came into being twenty-eight years ago when a bill was introduced in the State Legislature to provide a salary for a chaplain at the penitentiary.

Church leaders insisted that religious work in State institutions is a missionary opportunity of the church and not a function of the State, and a number of denominations banded together to support the program for the State Penitentiary. Gradually the program has been expanded to include other institutions.

EX-MODERATOR SPEAKS.

A special meeting of the General Council has been called for February 4, in accordance with the vote at Oberlin. Since I was your moderator at Oberlin, I wonder if you may not be interested in knowing my present mature convictions about the merger? I have followed carefully the whole development of events since the merger was first proposed, and have tried at all times to be objective, impersonal and kindly disposed towards all concerned, both "pro" and "anti."

First of all, it seems to me that the basic question is this: Are we really ecumenically minded? Do we really want closer Christian unity with all Protestants—so far as that can be achieved without surrender of essential liberties? Personally, I am thrilled by the vision of the increasing solidarity of all Protestantism. And I think that our desperate world situation makes its consummation of paramount importance.

I believe the next step toward this unity can come right now by following William E. Barton's common-sense advice: "Let those unite that can unite!" Now we can unite with the E. & R. because they are willing to accept a common basis of local church autonomy, freedom from creedal subscription, and a voluntary delegated denominational organization—practically equivalent to what we have now. Union with them would create a great liberal evangelical denomination, nearly two million strong, which could exert tremendous influence for democratic church government, progressive religious thought, and a free pulpit in all the rest of Protestantism. This appears to me to be the major strategy on which we should all agree. This new united church would also have the advantage of being more representative geographically—as strong in Pennsylvania as in New England, while in the middle west the two groups would admirably supplement and strengthen one another.

I think, moreover, that our E. & R. friends have an educational tradition and a vigor, as well as freedom of thought, which makes them akin to us, to say nothing of a warmth of spiritual devotion which might come to us as an uncovenanted but welcome blessing from the union. A great wind of spiritual renewal might sweep across our churches as a result of this stimulating sense of closer fellowship with 700,000 new-found brothers and sisters in the faith.

On the other hand, to fail to achieve this union, after we have gone thus far, and to fail on what seem to me to be rather vague and undefinable grounds, cannot help but impart a chill of negativism and defeatism, not only to us but to the whole ecumenical movement.

Therefore, I am strongly for the union. I would not be so if it involved surrender of local church liberty or of our cherished theological freedom. But all these things have been carefully safe-guarded in the Basis of Union, plus the Oberlin Interpretation, plus the Cleveland Joint Declaration. I believe the approximately 1,000 to 12 vote at Oberlin did reveal the hearts of our people. We cannot now turn back (and we must not frustrate) the great flood-tide of ecumenical longings and convictions in our fellowship, especially among our young people.

I hope and trust that our highly intelligent and deeply Christian minority leaders (whose sincerity is not to be questioned) will now cease their opposition, since so much has been done to allay their fears. I certainly do not expect any large number of churches now to create a schism and organize a separate denomination on a basis of disagreement which has finally simmered down to differences largely procedural and relatively slight, after the clarifications and adjustments made at Oberlin in June and at Cleveland in November.

TENTH ANNUAL INSTITUTE OF RELIGION.

Raleigh's annual Institute of Religion will observe its tenth anniversary in 1949. The result of the vision of the Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, and several devoted laymen who initiated it ten years ago, it has grown in popular appeal each year in the State Capital and has been able to command outstanding speakers in a wide variety of fields. This year's program is scheduled to begin on January 24, with an address by Dr. Henry Steele Commager, Professor of History in Columbia University, whose subject is: "Safeguarding Civil Liberties—Why and How?"

Other speakers and their subjects are:

January 31—Dr. Harold E. Fey, Managing Editor of The Christian Century, whose topic is: "A World Church in a World Crisis."

February 7—The Honorable Estes Kefauver, United States Senator from Tennessee, who will speak on: "The Recuperating South."

February 14: Dr. Reinhold Niebuhr, William E. Dodge, Jr., Professor of Applied Christianity, Union Theological Seminary, New York, who has as his subject: "The Spiritual and Political Dimension of the World Crisis."

February 21—Dr. Carl Hermann Voss, Executive Secretary of the World Alliance for International Friendship Through the Churches, and Chairman of the American Christian Palestine Committee. Dr. Voss, pastor of the United Church from 1935 to 1938, will speak on the subject: "A Christian Looks at the New Israel."

March 1—Madame Rajan Nehru, of India, whose husband is a nephew of Prime Minister Jawaharal Nehru, and the present Indian Minister to Sweden. Madame Nehru's subject is: "What is Happening in India."

The theme of the Tenth Institute is: "The Church and a World in Crisis."

Four courses will be offered in the following fields: "Current Trends in Christian Thought," led by Dr. Ralph E. McLain, Head of the Department of Religion, Meredith College, Raleigh, N. C. "Science and Religion," with Dr. C. G. Brennecke, Head of the Department of Electrical Engineering, and Dr. George A. Gullette, Head of the Social Studies Department, both at State College. "Psychology in Everyday Use," led by Dr. D. J. Moffie, Head of the Department of Psychology at State College. "Problems of a World in Turmoil," (International Relations), led by Mrs. Charlotte Hilton Green, Chairman of the Department of Civics and International Relations of the Raleigh Women's Club.

The Institute schedule on the above dates will be: 6:00 p. m.—Fellowship Dinners (reservations should be made at the church); 7:00 p. m.—Classes; and 8:00 p. m.—Featured speakers.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

We were about to receive a young father and mother into church upon the transfer of their memberships from churches outside our city. Something of the following is what I said: We are about to receive two new members into our church, let us consider for a few minutes what that should mean. We are agreed on the facts of the Christian faith, that back of this universe there is God, that we ourselves are in need of God, that God has revealed himself as Father through Christ, and that he has brought us redemption through him. Let us be assured and that the Church is made up of his followers, that they are banded together under the compulsion to carry out his command to serve others, and to love one another.

Let us notice that it means that we shall enter into a serious and binding covenant with God and one another, a covenant that we are to be in fellowship with one another and witnesses by our lives to the Christ at home and wherever we work, that ours in so far as we are able to make it so is to be a Christian home and that we are to take the Sunday school, the teachings thereof, and attendance upon divine worship seriously; and that we take upon ourselves the obligation by the very fact of our uniting with the church to attend its services, to attend them meanfully, consistently, regularly, and with real concern for our worship and praise of God, and the part we may have in the building up of his Kingdom. Let us never at any time while we are members of the Church feel that we can take that membership lightly, or its obligations in any other way than as divine and serious.

It means that we shall support the Church in attendance, in loyal devotion in word and deed, and with the first fruits of our earnings and in God's gifts to us; and that we shall rejoice in the privilege of making extra gifts when there is extra need and when we are able so to give.

For all this we may expect from our Church in Christ the grace of God, the greatest gift beneath the shining stars, with salvation and life abundant and eternal; and for this covenant and membership you may also expect of your Church the practical ministries which it has to offer, such as this lovely, warm sanctuary, the equipment which our fellowship together has provided, like Sunday school rooms, chapels, recreation and dining facilities, music, textbooks, Bibles, friendship and encouragement, a minister for times of need anywhere night or day as near as your telephone. Having the interest of your Church at heart, and feeling that it is yours you will be patient with any imperfections, and render it your prayers and faithful cooperation.

We want you, need you, and you need what the Church through Christ has to offer, but already there are more than fifteen hundred names on the roll; strive to help us be a better church, and add to its influence and good name in the community and in the Kingdom of God, and may God give you great joy and happiness as you become a part of this Church and through it of the faithful throughout the wide world.

At the close of the service another couple waited at the door and told me they wanted to unite with the Church on the following Sunday.

A LETTER TO THE LAYMEN.

P. O. Box 411,
Burlington, N. C.,
January 7, 1949.

To the Congregational Christian Laymen of North Carolina—

DEAR FELLOW LAYMEN:

Our Laymen and Pastors of North Carolina (E. N. C., W. N. C., N. C. & Va.) will meet at Elon College Sunday, January 23, 1949, at 3:00 p. m. and concluding with a banquet at 6:00 o'clock. Please tell the men of your church and Sunday school about this meeting which has promise of being one of the most significant meetings ever held by our church. Evangelism, Stewardship, and the work of the Layman in the modern church will be the emphasis.

The program will include three great speakers and leaders of national and international reputation—Dr. Howell D. Davies, a Congregational Christian minister and secretary of Chicago, Ill., a specialist in Stewardship and modern Churchmanship; Dr. Allan S. Meek, Evangelical and Reformed minister for thirty-two years, churchman, and president of the Lancaster Theological Seminary, Penna.; Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Hartford, Conn., former Moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, minister and teacher, a fascinating speaker with a great message for our day.

Program.

3:00 Registration.

Devotional Service.

3:30 Address and Discussion—Dr. Howell D. Davies. Subject: "Making and Spending Money—Tested by the Christian Gospel."

4:30 Address and Discussion—Dr. Allen S. Meek. Subject: "The Layman as a Christian Witness."

6:00 Banquet.

Speaker—Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter.

The price of the banquet will be $1.50 per plate. It is absolutely necessary that we know the number of plates to reserve. Please report to your pastor the number of men who will attend from your church, or write direct to Wm. T. Scott, Supt., Elon College, N. C. We need to know the number not later than Wednesday, January 19. Give us the names of those who will attend if possible.

An unusual opportunity makes possible the meeting on the 23rd. The Christian Workers' Conference being held at Elon College January 23-27 makes it possible for us to have these unusual speakers. Plan now to be present for the meeting on Sunday, January 23. Tell other men from your church. Have a good delegation present. Don't forget to get your reservations in for the banquet.

Yours sincerely,
GEORGE D. COLCLOUGH,
Chairman.

SEVENTY-FIFTH ANNIVERSARY TO BE OBSERVED.

Protestant Churches of Puerto Rico will observe the seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Protestant Missions in that island during the week of March 6-13. Dr. J. P. Barrett, who with his wife, represented the Christian Church for more than twenty-five years in the island, has been asked to represent our church at this celebration. There will, of course, be some expenses entailed in the matter, and contributions will be solicited. Further announcement will be made by Dr. H. S. Hardcastle, the chairman of the special committee in the near future.

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

III. IN THE CHURCH.

The Church is divine. It was conceived in the heart of God and given to man by His son, Jesus Christ, our Lord. In the days of His flesh He asked many questions, many concerning others and some concerning Himself. On one occasion he inquired of His disciples, "Whom do men say that I, the Son of Man, am?" They answered, "Some say that Thou art John the Baptist, some Elias, and others Jeremiah, or one of the prophets." Then he inquired, "But whom do ye say that I am?" Peter answered and said, "Thou art the Christ the Son of the living God." Jesus answered, "Blessed art thou, Simon, for flesh and blood hath not revealed this unto you but my Father which art in Heaven. And I say unto you that thou art Peter and upon this rock I will build my church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it." That, which believes that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God and confesses Him as such to the world constitutes the basis upon which His church is built. The flood gates of hell may be opened wide from within and without and all the forces of evil hurled against it and still the church will stand. It is founded upon the rock, Jesus Christ. It is the pillar and ground of truth, the hope and expectation of all who are within its love.

What does Christian living within the church mean? Are you a member of the church? How do you live? Are those who are outside of the church impressed with the way you live? Are your habits, customs, and practices such as to convince the non-church members of your community and acquaintance that the church is of God and that those who are in the church are different to those who are without, that something has happened in your life which they have not yet experienced? Does the light of truth shine through you brightening the pathway of others, making plain the way of life, or do you in your living raise questions, cast shadows, and blur the way of life for others and cause them to turn from the church and from Christ? It is a glorious privilege to be in the church but a fearful award awaits those who are still of the world and yet in the church.

To prove ourselves worthy of the church we should acknowledge Christ as its head and as our personal Saviour and dedicate ourselves daily to the services of Christ and His church. Here are some things that we might do to prove ourselves Christians and be of service to those who know us and observe our way of living.

1. Guard our speech—James said the tongue is an unruly evil. Make sure that we do not injure others by careless and loose talk. When we do we injure ourselves and make fresh the wounds of Christ. Speech is given man to bless and not to curse.

2. Be kind and generous in your deeds. In living, the seeds for eternity are sown. They will spring up and come to fruitage in this and another world. Make sure that they are good and not evil. The Lord of the harvest will neither err nor sleep.

3. Be thoughtful and considerate of others. There are many who are unfortunate. They need your assistance. Those who are tempted need strength. Those who sorrow need comfort. Those who hunger need bread. Those who are lonely need companionship. Those who are sinful need a Savior. Remember that inasmuch as ye serve the least of these ye shall serve Christ.

4. Be true and faithful—true to the vows that you gave when you sought membership in the church, and faithful to every duty and obligation that are yours as a member of the church, the body of Christ.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Buildings, equipment, faculty, and students are required for the conduct of a college. Money is required to erect buildings and equip them for instruction at the college level. Teachers who have spent weeks, months, and years in preparation for effective teaching must be paid for their services as anyone else. They have the usual bills to pay. Money for capital improvement is required but money for current needs is also necessary.

Our Southern Convention has sought to assist the college in its current obligations by apportioning definite amounts to the churches of our Convention for the college. The Convention is a delegated body. Every local church has a right to be represented in the Convention and a voice in its actions. Each church in the Convention has an obligation to support the institutions and enterprises of the church. Elon College is one of our Convention's principal institutions. As a rule, our local churches are willing to give the college financial support and take advantage of the opportunity monthly to make a contribution. By cooperation and generous giving the churches do help materially in the support of the college. The college is most grateful.

THE PILGRIM PRESS DAYTON STORE CLOSES FEBRUARY 1.

Formal action was taken recently to close the Dayton store February 1, 1949. The decision was made after careful study and deliberation. Increased overhead costs, mailing and transportation problems, combined to make it seem wise to take this important step now.

By far the greater part of the Dayton business has been through the mail, and it has become increasingly evident that the constituency could be served better through our Boston and Chicago stores with their larger inventories and more direct transportation facilities. Through the years the Dayton store has been fortunate in its leadership. Under the new arrangement, the Boston and Chicago stores are prepared to serve Dayton customers in the same cooperating spirit demonstrated by Mr. Tom Radabaugh, Miss Betty Mack and their associates.

Missions
The World for Christ

A LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

American Board Mission,
Shaowu, Fukien, China,
December 29, 1948.

DEAR FRIENDS:

By the flickering Chinese oil lamp, I've been reading the Missionary Herald, November issue. It transported me back to America and our church life. I was getting all enthusiastic over the Every Member Canvass and the Pilgrim Fellowship, and wondering if the Waverly women would have an Unseen Guest Meal. Then the clock, left here by the Storrs, struck its cheery "cuckoo." Shivering with the chill of a Shaowu winter night, I came back to reality. But not without inspiration caught from the plans you American churches are carrying out for the World Mission.

Your letters have been an inspiration to us, too; and, of course, THE CHRISTIAN SUN. A friend in New Hampshire sent a snapshot of herself and family. I saw Winnie Whitlock of Winchester smiling in a snapshot she'd sent a Chinese friend. Pictures do help reduce those thousands of miles that separate us; and for those of you whom we know only by letter, they make your signature come alive.

And speaking of pictures, did you see Ed and Fran in that Herald? They meant Shaowu, China, not India, of course. And Mary Dewar playing that Chinese "violin"? She was leading a busy, though rugged, life there in Communist territory, the last we heard. How privileged I feel to be one of such company as the Moultons, Bert Faurot, and Roderick Scott also pictured in that Herald. When I recall four years ago this time filling out all those papers the Board requires to investigate a prospecting missionary, I can hardly believe we really did leave our Waverly church to be foreign missionaries. But now I look up at the huge scroll of tigers hanging on our wall and remember our present church and responsibility. The picture was given us by South Gate Church. And there on the baby's play blanket is a doll made and sent by Mrs. Holland of Franklin to her missionary's firstborn. For that matter I need only to feel the warmth of certain clothing the Waverly women gave me at parting and I remember we have left the American pastorate with its comforts (and problems!) to be your pastor on the foreign field with its peculiar discomforts and problems. Your prayers and letters and checks sent to the Board give us that feeling of support we need so sorely when overcome by that feeling of helplessness which comes to one minister in this huge area.

Dick is gone now on a "quick" (three days by boat) trip to Yang-kow, a trip which should have been made in the pleasant weather of fall. But our radio news (Voice of America) made us feel something drastic was about to happen any day, and we didn't want to separate for fear evacuation might be necessary. Now we're getting accustomed to that "state of emergency" feeling most China missionaries have experienced off and on during their service here; and we're continuing our work as usual. Locally, nothing more unusual is happening than the regular inflationary rise of prices and the New Year's increase of goods for sale.

Yes, another China New Year is approaching. This year the swell in market crowds came in time to give me a faint reminder of Christmas shoppers at home. But there was none of the light and music; nor was there the harried hustling. Noise and shoving there was, though. The leaders of a heavily laden donkey shouting a way through the crowds made a touch of Bethlehem on December 24. The well on East Gate Street is like the one in my creche at home; and East Gate crowds seem just as ignorant of Christmas as those Bethlehem crowds must have been. Our own church members make us wonder sometimes how much of Christmas has actually reached Shaowu. Of course, it is difficult for us foreigners to even know what goes on, much less understand it. But happenings in supposedly Christian families or business life and within the church itself have given us more than one heartache.

Just as Christians at home need God to touch their businesses and pocket-books, so do they here, only more so. Just as Christians at home need humility and concern for others, so do they here, only more so. As Leona said in her talk to the Synod, "Shaowu has suffered spiritually and morally from the wars." To meet Shaowu's needs requires more spiritual power than just we five have. We need to feel the strength of the world mission and to know you Christians in America are back of that World Mission.

As the World Day of Prayer approaches, may we all grow in spirit, stretch our minds to understand the failings and hardships of the Christian minority in every country. Then may we try to see ourselves, Americans, as we must look to them. And pray God for His viewpoint of us all, and His plan.

Affectionately yours,
DOROTHY JACKSON.

DESTINATION: PUERTO RICO.

Leaving his young doctor wife to complete her internship, Rev. Howard E. Spragg of Chicago, Ill., with his children, Suzy, five and Peter, one year old, and his sister, Miss Constance Spragg of Waverly, Mass., flew from La Guardia Airfield, New York, Tuesday night, January 4, bound for San Juan, Puerto Rico. Mr. Spragg will become superintendent of all work in Puerto Rico conducted by The Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches.

Mrs. Spragg, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. S. Beach of Westfield, New Jersey, received her MD from the University of Chicago last June and will complete her internship at Woodlawn Hospital, Chicago, this coming June, after which time she will join her family in Puerto Rico. Mr. Spragg, who was born in Boston, Mass., is the son of Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Spragg of 55 Ashland Street, Malden, Mass. He is a graduate of Union Theological Seminary, New York City, and holds his BD from Chicago Theological Seminary.

In Puerto Rico Mr. Spragg will succeed Rev. Charles I. Mohler who is retiring after forty years of service there. He will be Director of all Congregational Christian work on the Island which consists of twenty-two organized churches, forty-four rural chapels, the Ryder Hospital and the BURLINGTON AUXILIARY.

The Burlington Auxiliary publishes a news bulletin every month, containing information about what the women are doing. The auxiliary meets on this plan:

Circles meet at 10:30 a. m.

General Meeting at 11:30 a. m.

Fellowship Luncheon at 12:30 p. m.

The pastor is conducting the Bible Study on Monday afternoons at 5:30 at the church.

The Auxiliary is also responsible for the church nursery, each circle taking its turn at being in charge for a month.

ROWLAND MEMORIAL LIBRARY DEDICATED.

For several years our Auxiliary in the Greensboro, First Church, has had a "Christmas Party," at which time we combined December circle meetings and an inspirational meeting in one evening of fellowship. It is always one of the highlights in our year's work, and this year, we feel that it was one of the highlights in the entire work of not only the auxiliary, but the church as a whole.

Two years ago at our Christmas party, we launched the Rowland Memorial Fund, in memory of Mrs. C. H. Rowland. The fund was designated for a church library. This year we saw the dream become a reality in the dedication of the Rowland Memorial Library and its presentation by the auxiliary to the church.

A room in the church basement had been most pleasingly decorated and equipped as a library. Accumulated funds had been spent in the purchase of books and they had been placed on the new shelves as the beginning of a growing library. An effective program had been planned and was beautifully executed. The program was built around the theme of "Opening Windows" and the idea was expressed by four women who spoke briefly on how our library would open the windows of reading for children, young people, church leadership and spiritual living. The library was presented to the church and accepted by our minister. After the program, Mrs. Rowland's daughters received the church members in the new library.

It was a joyous, yet deeply moving occasion. A hard-working and capable committee had a beautifully decorated the entire church basement. The atmosphere of Christmas decorations, candle-lit rooms, well-spoken words and heart-filling music intensified our memory of one who touched our lives so effectively. In her memory, we will strive to make our library such a vital force in our church that we know she would approve.

RACIALISM RAMPANT IN SOUTH AFRICA.

In the October issue of Time magazine appeared a startling article on South Africa. It described the new Nationalist government under Prime Minister Daniel Malan, which is founded on the principle of racial segregation or "apartheid."

Two anti-Semitic ultranationalist organizations which had been forbidden under Field Marshall Smuts' regime are now in power. One, the Afrikaner Broederbond, "the sinister secret society controls a good two-thirds of the government members of Parliament," says Time.

Reference was also made to the restricting of immigration and the tightening up of requirements for citizenship. Prime Minister Malan has announced that he will put out of the Parliament representatives of the Negroes and will take away the franchise of the Coloureds (mixed white) in the Cape Province.

This article was so startling in spots that it was referred to Dr. Jas. Dexter Taylor, who has lived for nearly 49 years in the very heart of the Union of South Africa, and has only recently returned to the United States.

The following are some of his comments:

"The National party won the election on the issue of 'apartheid,' which was almost the only and certainly the main plank in their platform. They maintain that segregation is the only policy that will save 'white civilization' in South Africa, by which they mean that it is the only means of keeping the white race dominant in all respects. In their campaign speeches, in order to soft-pedal their aims somewhat for the ears of the less extreme sections of the population, and to win some British support (which they did) that is English-speaking sections, they claimed that apartheid did not mean oppression of the non-Europeans, but meant allowing them to develop to the full extent in their own segregated areas, but in the practical steps already announced in parliament it is clear that they mean to deprive non-Europeans of every vestige of political representation and to re-orient all education and administration of these people toward providing cheap farm labor.

"It is true that the Broederbond is a secret organization, claiming to be cultural but sponsoring an ideology differing but little from Nazism, except that it claims its basis in Calvinism. There is no doubt that its ultimate policy and that of the Nationalist party is to set up a "republic" which would be severed from the British Commonwealth and would be run on a one-party system with the franchise confined to those who have the Herrenvolk outlook, with the Afrikaans language dominant if not ultimately the only one officially recognized.

"All this was put in plain words during the early part of the last war when they believed that Hitler was winning and that he would encourage and support the setting up of such a republic. Those aspects of policy have been soft-pedalled during the campaign but never repudiated. All liberals in South Africa are agreed in the fear that present trends in the new government indicate that democracy is very seriously threatened in South Africa, and not non-European interests only.

"The new government is setting out to cancel all political rights of Natives, Coloureds and Indians. Even though such rights as they had were entrenched in the Constitution adopted at the time of Union of the four Provinces, and according to that constitution could not be altered except by a two-thirds majority of both houses of parliament sitting together the government has announced its intention to cancel those rights by a simple majority vote of the house of Assembly.

"It is true that Malan proposes to abolish the representation in Parliament.

Book Reviews

THE FABULOUS "DUTCH" ZELLERS.
Raymond J. Jeffreys.

This new book, written by the author of God Is My Landlord, literally drags the liquor business out into the open and rips off its mask of respectability, and exposes it for the benefit of the young people who are "falling" for the wet propaganda. It is so "hot" that some publishers were afraid to touch it.

It is the thrilling, true life-story of a daring gangster and notorious bootlegger who spread terror up and down the Ohio Valley in the "Gay Nineties." Then a miracle happened . . . he "hit the sawdust trail" in a Billy Sunday tabernacle meeting and became a sensational crusader for Temperance.

The new book will be off the press soon. Watch for advertising announcement in this paper.

THE SNOWDEN DOUGLASS SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSONS. Earl L. Douglass. Macmillan. New York. $2.

It is not too late to get this practical exposition of the International Sunday School Lessons. The first two quarters deal with the Life of Christ. The Third Quarter with the Psalms of of Ancient Israel and the Fourth with the prophets Isaiah and Jeremiah. The teachings of each lesson are emphasized skilfully, using various types of print as well as by striking illustrations and quotations. Why not secure this publication now for your teacher?

REPORT TO PROTESTANTS. Marcus Bach. Bob-Merrill Company. $3.

This is a book that is definitely different. It is unique in its approach to the problem which Protestantism faces, and in its presentation of data. The author is exceptionally well qualified to make his "Report" to Protestants both by reason of his personal religious background, his training, and his experience in religious work. He writes with conviction and with forceful diction. His style is intriguing—his thought stimulating. His analysis of the strength as well as of the weakness of Protestantism; his fair consideration of the position of Romanism, of the Christian Science Movement and of the numerous modern cults; and his presentation of the true basis of ecumenicity make this book one of the really great books of the year. It is "a must book" for all Protestant ministers, and for Protestant laymen who occupy positions of leadership in Protestantism.

PROTESTANTISM FACES ITS EDUCATIONAL TASK TOGETHER. Dr. William C. Bower and Dr. Percy R. Howard.

The story of cooperative Christian education in the United States and Canada, as told by the authors, will be published February 7.

This 228-page book, which recounts the important developments in interdenominational religious education during the last quarter of a century will be released at the twenty-seventh annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education at Columbus, Ohio, February 6-12.

Separate chapters relate how Protestant forces have cooperated in curriculum development, children's and young people's work, adult work and family life, leadership education, vacation and week-day religious education, field work and conventions, research, public relations, meeting war and post-war needs, and in sponsoring the Revised Standard Version of the Bible.

Copies may be ordered from the International Council of Religious Education, 203 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago 1, Ill., for $3.25.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

II. ANDREW.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

The name Andrew in Greek signifies "manly." He was the brother of Peter. However, whereas there are numerous references to Peter in the four gospels and in the Acts the only references to Andrew appear in Matthew 10:2, John 6:8, 10:22, Mark 13:3 and generally the traditions concerning him are unreliable. Yet, it is comparatively certain that he was the one who introduced Peter to the Master and would be important in our eyes if he had done nothing more. It is also thought that he was instrumental in the call of Philip.

Andrew was a man of keen observation and when Jesus asked (John 6) "Whence shall we buy bread?" it was Andrew who volunteered the information about the lad with the loaves and fishes.

Tradition indicates Andrew as the hero of several romantic adventures. He was, for example, supposed to have been sent by Jesus to rescue Matthew who was a captive in the land of Anthropophagie. He assumed the disguise of a sailor; was tortured by savages but saved Matthew.

This brother of Peter may have carried on an intensive preaching ministry in the lands surrounding Byzantium and Thrace. Legend has it that he was crucified at Patrae because for some reason, by his preaching, he had induced the pro-consul's wife to leave her husband.

It is thought that he did some writing but no trace of it has ever been found.

P.'s to represent two constituencies in the Cape where Natives had the vote before Union. He also has announced that he will abolish the Native Affairs Commission, a statutory body established to advise the Secretary and Minister for Native Affairs, of which Senator Dr. Brookes is a member. The Native Representative Council, a purely advisory body of Natives elected by a special form of franchise, to consider proposed legislation especially affecting Natives is also booked for abolition.

"Attempts are already being made to rally liberal forces to the defense of the rights of the non-European majority from these hostile attacks of the dominant white majority, and to rally all lovers of democracy to the defense of the only principles on which democracy can possibly exist. These are truly critical and dangerous days for South Africa."

"Until recently the average continental American wasn't quite sure whether Puerto Rico was in the South Pacific or off the coast of Spain and he was even more vague about the character and political status of the island," says Mr. Spragg. "Now that thousands of Puerto Ricans are coming to the mainland each month, a great deal of attention is being given to this child of the Caribbean."

YOUTH WEEK! AN OPPORTUNITY FOR UNITED YOUTH ACTION.

By DR. ISAAC K. BECKES.*

Youth Week, January 30 to February 6, 1949, offers unlimited opportunity for Christian youth through united action to make a real impact upon community life. It gives young people of all denominations and related agencies an opportunity to unite in offering one hard and one common purpose in His Name. The 1949 theme is "Let God Speak."

Your Pilgrim Fellowship can take the lead in providing an effective Youth Week celebration in your own community. Guidance materials may be had through the United Christian Youth Movement office, 203 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago 1, Illinois, or our own denominational offices. Here is an outline of what can be included in the Youth Week program in your community.

Sunday, January 30—Local Church Day.

"Let God Speak Through Me" is the theme for the Local Church Day. Center attention on the way in which God is seeking to speak through the youth of your church. The activities of this day should lead to personal commitment and the need for a realistic Christian witness in all the areas of Christian witness.

Through the Week Activities—

1. A Town Meeting of the Air to consider a question of major concern to the Christian young people of your community. Possible suggestion: What should the church be doing in my community? Is the church of today preparing youth for tomorrow's issues? If there is no radio time available, hold an old fashioned "town meeting."

2. Discovery Groups on the Bible on a community-wide basis to find out how God is still speaking to us through the Bible. These groups might meet each morning for breakfast during the week. Your group might use the Bible discussion material of the Christian Youth Conference of North America, available through the U.C.Y.M. office.

3. A Youth Survey and Enlistment Campaign to do something about the unchurched young people of your community. Evangelism can be an important feature of Youth Week. Teams of young people calling on other young people can be an effective part of this effort. These teams can also make a survey and build up prospect lists to be used by the churches during Lent.

4. Other Special Features may include a Fellowship Night or service projects that will affect the community as a whole.

Sunday, February 6—An Ecumenical Service of Worship—

The theme for this day is "Let God Speak Through a United Church!" Bring all the youth of your community together on Sunday afternoon to face the question of "Why Are the Churches So Divided?" A specially prepared service of worship is available for use in this service. Make it truly a great service.

CONSTITUTION & CONSULTATIVE COMMITTEES TO MEET.

For the next few months, two committees, the Constitution Committee and the Consultative Committee, will be working together in preparing the groundwork of the new young people's organization of the United Church of Christ. Six young people from the Youth Fellowship and six from the Pilgrim Fellowship are divided among two committees. The first meeting was held on the week-end of November 27 and 28 in Philadelphia. Baxter Twiddy represented the Pilgrim Fellowship in the south.

Even the barriers and problems of forming a new organization were surmounted in the spirit of fellowship which prevailed. In the first meeting, many of the basic problems were faced as—what would be the relationship of the United Student Fellowship to the National Council? how many commissions would be necessary to carry out the actual work of the Council? and how may the program for young people reach the local church? Both of the committees met in order that all might be fully oriented and in order that the Constitution Committee would be able to offer its suggestions to the Consultative Committee.

The planning for a new young people's organization is a very difficult task, but there is wonderful opportunity to form this new group into a more perfect organization than either the Youth Fellowship or the Pilgrim Fellowship. We should learn from the imperfections of these two organizations.

A second meeting was held on the week-end of January 8 and 9, 1949, again in Philadelphia. Concrete plans should be taking shape now.

C. BAXTER TWIDDY.

North Carolina and Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship is planning a Spring Rally the last of March or first of April. Watch for date and place. Miss Dorothy Ballenger of our First Church, Greensboro, is the president.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

again the Master sees the trick. He will not presume upon God. He will not put God to irrational tests. He will go ahead in the quieter ways of service, teaching and preaching and letting His truth be His vindication. He had not come as a Miracle-worker, although on occasions He did perform miracles. He had come to preach a message of truth; and that must be accepted for its own sake. There is no other way of accepting it.

For a Season.

This is the first record that we have that Jesus was tempted. But it is not the last one. The devil "departed from Him for a season." But again and again during His ministry, like us, He was tempted and tempted. But unlike us, He never yielded, He never sinned. Surely this man was the Son of God.

The Sword of the Spirit.

It was not the only saving factor in the situation, but it was a big factor—"it is written" said Jesus. If we hide His word in our hearts, we will not be so likely to sin against Him. By their aid we can the better put to flight the evil one.

Every one comes between men's souls and God, either as a brick wall or as a bridge. Either you are leading men to God or you are driving them away.—Canon Lindsay Dewar.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

LESSON V—JANUARY 30, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: For we have not a high priest who is unable to sympathize with our weakness, but one who in every respect has been tempted as we are, yet without sinning.—Hebrews 4:15.

LESSON: Luke 4:1-13.

DEVOTIONAL READING: James 1:1-12.

He Was Tempted.

One reason why our Lord Jesus Christ means so much to us, is that He knows what it is to be tempted. He "was in every respect . . . tempted as we are" wrote the author of Hebrews. That gives him a kinship with us. It also makes it possible for Him to sympathize with us in our temptations and weaknesses. He knows how we feel and He knows how to help us. We need to be reminded that God is not standing off, impersonally looking on, and rather waiting for us to fall, but rather He is with us and within us, seeking to give us the victory through His Holy Spirit. When you are tempted, remember that Jesus was tempted, too, tempted in a real sense, tempted with the possibility of yielding. That needs to be written in capital letters. Jesus could have yielded. He was a free moral agent. He had to make His own decision when tempted even as you and I have to make our own decision. He was like us in this He was tempted.

The Temptation Put in Story Form.

It is quite certain that the story of Jesus' temptation came from the lips of Jesus Himself. He was alone in the wilderness or the desert during the temptation and there was nobody at hand to see or to report the temptation. In fact it was an inner struggle and even if anybody had been present, they would not have seen anything. This does not mean that the story is fiction, or that it is not true. Jesus simply put in story or dramatic form the inner struggle which went on, as alone He considered His life mission, and as He considered the subtle suggestions that came from the evil one or the devil, the embodiment of the spirit of evil. Hollywood would, of course, have dressed up the story. Luke and Matthew tell it in simple, straightforward words, which tell their own story. In short, in a dramatic way, by a series of images which His followers could well understand, Jesus told His disciples about the conflict which took place in His mind. The temptation was none the less real because it was an inner, spiritual struggle through which he passed.

Consecration, Then Temptation.

"And Jesus full of the Holy Spirit, returned from Jordan—He returned from His baptismal experience, at which He had publicly consecrated Himself to the Father's will, and at which He had heard the Father's commendation—and was led in the Spirit in the wilderness. The temptation came immediately after consecration. As a matter of fact temptation sometimes comes not only after a high hour, it actually comes during a high hour. It is worth noting that Jesus did not deliberately court temptation. A man is a fool who deliberately puts himself in the way of temptation. It was while in the path of doing God's will that the temptation came and it was because of this fact that the divine resources were working for Him. We are to pray, "Lead us not into temptation." We are to avoid temptation whenever and wherever possible. But when we are tempted we have a right to pray "Deliver us from evil." Every man is tempted. And the better he would be the more he will be tempted.

Temptation Number One.

"If thou be the Son of God—there is a subtle tone of doubt in these words, or else a cynical challenge—"If thou be the Son of God, command this stone that it shall become bread. The Master was hungry, He had fasted a long time. He was the Son of God. He had infinite power within Himself. Lying all around Him were flat stones, like unto the flat loaves of bread commonly used by the people. Why not use His divine power to turn at least one of those stones into a loaf of bread? No harm in that, was there? But Jesus saw the trick in the thing. It was the temptation to use His divine power for His own human need. It was the temptation to claim special privilege as the Son of God, to claim exemption from the limitations of the flesh. He would have none of the thing. Calmly, courageously He replied with a verse of Scripture: "Man cannot live by bread alone"—the Scripture says so. And man at his best also says so. Power is to be held in trust. It is to be used for others, not for self or selfish purposes. He refused to aid himself by any powers denied to me.

Temptation Number Two.

The devil is a persistent fellow. He comes back again and again and he uses new tactics and a new attack. In His imagination, Jesus saw in a moment from a place of vantage, all the kingdoms of the world. They were His for the asking. All He had to do was to bow down and worship before the devil. The passion of his heart was the Kingdom of God. He wanted more than anything else for the Kingdom of God to come. And here was an easy way to get it, at least that is what the devil suggested. It was the old, old, and ever new temptation to compromise with evil to attain good, to take the short cut, to sell out to get what one wants, even if it is something good. Oftentimes one has only to strike a bargain or to fix a compromise to get what he wants. But with God there can be no compromise with evil. Jesus must use God's powers on God's terms, and do God's work with God's tools. All or nothing—there is no other way for the Son of God. Or for us. There are all too many of us trying to take short cuts, and compromising our ideals instead of paying the price of sacrifice for worthy ends.

Temptation Number Three.

After failing to find the Master vulnerable to the first two temptations, Old Big Boy tried again. This time in His imagination Jesus was sitting on the pinnacle of the Temple, from whence He commanded a magnificent view of one of the great scenes in the world of that day, and Old Big Boy suggested that He cast himself off and make a spectacular descent to the ground far below. "No danger in it, of course, good fellow, for has not your Father told you that His angels will take care of you, and bear you up, lest you dash your foot against a stone." By doing this you will get a hearing at once, much quicker than by the slow, painful, seemingly unfruitful way of teaching and preaching. It would be the quickest, and the devil suggests the surest way to get and grip the people whom He wanted so much to serve. But

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

This letter is the beginning of the new year for the Christian Orphanage. Our financial report is the first for the new year. We appreciate the splendid cooperation the churches and friends of these orphaned and dependent children gave us last year. I had hoped to reach our goal of $50,000.00, but circumstances did not so will it, and we bow in humble submission.

I have been in this work for more than thirty-two years. The people have been good to me, and I appreciate it. We have trained and sent out more than five hundred boys and girls during my administration. Most of them have made good and we are proud of them. Of course, some have done better than others, which is expected of any family. The majority of them have finished high school. Many of the girls have taken training in nursing and are now practicing their profession. Many of the girls have taken training in business courses at Elon College. Some of the boys and girls have taken the full college course at Elon College. One boy finished at State College where he took training in electrical engineering and now holds a position with one of the largest corporations in the South. In nearly all of these cases the Orphanage has borrowed money and let them give their note without endorsement to pay their college expenses and let them work at the Orphanage for their room and board. After they get through college and get a job and begin to draw a salary, they begin to pay it back five and ten dollars a month until they get it all paid back. I am glad to say that in every case not a child has failed me but everyone has paid his note in full. Some of them are now holding positions with some of the largest corporations in the country. In fact, two of our girls, I am told, are now holding positions with the largest corporation of its kind in the world. I have not been able to accumulate any earthly goods to rest my head on in my old age, but I have given it freely and forgetting self in behalf of these little children. If I have been able to point them to a higher life and help them when they had no other home to which to go, I am happy to have had this opportunity to serve.

When you support the Christian Orphanage you are supporting a worthy cause. You are helping little tots that have no other home. I have had a number of children say to me, "I will always love the Christian Orphanage because it gave me a home when I had no other." It has helped many boys and girls who were homeless and dependent and gave them a chance in life.

of God which gives to men and women common spiritual values and a common sense of direction can save. And the force which can achieve this is a virile and conquering Christianity. The fate of our civilization—of our country, of our homes and of our children depends upon winning mankind to the teachings of Christ."

Our Christian World Mission is our response, as Congregational Christians, to the cry of all people, both at home and abroad. Our Christian World Mission is our 1949 program of local, national and world-wide Christian ministry. It is our enlarged missionary and rehabilitation work placed in the setting of overall Call to Evangelism and the total program of our churches. It is our sector of an Advanced Movement of Protestantism in the United States and Canada toward a Christian Nation and toward One World in Christ.

Our Southern Convention in session at Liberty (Vance) Christian Church, April 27-28, 1948, unanimously voted to accept the challenge inherent in "Our Christian World Mission" resolving "that our spiritual, human, and financial resources be mobilized, committed and directed in a program of Advance during the biennium 1948-50." Such an Advance equal to our commission in Christ will not be possible with half-hearted allegiance, the fragments or incidentals! We must give ourselves, our all! Holding the line is not sufficient to stem the tide of evil which threatens to engulf America and the world for which Jesus died to save! Let us go forward to meet our God-entrusted stewardship with Christlike faithfulness! Are we able? Yes, we are able! Are we willing? That is the question we shall have to answer! Now!

The accompanying Schedules of Apportionments of the various Conferences include our reasonable share in this urgent "Program of Advance" for Christlike services at home and abroad, together with slight increases in the apportionments of the Christian Orphanage, Elon College, the Board of Christian Education, and the Convention Fund.

A comparison of the new apportionment with the amounts paid by each church during the past two Conference years will show that the churches actually gave amounts approximating the new apportionment totals.

Your Convention and Conference are grateful for the hearty cooperation given in the past and urge each church that with high vision and prayer it will accept the challenge presented in the Schedule of Apportionment which is presented.

Each church in the Convention is asked to accept a slight but necessary increase in its apportionment for the year 1948-49 as shown.

The small increase asked for the Convention Fund is necessary to meet an unavoidable increase in running expenses. The Orphanage increase is absolutely essential because of the rising cost of food, clothing, medical care, and other expenses involved in its operation. The increase for Elon College is to help provide more trained leaders for our churches.

The 1948-49 apportionment for the first time includes special offerings which we are accustomed to make in addition to our regular apportionment. They are, for instance, our Special Easter Offering for Church Extension under Home Missions, Shao-wu under Foreign Missions, and Special Thanksgiving Offering for the Orphanage. In other words, our special offerings, "Over and Above Gifts," "Cent - A - Meal Offerings," etc., will be credited to apportionment.

In many instances our churches have a good practice of giving more than the total amount asked of them in the apportionment. Some churches over-pay their apportionment for some of the institutions of our church. This is a commendable policy and one that should be continued in order to make up for those churches that are negligent in meeting their obligation for these same institutions. It is also important that each church give due consideration to the support of those institutions and agencies in which some of our churches have shown but little or no interest in the past.

We recommend and strongly urge that all ministers pledge themselves to keep the entire program, with all its financial requirements, constantly before the churches throughout the year; In order that our people may become more impressed with the importance of giving full support to every department of our work.

Increasingly our churches pay portions of the apportionment monthly or quarterly, instead of waiting until the end of the year. We commend this practice of regular monthly or quarterly payments and urge all our churches to follow it.

The Call to Christian Unity

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

Christian Unity does not require or even ask for uniformity in thought or in practice except the thought concerning faith in the goodness of God and the practice of right living. Every denomination has within its own circle more than the traditional "57 varieties" of theological opinion. No religious leader today could be so naive as to think that any denomination has even within its own fold uniformity of theological opinion. But that fact has not militated against the denominational fellowship. Neither will the theological differences militate against the fellowship of a United Protestantism, for the spirit of Jesus Christ in the hearts of his followers enables them to rise above theological differences into The Unity of Christian Love and Service.

Christian Unity does not seek its goal by the process of elimination but by the process of assimilation. Christian Unity does not seek to find the lowest common denominator of creedal statement, but instead it seeks the highest numerator of Christian thought and expression. Christian Unity recognizes the fact that there is good in all denominations and that no one denomination has a corner on divine truth; moreover that if any denomination sincerely feels that it has some peculiar asset of faith not known by other denominations, the only way such a denomination can demonstrate its Christian sincerity is by seeking to share its superior claim with all denominations by itself helping to promote Christian Unity. To refuse to share or to be unconcerned about sharing spiritual values is definitely unchristian.

The sin of exclusive denominationalism for too long has justified each group in putting its "light under a bushel." In the days of men's ignorance God winked at this offense against His Son and against humanity; but today He calls the denominations to repent of their weaknesses occasioned by their divisions and to bring forth the spirit of Christian Unity as evidence of their repentance. Indeed it is little short of blasphemous for the divided Church longer to pray and plead for a United World, unless the Church itself is ready to present "a united front" to the world. Unless there is sincere effort made soon by all the Protestant Churches to set the example of Christian Unity before the nations of the world, they will forfeit their right even to ask for or talk about a United World.

ALAMANCE BUILDING

The Alamance Building is the Administration Building. It houses classrooms, the administrative offices, and the laboratories of the Business, Home Economics, Mechanical Drawing and Art Departments. It is one of five of the buildings known as the Greater Elon Group. The other buildings comprising the group are the Carlton Library, with a stack-room capacity for 187,500 volumes and a reading room with seating capacity for one hundred readers; the Whitley Memorial Auditorium, designed to seat 1,000 persons, and housing the Music Department; the Mooney Christian Education Building, devoted to the religious and social activities of the College, and Duke Science Building, housing the Departments of Physics, Biology, Geology and Chemistry. These buildings give teaching facilities unsurpassed by any small college in the country.

News Flashes

The Virginia Council of Churches met this week in Richmond.

Radio headliners on Tuesday evening brought to the world the disturbing news of the death of forty-six-year-old Rev. Dr. Peter Marshall, outstanding Washington minister and the Chaplain of the United States Senate.

It has been necessary to omit quite a bit of regular material this week in order to carry the various articles about Elon College. We commend these articles to our readers. Their perusal will add much to their knowledge of our Church College and the work that it is doing for the denomination.

Rev. Karl Key, who is now secretary of the North Carolina Council of Churches, with headquarters in Durham, was a visitor at THE CHRISTIAN SUN office of publication on Tuesday of this week. Dr. Will B. O'Neill of Holland and his son were also in the office for a short while.

Young People of the Forsyth County Churches: Winston-Salem, Pfafftown, Belews Creek and Salem Chapel, are to meet at the Winston-Salem Church Sunday, January 30, at 4:30 P. M. Special guests will be the Pilgrim Fellowship of the First Congregational Christian Church, Greensboro, who will present the program. Each person of the Forsyth County churches is asked to bring sandwiches for the supper and the Winston-Salem young people will also furnish the drink. The program will close at 7:30 P. M. Max Marshall of Salem Chapel is president of this County-wide youth group.

WE WANT TO SEND REV. D. P. BARRETT TO THE PUERTO RICO DIAMOND JUBILEE.

The seventy-fifth anniversary of the founding of Protestant Missions in Puerto Rico will be observed during the week of March 6-13. Our Christian Churches will have special services in their own churches a few weeks later.

It is almost imperative that the Christian branch of the Congregational Christian Church be represented at this Diamond Jubilee, and it is most appropriate that we should be represented by Rev. D. P. Barrett, who with his gifted and devoted wife, spent more than twenty-five years in missionary work in the Ponce area. The Mission Board of the Southern Convention has asked Mr. Barrett to represent our Church, and it is the hope of the Board that he will not only attend the Union Jubilee, but will also visit among the former Christian Churches during their special celebrations.

The Mission Board has made an appropriation toward Mr. Barrett's expenses, and the Home Board has also graciously and generously voted an appropriation for the same purpose. But more money is needed, and it is the feeling of the members of the Boards that many of the churches in the Southern Convention, and especially in the Eastern Virginia Conference will want to have a part in this project. Furthermore there may be many individuals who would be glad to make a personal gift as a token of appreciation of the long and faithful and fruitful services of Mr. and Mrs. Barrett.

Thus it is that as Chairman of the Special Committee, I am making this appeal for contributions to this worthy cause. The time is short, the need imperative, the cause worthy. Please send contributions promptly. Make checks payable to me as Chairman of the Committee. Acknowledgement will be made later in THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Pastors are asked to present this matter to their churches or Women's Missionary Societies at once. Thanks for your cooperation.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION FOR THE LAYMAN.

By GEORGE D. COLCLOUGH.

In the early history of the church in America, we paid the preacher very little and expected very little in return. In recent years, the majority of the ministers are making more money than the average member of the congregation. As this situation has developed, we have pushed the responsibility of the church from the shoulders of the congregation to that of the minister and his staff. As a result a great many of our churches are doing very little insofar as building stronger and better churches in the service of the community. Denominational schools such as Elon can serve a great purpose in helping shift the responsibility for the growth of the church back to the shoulders of the congregation. Perhaps students should not have to take courses in Bible or religious education while attending a denominational college but they should certainly be encouraged to do so. Some ministers may seek ignorant congregations but the majority of the ministers of the Congregational Christian Church are anxious to serve an educated group of people. If the denominational college is to hold its own in comparison to the state schools in the education of our generation, we must do a better job in the training of our ministers and in the training of all our students to be good laymen. Too many of our people have had the privilege of college training but when they return to their home church, they are unwilling to assume responsibility of teaching in the Sunday school and many other tasks that laymen are due to perform. I am personally very happy that when I was a student at Elon College I was required to take at least one year in Bible study under Dr. J. U. Newman. No other course taken during my college career has meant as much to me as the course in Bible. A denominational college does not need to apologize for requiring students to go to Sunday school, church services, or to take a course in Bible or religious education. The denominational college is supposed to be different from the state school and since the most of them are small, they can be different and give a personal touch to the religious life of their students that cannot be provided in the larger universities.

ELON COLLEGE SERVES CHURCH THROUGH LAYWOMEN.

By MRS. O. H. PARIS, President,
The Woman's Convention.

As we look at the churches of the Southern Convention and other areas being served by ministers who received their under-graduate work at Elon College, likewise laymen who were trained and inspired during their days there, we immediately recognize the part our college plays in the real work of the denomination. We feel except for Elon the leadership of our churches might not be on the high level that it is today. However, we sometimes overlook the great service the college renders through the training of laywomen, a service which eventually touches all areas of life—the home, the school, the community, the church, the state and the

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

ELON COLLEGE — CONVENTION HEADQUARTERS.

By Supt. WM. T. SCOTT.

Elon College is the headquarters of The Southern Convention. When we think of The Southern Convention we naturally think of Elon College because since the founding of Elon that institution has offered its facilities to the Convention and its various interests. When the Convention was incorporated, Elon was listed as the principal office of The Southern Convention, Inc. The College has given freely of its facilities to the Convention to make it possible for our churches to have a center for the administrative offices of the Convention. For many years Dr. J. O. Atkinson maintained his office as Mission Secretary at Elon, and THE CHRISTIAN SUN has been edited at Elon College for many years of its existence. At the present time Elon College makes available to The Southern Convention three splendid offices. This makes it possible for the bookkeeper, treasurer and Superintendent to have clean, warm and light offices in which to do their work. The college does this without charge to the Convention. The college not only furnishes offices, lights, heat and janitor service, but the college is always generous in other services which it can render to the Convention. It is difficult to see how the Convention could manage to maintain its offices were it not for the generosity of Elon College.

The motive back of making available offices for the Convention headquarters is the fact that Elon College and its president recognize that the college is a vital part of the Convention. Elon has supplied ministerial leadership for most of our churches throughout the years. It has inspired and made it possible for us to have a church consciousness and to have a trained lay leadership. The Convention is under great obligation to Elon and we are happy to pay our tribute to this splendid institution of ours. We urge our people to recognize the vital place which Elon has in the life of the Southern Convention and urge the generous support financially of the institution. Not only should we support Elon with our finances, but we should send our boys and girls to this, our institution, that they may be trained by a Christian faculty to take their places in their chosen life's work.

ELON COLLEGE AND THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

By JESSE H. DOLLAR, *Chairman,
Board of Christian Education, Southern Convention.*

Elon has, for fifty-nine years, been the spring-board for the program of Christian Education for the churches of the Southern Convention. Through her influence, ministers have been sent out to man the churches of the Convention — and far beyond its bounds. Thousands of young people have come in from the churches to receive instruction and inspiration and have gone back to take their places in the local churches as church officers, Sunday school teachers and leaders. The contribution our college has made to the progress of the churches of our fellowship is immeasurable.

The Board of Christian Education, of the Southern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches, is charged by the Convention with developing plans for Daily Vacation Bible Schools, Young People's Camps and Conferences, Leadership Training Courses, departmental emphases and institutional and missionary education. For many years Elon College has given space on its program and facilities for taking care and encouraging many conferences, not only for young people, but for smaller groups of church people and leaders

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

PARTNERSHIP IN HIGHER EDUCATION.

For nearly three score years the people of the Southern Convention have been cooperating in a major enterprise, the support and conduct of a Christian college. With unflagging zeal and unfailing faith a loyal but limited constituency has promoted and maintained Elon College. Its early and arduous days developed the stamina of those who shouldered this joint educational responsibility. We need not survey all the historical landmarks, but note that this cooperative enterprise has yielded demonstrable results in the fields of education and religion, in pulpit and pew, in church and state.

Who among us is not interested in contemporary education, in maintaining contact with first-rate minds, with making available the primary sources of knowledge, with the preservation and transmission of culture? We cannot afford to go ahead with our intellectual blinders on. We have seen the abyss before us in the example of the Nazis and we are not sure that "It can't happen here."

In such a time in such a world Christian colleges, no less Christian churches, must assume leadership. We as a people must exercise our intellectual as well as financial stewardship. Christian colleges may not be the lump of the educational world, but they may be the leaven in our civilization. Here then is an opportunity which should not be by-passed. If we as a great communion in the most influential nation in the world are to measure up to the challenge of these years of opportunity we must utilize to the full every worthy institution which the churches have fashioned to extend their work.

There are homes which no longer have financial responsibility for the children, but salary continues. Remember the government says that 15 per cent of your income is not too much to give to worthy causes. Now while so many veterans are in college would be an appropriate time for numbers of people to erect suitable memorials to sons or brothers lost in the war.

Many people have had a part in our educational project at Elon. Many lives have been touched by its enlightening influence. All of us may share in its ongoing and expanding program. Join heartily in this exalted partnership.

COLLEGE MAN?

"Are you a college man?" One replies nonchalantly and unimaginatively, "Nope, never went to college—didn't even finish high school." For the same reason, and the additional reason that he has no children, that is to say no children he expects to send to college, at least to any particular college—this man never makes any voluntary contribution to appeals from Christian colleges for support.

"Are you a college man?" Another replies with feeling and discernment: "Yes, I am a college man. It is true that I never attended college personally, but I am definitely a college man. My wife, from whom I have learned so much and to whom I am eternally indebted, is a college graduate. I read books, papers and magazines written by college-bred men. I am ministered to daily by men of high responsibility in professional and industrial circles who are academically trained. Yes, I am a college man."

"Moreover," this gentleman adds, "I sit regularly at the feet of a minister who is a college graduate and want my church to have college men in its pulpit for years to come. College trained and inspired people write regularly for my church paper. Therefore, I am not simply a college man. I am a Christian college man. I want my children to go to college, but not just to any college, I prefer they attend a Christian college."

Here then, is a college man in the finest sense. He realizes that colleges, like the Almighty, rain their blessings down upon the just and the unjust. He will not willingly be deprived of a share in this great interprise. The support of a Christian college is a cheerfully accepted part of his life's stewardship. He is consciously and gladly a college man. May his tribe increase!

ACCEPT AND ATTEMPT YOUR APPORTIONMENT.

Did you study those apportionment tables in our last issue? In all probability there were various and mingled reactions. Now is the time, if it has not been done already—to tackle the problem of an increased apportionment. Naturally the easiest thing to do is to throw up one's hands, admit defeat and make no heroic effort to raise it.

The minister will have a difficult time persuading a reluctant finance committee or an indifferent church, but great things can be done when pastor and people work together in faith toward a common objective. By using the "Cent-A-Meal" offering during Lent, by enlisting the aid of Sunday School and Church organizations, by presenting the full scope of our Christian World Mission, be developing a church-wide program of Christian stewardship, every church in the Convention should enjoy the fruits of victory. Accept and attempt your apportionment now!

The worthwhileness of one's work is a standard of value of judgment that every thoughtful toiler should consider as well as the pay envelope and the shortness of hours. The products of some labor of millions of people debase instead of exalt. Workers should ask themselves the perturbing, evaluating question whether the products which they have had a small or large share in making build or destroy.—C. E. Wagner.

Veterans As Students

By JAMES R. HAILEY.

Our nation points with pride to the splendid job the boys did in bringing the war to a successful conclusion. But the attention does not end with the cessation of the conflict, but is focused on what the veterans are doing now, how they are adjusting themselves to civilian life after those gruelling days in the military service, and whether that experience has been helpful or harmful to them.

As we mingle among the students here at Elon, it is difficult to single out the veterans as "different" peodefinitely how people should not have to live, they have buckled down with earnestness to prepare themselves for the role of contributing something to the progress of civilization and the relief of mankind.

With a strange purpose and determination they bridged the gap and entered college. Some have found it difficult to pick up where they left off, especially those who are past the thirty mark, and who perhaps did not originally plan to attend college at all. But the experience that caused

We find the veterans as a rule very alert, with a keen interest in current events, world affairs, geography, travel, politics, and foreign policy. It is sometimes surprising to find what a keen insight they have in affairs of government, the trends of the times, and our general social ills. Many of them have had rich experiences, however regrettable, which have served to give them a better understanding of life. While they do not talk much about war experiences, these experiences are an integral part of their education and help them in comprehending a broader outlook. Their travel experiences have helped them to understand better the cultures of

ple. Perhaps we can say we expect to find them a little older than the students fresh from the high schools. They display a little more poise and confidence in going about their tasks and meeting new situations because of their previous experience. Two, three, four, or five years out of a man's life devoted to military service is quite a slice, and naturally we expect him to be a little more mature.

The experience of war makes an indelible impression on the participants. Some came out apparently unscathed, but none escaped the searching question, "What were we fighting for?" At least that started the boys thinking. There must be a purpose in life. Yes, it is our responsibility to see that the world must be made a better place in which to live. After experiencing them to make this decision somehow made them strong enough to keep working sufficiently hard to do generally better work than the non-veteran students. What they lack in agility, they compensate for in sheer plugging.

The first wave of veterans to enter school after the war, with the horrors still vivid in their consciousness, went about their studies with a more feverish pace than those entering now. The need for the alleviation of the world's suffering seemed more urgent to them, and they consequently pursued their goals with more intense effort. Most of the veterans today have readjusted themselves and have settled down to a more normal pace. Their attitudes are favorable and conducive to higher learning.

the world, and to see more clearly the part our country is to play in helping mankind.

We were proud of the job they did, and now we can be just as proud of the course they are taking in better preparing themselves for their places in life. It speaks well for the calibre of these boys who would not let adversity spoil them, but use all of those dismal experiences as stepping stones to higher education, higher achievement, and higher goals.

You will find in them a disposition to be pretty independent in their thinking. They have had to rely on quick decisions, and many of them. That practice has developed in them a sense of confidence, though they are generally unassuming in their atti-

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The class of nearly forty seventh-grade boys and girls had come quietly into the library, taken their seats about the brightly polished tables, and were going about their accustomed business of selecting books, returning books, and doing bits of research assignments under the direction of the librarian and the teacher of that grade and class. Now when the bulk of the borrowing had been done, and activity had slowed down to quietude about the tables the librarian quietly suggested to their teacher that it might be informative and pleasant to have her turn on the radio and let the pupils hear the inauguration of the President of the United States. The teacher readily agreed, and it was announced to the class, and pronto there was the voice from Washington.

The boys and girls were all attention. It was just at that moment when last minutes were ticking off before the Rev. Dr. Pruden led the opening prayer. The children were quiet. The librarian could "feel" the signs of reverence, although no one had suggested being quiet or reverent. By the time the prayer was over almost every head was bowed. Followed, as you know the oath by Vice-President Barkley, then the prayer by the Rabbi. It was during this prayer that the "notice" gong rang out in the building for noon recess, but not a boy or girl moved. It remained significantly quiet. Before the prayer ended the supreme test of their reverence and quietude came, because the second bell rang, and all the other classes began to pour into the halls and corridors, but not one child lifted his bowed head, nor moved. There was perfect reverence and quiet, and when they finally left the room there was an unusual orderliness in their going.

It was an inspiring moment. There they were seventh graders in a hustling, head-on atmosphere, but the line of reverence held! Those boys and girls showed that they were the right sort of youth, and that they, of their own accord, without any instructions from the elders, knew to be in the spirit of reverence—and who can say that their brave little hearts were not beating heavenward one of earth's best prayers. I wish to register my congratulations to their teachers, their school, their homes, and their churches and synagogues, for a small number of them were Jews. They were a little section of united America, joining with the voice of prayer without thought as to whether it was Protestant, Catholic, or Jew.

And what is more I have heard nothing about it on the streets, nor have I heard it in conversation, except as it happened to be told to me. By which I mean to say it did not occur to the seventh graders that they had done anything unusual. It was right, and proper, and that was that. As to me I feel like singing "God Bless America," and bless America's noble public school teachers, and their pupils and the homes from which they come. And God bless the churches, the Sunday schools, and the citizens of this goodly land as we seek to keep the channels of freedom and righteousness open to all.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

OUR CHURCH COLLEGES.

The Congregational and Christian Churches from the beginning of their rise in America have been concerned about Christian education, prompted by the conviction that the welfare of individuals and the nation depended in large measure upon a trained ministry and laity. As a part of the developing of higher education in America, it is significant that of the first 280 colleges established in this nation only seventeen were state institutions. The Congregationalists, beginning with the establishment of Harvard College in 1636 and Yale in 1701, having been responsible for the founding of more than forty colleges including the two above mentioned, Dartmouth, Williams, Bowdoin, Middlebury, Amherst, Mt. Holyoke, Wellesley, Smith, Oberlin, Pomona, Carleton, and others. Consequently as the nation expanded westward and southward, Congregational men, women, teachers, and ministers were everywhere present and leading.

Likewise, the Christian Church was concerned with and took action for the establishment of higher educational institutions. Under the leadership of Horace Mann, Antioch was established in Ohio in 1852, the first college in America to admit women for graduation on the same basis as men.

The Christian Church also established colleges in Missouri, Kansas, Ohio, and in other states.

In the field of higher education in the Southern Convention, the Christian Church's major contribution has been Elon College, though the Convention also founded Bethlehem College (now Southern Union Junior College) in Wadley, Alabama, in 1923.

The majority of ministers of the Southern Convention have been trained at Elon College, and many of the lay leadership of the area have likewise received their training at this institution.

Prior to the founding of Elon College, the leaders of the churches of the South evidenced their interest in education by encouraging young men preparing for the ministry and assisting them financially. Also some of the ministers maintained academies and normal schools, notably Rev. Daniel W. Kerr, founder of THE CHRISTIAN SUN, who established in 1826 in Wake County, North Carolina, The Wake Forest-Pleasant Grove Academy and in 1838 Mt. Pleasant Academy, and later Junto Academy, Orange County, North Carolina. Rev. W. B. Wellons founded Suffolk Collegiate Institute, Suffolk, Virginia, in 1872, where Dr. W. W. Staley taught a course particularly for young ministers. In 1865, Graham Normal School was established at Graham, North Carolina. These specific efforts to promote higher education by the church were forerunners of Elon College which was established by the Southern Convention and which opened its doors on September 2, 1890.

Elon College since its founding has been the center of the life and development of our churches of the South, and today the churches are depending upon Elon to train its ministry and to promote higher education for the laity on a Christian level. The college in 1948-49 has an enrollment of approximately 800 students and a faculty of approximately 50. Physical properties are valued at over a million dollars and the college has an endowment of approximately four hundred thousand ($400,000) dollars.

There are in the Congregational Christian fellowship 17 colleges serving the general church and which have more or less direct affiliation with the denomination: Beloit, Wisconsin; Carleton, Minnesota; Defiance, Ohio; Doane, Nebraska; Drury, Missouri; Elon, North Carolina; Grinnell, Iowa;

ELON INAUGURATES A BROADER PROGRAM OF EDUCATION.

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH.

Extra-curricular courses when properly planned and directed often make considerable contributions to students enrolled in college. Aside from the usual campus activities and extra-curricular privileges, Elon is inaugurating three definite courses of instruction for the enjoyment and the improvement of students and others in nearby communities who are interested in improving themselves.

We have arranged a lyceum course and engaged artists of wide reputation whose performances are sought by larger communities and leading educational institutions throughout the country. Appearing on the lyceum course this year are: Norman Cordon, Metropolitan Opera Company; Mercel Duprez, French organ virtuoso, one of the foremost living organists; Barter Players, theatrical troupe from Abingdon, Va.; Touring Players, theatrical troupe from New York City; Betty Smith of Chapel Hill and New York, author of A Tree Grows in Brooklyn and Tomorrow Will Be Better; Semas MacManus, Irish poet and historian of International reputation, and others. These artists are attracting attention and adding greatly to the student and community life of the college.

Sunday, January 23, at 11:00 a. m., the Christian Workers' Conference opened with a sermon by Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, Hartford, Conn. Dr. Potter is well known in church circles of all denominations and is a profound scholar, preacher and lecturer of note. Dr. Potter addressed the students and members of the conference, speaking from the standpoint of the Gospel ministry and with particular reference to the problems of the pastorate.

Dr. Allan S. Meek, president of the Theological Seminary of the E. & R. Church, Lancaster, Pa., addressed the conference on Evangelism, instructing those present as to the responsibilities and privileges of the local minister and the layman as an Evangelist in their home churches.

Dr. Howell D. Davies, specialist in Christian Stewardship and Modern Churchmanship, endeavored to guide the ones present in their approaches to the question of stewardship and the problems of the stewardship of life in general and the financial problems of the church in particular. Dr. Davies addressed the conference on Sunday, Monday and Tuesday.

Dr. Elbert Conover, an inter-denominational spirit and a specialist in church architecture and planning, addressed the members of the conference and students on the problems of planning and constructing houses of were fortunate in having such a large number of the members of the Merchants Association present for this service.

The conference, as a whole, meant much to delegates and visitors. It was also an inspiration to faculty members and students.

A course of Adult Education is being inaugurated at Elon. This is another effort to offer to the general public the many fine facilities that are for the cultural and intellectual advancement of men and women of all ages. Weekly classes will be offered in the afternoons and evenings. Practically the entire curriculum now being taught in the college with new courses added will be offered to those enrolled in the school for adults. No course will be offered unless there is worship in keeping with and adaptable to the Christian religion.

Dr. Sylvester Green, minister, educator, lecturer, and editor of the Durham Herald-Sun, spoke to the conference in general and to the ministers in particular about publicizing the Christian Gospel, calling attention to the fact that the pastor plays an important part, in that the news of his church and of his message must come through him to the press. No editor can handle news concerning which he knows nothing. With proper co-operation, the newspaper may be of great assistance to any pastor.

The conference closed with an address by Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, pastor of the Marble Collegiate Church, New York City. Dr. Peale came under the auspices of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce. We a minimum of ten applicants. The regular faculty will constitute the faculty for the adult school with possibly some additions. Registration will begin Friday, February 5 at 7 p. m. Classes will begin in the afternoon of February 7. Considerable interest is being manifested in this recent adventure in this field of education. A good enrollment is anticipated.

The faculty holds itself in readiness to answer invitations on the part of the local church or groups of churches to assist in leadership training schools in different sections of the Convention. Elon is responsible for the conduct of the College and of the instruction of those who are enrolled as students. It is also interested in the needs of our churches and the communities wherever it is possible to serve.

Department of Physical Education

By J L. PIERCE, Professor of Physical Education.

For many years I have felt that the small church-related colleges have been making a distinct contribution to physical education and recreation in the South, particularly, in North Carolina and Virginia. I have no statistics to back me up but from my observations, I believe that the majority of the high school coaches, physical education teachers, and recreation workers have received their training at the smaller church-related colleges. During the period just prior to the last war, however, the State Teachers Colleges greatly emphasized this phase of their training. Since the war most of the church-related colleges have seen the importance of increasing and improving their departments of physical education. This was caused by a growing demand for teachers of physical education and coaches who have had training in physical education. One reason for this increased emphasis is the fact that the school patrons, school administrators and church leaders have come to realize the importance of physical education, athletics and recreation in the process of education, and in our national life. Our churches are awakening to the fact that recreation is a valuable means of promoting religious education and developing Christian living. For many years some of our better educators have felt that the best job of teaching has been done by our high school athletic coaches. The people in the fields of athletics, recreation, and physical education, have an opportunity to train and develop the boy and girl in activities that are naturally interesting, that have an element of competition at all levels, and which offer greater opportunity for teaching, self-control, cooperation (team play), honesty, adherence to the rules, etc., than any other phase of education.

Elon has and is still making its contribution to physical education onstrated leadership ability. A good example of this is that of Wade Marlette, Elon graduate of 1923, who had a wonderful record as a coach and physical educator and made a distinct contribution to the war effort. Marlette entered the furniture business when he returned from his military service.

Many of our former students have served many years as coaches and teachers, both in high schools and colleges, and after they have gained experience have moved up into more responsible administrative and supervisory positions. These are too numerous to list but I think it is of interest to name some of these with their present positions. They are:

John L. Cameron, Raleigh, N. C.—Advisor for Health and Physical Education, State Department of Public Instruction.

L. J. "Hap" Perry — Executive Secretary of the North Carolina High School Athletic Associations with offices in Chapel, N. C. Prior to taking this position, "Hap" was Director of Athletics and head coach at his Alma Mater, and before that, football coach and Superintendent of Schools in Reidsville, N. C.

Elby S. Johnson, Washington, N. C.—Superintendent of schools and director and owner of a private camp for boys.

William Joseph Story, Norfolk, Va.—Assistant High School Principal and former head coach of Davidson College.

Paul G. Hook, Clifton Forge, Va.—Superintendent of Schools; owner of boys and girls camp.

Some of our men who have established names for themselves in the field of athletics and physical education are:

John L. Beaver, Hargrave Military Academy, Dry Forks, Va.—Director of Athletics and Coach.

Gordon A. Kirkland, Catawba College, Salisbury, N. C.—Director of Athletics and Head Coach.

D. C. Walker, Wake Forest, N. C.—Head Football Coach. "Peahead" completed his college degree while serving as head coach at Elon.

Wendell E. Beattie, Cedarville College, Cedarville, Ohio.—Director of Athletics and Dean of Men.

It is interesting to note that during the 1947 football season four of the coaches of the major colleges in North Carolina were Elon College graduates. These were: "Bill" Story at Davidson, "Hap" Perry at Elon, to the last war, however, the State Teachers Colleges greatly emphasized this phase of their training.

Since the war most of the church-related colleges have seen the importance of increasing and improving their departments of physical education. This was caused by a growing demand for teachers of physical education and coaches who have had training in physical education. One reason for this increased emphasis is the fact that the school patrons, school administrators and church leaders have come to realize the importance of physical education, athletics and recreation in the process of education, and in our national life. Our churches are awakening to the fact that recreation is a valuable means of promoting religious education and developing Christian living. For many years some of our better educators have felt that the best job of teaching has been done by our high school athletic and recreation in the sections of the country from which it draws its students. Many of our older graduates are continuing to make their contributions directly while others are making theirs indirectly through administrative positions and as parents and citizens. A man seldom remains many years in the field of physical education as a teacher because it is easy for him to advance into allied fields which pay a much larger salary. Ordinarily, a person who has the personality, energy, enthusiasm, and character, which it takes to do a good job in physical education, will have many opportunities to become a school administrator, a personnel director, or go into business in some capacity. I could cite a dozen examples of each. When the armed forces were looking for men to be commissioned as officers, they were particularly interested in those who had had coaching and athletic experience because these men had dem-

Religion Majors at Elon College

By FERRIS E. REYNOLDS, Ph. D., Professor of Religion.

The effectiveness of the program for religion in the post-war world will depend largely upon the supply of fresh leadership together with the calibre, training, and measure of prophetic insight of these new recruits. That statement might be made by almost any thoughtful person in our churches. Who would challenge the truth of it? To observe a sequence of facts, however, and draw a valid conclusion from them does not go far enough. If modern science has taught us anything, it is that even a true judgment is not an end in itself. To be significant, a true judgment must become the basis of intelligent action and control. The recognized need for competent Christian leadership in our day raises this question: How is our society to produce this leadership which the post-war world needs? Certainly this question concerns all thinking persons. It is a special challenge to the church-related institutions of higher education.

Whence are these religious leaders to come? The plain answer is: From among our young people upon whom God has laid His hand and urged toward that vocation. Some experience of personal commitment is the starting point for a career of genuine Christian leadership. To attempt to force this experience into any standard pattern or to condition it upon any pre-established emotional expressions is surely presumptuous. Who would dare to specify how the Almighty should accomplish His purposes, or what earthen vessels He might use in recruiting the ranks of His servants? To assume, however, that He will take care of the matter without any effort or concern on our part may be more of pious neglect than Christian faith. Observe the number of cases in which God has used someone who cared to enlist new reapers for His harvest. What greater honor could one receive than that of being appointed the divine agent to suggest to a young person that he consider seriously a Christian leadership vocation?

Again, there is no set schedule in which this commitment must take place. Some of our strongest leaders have begun their careers rather late in life. The most natural time to confront young people with religious service as a life's vocation is during high school and early college years. But care should be taken to show how varied and extensive the fields of Christian service are. In our day, it is a mistake certainly to assume that the preaching ministry, missions, and religious education are the only areas in which a young person can devote his life to religious leadership. One of the reasons for the shortage of men in the preaching ministry is that so many trained religious leaders have found their Christian vocation in social work, counseling, the work of chaplains, and other such highly significant areas. Indications are that the opportunities for full-time religious work in these newer fields will continue to increase even more rapidly in the future, and that the demand for trained personnel will be doubled many times over. This vast extension of the areas in which trained religious leadership is sought and used allows for a proportional extension of the types of natural gifts and interests which may find employment in Christian life-vocations. Why not suggest many of these to our young people at the time when they are making their vocational choices? Here then, is where our religion majors actually begin their careers. Here is where our program of training wins or loses its first decisive contest with secular and material interests. It is in our homes, and in our local churches even more than on our college campuses that these primary decisions are made. If we fail in the matter of securing these personal commitments to Christian life-vocations how can we escape failure all along the line?

Following the personal commitment comes the basic training for Christian service. Those who enter Elon for this training are enrolled as religious majors. At the present time they number forty-four—fourteen young women and thirty young men. Some of them plan to enter the preaching ministry, others look toward careers in religious education, missions, or teaching. Some have not determined which of the various fields they wish to enter. In planning a program of study for these students the controversial question is raised: Should the religion major devote any considerable portion of his undergraduate studies to religion? Or, is it better for the student who plans to enter a religious vocation to spend his entire four years in college pursuing a broad cultural education and to defer the study of religious subjects for graduate study? Much may be said on both sides of the question.

Certainly a young person's interest in the field of religion calls for some cultivation during the four years of college life. Knowledge sustains and deepens interest. To omit every academic pursuit of religious knowledge during the time a young person is gaining the knowledge in science, economics, sociology, and other fields would seem to place undue strain upon the person's commitment to religious service. It may be too much to suppose that the religious interpretations of high school days should be adequate for college experiences. Further, religious ideas, beliefs, and convictions grow with the growth of personality and experience. It would seem wise, therefore, to include some courses in religion within the plan of studies for religion majors at the college.

Can the objections to undergraduate specialization in religion be met? In arranging the program of studies for our religion majors, we feel that we do avoid, to a large extent, the valid objections to undergraduate specialization in religion. The courses in religion are broad and basic in their scope. Each student is counseled with respect to his plans, his special needs and capacities. The purpose of preparing students for graduate study is zealously adhered to in drafting programs. Members of the faculty of the department of religion being seminary graduates are especially fitted to do this. Courses in Greek, German, philosophy, science, literature, and comparative religions constitute much of this basic training for graduate studies in religion. The Bible courses that are offered are held to the non-professional level so as to avoid duplicating the work of professional schools.

In this manner the majors in religion at Elon are prepared to carry out their plans to enter a vocation of

THE MUSIC DEPARTMENT.

By FLETCHER MOORE, Professor of Music.

The Department of Music at Elon has always been one of the outstanding schools of music in the State of North Carolina. Its graduates have everywhere been accepted for, and have proved successful in, positions of responsibility in teaching and performing in many sections of the country. In entrance and placement examinations given graduate students in leading universities, Elon music graduates have been among the highest scorers. Elon may well be proud of the achievements of its music graduates and of its contribution, through them, to the cause of better music.

Elon is a church institution and as such has the responsibility and opportunity not given to a non-church school for furthering the cause of good sacred music. The college has met this challenge by promoting one of the outstanding choirs in the South—a choir which provides the best of religious music for the Elon Community Church, as well as for a widespread audience which hears it on its radio program every Sunday afternoon, and on annual tours extending from North Carolina and Virginia to New England. These activities of the choir bring the best music to the choir's audiences both at Elon and elsewhere, and provide a wealth of experience for young people who in turn will go out and use this experience in contributing to good standards of church music in their own localities.

In many other ways also does Elon contribute to the cause of good music. It offers courses in applied music, church music, and music appreciation to any student in the college at large. It presents an outstanding concert series given by top-ranking artists, these programs being open to all academic students. One notable feature of these concerts is the fact that for the second successive year Elon students will be soloists with the North Carolina Symphony when it appears at Elon. Furthermore, for several years Elon has made available its facilities for the spring student musicians' contests for this state sponsored by the National Federation of Music Clubs, with Elon faculty members serving as state contest chairman.

These, as well as many others, are the types of contributions that Elon College makes to good music. It is to be hoped that these contributions may continue and become even more valuable as Elon goes forward.

NATURAL SCIENCE DEPARTMENT.

By JAMES EARL DANIELEY, Associate Professor of Chemistry.

The Department of Natural Sciences of Elon College is an integral part of the curriculum. It embraces the work in biology, chemistry, geology, home economics and physics. During the past five years, nearly one-fourth of the students graduated from Elon have majored in these subjects.

Since the founding of the college sixty years ago, most of the students who have matriculated at Elon have taken one or more courses in the Department of Natural Sciences. Each graduate must have two years in mathematics, two years in natural science or one year of mathematics and one year of natural science. This means that many students taking the introductory work in the Department are students who are graduated with majors in other fields. In addition to the first year courses in each special field, the Department offers a survey of the physical sciences. This course has proven very popular in recent years, probably because it gives a survey foundation for the student who otherwise would not have the opportunity to study the sciences.

Throughout the years, it has been apparent that a majority of the science majors were preparing themselves for medicine and dentistry. During the past fifteen years, we have sent approximately sixty students into these fields, in addition to a large number who have gone into nursing and the field of medical technology.

During these fifteen years, approximately twenty-five of our graduates have gone into the universities to study further in their chosen fields. Many others have gone into the teaching profession, both in secondary and higher education. Others have taken their places in industry after receiving their education at Elon. These graduates have made and are making a real reputation for their Alma Mater. Almost everywhere the reputation of the Department is linked with the growth of the college and with the names of Christian scholars such as Dr. Ned F. Brannock, present Chairman of the Department and Professor Alonzo L. Hook, professor of physics, who have led, and continue to lead, in the growth and development of our program in this field.

More and more the medical schools of the country are calling upon us to give to the pre-medical students a liberal arts education. It is this field in which Elon has excelled in the past, and it is in this field that we will con-

ADULT EDUCATION.

By W. W. SLOAN, Professor of Bible and Religious Literature.

Elon is expanding its service to people living within forty or fifty miles of the college. Late afternoon and night classes for adults and young people who are not regular college students will start February 7.

Recognizing that more education means better living and better jobs, older people are asking that some arrangement be made whereby they may secure additional education. Elon College has the facilities for doing this. A committee has worked out a series of courses to be taught by regular members of the college faculty in the college class rooms.

Classes will be held from 4:00 to 5:30 Monday and Thursday afternoons (or if preferred Tuesday and Thursday). Other classes will be held from 7:30 to 9:00 the same days. If a large group prefers classes once a week they will be held from 7:00 to 10:00 Monday, Tuesday or Thursday nights.

All classes will meet a total of three hours a week for twelve weeks. No examinations will be given, except to those who wish credit toward a college degree or teacher's certificate. Such people will be given two semester hours' credit for each course completed. The cost of each course taken will be $20.00 plus books or other equipment bought.

A variety of classes will be offered in the fields of Bible, Business, Education, English, Home Economics, Modern Languages, Music, Psychology, Science, Sociology and Speech.

Although the date for the beginning of these adult classes has been set as February 7, details as to just what classes will be taught and the hours will depend upon the wishes of those who expect to use this opportunity Elon is providing. Those who are interested are asked to write the director of adult education at Elon College, telling what classes they want and days and hours. A catalogue giving details about the courses available will be sent those who request it. Readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN can be of service by telling their friends about these adult classes.

tinue to do our utmost. We realize that the man who ministers to the physical needs of our bodies must also have some depth of insight into human values if he is to minister effectively. It is this challenge which confronts us and to it we dedicate ourselves without reservation.

RELIGIOUS LIFE ON THE CAMPUS OF ELON COLLEGE.

By REV. CLYDE L. FIELDS.

Is it possible for a young person to retain his religious faith in the face of modern education? On every hand the assertion is made that vital religion and college education are antinomies. Some would point to an isolated example of a young person who, supposedly, lost his religious faith while a student in college. Here at Elon, every spiritual resource known is utilized to conserve all the worth while religious faith of the student. In addition, opportunity is given for the student to profit from modern scholarship.

The founders of Elon insisted that good education is not complete without some knowledge of our Christian religion. The college still believes this to be true, and the faculty and administration work with this goal in view. Because of this policy of the college, I entered to prepare myself as a minister of the Gospel.

Christian atmosphere is a good environment in aiding the student in developing into his highest potentiality. The Christian spirit becomes apparent from the moment a freshman arrives on the campus, for one of the first greetings comes from a student wearing a card with the letters S.C.A. on it. He soon learns that the letters mean Student Christian Association, one of the active groups on the campus for putting the message of Chris into action by the youth of the college. As the student becomes a part of the Student Christian Association, he learns that it is very much like the young people's group back home. Early in the college year the student is invited to become a member of the group. Forums, devotionals, discussions, plans, parties, games—these and other activities are a part of the work of the association in helping to develop character among the student body. Permeating all this activity is the desire of young people to apply the Christian faith to the needs of modern youth. Allow me to offer a personal thank you to the S.C.A. for the kind assistance given me to help find my balance when I arrived on the campus.

"A good start makes a good ending" is one of the proverbs practiced by the students who attend Morning Watch. Just after breakfast, a group of students make their way to Whitley Chapel for a few minutes of morning meditation. Morning Watch, a short devotional service, seems to give the necessary impetus to make the day worthwhile. This service is conducted by the students and the leadership is rotated to allow for training in leading public worship.

Evening Vespers, another devotional service at the close of the day brings together the experiences of the day and gives the sense of the abiding presence of God. Morning Watch and Evening Vespers are voluntary as to attendance, yet many feel drawn to these gatherings.

Religious Chapel is held twice weekly, bringing to the campus some of the outstanding pastors of the churches in the Piedmont area, as well as from other parts of the country. All students are expected to attend Religious Chapel and are privileged to hear excellent speakers. These services are similar to the services in the local church. Music, hymns, prayer, devotional and inspirational messages, plus a feeling of kinship and fellowship pervades the Chapel Hour.

All students are expected to take courses in the New and Old Testaments. The college has been fortunate through the years in having good men to work in the Department of Religion. Dr. Ferris Reynolds now is head of this department, assisted by Dr. W. W. Sloan and Dean D. J. Bowden. All three of these men have served churches as pastors and are able to bring to the classes the benefit of years of experience as teacher and pastor. My own life has been enriched by the patient guidance and scholarly instruction of the members of the Department of Religion.

The Elon College Community Church ministers to the student body and residents of the community in providing worship and instruction in church and Sunday school each Sunday. Dr. Jesse Dollar, pastor of the church, is delighted to help the students in any way he can; he is a friend to all the members of the student body. He is well qualified to counsel and advise on problems of students because of his twenty-five years of experience as a pastor.

The Community Church offers Sunday school classes for all ages, competent teachers, a full time Director of Religious Education, the College Choir, other music, helpful and inspirational messages by the pastor—all these with the hope that each Sunday will be a day of worship and fellowship with God for all the students, faculty and citizens of Elon.

Many churches have periods of concentrated spiritual emphasis called by various names, and Elon follows this practice. Each year some outstanding leader is brought to the campus for a week of concentrated spiritual emphasis. Services are held twice daily during this period. These services are similar to the church service in the local churches. Out of these periods of special emphasis comes new dedication to purpose and vocation for many, through the public services of worship and the clinics for all who desire private interviews.

The Ministerial Association with Dr. Ferris Reynolds as faculty adviser, offers a workshop for the religion majors. Future ministers, and full time religious workers, meet once each week for fellowship, information, and directed activities. The direction given by Dr. Reynolds and others in these sessions proves invaluable to all of us entering the field of Christian service.

As a student, I have found a source of power and help in the many religious activities on the Elon campus. It has been one of the highest privileges of my life to be a part of Elon College.

ELON COLLEGE AND BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

as well. Elon is the natural pivot, around which our whole Christian Education emphasis revolves. Indeed, one is made to wonder just what the program of Christian Education for this area of our church life really would be, or could be, without the ready facilities and accessibility of Elon College. The fine spirit of co-operation between the college administration and those of us who are responsible for the furtherance of Christian education has paid big dividends in both directions: It has been the means of interesting hundreds of our young people in Elon College, and they have come here for their college work. It has been invaluable to the Board of Christian Education to know that our college, and its facilities, are ours for the asking, and that we have such splendid facilities at our disposal in carrying forward the responsibilities, and the privileges, which have been assigned to us.

The position of Elon College in the field of Christian Higher Education is unique in our entire fellowship. In recognition of this fact she will receive constantly increasing support, from an ever widening constituency.

THE PRESENT STUDENT BODY.
By DEAN D. J. BOWDEN.

If progress and development are measured in numbers, we have every reason to be proud of the growth of Elon. For the first time in history our enrollment for the fall term reached the figure of 830. Each year, since the termination of World War II, our student body has continued to expand. The four student classes are enrolled as follows:

Seniors	129
Juniors	156
Sophomores	222
Special	47

We expect, in May of this year, to graduate the largest senior class in the history of the college.

According to states, our distribution is heavily weighted by students from North Carolina and Virginia, with a healthy sprinkling from other states and other countries. The distribution is approximately as follows:

North Carolina	610
Virginia	155
Fourteen other states	61
Foreign countries	4

The denominational distribution is equally interesting. For many years, the Methodists, Baptists, and Congregational Christians have vied for first place. At present, the distribution is as follows:

Methodist	215
Baptist	180
Congregational Christian	140
Presbyterian	80
Others	180

Because of the large number of veterans, we find an unusual situation in the ratio of men to women in our student body. At present, the ratio is consistent with last year, being approximately four men to each woman.

Finally, the ratio of dormitory students to day students is also out of proportion, due to the large student body and comparatively limited dormitory space. At present, approximately forty-five per cent of our students live off the campus, either in their own homes or in rented apartments. The latter group is composed, of course, of the married veterans, for the most part, who live in apartments near the campus provided by the government, or in or near Burlington.

As we describe the present student body, we are naturally led to the hope that we may continue to minister to more and more young people who seek college education, and shall endeavor, so far as possible, to expand our facilities to take care of them.

MAJOR INTERESTS OF ELON COLLEGE SENIORS—1945-49.
By A. L. Hook, Registrar.

Not a few readers will be interested in the statistical growth of the senior class at Elon College during the past five-year period. The accompanying table reflects the trend and desire of college students, since the veterans of World War II started back to the civilian class rooms.

Nearly all the gainful occupations claim the services of Elon graduates. The professions, such as dentistry, engineering, journalism, law, medicine, ministry, nursing, teaching, etc., are for either medicine, dentistry or chemical engineering; business administration majors plan to enter some phase of the business world except for a few young women in this field who prepare to teach commercial subjects in the public schools. The majors in English, foreign language, history, general science, home economics, physical education and music, usually prepare for teaching positions in the public schools of the various states. Seniors with majors in mathematics and physics are claimed by industry and research. Majors in religion and social sciences are preparing for either the Christian min-

In interpreting the percentage given in the table below bear in mind the following trends: most of the students using either biology or chemistry as majors enter the various graduate institutions to prepare themselves tudes. They know how to be gentlemen. Their courtesy and general sense of propriety are to be commended.

Elon boasts over 400 veteran students. It is a delight to mingle with these pleasant good-natured boys. They come from varied backgrounds. They are of different heights, widths, and weights. But their congeniality is always manifest. They are interested in scholarship, athletics, and social activities. They know part of what goes on in this world, and want to know the rest and why! If they appear somewhat independent at times, and flaunt a few "classic conventions," can we not say that they have earned this privilege, so long as questions of morality and gentlemanly propriety are not involved?

OUR CHURCH COLLEGES.

Illinois, Illinois; Knox, Illinois; Marietta, Ohio; Northland, Wisconsin; Olivet, Michigan; Pacific University, Oregon; Piedmont, Georgia; Ripon, Wisconsin; Schaufler, Ohio; Yankton, South Dakota.

The following theological seminaries either have foundations or direct relationship to the denomination by election of trustees or other connections: Andover-Newton, Massachusetts; Atlanta Seminary Foundation, Tennessee; Bangor, Maine; Chicago, Illinois; Hartford, Connecticut; Oberlin, Ohio; Pacific, California; Yale, Connecticut; Yankton, South Dakota.

The churches of the denomination have been leaders in the establishment of schools and colleges for Negroes. Hundreds of high schools and colleges have been established and maintained by the denomination. The Christian Church established Franklinton Christian College, Franklinton, North Carolina, which today functions as Franklinton Center and which specializes in training Negro ministers and church leaders. The United Church maintains the following Negro colleges and universities: Dillard, Louisiana; LeMoyné, Tennessee; Talladega, Alabama; Tillotson, Texas; Tougaloo, Mississippi; Fisk, Tennessee.

Higher education in our day is tending toward secularism. It will be unfortunate for our country and for our church if there should be any lessening of emphasis upon support of our church institutions. America needs higher Christian education, and an investment in the schools and colleges of the church will not only develop the church but will have a strong effect upon the whole character and strength of our national, economic, and social life.

PHYSICAL EDUCATION.

"Peahead" Walker at Wake Forest, and "Chubby" Kirkland at Catawba.

There are also a large number of younger fellows who are making a name for themselves in this and other states. Those who are included in the new alumni directory are: T. S. Cheek, 209 W. Smith St., Greensboro, N. C.—teacher and high school coach; Scott Boyd, Louisburg College, Louisburg, N. C.—director of athletics and dean of men; Donald Gen Aunman, Hillsboro, N. C.—high school coach; Silvo W. Caruso, Tabor City, N. C.—teacher and coach; Garland Causey, Goldsboro, N. C.—head football and basket ball coach (formerly line coach at Elon); Robert Lee "Jack" Boone, Greenville, N. C.—assistant football coach and head baseball coach at E.C.T.C.; Charles Donato, Waterbury, Conn.—high school football coach; Warren Burns, Elon College, N. C.—head football coach at Burlington High School; Raymond "Pud" D'Antonio, Wayne, Pa.—high school coach; Robert E. Lee, Aberdeen, N. C.—high school coach; J. C. Casey, Elon College, N. C.—high school coach at Gibsonville, N. C.; W. J. Palantonio, Ardmore, Pa.—football coach; Hal Bradley, Lillington, N. C.—high school coach.

Most of these listed above graduated before or just after the second World War and before the present training program in Physical Education began. This program actually was begun in the Fall of 1946 and the first full class from this program will not graduate until 1950. However, a number of students who had had work at Elon or elsewhere before this date have graduated with either a major or a minor in physical education. These students who have left us during the past two years are: Richard Staton, Greenbrier Military Academy, Lewisburg, W. Va.—assistant football coach; J. W. Knight, Reidsville, N. C.—assistant football coach; Lewis Brownie, Stoneville, N. C.—high school coach; Edna Rumley, Mineral Springs, Forsyth County, Winston-Salem, N. C.—physical education teacher; Frank Roberts, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.—graduate study; Frances St. Clair, University of North Carolina, Chapel Hill, N. C.—graduate study; Steve Castura—teaching and graduate study in the District of Columbia; Robert W. Wooldridge, Columbia University, New York City—graduate work; Franklin McCauley, George Peabody College, Nashville, Tenn.—graduate study; Frank Hayes, Jr., University of Georgia, Athens, Ga.—graduate study.

At the 1949 commencement we shall graduate approximately eight people with a major in physical education. At present we have 65 to 70 majors studying in this field; with some planning to teach, some to coach and teach, and others to enter the field of public recreation. This department is also offering several courses in the area of recreation and physical activity which are proving of interest and value to those who are majoring in religion or religious education.

Several of our graduates are already working in the field of recreation and boys' work. Some of them with their present situations are: Jerry David Hardy, Catonsville, Md.—boys' work, secretary, Baltimore Y.M.C.A.; Oscar B. Gorman, Atlanta, Ga.—executive of Boy Scouts' organization of America; Garland O'Mann—athletic director of Greensboro (N. C.) Recreation Dept.; Oka T. Hester—director of Greensboro (N. C.) Recreation Dept.; Paul Cheek, Asheboro, N. C.—director of athletics and recreation, McCrory Hosiery Mills; Roney Cates, Burlington, N. C.—director of recreation; Claude Comer, Burlington, N. C.—assistant director of recreation.

RELIGION MAJORS AT ELON.

Christian leadership. Their religious interests are guided, cultivated, and extended. Their convictions are allowed to grow in accord with a natural pattern. The foundations are laid for fruitful careers that will increase in effectiveness with the passing of years.

These religion majors and this program of training constitute Elon's answer to the challenge of the post-war world for consecrated and able Christian leaders. Its success depends in a large measure upon the concern of thoughtful people in our churches who are able to read the signs of the times and are determined to heed them.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

JESUS' EARLY TEACHING AND HEALING.

LESSON VI—FEBRUARY 6, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: He went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the Kingdom, and healing every disease.—Matthew 4:23.

LESSON: Mark 1:14-15; 21-45; Luke 4:16-30.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Luke 4:40-5:3.

"Jesus came into Galilee preaching the gospel of God"—thus does Mark introduce the public ministry of Jesus. Matthew says the same thing in a little different way, "He went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues, and preaching the gospel of the kingdom." The important fact is that Jesus came preaching. There are many people today who speak lightly of preaching, and who often dismiss preaching as words, words, words, nothing but words. In fact a graduating class of a high school had as its motto, "Deeds, not words." Well to be sure deeds are important. Jesus himself had something to say about those who "say and do not." But so far as the record goes Jesus never wrote anything except on one occasion when he scribbled something on the ground. He depended upon the power of the spoken word. He believed in the power of preaching, which Philipps Brooks once defined as "truth communicated through personality." The more one thinks about the matter, the more impressive does the thing become. The proclamation of the Kingdom began with preaching. The great eras in the history of the church have been eras marked by great preaching. And preaching still has a place in modern life. Now, as then, the spoken word can come with power. In fact the great Apostle under the inspiration of the Spirit said that God had chosen "the foolishness of preaching to save them that believe." Not foolish preaching, but the foolishness of preaching. Mr. Minister, you still have a function, a vital function in our modern world.

Jesus Came Teaching.

"He went about all Galilee, teaching in their synagogues." Here again He depended upon the power of the spoken word, on the quickening power of truth in the minds and hearts of people. It is difficult to know when Jesus was preaching and when He was teaching, so easily did the one shade off into the other. Both as a preacher and as a teacher, Jesus was the Master. Modern pedagogy simply discovers the principles of sound teaching when it goes back to Jesus. The common people heard Him gladly, for he taught simply, clearly, informally, vitally. He taught them as one who had authority, and not as the scribes who simply repeated parrot-like what somebody else had said. Christianity has always had a place, and a prominent place, for teaching. Mr. Sunday School Teacher, you still have a vital function in our modern world. And the message of Jesus and the method of Jesus give you a vital and powerful combination.

Jesus Came Healing.

"He went about all Galilee . . . healing every (or all) manner of disease." We call Him the Great Physician, and we do well, for so He was, and is. There is significance in the fact that most of the miracles of Jesus were concerned with healing the bodies and the minds of men. It is significant, too, that the word salvation really means "wholeness." God's will for men is a sound mind in a sound body, and all under the discipline of a sound spirit. There is an element of mystery and even of miracle in the healing ministry of Jesus. There is no doubt about the fact that He did heal both diseases of the body and of the mind. And it would appear that He was able to exercise His healing ministry in the case of organic as well as functional diseases. There were occasions when he used the power of suggestiveness in working his healing miracles. Several times he used physical aids as when he anointed the eyes of the blind man with clay. In every case He sought to awaken faith. And He enabled more than one person, mentally ill and even deranged to find sanity and serenity of mind and peace of heart. Whether we can account for the healing miracles of Jesus, there they stand, historically attested acts of healing. They would tell us that God is not only concerned with physical and mental health, but that after all He is the One Who heals. Long before the day of Jesus the Psalmist sang, "Who healeth all thy diseases" and he knew what he was singing. For today the wise physician will say that he cannot heal—God is the healer, and as a physician he simply stands in the breach, administering such aids as he has, in the hope and in the faith that Nature and God alone can truly heal. And many people who are running off to secular sources for help in mental ills would do well to try religion. Indeed the best psychiatrists frankly admit that religion has healing power. The doctors say the same thing—faith has healing values. Here then in this three-fold ministry of Jesus, teaching and preaching and healing, we find the key to His mission. And we find the broader outlines of the program of the Kingdom of God for our modern world, and fields of activity for the Church of our Christ.

Preaching Out of the Overflow.

A great teacher of our day some time ago wrote a series of articles on great preachers, and the general theme of the series was that these men "preached out of the overflow." Although He did not list Jesus among these great ministers—he was dealing with more modern ministers—he might well have done it. For Jesus preached out of the overflow of a great and deep spiritual life. He dwelt deep. The springs of His life were deep and full and constant. And Mark gives us an insight as to why this was so. "In the morning a great while before day, He rose up and went out into a desert place, and there prayed." Jesus constantly renewed His inner life by waiting on God in prayer, by being still before God, by communion with God. One reason why so much of our modern preaching is so weak is because it is so shallow and thin. The modern minister must be so much a jack of all trades that if he is not careful he will be caught up in many things, good things, even important things, but he will be so busy that he does not take time to renew the intake, and therefore the out-flow is thin and weak. Again and again Jesus withdrew from the busy world, from the crowd, and even from His intimate friends to renew the springs of His inner life. And all that He did and was was the overflow of this inner life of the Spirit. Our deepest need is for greater and richer inner resources.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Orphanages are very worthy institutions. They deserve and should have the love and cooperation of the churches and the people at large. They go to the rescue of a great number of little children throughout the land, who are homeless and dependent, and give them a home and care. Can you imagine a more helpless being than a little child left helpless and alone? Many times this is the case. We have many calls to take children who are in needy circumstances, and we cannot take them because of the lack of funds.

In taking children from all kinds of homes and environments, you may not believe it, but sometimes we get some of the sweetest little fellows you can imagine. The writer went up to the building, known as the Christian Orphanage Building, some days ago of which Miss Hattie Brakefield is in charge. Miss Hattie, as we all call her, had just returned from the hospital where she had had an operation. I think she has two very sweet little girls in her building. While I was talking to her these two little girls came in and put their little arms around her and said, "Miss Hattie, we prayed for you every night while you were away. We are so glad you are back." The writer had an accident during the Christmas holidays and the doctor put him to bed for three days or more, and these same little girls turned to me and said, "Mr. Johnston, we prayed for you, too." Such simple faith. Such a beautiful spirit manifested by these two little jewels. It makes one better to know that these two little tots in their little simple prayers remembered us. Yet, they are two little girls in the Christian Orphanage. Who knows but that God heard and answered their petitions.

The writer has always been a great believer in earnest sincere prayer. We like to know that our church people pray for us in this work. If you have forgotten us, it would make us stronger if we could know that you were holding us up before the throne of Mercy. We have our troubles as well as our joys. We have our disappointments. We are not resting on a bed of roses. This is no easy job; it's work every day. In my thirty-two years in this work I have tried to be faithful and make every day count for something worthwhile. Pray that in my declining years here, which are coming to a close one of these days and others will take up where I leave off, that God will bless me and turn my dark days into sunshine and our disappointments into blessings.

nation. For it is women who are willing to serve in small or great places; it is women who glorify the little tasks and make them great; it is women who are not only willing to do the job at hand but are eager to reach out into broader fields of service.

We can think of any number of "Elon girls" that have served well in their local churches and communities, in their state conferences and Convention, yet who have not been content to stop there, but have gone on to make good in broader fields, serving with ability and dignity on our National Church Boards and other places of responsibility. For instance, there is Lucy Eldridge rendering invaluable service in the field of Missionary Education for Young People; and Pattie Lee Coghill who as a secretary of The Missions Council has traveled and worked in many areas of the United States and other parts of the world. Right now, she is temporarily "back home" helping to promote Our Christian World Mission among churches in this area. Then there is Graham Wisseman who does so much so well at home and is now serving as one of the directors of the Home Mission Board. We could mention others whose places are hard to fill that got their start at Elon, for it was there, perhaps, they were first inspired toward Religious Education work.

Women have always been and will always be among those who serve, and we are grateful for our own Elon College which through the years has laid the foundations for such service.

his fellow-townsmen heard Him gladly and wondered at the gracious words that proceeded out His mouth. But when He began to tell them that God cared for other people and that He had revealed His compassion and concern for hated foreigners, the people just could not take it. They felt sure that He had stopped preaching then, and gone to meddling, as the old Negro woman said when the minister mentioned the filthy habit of dipping snuff in a sermon. As a matter of fact, the truth, while it sets men free, often hurts. People do not always like to be told the truth. All too many times, folks want to hear what they like instead of what they need. They like to hear a minister denounce sin in others, but they do not want him to interfere with their personal vices and sins. The words of Jesus are often rejected in many a modern church, and if it could be done, they would cast Him out of the church.

The COLLEGE PERIOD

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

January and February constitute the college period so designated by the Southern Convention. During this period the College, its advantages, its assets, and its needs are to be brought to the attention of our church people with instructions how to take advantage of what the College offers and to assist in meeting its needs. The Convention has directed that fifteen thousand dollars be apportioned to the churches of the Convention for the current support of the College during the church year 1949. This amount has been apportioned to the conferences of the Convention which in turn have made apportionments to the local churches within each conference. The college period is not so much for the collecting of money but to confront the churches with the fact that they are asked to secure the amount apportioned during the year.

When we are asked to support our College we should be reminded that it is needed by our church more sorely today than ever before. More stress is laid upon the need for Christian education in our public schools and in our institutions of higher learning than we have known, certainly, in the past two decades. The world is beginning to sense the fact that the hope of society and of the human race lies in the Christian religion. That, if the Christian religion is to be a vital force in the lives of individuals, the spirit and principle of the Christian religion must find their places in the education and the training of the individual himself. Our schools and colleges are founded for that purpose. They are duly constituted agencies for instructing and guiding the children and the youth of our homes in their preparation for life.

Lines are being pretty clearly drawn between church and state—between state schools and church schools. Politicians and aspirants to public office and positions of trust are calling for the continuation of separation of state and church to which we agree. We, perhaps, would differ, however, on what constitutes the separation of church and state. The Christian layman is to give his money through the government, if you please, and then to contend that that money given by a Christian layman cannot be administered for the education of his and his neighbor's children enrolled in a tax-supported college without the violation of the principle of the separation of church and state is ridiculous. The funds given by the public should be used for the training of young people to improve society and advance the interest of truth and right, without regard to the college in which he may be enrolled. It is the responsibility of the state to assist in the education of its young people and not to support any particular school.

Elon College is a church school. It needs support. It must have support. It cannot meet the demands of the day without increased support. It must have funds which will enable it to measure arms with sister institutions in the matter of Christian higher education. Elon looks to its church, its alumni, and the friends of Christian higher education to provide necessary funds for the enlarged curriculum that it must launch if it is to meet the demands of this present day.

In this issue of The Christian Sun Elon speaks from different angles. We trust that it may be heard gladly and with appreciation.

EASTERN VIRGINIA LEADERSHIP TRAINING SCHOOLS.

Leadership Training Schools will be held in the Eastern Virginia Conference February 13-23. These schools are being arranged by pastors of the conference in cooperation with the Board of Christian Education of the Convention Division of Leadership Training headed by Rev. Robert Lee House and Superintendent Wm. T. Scott.

Two schools will be held (Norfolk-Portsmouth and Suffolk Areas). The school for the Norfolk-Portsmouth Area will begin Sunday afternoon, February 13, at the Rosemont Church. Rev. Herbert G. Council, Jr., of Rosemont Church, is the general chairman of this school and is supported by a committee consisting of Rev. Johnson L. Griffin (Bay View), Rev. Peter Young (Christian Temple), Rev. John L. Gwin (Norfolk, First), Rev. Ellis Clark (Berea), Rev. M. E. Taylor (Little Creek), Rev. J. E. Neese (Norfolk, Second), Rev. O. D. Poythress (South Norfolk), Rev. Stanley Carne (Portsmouth, First), Dr. Frank H. Lewis (Portsmouth, Shelton Memorial), and Dr. H. S. Hardeastle (Newport News).

The Norfolk-Portsmouth Area School will include three courses:

1. (211a)—“Planning for Children in the Sunday School.” This course will be taught by Miss Leila Anderson, of the Division of Christian Education of the Board of Home Missions, Boston, Mass., and the course will be for teachers of children in the Sunday school, dealing with materials and methods for successful teaching and guiding children of the Beginner, Primary and Junior ages.

2. (311a)—“Teaching Youth,” taught by Rev. Bernard V. Munger, Chapel Hill, N. C. Mr. Munger is a graduate student at Duke University and pastor of our Chapel Hill Church. This will be a course for teachers of youth and will deal with such matters as how learning takes place; how to use lesson materials; how to supplement these materials and relate them to the ongoing experiences of that age; how to deal with the actual problems and needs of the group; how to link teaching with actual living.

3. (610a)—“How to Improve Our Sunday School,” taught by Dr. W.

W. Sloan of the Elon College Department of Religious Education. These courses will be primarily for superintendents and officers, young people and adult class teachers of the Sunday school, and the purpose of the course will be to help these officers to discover some of the points at which their schools may be improved, and some practical steps that can be taken immediately.

The Norfolk-Portsmouth Area School will have two sessions on Sunday, February 13—afternoon and evening; sessions on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, the school closing on Wednesday evening, February 16.

The Suffolk Area School will begin Sunday afternoon, February 20 and will be concluded on Wednesday evening, the 23rd. At this school the courses taught will be “Planning for Children in the Sunday School” by Miss Leila Anderson, “Teaching Youth” by Rev. Bernard V. Munger. Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds will teach in this school instead of Dr. Sloan, and Dr. Reynolds’ course will be 120a—“The Life of Christ.” Dr. Reynolds is the head of the Department of Religion at Elon College. This course on the Life of Christ will be designed to help teachers in presenting the Life of Christ, which is the theme of the Sunday school lessons for the next six months.

The Suffolk Area School will be held in the Suffolk Christian Church and Dr. John G. Truitt is the General Chairman. His committee consists of

THE RELEVANCE OF COMITY.

Comity (courtesy) arrangements are essential in modern churchmanship. This belated realization is gradually dawning on our Protestant consciousness. Our leaders, as lucidly stated in the accompanying article by Dr. North, are keenly and painfully aware of its relevance. The hope is that the idea will percolate down into state, city and county church organizations. This is slowly but surely taking place. More people are becoming acquainted with the word itself. The plan is being accorded wider recognition and acceptance.

The Virginia Council of Churches has a department of Comity and Missions. This Department, ably headed by Dr. Ernest Trice Thompson of Union Theological Seminary, recommends that committees on comity be set up by all local councils of churches and all ministerial associations in rural or urban areas. It recommends that the following "Comity Principles" be considered in connection with the establishment of such committees:

It shall be policy of the Comity Committee—by investigation, conferences, advice and recommendation—to aid in securing the organization and distribution of the churches of the city (or county) so as to promote primarily to advancement of the Kingdom of God; seeking that no portion of the city (or county) shall be overchurched; and that every church may feel the cooperative support of the other churches of the city (or county).

In addition to the adjustment of specific cases through common counsel, the Committee will seek to develop a comprehensive plan based on the comparative study of community needs. It will endeavor to effect modifications in the number, placement, equipment and program of the churches to match changes in the community such as growth or decline of population, changed character of different areas of the community, emergent needs and the challenge of specific deficiencies or evils.

The Council (or Ministerial Association) recognizes that there are certain conscientious limitations felt by some Christian bodies in the matter of Comity between denominations and gives assurance that such conscientious convictions will always be respected by members of the Council (or Ministerial Association).

The Committee will seek to implement its conclusions by rendering advisory judgments on specific issues which may come before it, as reached through the democratic processes of mutual discussion and finding their authority in their essential reasonableness and the obligations of Christian solidarity and good will. It is believed that the joint wisdom of the churches arrived at through common counsel will lead to the acceptance of advisory judgments by the parties concerned.

Before a cooperative congregation or denomination takes definite action in such matters as the organization of a church, purchase of church property, the relocation of a church, a radical change in its program or the abandonment of a field, it should be encouraged to make its intentions known to the Comity Committee and seek its counsel.

This provision would apply equally to Sunday Schools and missions, and the same course should be followed in any preliminary action such as the establishment of a temporary preaching point or Sunday School.

In some communities, or larger areas, it may become desirable to effect a mutual exchange of fields. In others it may seem desirable for two or more churches to develop an integrated or cooperative program in some particular phase of their work that the needs of the community may be more adequately met.

In all such cases the Comity Committee will give its advice and aid upon request or it may make such suggestions on its own initiative.

It recommends that these resolutions be submitted to the constituent bodies of the Council for their endorsement and approval.

CHRISTIANS AT THEIR BEST.

One of the fine statements which has gone the ecclesiastical and homiletic rounds is this: "When the world is at its worst, Christians ought to be at their best." Now this writer does not subscribe to the belief that the world is at its worst. Far from it, for there are too many evidences of good and noble work. However, the world is at its worst in many respects and in many places. Undeniably there is a vast and distressing amount of crime, bloodshed, hatred, injustice, violence, poverty, disease, suffering, war, premature and unnecessary death.

The Biblical record indicates that when and where the world was at its worst, Christians were at their best. Stephen, the first Christian martyr; Paul, the suffering saint, theologian and missionary; the Seer of Patmos; these and many other superlative Christians have left an undying record of demonstrable Christianity.

Edward H. Pruden is right in his insistence that "Mediocre Christians will never do much to make a bad world better. Much of our present distress is due largely to inadequate Christians." Christ's prescription, we remember, was this: "Be ye also perfect, even as your Father which is in heaven is perfect."

Christians are at their best, to be sure, when they are nurtured and habituated in righteousness, in exemplary living. Christians are at their best when they serve cooperatively. Every local church is a monument to cooperative endeavor. One of the hopeful things about contemporary Christianity is the growth of cooperative work among the denominations. The Virginia Council of Churches completed a most successful year with operating expenses amounting to $46,801.00. The budget this year is $49,146. The Virginia Foundation for Religious Work in State Institutions is operating on a budget of $21,267.44. Cooperative work on city, state and national levels is growing.

Christians are at their best, we cannot be reminded too often, in prayer. This is aptly expressed in the familiar Negro spiritual: "You can talk about me as much as you please. I'll talk about you when I get on my knees." The larger spiritual dimensions of Christian living are revealed in the prayers of our Savior. Prayer on high levels, such as the following by St. Francis, is the key to noble living.

"Lord, make me an instrument of Thy peace; where there is hatred, let me sow love; where there is doubt, faith; where there is despair, hope; where there is darkness, light; and where there is sadness, joy.

"O Divine Master, grant that I may not so much seek to be consoled as to console; to be understood, as to understand; to be loved, as to love; for it is in giving that we receive, it is in pardoning that we are pardoned, and it is in dying that we are born to eternal life."

What are Mission Boards Expected to Do in the Light of Comity?

By DR. STANLEY U. NORTH, Chairman
Committee on Comity of the Home Missions Council

No single factor in modern Protestantism is of greater importance than comity relationships. That is true in terms of existing woefully inadequate comity which reflects upon the quality of the religion that is professed, seriously discrediting all Protestantism in the eyes of intelligent people. It is especially true, also, in terms of the imperative necessity for an aggressive, cooperative facing of the needs of the city and of the countryside.

As regards the urban situation, Dr. H. Paul Douglass, in a report to the Home Missions Council, made the following statement, based on numerous urban studies made of recent years under his direction:

It must be flatly stated the urban church stands in a mighty precarious position. Many ancient Protestant territorial strongholds have been swept clean of their institutions, or their churches reduced to mean and dwindling survivals of ancient power and glory. It is happily true that many of these losses are counter-balanced by great gains on the part of new and growing suburban churches. But whenever all the factors have been combined so as to give an honest total picture of the church in a metropolitan community, its lot has been revealed as highly uncertain and beset with many dangers.

As regards the rural situation, the Master Plan has been helpful, but it has not been adequately implemented. Too frequently building departments act as if they were unrelated to the home missionary divisions of their respective denominations. The only way to eliminate competitive fields is to eliminate them. For salary aid to be withdrawn and building aid to be granted just doesn't make sense, in spite of all a superintendent or a bishop may say to the contrary. I submit for Protestantism to condone a condition in which multiple church units exist in small rural communities, each of them holding one service a month, each of them inadequate in terms of preaching, pastoral care and program, the buildings in disrepair and the grounds in disorder, the congregation in each case consisting largely of the same people, is not only indefensible sectarianism, it is more properly labeled, if I may coin a word, sin-tarianism! Such is a denial rather than a service to the Kingdom for the coming of which we claim to labor. It is wasteful. It is inefficient. It is ineffective. The primary purpose it serves is statistical.

Comity's crucial problem, however, is urban. That is so because of several factors. Since the first census in 1790 the nation has become increasingly urban, and since 1920 has been predominantly urban. Influential in this trend has been industrialization which not only led to the expansion of urban centers but brought to this country through immigration vast numbers of laboring-class people from southern and eastern Europe and elsewhere, a large proportion of whom were Roman Catholics. Immigration likewise brought to these shores a large number of Jewish people who also settled in urban centers. The Census of Religious Bodies reports that as of 1936 the Roman Catholic Church stood in first place among the denominations as to number of members in thirty-five states, and in second place in four states.

According to the Christian Herald, as of 1947 there were approximately 46 million Protestants as over against 25 million Roman Catholics. If you can take any pride in that—make the most of it, for the fact is that the 46 million Protestants are divided among 223 different and distinct denominations, and let it be added in much part non-cooperating, whereas the Roman Catholics not only face the city in its totality they face the nation—25,268,000 strong, with a unified strategy.

Jewish congregations in 1936 held second place as regards number of members in five states and third place in four states. The Christian Herald reports that the Jewish congregations numbered 4,600,000 members as of 1947, making them the fourth largest denomination of the nation. This all has had a profound influence upon neighborhoods and communities hitherto Protestant.

In terms of urban experience, the 1936 Census of Religious Bodies reports that in 41 of the 50 major cities of the nation the Roman Catholic Church stands first in number of members and in three cities stands second. Jewish congregations hold first place in New York City and second place in eight cities.

This all has meant not only a change in the character of urban neighborhoods through the influx of industry and commerce, but it has meant, too, a change in the cultural and economic status.

Another factor that has had profound influence upon urban church life is the migration of the Negro from the South to northern cities. An index of this impact upon urban life is given in the Census Report of Religious Bodies for 1936, in the fact that Negro Baptists stood in second place in number of churches in seven major northern cities, among which are Chicago, Detroit and Cleveland (the four remaining four cities are: St. Louis, Kansas City, Mo., Cincinnati and Youngstown, Ohio); and in third place in five cities, namely, Flint, Dayton, Toledo, Akron and Pittsburgh.

In a recent comity matter a spokesman for a major denomination stated that a certain adverse decision was

Members of the recent Christian Workers' Conference held at Elon voted commendation of President Smith and the college, and of Mrs. E. E. Holland, who is establishing a foundation for the maintenance of the Workers' Conference annually. This foundation is a memorial to the late Col. E. E. Holland, a founding trustee of Elon, and for fifty years a faithful member of that body. It is good that he is being thus memorialized. And the Church will be greatly blessed by the Christian Workers' Conference.

I was thrilled to see some eight hundred students, along with their teachers, and a number of pastors assembled in the Whitley Memorial Auditorium for many of the sessions. And the messages they were hearing were greatly worth their while. Who can estimate the good which was done as the Christ was lifted up, the work of the Christian emphasized, and youth challenged to adventure for righteousness whatever their calling might be? Dr. Smith and his committee are to be congratulated on the men they brought there to lead the Conference. They were real leaders of Christian thought and activities in their churches.

The fellowship and inspiration of being on the college campus was most enjoyable. Dr. and Mrs. Smith were most gracious hosts. Many others of the homes about the campus were graciously opened to the visitors. I enjoyed my stay in the home of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, college and community pastor. Mrs. Dollar was called to Alabama to the bedside of her father who is quite ill, and so we had bachelor's quarters, although with the many sessions of the Conference, and a few sessions of committees in between, there was not very much time to enjoy the restful quiet of the Dollar home. Other house guests at that address were: Rev. T. Fred Wright, Henderson; Rev. Herbert C. Council, Jr., Norfolk; and Rev. C. Carl Dollar, of Sanford. Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter, and Dr. Allen S. Meck, came over to visit us (they and the other speakers were entertained in President and Mrs. Smith's home) and wherever they went others followed. One group of students said to me: "How we love to hear them talk!" I myself esteem it a great privilege to have had the opportunity to hear all the men who spoke there—Drs. Davies, Conover and Greene—and to have become acquainted with them. I look forward to next session during the second week in February of next year.

PPAFFTOWN CHURCH THRIVING.

Doubling the average attendance at Sunday school and at morning church service isn't too easy. The Pfafftown Church, however, accomplished this in less than three years. From an average attendance of 25 to 52 in three years are the figures. Due credit goes to each worker in the church and Sunday school.

Our Pfafftown Church is located ten miles west of Winston-Salem. For many years it was just a Sunday school and then under the leadership of Dr. W. W. Jay, then pastor of our Winston-Salem Church, the Sunday school was organized into a church. During the 1947-48 conference year thirteen new members were received which was almost one half of the church membership. Four have already united with the church this present conference year.

Last October we held our revival meeting with Rev. Victor Murchison of the Winston-Salem Friends Church doing the preaching. Great interest was manifested and the average attendance was 51.

Leading the Sunday school this year is James Cohn, a new member of the church. Mr. Cohn's father was a Baptist minister and Mr. Cohn is revealing the excellent training given him by his father. Leading the young people is Mr. Lee Grubbs, also a member of the church. Each Sunday night the group meets with excellent programs being planned for three months in advance and with an average of 15 out of 22 members present.

Like many others the Pfafftown Church must take care of its increase. Plans are being studied for a complete renovation of the present building, adding a social and recreation room, several Sunday school rooms and reworking the present auditorium.

This past Christmas the young people decided not to exchange gifts among themselves. Instead each gave money to the Christian Orphanage at Elon College, amounting to $25.

If you drive to the mountains in North Carolina this Spring and travel over Highway No. 421, west out of Winston-Salem, watch for the sign, "Community Church," and look for the church sitting about 300 yards from the main highway. You will be welcome to attend the services or to visit the church building which is always open.

CHRISTIAN LIVING.

IV. In the World.

By PRES. L. E. SMITH.

We all live in the world but not all of us are world citizens. Many of us are Christians but not all of us, I fear, are world Christians. We have not been able to see beyond ourselves and our own selfish interests. Too many of us are as restricted in our interest, or nearly so, as the old man who prayed, "God bless me and my wife, my son, John, and his wife, us four and no more." We know that the Christian religion is a world religion but we fail to make ourselves or our resources available for its world-wide expression. We are glad enough to enjoy its blessings but fail to give it our blessing in its round-the-world reaches.

We feel that our first duty is to the needs that are near us—our own home and family our own church and local community. Does not charity begin at home? Why should I be interested in any other church or enterprise since my home church needs a new church house or the old one is in need of extensive repairs, or why should I give to the support of other ministers, either at home or abroad, when my own pastor is underpaid. Others may help in these general causes but certainly they are not going to help in my local church and community. If these needs at my own door are met, I shall have to help and that quite generously. I can express my Christian faith at home. This will be my share and about all that I can do. Others who do not have such responsibilities at home may give their help to causes abroad.

Some good Christian people express themselves after this fashion. They are Christians but strictly provincial Christians. They have arrived at this position by reasoning, selfish reasoning and not by reading Biblical readings. The Christian religion is decisively a world religion and the New Testament puts the emphasis on the world aspect of the Christian religion. When God loved He loved the whole world. When He gave, He gave a gift sufficient for the whole world. Because of the gift of Christ, His Son, the world may be saved. In the days of His flesh He invited all men to come unto Him. His promises were equal to all, the poor as well as the rich. He did not exclude any in His affection and the place of salvation is all inclusive.

His teachings were world wide. His sacrifices were for all men—all classes and all countries. When He would extend His Kingdom, He placed the responsibility upon the hearts of His disciples and told them, "Go ye into all the world and preach the gospel to every creature." It was obligatory upon those to whom He spoke telling them to carry the gospel with its love, forgiveness, hope and assurance to every man. The responsibility is equally binding upon every living Christian today. We are confronted with the task of giving Christianity a world wide application and we cannot evade that task. If we go, we do not have to go alone. His presence is assured every step of the way and to the end of the way.

As we think of Christian living in the home, the community, the church, and the world, may we count it a privilege to give the Christian gospel a world wide application through our daily living and practices. Christianity is the only hope of the world and the followers of Christ constitute the only hope of giving Christianity its world wide application.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

There are approximately two hundred churches in our Southern Convention. These churches are asked to contribute for various causes of the denomination including Elon College. The apportionment for 1949 has been increased $2,500 over that of 1948. Our report this week shows a total of $115.15. This amount was given by one Sunday school and three churches. If the other 190-odd churches had sent a small contribution the total would have been enough. Sometimes a church fails to send in a contribution because it seems small. No gift is too small but too many of our churches make no gift at all. There is a united budget for the college and there is a united appeal for this budget. If there could be a universal report there would be no difficulty about financing the school. It is suggested that all of our churches might take the matter of the support of the college seriously and count it a privilege rather than a duty.

WHAT OUR MISSION DOLLARS DO IN THE WEST INDIES.

By DR. W. W. SLOAN.

We have all had the experience of buying something and discovering we haven't got our money's worth. We have made poor investments. How about the dollars we have put into missions? I have visited many foreign mission projects in Asia, Africa and South America. Some have been better than others, but foreign missions as a class appeal to me as the best possible investment Christians can make.

How about home missions? I have seen a lot of work that comes under this title and I have questioned the value of some of it. That was one reason Mrs. Sloan and I went to Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands over Christmas. We have come back definitely convinced that our investments there are good.

The people of Puerto Rico and the Virgin Islands have been called Christians for four hundred and fifty years. But the Christianity of Puerto Rico has been of a very poor type. No Protestant work was allowed among Puerto Ricans until 1899 when the United States had taken over the Island. Probably any religious group that gets a complete monopoly tends to degenerate. The Roman Catholic Church in the states is a comparatively good church. Priests have confessed to me that this is because of the competition Protestants give here. This is barely becoming true in the West Indies. After fifty years' work in Puerto Rico but ten per cent of the two and a half million inhabitants are Protestant, but the success of no mission can be measured by the number of names on the church roll.

The Roman Church in Puerto Rico has been static, doing practically nothing but conduct formal services in its churches, which are almost entirely located in the cities. Such high fees have been charged for baptisms, marriages and funerals that many people who call themselves Roman Catholics have managed to get along "without benefit of clergy" and have seldom if ever been inside a church building. Church schools and hospitals were almost unknown.

Because of medical, educational and social services Protestants are bringing to Puerto Rico, Roman Catholics are beginning to serve their people. Vigorous American priests are replacing the easy-going Spanish padres. Roman Catholic "sisters," almost unknown until recently, are serving in schools and hospitals. Because so many Puerto Rican leaders have had their education in the Protestant Polytechnic Institute the Roman Church started a little college at Ponce last fall which one over-enthusiastic gentleman told me "will soon have more than seven thousand students." A "Boys' Town" in imitation of the Nebraska institution of that name is being established.

Recently I mentioned discovering congregational singing at a Roman Catholic mass. This is but one of the influences our approach to Christianity has had on the Roman Church. Clubs and societies are being organized in imitation of similar activity in Protestant churches. Making the church that was already in Puerto Rico more Christian is possibly the chief task of Protestant missions. However that is a continuous process. If we should withdraw, the Roman Church would soon slide back where it was. The Roman Church has done very little for the hundreds of thousands of rural Puerto Ricans. Some time ago the Episcopalians established a country church and social service center. Soon the Roman Catholics built a similar plant across the road. With such great need in the Island the Episcopalians decided they could be of greater service where the Romans were inactive, so moved on to another needy spot. This had hardly been done when the Roman Catholics closed up their project, leaving the first community with no help of any kind.

Puerto Ricans who have become Protestant are enthusiastic about their religion. They don't take it for granted. It means much to them. Would Protestants here were as enthusiastic! The Island Protestants know that emphasis upon the abundant life for all people and following the example of Jesus brings far greater satisfaction than worshipping a church. They find a living Christ rather than the figure on a crucifix.

Puerto Rican Protestants are more world-minded in their religion than are many members of the Southern Convention. They want to know what Christianity is doing in other parts of the world. They know what this religion has meant for them and they want to share it with others. They are sending the good news beyond their own Island. We found a group who had sent one of their members to the mountains of Peru as a missionary and are now helping to finance the task of bringing a vital Christianity to the Peruvians, despite their own poverty. They know no one can keep real Christianity to himself; it has to be shared.

In contrast to Puerto Rico the inhabitants of the Virgin Islands have nearly all been Protestants—Moravians and Lutherans. The sugar and rum industries in the Virgin Islands have been "going on the rocks" leaving many of the people there unemployed and impoverished. They do not need to be "converted" but their churches do need help from the states. There are no Congregational Christian Churches there—none are needed—but as patriotic Americans we should take an interest in the people of these little islands, people whose language was English long before we bought the Virgin Islands from Denmark in 1917.

Our mission dollars spent in the West Indies are proving an excellent investment for the Kingdom of God.

VETERAN CHRISTIAN MISSIONARY PASSES.

Rev. Alonzo D. Woodworth, D. D., for 39 years a missionary of the Christian Church in Japan, died January 11, 1949, at Merom, Indiana. Dr. Woodworth first went to Japan in September, 1892, and spent the greater part of his years in Tokyo. He was a graduate of Oberlin College with a D. D. from Union Christian College in Merom. When he left Japan for the last time the Japan Advertiser said, "He was a man who devoted his entire life to straightforward evangelism." At times Dr. Woodworth often preached in the streets to thousands. He never sought for any material accomplishment which might

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

We will have a School of Missions this summer—probably the last of June—at Elon College. Plans are being made to combine the Biennial Meeting of the Southern Convention Women and the School of Missions so that both will be held in the same week. This would make it possible for more people to attend both. The School of Missions this year will be for only the women, including study courses about our emphases for next year. We hope that many women will be able to come and spend the week at Elon. Definite announcements will be made later.

THE YOUNGEST SOCIETY PRESIDENT.

Mrs. Lester has received three nominations for the youngest Society President and all three are the same age! These nominations are from High Point, Pleasant Grove, N. C., and Monticello.

Maybe your society has a president who is younger than these three. If you think so, send her name to Mrs. Lester.

SPRING RALLIES.

Get ready for Spring Rallies—they will be here before we know it. Dates are March 30, 31, April 1, 2, 3.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

For a record attendance at your World Day of Prayer service educate your community now—use film strips to bring to life the missions projects of the World Day of Prayer. Between now and the first Friday in Lent, the World Day of Prayer, arrange for showing a film strip in your church.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

GREENSBORO (FIRST) REPORTS.

The past weeks have been filled with work by the two groups of young people of the Greensboro, First, Church. The following report of their activities has been made:

The High School Group (Fun 'n Fellowship) has made a study of Puerto Rico (our Home Mission Study for this year) and they have had some interesting projects in connection with their study. This group sponsored a Sunday evening service, showing "Puerto Rican Story." In addition to their apportioned missionary giving, they have raised $30 to send two goats to Rev. Howard Spragg in Puerto Rico. Not only have they learned more about Puerto Rico, but they have shared their knowledge with others and have shared their money with people of Puerto Rico.

Just before Christmas, this same group gave a play entitled "Christmas Voice." The offering taken at the play was sent to purchase a radio for Timothy Chang, who, most of us know, is the student studying at Duke Divinity School from our Shaowu Mission in China.

The Pilgrim Stewards are the young people of the Greensboro, First, Church who are out of high school. They, too, have been working hard. This group was in charge of the annual open house for the members of the congregation following one of the pre-Christmas programs of the church. Their Christmas offering was used to send a CARE package to a German pastor.

Together these two groups enjoyed a carolling trip on Sunday night before Christmas. This, also, is an unusual event at which time the groups sing for the shut-ins of the church.

We, here at the Convention Office, are delighted to receive reports of group activities, such as the above. If your group has done anything that you would like to tell others about, just write to one of the editors of the Young People's Page at Elon College, N. C., or just send your article to the Southern Convention Office. We will see that it gets to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and also in Youth Outreach, the Southern Convention Young People's Newsletter.

"Puerto Rican Story," mentioned above, is available for loan from the Southern Convention Office, if any group would like to use it. Be sure to write well in advance of the date you wish it in order that it may be reserved for you.

Remember, this Young People's Page is for our use. Let's fill it as often as possible. Send in your reports and we will see that they are printed.

TO THE YOUNG PEOPLE OF EASTERN VIRGINIA.

It has been a pleasure to work with the young people in our churches. I feel that I am somewhat familiar with the young people's work and that I already know a number of the young leaders in the conference. And I expect to know a larger number before the year is over.

In looking over the conference as a unit there are a number of of arresting and startling facts. Let me call your attention a few:

Last year our young people's organization contributed $1,119. Fine for finances! But are we getting the equivalent in spiritual values, in mental and character development? Let us not put too much emphasis on raising money. That is only a secondary and minor factor. Our primary aims and major objectives are developing leadership for church work, teaching the right attitudes toward Christian living, character development, and interest in furthering the work of the Kingdom.

And here is a puzzle. In our Eastern Virginia Conference only 31 of our 43 churches have youth organizations. Isn't that surprising? Why, how and what are the big questions. Why are there 12 churches in our conference without youth organizations? How can this situation be changed? Is your church one of the 12? If so, what can we do to help you organize a youth group in your church? Your superintendent feels there should be an active, growing, progressive, organized youth group in every church.

Of our 31 organized groups are there not many improvements that can be made? Is your group as active as it should be? Is your attendance record the best you can make it? Are your programs inspirational and interesting? Look around you, aren't there other young people you might invite to your meetings and interest in joining the work?

Begin making plans now to have your group represented at the Pilgrim Fellowship Rally to be held the last of February at Liberty Spring. Watch THE SUN for the date. Other information will be sent to the key worker in your church. We hope to have the youth of every church well represented. Don't miss this meeting. There is a big treat in store.

Before closing let me say that if at any time I can help you in any way just let me know. It will be a pleasure.

MRS. R. E. BRITTLE.

EASTERN VIRGINIA LEADERSHIP SCHOOLS.

Rev. J. F. Morgan, Rev. R. E. Brittle, Dr. Luther Grice, Dr. I. W. Johnson, Dr. Will B. O'Neill, and Rev. B. H. Watkins.

The cooperating churches in the Suffolk Area School will be: Antioch, Berea (Nans.), Bethlehem (Nans.), Cypress Chapel, Damascus, Eure, Franklin, Holland, Holy Neck, Isle of Wight, Johnson's Grove, Liberty Spring, Mt. Carmel, Mt. Zion, Oak Grove Oakland, Suffolk, Union (South.) and Windsor.

All teachers and officers of our Sunday schools of Eastern Virginia, together with other interested people in the work of the Sunday school are urged to plan to attend these Leadership Training Schools.

A Short Course Leadership Training School will be arranged for the Wakefield-Waverly Area later.

Vacation Bible School Institutes are being arranged for February 24-27, as follows: February 24—Norfolk Area, Norfolk, Second Church; February 25—Suffolk Area, Suffolk; February 27—Wakefield-Waverly Area.

WM. T. SCOTT,
Superintendent.

Ministers of the Western North Carolina Conference held their regular monthly meeting at the Asheboro church on January 17. Plans for the fifth Sunday institute were completed. Discussion of possible pastorate grouping was continued, and the program of the C. M. A. considered.

THE MID-WINTER MEETING.

Nine national and international boards, conferences and affiliated committees of the Congregational Christian Churches in America are meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, February 3 thru 10 for consideration of their unified ministry to the churches of America and their world-wide parish. Their headquarters will be the Cleveland Hotel. These are working conferences bringing together some 300 executives, board members and key lay and clerical leaders of the denomination from all parts of the country.

Distinguished United Nations Member to Speak.

The Missions Council sessions, running from Monday night, February 7 to Thursday noon, February 10, begin with a Fellowship Dinner, Monday evening, at which the speaker will be Hon. Dr. Charles Malik, Ph. D., Lebanese Minister to the United States, Chief of the Lebanese Delegation to the United Nations and President of the Social and Economic Council of the United Nations. It was under Dr. Malik's leadership that the history-making Declaration of Human Rights was accepted recently by the United Nations. His subject will be, "Problems Confronting the Christian World."

The Chaplain of the Missions Council meetings will be Rev. R. Norris Wilson of New York City, Associate Minister of the Missions Council. The Presiding Officer will be Rev. Albert J. Penner, of Holyoke, Mass., Chairman of the Missions Council. The meetings are under the general direction of Dr. A. D. Stauffacher, New York City, Minister and Executive Secretary of the Missions Council.

Among the highlights of the sessions will be an American Board luncheon on Tuesday, February 8, at 12:30 at which the speaker will be Luther R. Fowle of Istanbul, Turkey, a resident of that land under three regimes and Agent and Treasurer of the American Board Near East Mission. Mr. Fowle, who is the father of Farnsworth Fowle, CBS overseas correspondent, will speak on "Issues Confronting America" in the Near and Middle East."

Another feature will be the premiere of a new sound color film entitled, "We Would Be Building," a moving picture professionally filmed on the site of a new high potential church at Silver Spring, Md. The narrator is Ernest Chappell, well known network announcer. The film will first be shown on Tuesday evening, February 8.

A unique method of giving information and inspiration is being used at this Mid-Winter Meeting. Three "Town Meetings" have been set up in which a panel of thoroughly informed men and women will speak after which the entire Missions Council will participate in an open forum.

The first "Town Meeting" is on Tuesday, February 8, at 2:00 with the subject, "The State of the Church in Our World." Dr. Fred Field Goodsell will conduct the forum. His team of speakers will include: Herman F. Reissig, New York City, discussing the East-West situation; Miss Alice C. Reed, just back from North China, discussing Communism in China; President Hiroshi Hatanaka of Kobe College, Kobe, Japan; Dr. Henry Little, Jr., of the Philippine Islands; and Dr. Nelson C. Dreier of Los Angeles, Calif., speaking on Mexico.

The second "Town Meeting" comes Tuesday evening, February 8 on the subject, "The Relevancy of Our Message to Our World." It is under the direction of Dr. Douglas Horton, New York City, with Dr. John C. Bennett, Professor of Christian Ethics at Union Seminary, New York, making the main address. The third "Town Meeting" comes Wednesday afternoon, February 9, on the subject, "The Program of Our Churches for Our World" and will be under the direction of Dr. A. D. Stauffacher of New York.

The Biennium emphasis of the Congregational Christian Churches is Christian Stewardship and Wednesday evening, February 9 will be devoted to that subject. The speaker will be Dr. William C. Jones, President of Whittier College, Whittier, Calif., and Chairman of the General Council Stewardship Commission.

Important Pre-Session Luncheon.

The annual luncheon of the Congregational Christian Division of Church Extension and Evangelism will come Monday noon, February 7, at 12:30 in the Hotel Cleveland, with the following roster of speakers. Rev. Donald L. Benedict, minister of the "storefront" project in East Harlem, New York, speaking on, "The Church Discovering the City's Forgotten Men;" Rev. Stanley M. Sargent, of Rochester, Minn., ex-Navy Chaplain and now Congregational Chaplain related to the Mayo Clinic, subject, "The Church's Ministry to the Sick;" Rev. Joseph H. Evans, minister of Mt. Zion Church, Cleveland, Ohio, on

"The Negro and His Church in the Urban North;" Rev. Fred Hoskins of Des Moines, Iowa, on "The Urban Church and Parish Evangelism;" Rev. Kenneth E. Seim of Minneapolis, Minn., on "A Church Is Born;" and Miss Helen Kenyon of New York, Moderator of the General Council on "Seeing Is Believing."

Other Important Pre-Session Meetings.

Among other important pre-session meetings will be that of the Congregational Christian Directors of Religious Education meeting February 3 to 6 in the Hotel Cleveland. Among their leaders will be Dr. Harry Emerson Stock of Borton, Mass., General Secretary of the Congregational Christian Division of Christian Education; Rev. Virgil E. Foster of Grinnell, Iowa, Director of Religious Education for the Congregational Conference of Iowa; Rev. Oliver Powell of Chicago, Ill., National Secretary of Young People's Work; Miss Mildred Widber, Children's Work Secretary, Miss Merle Easton and Miss Grace Storm, national youth workers.

From February 3 to 7 the Congregational Christian State Superintendents from all parts of the United States will meet under the direction of Dr. Robert Bruce of New York City, to discuss policies and problems related to all phases of church work. They will meet in the Hotel Cleveland with the exception of Saturday night, February 5 when they will hold their annual dinner at 6:30 in the headquarters of the Ohio Congregational Christian Conference, 3056 Prospect Avenue, Cleveland, Ohio.

The speakers at the Superintendent's Dinner will be Dr. Frederick L. Fagley of New York City, Associate General Secretary Emeritus of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, speaking on, "The Development of the Ministry in Our Churches," and Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer of New York, newly elected Associate Minister of the General Council, who will speak on, "The Relevancy of the Ecumenical Movement to the Congregational Ministry."

The women State Presidents from coast to coast will meet from Saturday, February 5, through Monday, February 7, under the guidance of Mrs. Clarence L. Murdey of Seattle, Wash.

The women State Presidents will discuss ways of promoting the work

JESUS FACES OPPOSITION.

LESSON VII—FEBRUARY 13, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Do not be overcome by evil, but overcome with good.—Romans 12:21.

LESSON: Mark 2:1-3:6.

DEVOTIONAL READING: 11:37-46.

The Servant is not Above His Master.

They criticized our Lord. Do not be surprised if they criticize you. No matter how much good you do, or how hard you try to do right, somebody will criticize you. You might as well accept that as a fact of life. And it is not all to the bad either. Some criticism is to be ignored, but much criticism can be turned to profit. Alas for the man who resents all criticism and is unwilling to profit by fair criticism, sincerely offered. The servant is not above his lord, and if people criticized Jesus they will criticize us. Today's lesson presents a series of criticisms brought against our Lord Jesus Christ.

Criticism Number One.

The Master's fame was beginning to grow and to spread. Thus it was that when He came quietly into Capernaum, it soon became known that He was in the house and a great crowd gathered to hear Him. In the midst of His discourse, there was a knocking and a scratching on the roof of the flat-topped house, a big opening appeared, and behold a man suffering with palsy or paralysis was let down on a pallet immediately in front of Jesus. Sensing a spirit of faith in the men, the four friends of the man as well as the man himself, the Master said "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee." That sent the blood pressure of the scribes and Pharisees soaring. "Who can forgive sins but God only?" they asked aghast at such blasphemy. Well after all it was God who had forgiven the sins of the man, God in the person of His Son Jesus Christ. That was one of the tragedies of the situation—He came unto His own and His own received Him not. As a token of His right and His power to forgive sins, our Lord commanded the man to take his bed, or pallet, and to walk. The inner experience was validated by an external action. How trivial and tragic it all seems, this criticism of the scribes. Here was a man paralyzed and helpless, restored again to activity and useful and gainful trade, and here were religious leaders who should have known better, criticizing our Lord and questioning His right on earth to forgive sins. But there are many of their ilk today, who strain at a gnat and swallow a camel.

Criticism Number Two.

Jesus knew what was in man. He saw men, not only as they were, but as they could become. Thus it was that as He passed by the tax collector's place of business, He called Levi or Matthew to follow Him and to become His disciple. And Matthew rose up and followed Him. He thereupon "threw a big party" in honor of the occasion and invited many of his friends to meet the Master Who was the honored guest. But as Jesus sat down to the big dinner, the scribes and Pharisees criticized Him because He was eating with publicans and sinners. It "just wasn't the thing to do" to eat with these people who really belonged on the other side of the tracks. It was beneath the dignity of the Master and outside the pale of real religion, they thought or intimidated. With delicate irony and with deadly directness the Master calmly replied that as a matter of fact the folks who were well did not need a physician, but only the folks who were sick. At any rate these publicans and sinners had a sense of need, a sense of failure and a desire for mercy, but the self-righteous scribes and Pharisees were smug and self-satisfied. One thing is certain, you can't help a man much if you stay at arm's length from him. Missionaries and social workers must share the lives of those whom they would save.

Criticism Number Three.

Horror of horrors, here were the disciples of this unauthorized — by them of course—teacher, who evidently paid no attention to the rules of fasting of organized religion. Didn't this free-lance teacher know what was good form, what the Emily Post book of religious etiquette said about the matter of fasting? Yes, He knew. Fasting was to be the outward expression of an inner spirit. There would come a time when His disciples would feel like putting on sackcloth and ashes and fasting as an expression of their inner mood. But now, now in the new joy that they had found in companionship with the Master, well to fast now would be like folks at a wedding fasting, putting on sackcloth and ashes and wearing a long face. It was a plea for sincerity in religion, for genuineness in religious practices. There was to be no window dressing in the religion of Jesus. Inner spirit was to mean more than outward form and ceremony.

Criticism Number Four.

The next criticism of Jesus by the scribes and Pharisees shows how far the letter can kill, as opposed to the spirit which can make alive. The Sabbath was for the Jews a sacred day, a holy day. It had been made such by the law of Moses. Had not God commanded men to keep it holy, and on it to do no work? Well the religious leaders took the thing literally. And they buttressed it with hundreds of rules and regulations, so petty and burdensome that they had made a mockery of the Sabbath. That which was meant to be a boon had become a burden, that which was meant to give wings to life had become a weight. Thus it was that on one Sabbath day as the disciples walked with the Master through a field of growing grain, they plucked some of the heads of wheat or barley, and scruffing out the grain with their hands, they ate it. (The writer of these Notes recalls how as a boy he used to eat wheat thus threshed from the heads of growing grain in the fields.) But alas, in doing this simple act, the disciples had broken the sacred law of the Sabbath, they had worked, they had threshed grain on the Sabbath Day. And again with patience that awakens amazement in many of us, the Master quietly reminded them that on at least one occasion in their history a man, not a priest, had eaten the shewbread which it was unlawful for anybody but the priest to eat, thus establishing the fact the human needs take precedence over ceremonial law and even over institutions. Then the Master added a statement that embodied an aiding principle for all time. Man was not made for the Sabbath, but the Sabbath was made for men, for the highest interest of man, physically, mentally, socially and spiritually. He further proclaimed that He was Lord also of the Sabbath Day. Even in our modern world the law recognizes works of necessity and works of mer-merely advisory and that his denomination was perfectly free to do as it pleased with reference to the question at issue. He was quite right. Protestantism is entirely free to ruthlessly compete to waste its heritage, to impoverish the community and to discredit itself in the eyes of thoughtful men. If the gentleman in question had been more concerned for the Kingdom than he was for his career, he would have recognized that it is the difficult cases that make or break comity relations and procedure. One deserves no credit for being in favor of comity when nothing is at stake.

AGREEMENTS.

Since 1940 more than nine and one-third million of people have been added to the urban population. This means a vast number of new communities needing to be churchied. There are plenty of opportunities for all. The task is colossal. The need is for a comprehensive plan for every city based on carefully made surveys. Denominational nostalgia is no good reason for establishing yet another church in any community and certainly not in a community already overchurch. Furthermore, for any denomination to think that it must be represented in every region, in every community, in every neighborhood, irrespective of the representation or the extension programs of other denominations, is highly presumptuous. It is untenable on theological grounds. It is indefensible as a matter of Christian brotherhood. It is the negation of a Protestant strategy. It is high time that the major denominations stopped paying lip service to comity and begin practicing it—first, by whole-hearted cooperation in developing urban master plans that stem from all the facts, carefully gathered, analyzed and appraised; second, by accepting comity decisions, be they what they may, both in letter and in spirit.

They may be advisory, and they may hurt, but understand this, that the more they hurt, compliance there-to strengthens comity, enhances the prestige of the Council of Churches and has in it the promise that Protestantism is on the way to fulfilling its responsibility to the community.

The role of the National Boards in the current situation is of utmost importance. The Boards simply cannot plead lack of power and control in the face of comity violations. If the Boards are really sincere in the matter of comity, forthright policy statements, which make comity clearances prerequisite to the receipt of national aid of any kind, will go a long way toward strengthening comity practices in terms of the field. The fact that a lot has been purchased without first securing comity consent for the location, on the theory that comity decisions are after all only advisory, or as a matter of ignorance of good manners in such affairs, is no justification for national aid. The fact that a cellar has been excavated and a foundation laid is no good reason for national aid to a church that has flagrantly ignored comity procedures. So long as the Boards yield to pressure and threats from the field, comity will be observed more by its breach than by its observance. The Boards can, if they are of a mind to do so, lift the matter of comity to the level of morality where it belongs.

Protestantism's basic responsibility is to adequately church every community across the nation. This can be done only by intelligent planning issuing in strong individual units. Such is the only adequate answer to non-cooperating communions. For surely the cure of a little chaos is not more of the same.

Possibly, it is in the inner-city where our atomized life is most deficient. It is one of the anomalies of traditional church experience that the response to the foreign missionary enterprise is one of great generosity while challenging missionary opportunities stand at the very doorsteps of great city churches and are met only with apathy. To be sure, a wide economic and cultural gulf frequently separates the members of a church from its neighbors. But just what is the function of a church? Is it to give one social status, or is it to relate lives, privileged and underprivileged, to the Supreme Life? A church cannot bear a valid Christian witness unless it first be Christian.

In the last analysis the problem centers in the will to cooperate. The larger denominations have the power to lead the way. Their influence can be exercised in the strengthening of the councils of churches. They can witness for sound comity procedures. They can lift comity into aggressive, positive action that has about it a moral imperative. Ultimately, the Roman Catholic Church will compel us to merge our lives and strength in order to exist. It will be wise and statesmanlike for us to cooperate wholeheartedly now for the sake of the cause we seek to serve, lest failing to do so we also lose our birthright.

If this which I have been saying has validity, the Home Missions Council might well pass a series of resolutions along the following lines:

1. RESOLVED: That the Committee for Cooperative Field Research be requested to initiate immediately a study of comity practices of the city councils throughout the nation; that where weaknesses are discovered conferences be arranged, with a view to establishing city-wide Protestant strategies, undergirded by sound comity procedures; that in situations in which any of the constituent denominations of the Home Missions Council are non-cooperative in comity matters, corrective steps be taken on the local level; if unsuccessful, then on the national level.
2. RESOLVED: That the constituent denominations of the Home Missions Council be requested to adopt the policy of making comity clearances prerequisite to the granting of national building and leadership aid; that the non-constituent Boards be invited to adopt the same policy in the interest of an effective churching of the city; that the list of the Boards taking this action be periodically published.
3. RESOLVED: That overtures be made to the Federal Council of Churches for a joint study of the feasibility of approaching the constituent denominations of the two councils with the proposal that some generic and inclusive name, such as the United Protestant Church of Christ be used by each of the denominations and their local churches, with the traditional legal name in parenthesis, with a view to creating a Protestant concern and a Protestant strategy for an adequate churching of both urban and rural life.

This third resolution will, if implemented, run into considerable, if not insurmountable, resistance. And yet it merely describes in two or three words that for which comity stands and to which we so easily subscribe in theory.

A fourth and final resolution might be the following:

4. RESOLVED: That the constituent Boards of the Home Missions Council be requested to set up the essential machinery for a fresh study of the rural church, with a view to an aggressive exchange of fields, thereby reducing the number of units in any one community, with the possibility of full-time resident ministries and enriched programs for the numerous communities which are now impoverished by a competitive denominationalism which presumes to speak in the name of Christ, but which practices not brotherhood toward those who bear His name.

Let me conclude this address by quoting two sentences from "Man's Disorder and God's Design," the Amsterdam Series of the World Council of Churches:

The fundamental problem of the church is the existence of the churches. This is not an abstract, theological proposition; it is our admission of a fact of life.

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

We have had lots of rain in this section since the first of December. We have been waiting all this time to catch a few sunshiny days so the ground would get dry enough to break our corn and bean land. We always like to break our land in December so it will freeze out and get mellow during the Winter months. It works so much better in the spring and summer months. My father gave me that idea on farming when I was a small lad.

The weather here this Winter so far has been very mild. We have been going about without overcoats and have been comfortable. The weather has been so mild that it has been hard to get two or three days to kill hogs.

We have killed this season more than seven thousand pounds of pork. The children have had a good time eating good old sausage and pork chops. We cut the backbone into pork chops and they enjoy them very much.

Our poultry farm is doing very nicely now. We have 175 hens in one lot that are now laying more than one hundred eggs per day. They would not lay an egg when eggs were eighty and ninety cents a dozen. But since eggs have declined in price, they are all trying to lay. In the fall they gave me fits buying high-priced feed and not laying at all. The children are enjoying an egg a day at least. I have heard it said that "an apple a day will keep the doctor away." We do not have the apples, but are using eggs instead and it is working fine.

ELISHA A. KING, D. D.

In the death of Dr. Elisha A. King on December 14, our fellowship in the Southeast lost one who has been one of our most distinguished and devoted ministers and leaders. He became the first minister of the Miami Beach Church which he served for 19 years, retiring in 1940 as pastor emeritus, but continuing to live in Miami.

The Miami Beach Church was organized in 1921 by the Extension Boards with the cooperation of the Building Society and Dr. King began his ministry in December of that year. This was a new city in the first flush of a great land and tourist boom. For the first years this church was the only church and was called the Community Church. To create a real church in the midst of a community bent on pleasure and quick riches involved heavy responsibilities. Dr. King came from a successful ministry in San Jose, Cal. He began his life service as a YMCA Secretary and had served churches in Ohio and Washington. For eighteen years he edited the Church Methods department of the Expositor, with these backgrounds he was well equipped to apply unique methods and develop a program of wide community service. How he did this he has told in his book, Planting a Church in a National Playground. He early cleared the church of a large debt and greatly increased the budget to enable the church to undertake an enlarging service.

An expert in the use of printer's ink and the public press he brought the church into city-wide attention. In 1926 he began the use of the radio, when radio religious service was not as common as now. He received letters of appreciation from wide areas in this country and of our island and foreign neighbors, and from light-houses and ships at sea. In 1927 he started the Easter Sunrise services at the Beach with an attendance of 10,000 the first service. It has increased to several times that number. With the use of fine music, with popular Sunday evening lectures and the use of moving and still pictures he drew large evening congregations. But with it all he was building a real church with liberal but vital spiritual preaching, and by publishing many pamphlets and booklets in his "Personal Help Library." His last book published since his retirement, was on the Book of Revelations.

Dr. King was most civic minded. For years he served on the Welfare Boards and Civic Organizations. As the Miami Herald in an editorial says, after saying that the community had lost a "distinguished citizen," His life was a rare combination of religious effort with civic interest. As pastor of the church he left his imprint on the religious practice of Miami Beach.

Dr. King was indefatigable in his service to the Florida Conference and the whole denomination. He served longer as chairman of the Conference Board of Directors than any other and he was most cooperative with the Superintendent. He loved the fellowship. He organized the Congregational Ministers Club which for several years met regularly in his home.

Of him it might truthfully be said "He passed from death unto life because he loved the brethren."

EDWIN C. GILLETTE.

NOTE: Dr. Gillette, Superintendent-Emeritus of the Florida Conference, came to the state within a few months of Dr. King's arrival in Miami Beach. Throughout the years they have remained close personal friends. This makes Dr. Gillette's estimate of more than usual interest.

The President's Dinner comes Sunday noon, February 6, at Schauffler College.

The Central Committee of the National Council of the Pilgrim Fellowship (youth organization) will meet February 5 and 6 at the Cleveland Hotel. They will discuss youth plans and programs for the year and means for reaching of their goal of $500,000 adopted as their share in the Congregational Christian World Mission. They will meet jointly on Sunday with the Youth Fellowship of the Evangelical and Reformed Church. Among those present will be: Ernest Rutter, Carleton College, Northfield, Minn.; Miss Polly Anderson, Bridgeport, Conn.; Robert Polk of Chicago, Ill.; Miss Mary Lou Pettit of Grand Rapids, Mich.; Rev. Oliver Powell of Chicago, Ill., Congregational Christian National Secretary for Young People.

cy. But many a modern man has overlooked one of the greatest opportunities which the Sabbath brings—the opportunity to worship and to renew the life of the spirit within.

Criticism Number Five.

This criticism is closely akin to the one treated above. In this case there was a man in the synagogue with a paralyzed hand, as I recall it Luke with a physician's observing nature says it was his right hand, the man's means of making a livelihood. What would the Master do? Would He dare heal a man on the Sabbath day and thus break the sacred law of the Sabbath? Even the patience of the Master wore thin under such criticism and callousness. Looking around in righteous indignation, grieved at the hardness of their hearts, He restored the withered hand whole as the other hand. That was too much. Such a fellow as this irresponsible teacher was not fit to live. Why He would upset the whole applecart. So these pious Pharisees went forth and took counsel with the Herodians—they did not have anything in common with each other but a dislike and a fear of Jesus—how they might destroy Him. Opposition to Jesus, like politics, makes some strange bed-fellows.

remain in Japan in his memory such as a school or a church or a society, but his first interest in life was to preach the gospel.

For a time he was president of the Bible Training School in Tokyo. He was a teacher of English and Bible at Azabu Middle School and of New Testament Greek at Aoyama Gakuin for the last 12 years until his retirement.

Dr. Woodworth was born on a farm in Irwin County, one of 16 children. When he was 18 he took the teacher's examination for a license and taught in a small school in Madison County for three months at $30.00 a month. Out of the total of $90.00 he saved $60 to begin his courses at Oberlin College. He worked his way through college doing everything from sawing wood, waiting on table, building a barn to teaching.

Before going to Japan in 1892 Dr. Woodworth was for nine years Professor of Latin and Physiology at Union Christian College in Merom, Indiana.

Indiana Woman Becomes National President

MRS. HARLAN E. WALLEY

Mrs. Harlan E. Walley, of East Chicago, Indiana, was elected President of the National Fellowship of Congregational Christian Women and Chairman of the State Presidents at a meeting being held this week in Cleveland, Ohio, in conjunction with the Missions Council Midwinter Meeting.

In this post Mrs. Walley becomes the chosen leader of some 700,000 Congregational Christian women across the United States for the next two years. Mrs. Walley, who resides at 4237 Northcote, East Chicago, Indiana, is the wife of Harlan E. Walley, principal of the Garfield School in East Chicago.

"It is a chaotic world in which we live and human needs are great. If we are all alert to the call of our time, we find demands pressing in on us from every side. To meet these demands our greatest need is inner strength which comes with complete surrender to the knowledge that God is eternal. Today church women, in common with all Christians, must accept and cherish the imperative to be and to act as one in Christ, that Christianity may become the great vital force which will lead the peoples of the world to a destiny glorified in peace and in brotherhood," said Mrs. Walley after her election. "As Christian women we must make of our homes a place of renewal and of strengthening for all those who go out therefrom; we must make of our churches places of real study and effective action; we must reach out into our communities and into our world to help establish the holy art of human relations."

News Flashes

Rev. Johnson Griffin began his ministry at Bay View, Norfolk, last Sunday.

Be sure to read carefully the Council Resolutions appearing on page five of this issue.

Rev. Joseph E. McCauley of Waverly occupied his former pulpit in Richmond last Sunday.

Rev. Carl R. Key supplied the pulpit for Dr. Stanley C. Harrell at Durham last Sunday. Dr. Harrell was in Cleveland where he is serving on the Executive Committee of the General Council.

An error was made when Anti-merger, January, 1949, issue, printed the name of Rev. E. T. Cotten in the list of those on State Committees. Mr. Cotten writes: "I have always worked for the union of the followers of Christ."

Dr. Harley H. Gill of 1164 Phelan Building, San Francisco, California, Superintendent of the Congregational Christian Churches of Northern California, was elected President of the Fellowship of Congregational Christian State Superintendents meeting in Cleveland in conjunction with the Midwinter Meetings.

Miss Dorothy Cushing writes: "One of the best known figures in the field of religious journalism Miss Rachel K. McDowell, has just retired as religious news editor of the New York Times, a post she has filled for more than 28 years. Miss McDowell began her newspaper career on the New Evening News and served on the New York Herald before going to the Times. Religious leaders, and especially church public relations representatives, of all faiths have found in Miss McDowell a sympathetic friend and an accurate, thorough and conscientious journalist."

Rev. and Mrs. Loy L. Long are returning to their post under the American Board in Bombay, India. For the past three years, Mr. Long has been serving as candidate secretary for the American Board and has been instrumental in recruiting 124 new workers for Christian overseas service. He began his India career in 1930 as a Christian social service worker in Ahmednagar, the political and social center of some 1,000,000 Marathi people. He was a spearhead in remedial work along juvenile delinquency lines, in cooperation with the local government, helped set up a Remand Home, a Children's Court and other progressive social organizations.

Dr. John Reuling, our American Board Secretary for Africa, is doing an African tour with Dr. David McKeith, the new executive vice-president of the American Board. He will be writing Travel Letters from time to time and has agreed that these should go out from Boston to friends and through them to the church groups that may be especially interested. Those who are personally interested in receiving copies of these "travel-talks" please write to Miss Sara Morse, c/o ABCFM, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Mass., Dr. Reuling's secretary, giving your address or the address of someone who will make use of the material in your behalf.

LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP ORGANIZED.

The Men's Fellowship League of the Congregational Christian Church of Hopewell, reorganized their meeting at the home of Mr. R. B. White. Officers were elected as follows: Frank Lowe, president; John Knight Eanes, spiritual leader; R. B. White, treasurer; Frank Sodomka, secretary.

HOLY NECK REPORTS.

Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church observed Christian Family Life Day in two services on Sunday, January 16. In the morning worship service, Dr. Luther B. Grice, the pastor, preached on "The Christian Family Today." Family groups sat together in the family pews in this service. There was a large attendance.

On Sunday night the family groups of the church met at 6:00 p. m. in the church hall for a fellowship supper. This was a very fine get-together of many families. Dr. John Norfleet, Jr., of Suffolk, who was reared in Holy Neck Church, showed moving pictures of Hawaii. Following this Mrs. B. D. Jones gave an inspiring address on the Christian home and the relationship of church and home. The entire congregation felt that this had been such an inspirational day that it is possible that it will be made an annual event.

CITATIONS AWARDED BY THE GENERAL COUNCIL.

MRS. E. T. WILLSON.

Mrs. E. T. Willson of New York City, Executive Secretary of the Congregational Christian Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction from 1940-48, has been awarded a citation from the Congregational Christian Churches of U. S. A. for her "unwearied devotion to the cause of the victims of war." This citation was presented during the Missions Council in Cleveland.

The citation read: "To Hawley Wilson, whose unwearied devotion to the cause of the Victims of War has led our Fellowship to bring food to the hungry, clothing to the naked, shelter to the homeless, healing to the sick, comfort to the disconsolate, hope to the discouraged, and strength to the weak. Her unflinching vitality and large usefulness as Executive Secretary of the Congregational Christian Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction, 1940-48, has won for her our gratitude and the undying remembrance of those unnumbered ones to whom she has ministered."

DR. SAMUEL C. KINCHELOE.

Dr. Samuel C. Kincheloe, educator, sociologist and Christian minister, was awarded a Citation for Distinguished Service at the annual luncheon of the Congregational Christian Division of Church Extension and Evangelism in Cleveland, Ohio. Dr. Kincheloe is Professor of Sociology of Religion in Chicago Theological Seminary.

Described as "minister, educator, sociologist, teacher and exemplar of the Christian religion," Dr. Kincheloe was cited for his distinguished service in developing the "technique of application of the scientific method to religious institutions" and for his research which has made "invaluable contribution to the life of the churches of Chicago and to the Congregational Christian Churches of the nation." The Citation was presented by Dr. A. J. Buttrey of Montclair, New Jersey, Chairman of the Division of Church Extension and Evangelism.

The Citation also said, "We are indebted to you for a rare quality of mind and generosity of spirit, a keen sight into processes by which institutions live and die, a constant stream of carefully trained students who have carried your method, your spirit and your technique into many places of power and influence."

GOOD NEWS ABOUT HUMAN RIGHTS.

By REV. WM. C. KERNAN.

It took the Social Committee of the United Nations' General Assembly two and a half years to adopt its universal Declaration of Human Rights.

From information available at this time it looks like a job well done. It has the advantage of resting on sound principles which recognize and protect the God-given rights of individual persons against the presumptuous and intolerable tyranny of the totalitarianism of both Hitler and Stalin.

Closely following our own Virginia Bill of Rights and our Declaration of Independence, the new Document insists that men are born free and equal and that they are endowed with inalienable rights which must be recognized in terms of freedom of worship, speech, assembly, self-government, and the right to own property—irrespective of race, religion, national origin, or class.

Striking at the oppressive methods of the police state to restrict the liberty of individual persons, the declaration recognizes every person's right to move from one place to another within his own country and to leave it altogether if he wants to.

Aimed at concentration camps and slave labor, which prevail under the totalitarian police state, the declaration affirms that men have freedom of choice regarding the work they do.

The New York Times (December 8) pointedly observes, "Taken as a whole the declaration contradicts and outlaws the very concept not only of the totalitarian state but also of the 'dictatorship of the proletariat' and the 'class struggle,' which are the fundamental principles of Communism and the Communist state."

It is not surprising, therefore, to learn that Communist representatives on the committee, which after so much labor completed the Declaration of Human Rights, opposed its provisions. For Communists do not believe in the rights of individual persons. In this country they make a pretense of believing in them in order to attract a following. In countries where they have power their works belie this pretense.

The new Declaration of Human Rights, which follows so closely on our own traditional principles, is the free world's answer to the slave world. All true and loyal Christians will uphold it and desire that every American—regardless of race, creed or class—enjoy that freedom which is now recognized as belonging to all men the whole world over.

A PREACHER "SUITED."

The pastor of Long's Chapel church, Route 5, Burlington, N. C., was made happy Monday morning, January 17, when one of the members asked him to call by the garage where he worked, and to the great surprise of the pastor, the member said, "You go to a certain clothing store and select a suit, the money was given yesterday by your friends for that purpose." No one knows how happy such a surprise makes a minister, until one has the experience.

There's hoping that services rendered in the future may be such that no one will ever regret the gift that made it possible for the pastor to have the nicest suit he ever wore. Such consideration should certainly make a servant more humble. Thanks!

GUY H. VEAZEY.

ATTEND COMMUNION.

Every member of the church attend the service of the Lord's Supper. It is one of those delicate invitations, made by the Lord Jesus Himself, which under the circumstances we should give great concern to attend. According to our faith He has given His life for us, has made the forgiveness of all our sins possible, and has assured us of His constant love and mercy. He has asked us to do this one thing in memory of Him, namely, partake of the Lord's Supper.

Suppose a beloved neighbor or friend had prepared to receive us at supper, had graciously given us the invitation, we would consider it meet and right for us to be present. The Lord has graciously invited us to His Supper. Let us attend.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MERGER APPROVED AT CLEVELAND.

February 5, 1949, will be remembered as one of the landmarks in the pilgrimage of ecumenicity. A solemn hush fell upon the 929 accredited delegates at the General Council in Cleveland when Moderator Helen Kenyon declared that we had voted our readiness to proceed with union. The decisive vote was 752 for and 172 against. The Cleveland action leaves the General Council and its property rights intact for the time being, since final approval is contingent on acceptance by the Evangelical and Reformed Church of the Interpretations of the Basis of Union which were adopted at the Oberlin Council and published in this paper.

The substantial approval grew out of the conviction that church union is an issue too momentous for procrastination, that a sufficient mandate to proceed had been received from churches and people. The many testimonies for union might be summarized as follows: (1) World Conditions—Dr. Hilda Ives stressed the fact that the inescapable, world-wide problem is how to get along together with great differences. This union can demonstrate in a new way in a new day the ability to form a new fellowship in Christ. We shall be the first to do so in an agonizing world. (2) The Plight of Protestantism—Dr. Aruthur Cushman McGiffert, president of Chicago Seminary, hailed the merger as a good chance to succeed and work out a new pattern for Protestantism. Another declared that many outside our church, and many outside all churches are looking to us for leadership now. (3) The Faith, Idealism and Enthusiasm of Youth.

Yes, there was opposition as the score indicates. There are nests of opposition scattered across the country. Some feared a loss of freedom, that the anatomy of the local church would be curtailed. Some felt that a 72 per cent affirmative vote was insufficient. Others were dissatisfied with the Basis of Union and charged that it was ambiguous.

All this, it would appear, is a part of the growing pains which we must experience. In view of this situation, the following Recommendation from the Commission on Interchurch Relations and Christian Unity was passed:

"This Council solicits the widest support and adherence of all Congregational Christian Churches to the proposed United Church of Christ. And, acknowledging the varieties of religious experience and conviction within our membership, we further recognize the possibility of various types of relationship to the United Church of Christ, so that each local church, whether having approved the Basis of Union or not, may be free to maintain, or establish such relationships to its Association, Conference, and to the General Synod, as may be mutually agreeable."

The great majority of people in our Southern Convention will approve if not applaud the action of the Cleveland Council. It is in line with our historic faith and practice. Sufficient time has elapsed since our Congregational Christian union to prepare and be in readiness for another. Whatever lessons we have learned in the ecclesiastical laboratory of church union should not be forgotten. They should be remembered, utilized and implemented in furthering the union of Christian believers. Wider barriers should be transcended and more difficult problems surmounted. In the words of Dean Weigle of Yale: "If Congregational Christians cannot unite, who can?"

But union is not yet complete. The long and arduous task of implementing the union lies ahead. Wisdom and grace in large measure will be needed. We must use all acquired skills and develop new ones if this union is to result in fruition rather than frustration. Having put our hands to the plow, we dare not look backward. As the Christian Century points out, the road to union is a rocky one, but it is one we dare not bypass.

The yoke of Christ is one of union. Freedom is achieved only in union. The clarion call of the hour is for every apostle of union to come down from the balcony of life and take upon himself the yoke and harness of Christ.

RACE RELATIONS.

The editor proposes a text for Race Relations Sunday: "Study to show thyself approved unto God, a workman that need not be ashamed, rightly dividing the word of truth." Christian people must study this tough and inescapable problem of race relations in order to show themselves approved—not to the minister, nor to the editor, but unto God.

Pronouncements from the Federal Council of Churches and elsewhere should be read, not with the intentions of rebuttal, but with the purpose of amplifying one's understanding of the problem. We are not under the necessity of agreeing with any and every pronouncement on civil rights, but we as Christian Citizens are under obligation to acquaint ourselves with the findings of important bodies on this live issue. It may be helpful to remember that "The difference between a prejudice and a conviction is that you can explain a conviction without getting mad."

The Statement on Human Rights adopted at the Biennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches at Cincinnati, December 3, 1948, is worthy of Christian consideration. Read slowly and thoughtfully the following paragraphs from the Statement:

"All men are God's creatures and have infinite worth in His sight; they are also included in the saving work of Christ. All men, and Christians in particular, are therefore responsible to God to love and serve Him; to live in such a way that the lives they live and the work they do shall be worthy of their capacities and gifts; and to regard other people as their neighbors whom they should love as themselves. They are also responsible at all times to obey God as the supreme Lord of conscience.

“But men have not only responsibilities toward God and their fellow men which they must discharge; they have God-given rights which society must respect and for whose realization it must make provision.

“The flagrant violation of human rights in our generation has outraged every Christian feeling and has impeded the achievement of world order. Even in those lands which profess adherence to the Christian democratic tradition there are discriminatory restrictions and exploitations. The dignity of man and the obligation of Christian brotherhood are so clearly expressed in the Gospels that our own failure to live up to their precepts is a reproach against us among non-Christian peoples. The churches cannot view this situation with unconcern.

“All of the rich gifts which God imparts to men should be available to all without distinction as to race, color, sex, birth, nationality, class, or creed. Although man’s life consists in fellowship with God and not in the abundance of things; although the Christian in privation and tribulation may be more than conqueror; yet the denial of freedom, justice, and security to others is the violation of basic rights. Opposition to such indignities is a Christians duty and it must be carried out by Christian means if it is not to defeat its purpose.

“Every right with which man is endowed by his Creator contains a corresponding responsibility to use this freedom wisely and generously, for righteous ends and with due regard for the similarly God-given rights of others. Moral obligation is at the center of the Christian concept of human rights.

“Social safeguards are necessary for the peaceful adjustment of conflicting rights and to prevent their violation or curb their misuse whether by individuals or the state. If these safeguards are not themselves to become a peril to liberty, free society must accept some risks that freedom may not be abused by those who would destroy it. The churches, the state, and individual citizens have responsibility for observance of these requirements of human rights. It is presumptuous for the state to assume that it can grant or deny fundamental rights. It is for the state to embody these rights in its own legal system and to ensure their observance in practice. It is for the churches to encourage the state fully to recognize these rights in law, but also, since the churches are under special obligation to obey God rather than man, they must go beyond the requirements of law and seek vigorously to realize these principles wherever they apply within their own fellowship; to support and encourage their members in conscientious endeavor to achieve these ends in the community and nation; and to seek solutions in the spirit of Christian reconciliation. The churches are likewise bound to offer a continual challenge to the conscience of the community and to seek to influence the government in its appropriate sphere to safeguard the rights of all.”

Recommendations Voted By the Cleveland Council

WHEREAS, in June, 1942, the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, in its regularly convened session at Durham, New Hampshire, initially recognized the possibility of union with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and authorized its appropriate Committee “to explore the possibilities of organic union”;

WHEREAS, in June, 1944, the General Council, in its regularly convened session at Grand Rapids, Michigan, declared that mutual acquaintance and fellowship was a prerequisite to any vote upon the subject of union, and asked “all churches, associations, conferences and national agencies to seek opportunity for fellowship with the corresponding group of the Evangelical and Reformed Church”;

WHEREAS, a Joint Committee, comprising representatives of the Congregational Christian Churches and of the Evangelical and Reformed Church prepared a first draft of a “Basis of Union” in March, 1943; and subsequently, in collaboration with and under the direction of the Commission on Interchurch Relations and Christian Unity effected various revisions thereof as a result of cooperative study and deliberation, the final draft bearing the date of January 22, 1947, being now and known and designated as “The Basis of Union”;

WHEREAS, in June, 1946, the General Council, in its regularly convened session at Grinnell, Iowa, directed that a further and more explicit definition be sought for the merged activities of the Missionary, Social Action and Pension functions of the two Com-munions, pursuant to which such additional types of agreement were negotiated by the Boards and Com-missions involved, and were incorporated in the “Basis of Union”;

WHEREAS, the final draft of the “Basis of Union” was submitted to all voting delegates of the 1946 Council in the several states, according as State Superintendents found it possible, with the request that they vote upon the question, “Is the Basis of Union now ready for submission to all Conferences, Associations, Churches and Members?” and the resulting vote was:

Favorable—497 Opposed—99

WHEREAS, the “Basis of Union” was then submitted to all of the Congregational Christian Conferences, Associations, Churches and Members for their approval or disapproval, with the following result, as reported in June, 1948:

RESOLUTION No. 1—ON APPROVAL OF THE UNION.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Twenty-three young people, and their counsellor, Miss Louise Lilly of the high school faculty, had a buffet supper in the parsonage this Sunday night, as a part of their Youth Week celebrations. These are charming girls and boys. The church, and the country can be proud of them. They are healthy, happy, sincere church youth. They look forward to living a life of service as Christians in whatever avocation they settle upon. They are bright and easy to talk with, not shy, not boisterous, but full of whatever is on the program. To know them is to love them. To help them is to have a place in their usefulness throughout all the years of their lives. They can come again and again, for they are welcome.

At the 7:30 service they simulated on the spot reports from sections of our mission work about the world through an improvised newscast. John Truitt, Jr., presided at the microphone arranged on a table on the platform and gave first a brief resume of the work being done on the sixteen foreign mission stations, giving a few of the statistics, and highlighting the missionaries with whom our congregation was acquainted. Then telling his listeners that as it had been said a picture was worth a thousand words, he felt that an on-the-spot report was worth many printed pages, he was going to let them hear directly from some of our important fields in our mission work.

"The next voice you hear," so he said, "will be that of the Rev. Richard L. Jackson, speaking to us from Shaowu, China." From an unseen quarter a voice, gathering up some of the most interesting recent reports from Dick Jackson, was heard. Followed a brief comment from the announcer, and . . . "I am now going to bring you the Rev. Mr. Tanimoto, a Japanese citizen, and minister of a Methodist Church in Hiroshima, a man who spent four years as a theological student in America, who survived the atomic bombing of his city, who will tell us of what is happening there on the land and in the hearts of the citizens of Hiroshima." Also was brought in like manner reports from the work being done by Miss Ruth Seabury as reported by one of the girls who attended one of her conferences. The Rev. Armstrong Hunter spoke from India. Mr. Fred Brownlee, of New York, reported on Puerto Rico, and much to the delight of the listeners, especially since we had heard the good news of the Rev. D. P. Barrett's proposed return there for a short visit and the Golden Anniversary of our work on the islands. The announcer brought his listeners the Rev. Harold W. Case, of Elbowoods, N. D., where the youth of our church are sending a package. As a closing feature the author of I Heard a Child Crying from Hunger was introduced over the radio, and a plea was made by the young people for funds for Reconstruction and Rehabilitation. And while all of this was but a simulation of a broadcasting newsroom it made a most worthwhile program, and the young people including the chorus of high school girls were the recipients of many compliments from the congregation.

THE LANGDALE CHURCH GOES FORWARD.

Two years ago last October the Langdale Church, Langdale, Ala., accepted, with regret, the resignation of Rev. J. D. Dollar. During his nine years of ministry here the people learned to love and respect him as a real Christian servant. During his ministry with the church much progress was made. He built a spiritual foundation for the church that has proven to be firm and strong. We are sure that the church will not fail upon such a foundation. At his leaving the church was forced to look for another minister. We were able to secure a nephew of Brother Dollar, Rev. Melvin Dollar, who is a graduate of Elon College and Vanderbilt University. He has served our churches in North Carolina, Georgia and Tennessee. Since he came to us the church has continued to make progress. In the past two years we have received 210 members into the church, making a total of 412 members at the present time. As the church has increased in membership it has increased in every other way. The Young People's Department has tripled in both membership and attendance. The Sunday school has doubled and the church attendance for the morning church service is beyond seating capacity. Extra chairs are used every Sunday to accommodate the congregation. The Sunday evening congregation runs around 200. The youth choirs, of which there are three, present the music for this service.

The church is sponsoring an active recreation program for the young people. They meet in three different groups during the week. At these meetings they play games, sing songs, go on picnics, and numerous other things. This is headed by an adult recreation committee. This has proven a great help to the church.

A Men's Christian Service Club has been organized, and they are doing a great job. This group has 40 active members. Their function is to serve the community and church. At Christmas time they gave 106 fruit baskets to old people of the community. They also gave $155.00 in cash to needy families. Another purpose for the club is to promote fellowship among the men of the church.

During the past two years the church has added a $15,000.00 religious education department, and has spent $2,500.00 on the parsonage, either for furniture, or improvements on the building. All this is done and paid for. The church has voted to buy an organ as its 1949 project. This is to be installed and paid for by October the first. The church is out of debt, and the spirit of the membership is at its best.

INGRAM SUNDAY SCHOOL INSTALLS OFFICERS.

An installation service of the Sunday school officers and teachers was held at Ingram Congregational Christian Church, Ingram, Va., on January 9, 1949. Rev. R. T. Woodruff, pastor, was in charge of the ceremony.

Mr. J. K. Landrum, Sunday school superintendent for twenty-six years was installed with Mr. Benny Whitlow as his assistant. Mr. G. I. Satterfield and Mrs. Herbert Dunn were installed as secretary and treasurer, respectively.

The teachers who were installed are as follows: Mrs. Paul Farthing, Mrs. Clarence Landrum, Mrs. H. B. Satterfield, Mrs. G. I. Satterfield, Mrs. L. E. Carlton, Mr. W. W. Hankins, Jr., and Mrs. Fletcher Whitlow.

Their assistants are as follows: Miss Mattie Henderson, Mrs. W. W. Hankins, Jr., Mrs. J. K. Landrum, Miss Elsie Satterfield, Mrs. Joe Dunn, Mr. Herbert Dunn, and Mrs. LeRoy Adams.

THE CHRISTIAN WORKERS CONFERENCE.

Who can hope to measure accurately the influence of an outstanding meeting of church leaders such as we had at the Elon College campus January 23-27? Suffice it to say that the Christian Workers Conference was not just another meeting. It was a major event in the life of the college and the Convention. Students, faculty members, ministers and laymen are still discussing some of the issues that were raised and giving evidence of being deeply impressed. Without any doubt many of the impressions that were made, ideas that were formulated, and inspirations that were shared will continue to produce fruit. Those who did not find it possible to attend were severely deprived.

The outstanding thing about the conference can be summed up in two words, personality and experience. Those who spoke and conducted the discussions were all men of exceptional personal power. Zeal for God and His Kingdom was mingled with every word. No one who attended the sessions could have any doubt as to what dynamic Christian personality is. Further, the leaders were men of long and varied experience in the work of the church. Their counsels and discussions were, therefore, down to earth yet they reached toward the throne of heaven with all the urgency of Christian idealism. It is a rare occasion indeed when such a group of effective leaders can be gathered for a program of study.

Dr. Allen S. Meek, President of the Theological Seminary (of the Evangelical and Reformed Church), Lancaster, Pennsylvania, was a successful pastor for thirty-six years. His work on committees and commissions for the Evangelical and Reformed Churches has been widely recognized. The six addresses that he delivered upon the subject of Evangelism and the conference periods over which he presided were characterized by expert knowledge, a wealth of experience, and contagious enthusiasm. Carefully and clearly he unfolded a usable program for reaching those who are not committed to the Christian cause. To quote the words that he used with reference to other addresses of the conference, what he brought to those in attendance was "a spiritual tonic."

With the vigor, imagination and enthusiasm of a young man what Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter said was backed up by more than half a century of experience as minister of the historic First Church in Hartford, Connecticut, and as Dean of Hartford Seminary Foundation. At the chapel service each morning at 10:00, he asked a question: What is Religion? What is Christianity? What is Christian Hope? What is Christian Love? and What is the Christian Church? These discussions were clear, forceful, and convincing. The students were delighted. Visitors from near-by towns crowded the chapel to its capacity.

In a similar fashion, Dr. Howell Davies, of Chicago, Illinois, brought with his subject of Stewardship a lifetime of experience and thought. With rare imagination, ready wit, and a penetrating knowledge of human affairs, he dressed the church budget up in a tweed suit and gave it a living and vital place in the life of the community. It was pointed out that stewardship is essential in our way of life as citizens of a freedom-loving country.

Problems of church building and remodeling are crucial for almost every church in the Convention. To these problems Dr. Elbert M. Conover, Director of the International Bureau of Architecture, brought his years of experience as a missions secretary of the Methodist Church and his expert professional skill. In addition to his illustrated lectures upon the arts and techniques of church building, Dr. Conover conducted a work-shop in the music room of the college and visited some of the near-by churches whose membership sought his advice. The services that he rendered to our area will continue as his suggestions become translated into terms of the brick and mortar of our religious institutions.

Members of the conference also had the opportunity to hear the address of Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, Minister of Marble Collegiate Church, New York City, sponsored by the Burlington Chamber of Commerce.

Among those who profited greatly from the conference not least are the 34 ministerial students and religion majors at the college. Arrangements were made so that they could be absent from their regular classes to attend the sessions of the conference and to confer with the leaders. The conference, therefore, became a significant part of their training for their chosen work as religious leaders.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The college period, January and February, will soon be over. It is expected that our pastors, Sunday school and church officials have informed their Sunday schools and congregations of the advantages and needs of the college. Church people give from a sense of duty but they are enabled to allocate their gifts when they are properly informed. It has been said again and again that the college does not have an emotional appeal. This is true if you speak merely from sentiment but if the giver is properly informed as to the benefits of education and gives out of sound judgment, his contribution for the support of Christian education will be generous. Without trained leadership we would not get very far and without Christian training for our leadership, our leadership may go into the wrong direction. Elon College stands for the church for the development of Christian character and a Christian contribution to society. It appreciates your continued support.

As a matter of simple economics, the liquor traffic is a burden upon every other industry, every profession and every trade. Its end effect is to curtail income, decrease output, depreciate credit, and destroy the financial independence of both drinkers and abstainers.

NURSE COMMISSIONED FOR TURKEY.

Miss Barbara Phyllis Bird, R. N., daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Michael Bird of 317 West Street, Leominster, Mass., recently a nurse in the neuro-surgical ward of the Boston City Hospital has been appointed as a career nurse by the American Board and assigned to service in Talas, Turkey.

At Miss Bird's Commissioning Service Sunday morning, January 16 in the Pilgrim Congregational Church of Leominster, the Welcome to the Field was given by Luther R. Fowle of Istanbul, Turkey. The American Board Commission was conferred by Mark H. Ward, M. D., Medical Secretary of the American Board and former missionary in Turkey, while the sermon was preached by Dr. Fred Field Goodsell, Executive Vice-President of the American Board and former missionary in Turkey. Rev. John R. Chapman, minister of the Pilgrim Church, gave the Prayer of Dedication. Pilgrim Church is adopting Miss Bird as its missionary in the Near East.

Miss Bird will be associated in Turkey with Dr. William L. Nute who conducts a clinic in Talas, Turkey, a center of healing to which come people from hundreds of villages in that rural area.

INDUSTRIAL MISSIONARY TO AFRICA.

William S. Barker, Jr., son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Barker of 39 Fairview Drive, Wethersfield, Conn., has been appointed as a career industrial missionary in Africa by the American Board.

An ex-service man who served in the U. S. Navy during World War II as Assistant Engineer on a destroyer with the Seventh Fleet in the China Seas, Mr. Barker worked with the General Electric in Pittsfield, Mass., as a test engineer following release from the Navy.

"I believe that teaching is the best way I can devote my life to the service of Christ and that as a teacher of industrial arts I can help the African people. Jesus was a carpenter and through the centuries Christians have been workers. In learning to take pride in a job well done men also learn to build a good life and to find satisfaction in it," says Mr. Barker.

A second strong pull toward Africa is the fact that when he reaches there he will marry Miss Marie Bushong, R. N., daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Eugene Bushong, Long Meadow, Mass., a young American Board nurse who is right now finishing a course in midwifery at the McCord Zulu Hospital, Durban, South Africa. Mr. Barker and Miss Bushong will be married in the mission and be assigned to work at Mt. Silinda, Southern Rhodesia, Africa.

LONG MISSIONARY CAREER ENDS.

When in 1890 young Jessie Rebecca Hoppin, then in her early twenties, set sail for the exotic South Seas she began a 43-year career that has made her a beloved and almost legendary figure among the people of Micronesia.

Her death at the age of 85 on January 14 in Ashland, Wisconsin, has just been reported to the American Board, under which she served. It removes a dauntless spirit to whom William K. Vanderbilt paid tribute in his book narrating his adventures on board the Ara, his private yacht.

When Mr. Vanderbilt was cruising in the South Seas about 15 years ago he met Miss Hoppin at Jaluit in the Marshalls. He watched her at work and on the eve before he sailed away he invited her to dinner on board his yacht, a red letter event for an isolated American. She could not come. A native boy whom she was nursing through a serious illness had reached a crisis. In expressing her regret Miss Hoppin said, wistfully, "Please fly Old Glory as you leave port."

Michigan-born, Miss Hoppin was a graduate of Oberlin College, Class of 1888. Prior to going to the South Seas she taught school for two years in Honolulu. During her 43 years in those magic islands of Micronesia she came home to the U. S. A. only three times.

Miss Hoppin arrived in the South Sea Islands on Morning Star IV, one of six small white missionary sailing ships sent out by the American Board since 1856. Morning Star VI, now at work in the islands, sailed from Boston Harbor, July 27, 1947.

During her period of service, Miss Hoppin learned at least three of the native tongues and since retirement to Wisconsin in 1938 has been working on a translation of the Bible into the Kusaian tongue.

Among other things Miss Hoppin headed up a School for Girls on Kusaie, Caroline Islands. Early in her career a devastating tropical hurricane swept the island for three days and three nights. The school and Miss Hoppin's home were threatened. Somehow she kept the panic-stricken girls under control and on the second day, with windows shattered, walls swaying and water pouring down through the broken roof, she gathered them into a dry corner for family prayers.

Her quiet confidence in God reassured the girls and they went to bed. The house was spared and no one injured. "Mother Hoppin is not afraid of anything!" said her girls from then on.

Religion and a sense of humor were well blended in Jessie Hoppin. When, again, in 1905 another terrific hurricane swept over her island it left the people literally homeless. The school building was destroyed along with the rest. The frightened pupils crowded into a hollow on the hillside with their teacher. Not a shred of Miss Hoppin's personal possessions were left. Her beloved library lay strewn about the hill in sodden piles of papery pulp. It was then she gathered the girls around her and laughingly said:

"What a good advertisement we could put in the Missionary Herald. It ought to bring results. We could say, 'The girls' school at Kusaie—running water in every room and a circulating library on the hill!'"

In World War I during a period when Germany controlled the Marshalls, Miss Hoppin was stranded on Jaluit. She found a miserably neglected leper colony herded there by the German government. Indignant, she turned the full force of her wrath on the German officials and gained permission to visit, teach and help the lepers. She brought about improved sanitary condition and provided means of diversion. When the Japa-

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER—1949.

Friday, March 4, 1949, has been set aside as the World Day of Prayer, when we are invited to join with all peoples in a fellowship of prayer.

It seems especially significant that China should make her contribution on this year's program. The theme for this year's service—Psalm 121:5, "The Lord Is Thy Keeper"—was given us by Dr. Doris Hsu, acting president of Hwa Nan College of Foochow, China. The Call to Worship was selected by Mrs. C. C. Chen, Dean of Women, Shanghai University, and the Prayer (on page 5 of the program) was written by Mrs. Henry H. Lin, president of the National YWCA in China. Of course, the final arrangement was made by our World Day of Prayer Committee, of which Mrs. Welthy Honsinger Fisher is chairman. It is an inspiring service of worship and one that should be enjoyed by more women than ever before. The program in 1948 was mailed to seventy-four countries around the world.

The leader's packet, as usual, contains all material for a well-planned service, in fact, one copy of the service. In addition there is a Children's Service, as well as "Helpful Hints" for committees. The price of the packet is 35c and it may be secured from United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. Additional programs for adults and young people are 5c each, or $5 for 100. The children's programs, 5c each, or $4 for 100. Delivery of orders received after February 18 cannot be assured. Be sure, if you have not already done so, to order your material immediately. There is also available a new film strip on World Day of Prayer projects. "The March of Missions" includes pictures of work in India, migrant camps in the United States, the Navajo, boys and girls in Turkey, showing the mission work our church women do together. The film strip with accompanying commentary may be purchased for two dollars from the office of the Home Missions Council, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y.

Is it too much to hope that every church in our Southern Convention might have its women either conducting a service on this day, or uniting whenever possible with women of other denominations, offering our petitions to God, for our world in her great need?

It has been suggested that fine ways to undergird the World Day of Prayer are that each woman spend at least fifteen minutes each day in prayer, Bible study and meditation; that we talk to our friends about prayer and what it means to us; that we get people to thinking about prayer, in a new way; that we organize or join a small prayer group which will meet regularly, thus joining with other small groups around the world, meeting for prayer and fellowship.

Your Interdenominational Cooperation Chairman would appreciate any reports of the way in which your society spent its World Day of Prayer.

We kneel how weak;

We rise how full of power.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. House, Editor

A doctor has found a way to help people who have the worst of all sicknesses, that of the mind. "Crazy" we sometimes call them. This doctor puts the sick people to work. He makes them keep so busy that they forget to be sick or to worry about themselves.

Lots and lots of people worry about being "so busy" and "worn out." A lot of the "bawlings out" you get from your mother or teacher being "so tired" and therefore cross with you. Now I'll say a word of defense for mother. I do find it trying when five children are in my house all yelling at once, but that doesn't happen too often, usually they yell one or two at the time.

It seems to me that a good way to learn to keep busy is now. If you have decided what you want to do or be, you can work hard at that while in school, have extra school activities, your church school interests and a hobby.

May I recommend art? One need not be greatly talented. Have you heard of the great, long word, decoupage? Sounds awful, doesn't it? It just means, "the art of cutting." This kind of work was started in Europe. The French people are masters of it and the Portuguese make it the most interesting. You can do it, too. Collect pictures, usually colored, but some like black and white, and cut them out carefully. Decide what you want to use for a background—a tray, box, chest and place your pictures until they make a lovely scene. Then paste them carefully using wallpaper paste or rubber cement. After it has dried well, varnish with a clear, thin lacquer or varnish. It is an art and there is more to it than cutting and pasting. Practice makes beautiful scenes.

Montage is the word used to describe pressing flowers to put in a tray, or a glove, fan or an old valentine. Helen Hayes likes to collect these and so did Queen Victoria.

If you have any talent for drawing or painting it will give you life-long pleasure. Even the copyists have great fun.

Children brought up in Sunday school are seldom brought up in court.

GETTING USED TO HARRY'S TEASING.

By JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY.
(American Mother for 1947.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mrs. Wood rolled out the piecrust hurriedly; in an hour the men would be in from the fields. Just then four-year-old Martha ran in crying, "Buddy says he's going to cut off my doll's curls!"

"He's only joking. Don't bother me; run away, that's a dear!" Mrs. Wood gave Martha a gentle push and turned to her cousin, Ada. "Buddy's such a tease. Martie will just have to learn to pay no attention to him."

Ada, who worked in an insurance office, was spending her vacation here at the farm, helping her cousin. That night, after their work was done, the two women rested on the porch.

"Oh, those katydid!" Ada exclaimed. "I never liked them."

"Why, the rhythm of their music rests me. Katydid—she did—she did. Katydid—she did—she did."

"Perhaps it's because I connect them with the darkness. I dislike the darkness very much."

"I've always known that and wondered why."

"It's because of my brother Harry's teasing. I thought of that today when Martie ran in to you."

"Tell me about it. Your experience may help me to deal more wisely with Buddy's teasing."

"Yes, I'd like to tell you. After I was three years old, it was Mother's custom to send my brother and me upstairs to get into our own beds alone. Harry was just a year and a half older than I. Mother had far too much to do, but it would have been wiser to have left some of the housework undone, in order to have taken the time to see us into our beds. Harry was always teasing me. He was hardly more than a baby himself when he began, and, of course, he didn't realize how cruelly I suffered. One of his favorite habits was to slip upstairs ahead of me and then, as I neared the top of the dark enclosed stairway, to jump out at me with a loud 'boo!' It never ceased to be terrifying."

"Didn't your mother hear you scream?"

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

III. JAMES.

Jesus called James and John "Sons of Thunder" obviously because of their inherited characteristics of ambition, ardor, intensity, vehemence and warm affection.

The brothers were either partners in the same fishing business, as Peter and Andrew, or were their very close friends. One day as they were fishing near the shore Jesus called to them, "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men." They left their boat to their father and the hired servants and followed the Master.

James and John had probably known Jesus for some time as their mother Salome was Mary's sister thus making the brothers first cousins of our Lord. The family, it would seem, was quite well off for they had considerable intimacy with Caiaphas, the High Priest.

"Oh yes, but sometimes she was down in the cellar, and besides, I suppose she became used to my crying. Perhaps she thought I needed to learn to regard Harry's teasing as a joke."

"Well, didn't you get used to it in time?"

"No, it was never a joke to me; it was repeated torment. I suffered terribly. It not only gave me a fear of the dark but also developed the obsession that somebody would jump out at me from the darkness. I remember always being afraid of this. At first it was when I had to go out into the dark yard for my little wagon. But it came to be connected with all darkness. I could scarcely bring myself to open the door of an unlighted room for fear someone would pounce upon me. I had the same feeling about the cellar, the closets, the space under the bed. Even now I suffer from this fear whenever I am on the streets after dark. I never go alone if I can help it. When I do, if I am obliged to pass dark alleys or shadowy clumps of bushes, I instinctively hold my breath and quicken my steps, for I am still apprehensive that someone may jump out at me."

"But Aunt Ella is such an intelligent woman," interposed Mrs. Wood.

"I know, but this just shows how even an intelligent, loving mother can make the mistake of allowing one child to persist in teasing another."

YOUTH WORK—"THE FRONT LINE IN THE BATTLE OF THE CENTURY."

By D. ELTON TRUEBLOOD.*

The American nation is today marked by a great hope, shadowed by a great fear. The hope is that we may be able to keep our promise of what a free and just life in the modern world might be; the fear is that we may become so bogged down by our own complacency, our self-righteousness, and our moral confusion that the promise cannot be kept. The tragedy of an America in which we have magnificent resources and opportunities but in which the whole enterprise is undermined by inner human failure, is a tragedy of almost inconceivable proportions. The problem of our time is the problem of whether we shall be able to develop resources before it is too late. This is a problem for our youth more than for anyone else, because it is they who might best be caught by a great and flaming faith that would change both them and their world. I see no way in which this faith can become a fact except by a recovery of basic Christianity. Anyone, therefore, who gives his nights and days to the spiritual undergirding of American youth is struggling on the battlefield of the century.

YOUTH NEEDS TRIUMPHANT FAITH.

By EDWARD F. CRANE, Editor,
The Free Press Burlington, Vt.

[This statement was written at the request of the United Christian Youth Movement, Chicago, endorsing National Youth Week, January 30-February 6, 1949, in the United States and Canada.]

Probably no generation in the history of the world has faced a greater responsibility than the generation of American youth now in the schools of the nation. They will be the leaders in world affairs during the last half of the twentieth century. For the nations of the world are looking to America for leadership in science, in commerce, in finance and—most important of all—in a way of life which will give hope for the future of mankind.

Unless the youth of America have been imbued, through the home, the church and the school, with a faith which rises above every temporal defeat, which will triumph over every obstacle of this world, they will be unable to cope with the problems which will face them. Nowhere is such a faith available except in the teachings of Jesus Christ, whose power to save men and to inspire them to save others was demonstrated on this earth nearly 2,000 years ago. That power is still working in the world today. It is the hope—the only hope of struggling and bewildered mankind.

CITES DANGER TO NATION'S YOUTH.

By LUTHER W. YOUNGDAHL,
Governor, State of Minnesota.

To our children, we recognize numerous obligations. We readily assume that they are entitled to a home, to food and clothing, and education, the opportunity to live in a free nation. All this is true and necessary. But it is not enough. We must also provide them with the example and guidance that will enable them to grow spiritually. It is in this crucial matter that too many modern parents fail their children. Fifty per cent of the children of America receive no religious training.

The longer I live the more I am convinced that the most precious gift we can give to our children is the knowledge and acceptance of God, a true Christian philosophy of life—as a real source of strength with which to meet the tragedies and disappointments that will surely come. If we give our children all else and neglect to nurture their spiritual resources, then I say we have failed them miserably. And that is exactly what too many American parents are doing today! That is the greatest danger to the youth of our nation. The solution lies in religious influence in the home and a return to church membership and participation.

SUFFOLK YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Christian Youth Fellowship of the Suffolk Christian Church is preparing a directory of the church which will include a complete membership roll with addresses, the organizations of the church and a number of pictures of organizations and interior and exterior views of the building. This active group of young people hold regular meetings every Sunday evening conducted by themselves and on themes they themselves desire to discuss. Their officers are: John G. Truitt, Jr., president; Miss Margaret Taylor, vice-president; Miss Nancy Speight, secretary; Charles Johnson, treasurer; Miss Florence King, pianist; and their adult sponsors are Miss Louise Lilly and Mrs. John G. Truitt.

They have been celebrating Youth Week with special committee meetings on their church directory and their special programs for the regular evening service of the church on Sunday night. They took over at the regular 7:30 service with the Girls' Chorus singing the special music and with other young people simulating an international news broadcast of the activities of Christian youth throughout the world. Members of the Christian Youth Fellowship were invited to the parsonage at 6:30 for a social hour with refreshments, on Sunday night as a part of their Youth Week program.

The young people of the Suffolk Christian Church take an active part in the Young People's Missionary Conference of the Eastern Virginia Conference of Congregational Christian Churches, and also the Youth Fellowship of Eastern Virginia. They are to be found in almost every activity of the local church, and their total gifts in money would be a sizable sum.

A great traveler, Dr. Kincheloe's journeys have included areas where the work of the Board of Home Missions is being carried on.

Dr. Kincheloe is an expert on the analysis of the relationship of churches to their communities and constituents. He has a basic interest in the broader field of sociology of religion in which he seeks to see the relationship of religious institutions to the other aspects of society. He also applies to religious institutions themselves the methods of analysis of social sciences.

Their Master's Voice.

One of the greatest tributes to the Master's manhood is the fact that when He called the first disciples, Peter and Andrew, James and John, fishermen, they left all and followed Him. There was a note of authority in His voice that found a response deep within them. They knew then that He was Master. They saw in Him a man's Man. They knew that He spoke with authority. And they rose up and followed Him. And what they sensed then, the centuries have confirmed. Jesus Christ was no weak, pale, effeminate, sissy, spineless, dreamy-eyed idealist, but a Man, the world's finest type of manhood, the Master of Men.

The Master Called Men.

If there were any real he-men, rough, rugged, hard-boiled men anywhere in Palestine in Jesus' day, they were fishermen. The very nature of their trade called for out-of-door, red-blooded men. They had hair on their chests. There was nothing soft about them. This was true of the other disciples. Matthew or Levi was a tax collector and that was a man's job. Simon, the Zealot was a fiery revolutionist. Judas Iscariot evidently was a shrewd business man—the disciples elected him treasurer of the group—and so on down the line. There are some people who think that it is on the sissy side to be religious, that there is nothing in following Jesus that has any appeal to a young man, or a real man. Let him read the New Testament. Let him read history. And he will find that some of the hardest, hard-bitten souls, and many of the greatest men have been faithful and devoted followers of Jesus, men who delighted to yield to Him the highest allegiance and the most consistent obedience.

The Master Called Men of Varied Temperament.

These men were not poured in a mold and all made alike. Even though there were Twelve in the inner group, there were the "fifty-seven varieties" of disposition and temperament among them. Some of them were aggressive, temperamental, impulsive, bold, impetuous. Like Peter, and like James and John whom Jesus himself nicknamed "the sons of Thunder." Others were quiet and thoughtful, some even inclined to be skeptical, others of a very practical mind. One of them was a revolutionist, Simon the Zealot. Some were idealist, others quite practical. Some were leaders and executives, others were run-of-mine folks. All were Galileans except Judas. The point is that, now as then, Jesus calls and can use all types and temperaments of men and women. There is a place for all in His kingdom.

The Master Called Men to a Way of Life.

He said unto them "Follow me." Nothing about a creed. Nothing about some fine point of doctrine. Nothing about some interpretation of Scripture. Nothing about some ceremony or form of service. They have a place of course, but they are not the most important things. Jesus simply asked these men to follow Him, to come after Him, to go with Him. He called them to a way of life. It was so in the beginning, is now, and evermore shall be, world without end. Christianity is primarily and essentially a way of life. Being a Christian means being Christ's man, living Christ's way of life.

The Master Called Men to a Better Way of Life.

"Come ye after me and I will make you to become fishers of men." They were already fishers, at least four of them were. But He said He would make them to become "fishers of men." Here as everywhere and always the Master gave new dignity and meaning and glory to the commonplace ways of life. Fishers . . . fishers of men. How we need to see our tasks in the light of their larger meanings and possibilities. And Christ can do just that. Life with Him has new meaning and direction and dignity and beauty and power.

The Master Called Men to a Way of Becoming.

"I will make you to become. . . ." Character like heaven is not reached by a single bound. They had not arrived suddenly and they would not arrive for a long time. But they were to become, to become, to become. "Thou art Simon . . . thou shalt be Peter." Those who think that getting into the church or the kingdom is the thing, the only thing that counts, need to catch again the meaning of Jesus' words about becoming. It is supremely important that men be born into the kingdom of God. But it is just as important that they grow in grace. Souls do not grow without attention any more than bodies grow without food and attention. Man cannot live by bread alone. Perhaps a man can be just as good without going to church as the man who goes to church. He can, but the chances are that he won't. These men were to keep their faces to the light and their hearts open to the truth, so that they might become, that increasingly they should move closer to the stature of the fulness of Christ.

The Master Called Men to a Fellowship.

First of all to a fellowship of spirit. Matthew says that He chose the Twelve that they might be with Him. He wanted them to be with Him, both for their sakes and for His sake. He wanted them to catch His spirit as well as to understand His plans. He wanted to put the imprint of His gracious spirit upon their lives so that they might reproduce His character and express His spirit. He wanted to train them and thus to multiply His own impacts upon the world. But He also wanted them to be with Him for His own sake. He was the Son of God but He was also the Son of Man. He liked folks. He wanted to be with folks. And He wanted folks to be with Him. He needed them even as they needed Him. There was value in this fellowship of spirit. There is value in it now. Too many of us are so busy doing things for the Master, that like Martha we spend all too little time in being with the Master. The world is too much with us.

He also wanted them to be with Him so that "He might send them forth to preach and to heal." Religion is not to be locked up in the safe. Christians are not to save the world by withdrawing from the world. Worship is to issue in service. I like the motto engraved on the plate at the door of our sanctuary, "Enter to Worship, Depart to Serve."

Jesus did not tell these men that if they followed Him He would take them to heaven, or that they would go to heaven. That is involved in discipleship of course. But He called men to service in this world. He called them to the fellowship in the task of the Kingdom. They were to be with Him, to catch His spirit, to share His secrets, and then they were to go out to help and to heal the people of the world. And again, it was thus in the beginning, is now, and evermore shall be world without end.

*Jesus calls us; by thy mercies,
Saviour may we hear thy call,
Give our hearts to thine obedience,
Serve and love thee best of all.*

RECOMMENDATIONS VOTED BY CLEVELAND COUNCIL.

gational Christian Churches; and then finally approved the "Basis of Union";

WHEREAS, the General Council, in June, 1948, further directed that the "Basis of Union," with the Interpretations, be again submitted to the churches: in consequence of which the percentage of all the churches voting, which have registered approval of the "Basis of Union," as of the date of January 1, 1949, was 72.2 per cent; since when such favorable percentage has been increased to 72.77 per cent;

WHEREAS, the General Council in accordance with a plan of procedure voted by it in June, 1948, is now summoned into Special Session in Cleveland on February 4, 1949, "to determine in accordance with the vote of the General Council on June 22, 1948, whether the percentage of the churches voting approval of the 'Basis of Union' with the Evangelical and Reformed Church, and of the Interpretations of the 'Basis of Union' adopted by the General Council on June 22, 1948, is sufficient to warrant the consummation of the union; if the percentage be found sufficient, to take the steps necessary to consummate the union; and to consider and act upon such other business as may properly be brought before it";

Now, THEREFORE, the Commission on Interchurch Relations and Christian Unity, meeting at Cleveland, Ohio, this third day of February, 1949, and reviewing all pertinent data available to it, hereby recommends to the General Council:

1. That the General Council makes a finding and determination that the percentage of Congregational Christian Churches approving the Basis of Union with its Interpretations warrants the consummation of the Union in accordance with the Basis of Union and the Interpretations.

2. That such consummation be contingent, however, upon the approval, by the General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church and by its constituent Synods, of the Interpretations to the "Basis of Union" hereinabove referred to, in order that both parties may be united in their understanding and acceptance of the same instruments.

3. That the General Council instruct its Executive Committee to assign to the several Conferences quotas which together shall provide approximately three hundred of its members as delegates and authorize such delegates, subject to the foregoing conditions, to represent the General Council at a joint meeting, called in accordance with the provisions of Article X-A of the "Basis of Union," which meeting shall constitute the first meeting of the General Synod of the United Church; empowering the said delegates to take such actions as shall be in conformity with the principles and provisions of the "Basis of Union," the said Interpretations, and the votes of the General Council pertaining to this union.

4. That the General Council, at a subsequent meeting to be called at the discretion of the Executive Committee of the General Council, make such disposition of its capital funds and property rights of all types and designations, as shall be in accordance with the instruments under which such funds and property rights may now be held by the General Council, and as shall be further consistent with the provisions of the "Basis of Union" and the Interpretations.

5. That the Moderator of the General Council appoint a Commission of lawyers to study and, if necessary, draft such instruments as will facilitate its continued operation subsequent to the Union.

6. That the Executive Committee be authorized to take such other and further action, from time to time, as shall be necessary and advisable to execute the foregoing recommendations, if adopted by the General Council, and as shall be directed toward the consummation of the Union.

nese took over she was interned for the duration.

When World War II came, Miss Hoppin had retired to the U.S.A. where she was a great help as a resource person to the U. S. Army and Navy authorities because of her wide knowledge of the Marshall and Caroline Islands and their people.

And so has passed an American woman who over a period of 43 years in the South Seas witnessed there the coming of the German Armada and later the assembling of the Japanese Fleet; who cast her first vote for a President of the United States when she was home on a rare furlough in 1932, and who died, as she lived, working for her "children," the lovable, grateful people of the Marshall and Caroline Islands.

CHURCH WOMEN AT WORK.

I wish we could have shared our guest speakers with you. At our March meeting we had Mrs. Lucy Stewart, Superintendent of Public Welfare of our county, who gave us an inspiring message. In April, Mrs. W. T. Harrell, our District Superintendent, gave us an instructive and most enjoyable address at our church.

Mr. Kimball, our pastor, used the slide, "Philippine Horizon," at our June meeting. Seeing these pictures, we realized the condition under which our missionaries live and work.

At our August meeting we had at church with Harry Wellon, a missionary friend, who spent several years in Jamaica. He told of the Island, its people, and the work he had done with them.

In September, Mrs. Robert Kimball reviewed our mission book, Committed Unto Us, which was very instructive and enjoyed by all.

What could be more fitting to end our year's work than a party in honor of Lewis Byers Jackson. We were invited into the dining room, where a birthday party had been prepared by the committee. The table on which were lighted candles, plates of ice cream, cakes and mints had a centerpiece with a lovely cake in pink and white with a "Happy Birthday Baby Jackson" and a bank in which we dropped our offering for Lewis' Life Membership. The cake, a gift to the society by our president, was presented to our pastor and his wife at the close of the party.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

The Christian Orphanage year runs with the calendar year; that is, from January 1 to December 31. So if I mention this year any time in my letter I mean the year, 1949, inclusive.

Since the Orphanage has been in existence it has largely depended on monthly Sunday school offerings to pay its bills at the end of each month. Up to last year, the churches and Sunday schools have sent in their offerings monthly, which has been a wonderful help in paying our bills. While it may be a little more trouble to the Sunday school secretary-treasurer, to do this way, it will help your orphanage superintendent so much. We have had the reputation for the last thirty years of paying the orphanage bills at the first of each month. We want to keep up that record.

Last year, 1948, quite a number of our churches did not send us an offering until the end of the year. It made it very hard to meet our bills through the year. We run on a monthly basis, and everyone here expects their salary on the first of each month. The farm help want their pay weekly. In order to help us hold our good reputation as to paying our bills, we hope you will send in your offerings monthly, or at least quarterly.

The children's health has been remarkably good up to this time so far this winter. The time has been when they had to walk through the rain to school and get their clothes wet. At that time the public school had a poor heating system, and the children sat in their damp clothes and developed colds, and sometimes pneumonia. But we are happy to say we now have a modern heating system in our public school, and the orphanage has a large truck with a heavy waterproof cover, and when it is raining we back the truck up to the steps and load them in and haul them to school. Then we go back after them in the afternoon when it is raining. Since making this arrangement we have had but very few colds and not a case of pneumonia in a number of years. I have heard it said that "an ounce of care is worth a pound of cure." We have learned that in our long experience in this work.

James was perhaps the older and is usually named first whenever they are mentioned. His name is originally the same as Jacob meaning "supplanter." We hear little or nothing of him until about fourteen years after the Crucifixion when he was put to death, the first of the twelve to die.

Herod Agrippa was the grandson of Herod the Great. Herodias, who was the cause of the beheading of John the Baptist, was his sister. He reigned with great splendour over a kingdom larger than his grandfather, and was quite popular. He tried to increase that popularity still further by putting down the rising Christian heresy. And in 44 A. D. shortly after the Passover he had James, the bold and uncompromising, put to death, and Peter thrown in prison.

The legend of Saint Iago (James) indicates that he carried the gospel story to Spain. He returned again to visit Jerusalem where he met his death. Afterward his body was placed on board a ship and taken to Spain where it is supposed to rest in Compostella.

Benedict Arnold once asked a loyal captain what the Americans would do with him if they caught him. He replied, "I believe they would first cut off your lame leg, which was wounded in the cause of freedom and virtue at Quebec, and bury it with the honours of war, and afterwards hang the remainder of your body on a gibbet."—E. In Memoriam

JONES.

In loving memory of Mrs. Daisy Ballard Jones, we, the members of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church, desire to honor her memory and express our appreciation for all of her faithful and consecrated services.

Although a shut-in for a number of years which prevented her from attending services, we felt she was always present in prayer, and while on September 5, 1948, heaven became richer for her going, we mourn her loss. May we ever strive to imitate her good example by being more faithful in our duties to God's cause.

We bow in humble submission to God's will and extend to her loved ones our deepest sympathy and recommend that a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy to her family, and a copy recorded in the minutes of our church.

Mrs. E. R. BRYANT, JR.,
Mrs. B. V. HARGRAVE,
Mrs. E. P. JONES,

Committee.

MATTHEWS.

On October 20, 1948, our heavenly Father in his infinite wisdom called home Mrs. George M. Matthews who was a faithful member of the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church.

We, the members of the society, offer the following resolutions:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful member whose smile was always an inspiration to us.
2. That we bow in humble submission to the divine will of our heavenly Father.
3. That we extend our sympathy to the bereaved family.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be entered on the records of our society, and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,

Committee.

BLYTHE.

We, the members of Union (Southampton) Christian Church were saddened May 22, 1948, by the passing of our beloved friend and member, Mrs. Nettie Joyner Blythe. She will be greatly missed by her many friends and neighbors and most of all in her home where she faithfully served as a devoted wife and mother.

To pay tribute and desiring to express love and respect from our church, it is therefore resolved:

1. That we shall miss her in the sweet fellowship of our work together. We shall always cherish the memory of her friendship.
2. That we are grateful for such a true friend and member, one who possessed a strong Christian character and lovable personality.
3. That we extend to her bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the Comforter whose grace is sufficient for every need.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her family, one to The Christian Sun and one kept for the records of Union Christian Church.

NELLIE SCOTT,
Mrs. S. M. JOYNER,

Committee.

WARRINGTON.

We, the members of First Congregational Christian Church, Norfolk, wish to pay tribute to the memory of our beloved deacon, William V. Warrington, with the following resolutions:

1. That the church has lost an able officer and diligent worker.
2. That the Barrett Bible Class has lost a capable teacher and friend.
3. That we extend to his bereaved family our profound sympathy and pray God's watchful care may sustain them.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy be sent to The Christian Sun, and a copy spread on our church record.

W. J. THOMAS, Chairman,
Board of Deacons.

BLYTHE.

On December 29, 1947, our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, saw fit to call from our midst Miss Margaret Etta Blythe, who was a devoted member of Union (Southampton) Christian Church. She was devoted to her family and to her home and was characterized by a kind and friendly personality. Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to our Father's will.
2. That to the family and loved ones we extend deepest sympathy and earnest prayers that God's promises may give them comfort and consolation in their sorrow.
3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family and to The Christian Sun for publication, and another copy be placed on the records of Union Christian Church.

NELLIE SCOTT,
Mrs. S. M. JOYNER,

Committee.

BAILEY.

We, the members of the Ladies' Aid Society of the Windsor Christian Church, wish to pay loving tribute to the memory of our dear member and co-worker, Leafy Wills Bailey, who died on December 14, 1948.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God who doeth all things well.
2. That while we miss her in the fellowship of our church, we will always cherish the memory of her fellowship and faithful service.
3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to the members of her family, and pray God's blessings upon them.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun, and a copy be entered upon the records of our Ladies' Aid Society.

Mrs. SHIRLEY T. HOLLAND,
Mrs. J. C. ROBERTS,

Committee.

WILKERSON.

Mrs. Roxie Ella Wilkerson, widow of the late Dave Y. Wilkerson, died at the South Boston (Va.) Hospital on December 30, 1948. Funeral services were conducted at Union Congregational Christian Church, Virgilina, Va., by the pastor. Burial was in the town cemetery. She had been a member of the Christian Church over 35 years.

She is survived by three sons, Walter W. Satterfield of South Boston, Va.; Ed. O. and C. F. Satterfield of Virgilina; by 33 grandchildren and a number of great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Wilkerson was blind for a number of years and in ill health for a long period of time. Death released her from these maladies.

May the Father God bless those who mourn.

THE TEACHER'S RESPONSIBILITY.

No one but the school teacher is in so favorable a position to give the truthful story about alcohol. The job belongs to the men and women of the school classrooms, and when they have done what the laws of many States have specifically required of them, the most ingenious and specious of commercial advertising will make but little impression on youth.

The teaching about alcohol should give the facts upon which children can form their own opinions by "thinking through" the relation of their choices of food and drink to their health and way of life.

It has been shown by a series of experimental observations that young children, if having access to various wholesome foods known to contain suitable ingredients for their healthy growth, and if left to their own preferences, select and ingest the elements of a healthy diet.

When faced, however, with other people's choices with the influence of tradition, social custom, the effects of advertising, economic pressure, storage of foods out of season, and lacking free access to a wide range of natural food products, the child of today—like its parents—finds the choice of what it can, or must use as food or beverage, an increasingly difficult problem.

Those of us who are the trustees and interpreters of the assembled facts of our predecessors and of the sciences of today should make sure that no honest fact concerning any hazard and handicap to life, such as alcohol, is withheld or forgotten in the teaching of the school children.

The effect sought and found from the use of alcoholic beverages of any strength is due to ethyl alcohol. Ethyl alcohol is a narcotic drug which removes inhibitions by depressing the functions of the brain. Its use has not been found to improve any of the bodily functions of a healthy person. —Dr. Haven Emerson.

Message for Race Relations Sunday February 13, 1949

Approved by the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America

"Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly love; in honor preferring one another."—Romans 12:10.

Divine Love makes Christian brotherhood different from every other kind of human association. This love requires for every person justice and full opportunity because of his dignity and worth as God's creature and the object of His redemptive love. To profess to love God and to give offense to our brother because of racial difference is to sin. The love of God and the love of our fellowman go together.

Christians, therefore, face the task of making love a reality in their own lives by the practice of brotherhood. There are persons, known and unknown, who in spite of difficulties live lives of real Christian brotherhood with those of other races. Some individuals, however, fear the loss of personal status and community influence which they assume the practice of Christian brotherhood in race relations would bring. In practice they allow such fear to outweigh the belief that the brotherhood of love under the fatherhood of God is the highest goal of life. They do not apply Jesus' words: "... seek ye first the Kingdom of God ..."

The practice of Christian love calls for continuous examination of human motive, for courageous and intelligent facing of worldly pressures from without and emotional pressures from within, for complete and daily dedication to Christ.

The Christian Church can point to experiences within its own life which are examples of brotherhood. An impressive illustration of this was found in the Christian fellowship achieved by representatives of many races in the first Assembly of the World Council of Churches at Amsterdam, Holland, in the summer of 1948. There is also a challenge in its statement:

"... the Church has failed most lamentably, where it has reflected and, by its practices, then sanctified the racial prejudice that is rampant in the world. And yet it is here today that its guidance concerning what God wills for it is especially clear. It knows that it must call society away from prejudices based upon race and color and from the practices of discrimination and segregation as denials of justice and human dignity, but it cannot say a convincing word to society unless it takes steps to eliminate these from the Christian community because they contradict all that it believes about God's love for all His children."

The churches must recognize in our own nation the unrighteousness of segregation and such racial injustices as denial of the right to vote; the actual inequality of the so-called "separate but equal" opportunities in education, health, public services; racial discrimination in employment; racial restrictions in housing, and sometimes the use of law and mob violence to enforce these practices. To their hopes and prayers for peace the churches must add evidence of Christian power to uproot seeds of racial conflict in the community.

The warning is clear and grows swiftly clearer that judgment awaits us if we fail to practice love. In the words of John's Epistle: "He who hateth his brother . . . walketh in darkness and knoweth not whither he goeth." The failure to heed the warning has resulted in the sharp racial division of our own nation. It is essentially the cause for the fear and hatred that hover over all the nations of the earth.

How can we Christians expect the nations to settle their problems on grounds of justice if we continue to withhold justice from brothers of another color? What can we say to the non-Christian peoples of the world? How can our nation take effective leadership in developing an international bill of rights if we do not live up to our own Bill of Rights?

We must face this responsibility not only on Race Relations Sunday but every day. We must break away from every unchristian racial relationship now. Individually and in the fellowship of the Church, Christians must take the lead in correcting racial injustices and in strengthening the spirit of brotherhood. In the brotherhood that Christ has revealed as the will of God, there is healing for the nations and a solid foundation for lasting peace.

NUMBER 7.

WIN THEM BACK

By REV. ROBERT A. WHITTEN, Chairman Committee on Evangelism and Spiritual Life of The Southern Convention

What about those members of your church who seldom, if ever, come to church any more? Once they believed enough in the church to unite with its fellowship. Perhaps if you could persuade them to return they would become not only regular attendants but loyal workers in Kingdom service. Have you let them know your concern for them, your sorrow for their absence, your joy in the prospect of having them back in fellowship? Don't give them up. Think how God has kept on forgiving you, giving you another chance to love and serve Him. You and your church need these members who are temporarily out of circulation. What an example they are before the world, bearing witness of the failure of the church to make them Christian! What an influence and help they might become, enlisted with you for Christ! Two Christians, fully consecrated to God, could win them (most of them at least) back to the church, back into service for others, back into the peace they once knew, back into the joy of communion with God.

Preparation for the Task.—Before we go to win them we need that preparation of mind and heart that can come only by feeding daily upon God's word and heart searching prayer. Reading the Bible daily will be the means of deepening one's spiritual life. From its pages God will speak and feed the soul with hidden manna. The little booklet, "Daily Devotions," is inexpensive and will prove helpful to any one who ponders its pages. As the physical body requires food so must the spiritual be sustained by daily meditation and prayer. Keep the altar burning until the Holy Spirit sets your heart aflame and sends you out to seek some soul for Christ's sake.

Your God-Given Souls.—Among your friends are those who have not met Christ. It is your privilege to introduce them to your Saviour. Tell them what He has meant to you. Ask them to believe Him, to trust Him, to accept Him, to yield to Him. Tell them God is waiting for them only to claim His promise of salvation. You dare not fail to seek them. You will rejoice when you have won them.

News Flashes

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention is meeting on Thursday of this week at Henderson. Dr. F. C. Lester is president.

Dr. Stanley U. North will preach at Bayview, Norfolk on Sunday evening and will speak at the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association in Suffolk on Monday.

Mrs. M. T. Garren of First Church, Greensboro, was the speaker at the meeting of the Winston-Salem Council of Church Women on Wednesday, February 9.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN salutes those churches that have erected new parsonages recently. The list, although not complete, would include: Burlington, Shallow Ford, Winchester, and the Convention Home at Elon.

Hank's Chapel Church, near Pittsboro, Rev. Mack V. Welch, pastor, is experiencing a gain in membership in Sunday school attendance and the church attendance is increasing notably.

LAYMEN'S LEAGUE.

"The Men of the Church Club" of Haw River Congregational Christian Church, held their regular monthly dinner meeting January 22, 1949, in the basement of the church. Mr. Frank Bain's Sunday School Class served the men a most delicious dinner.

The speaker of the evening was Mrs. John Archie Long, Sr., a former Sunday school teacher of the Men's Class. Mrs. Long led a most interesting discussion on Biblical characters, including Christ, Moses and David. She also conducted a Biblical quiz.

The Club elected the following officers for the year: Lester James, president; E. D. Abernathy, vice-president, and Thomas Terrell, secretary and treasurer.

The church is proud of the work "The Men of the Church Club" has done and is doing now. They sowed grass seed on the parsonage lawn, assisted in weather-stripping and screening the parsonage. They have donated both work and money toward the building of the parsonage garage which is now under construction.

MRS. J. C. WILKINS,
Publicity Chairman.

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

[Extracts from address by Miss Helen Kenyon, Moderator of the General Council, at the Church Extension and Evangelism Division Luncheon, Monday noon, February 7, in the Hotel Cleveland.]

Fifty-six per cent of the population of our United States have changed their homes since 1940. In Silver Spring, a suburb of Washington, D. C., the population in the last four years has increased from 46,000 to 80,000. Here a Silver Spring church is being built for a community of 10,000 souls. We are on the job in Silver Spring. You must see the new film about this church: "We would Be Building."

All over the country you find churches like that in these new communities. I've seen new churches overcrowded before they're finished. In California I saw a fine little church. The young minister said, "What are we going to do about the church school when it rains? Half of those children are now meeting on this open lot!" Six months later when I returned I asked: "What are they doing? What did they do in the rain?" The answer, with a grin, was: "It hasn't rained yet!" You remember the drought! But now it has rained, and what are they doing? The law there does not permit church school classes in private homes. So they've had to tell them to go ahead and build an addition to that church, though our Board of Home Missions' treasury is empty to help churches like that and so is the treasury of the Southern California Conference.

I've been in Northern California at the Orinda Church, just outside the San Francisco Bay area. I thought I saw a carpenter as we approached. A man with a carpenter's cap and a carpenter's apron; and lo and behold, it was the minister! "What are you doing?" we said. "I am working on flooring for two tents we've been able to get so that when it rains our church school will have a place to meet."

A survey of an area near Seattle showed that 88 per cent of the people in that peninsula were not connected with any religious institution, whither Catholic, Protestant or Jewish. . . . You can see why we say we have to put money in to start a church. We have to get the people to want a church. In the early times, a group of people started a church. But now they don't know that they need a church until we start one.

But let me end up with Paradise Hills, out side of San Diego, because HISTORIC ORGAN COMPANY COMES TO SUFFOLK, VA.

The first Standaart Organ was built in 1628 by Adrianus Standaert van den Haspel in Cathedral of Dordrecht, Holland. The Standaart firm was incorporated in 1904 in Holland. In 1926 a second factory was opened in Antwerp, Belgium, a third one in 1928 in Paris, France, and a fourth one in 1929 in Thornton Heath, near London, England. The Standaart Organ Company in Holland usually employs about 120 people.

In 1947 Dr. Adrian Standaart came to this country and started a factory at Fork Union, Virginia. Due to the very rapid increase of business the plant in Fork Union became too small and after long negotiations and not for a small part due to energetic cooperation of Mr. Richard Hinman, secretary of the Suffolk Chamber of Commerce, and of Mr. Leon A. Familant, chairman of the Industrial Committee of this Chamber, the Standaart Organ Company obtained a suitable building and lots on East Pinner Street.

The "Standaart" Organ is not mass produced, but every instrument is custom-built to suit the particular acoustical and other requirements of the building where it is to be installed.

The type of labor used to build a "Standaart" Organ is highly skilled. Cabinet makers, carpenters, electricians, sheet metal workers, organ mechanics, pipe makers, tuners, voicers and office staff are employed.

Lumber and materials used are of the highest quality. In contradiction with the customary working methods, the windchests of the "Standaart" Organ are constructed completely out of the highest grade mahogany, whereas the generous use of silver for electric contacts, the very specialized types of electrical relays and action enable the Standaart Organ Company to guarantee its instruments unconditionally for a period of twenty (20) years.

The President of the Standaart Organ Company has worked out a scheme to employ on a large scale disabled War Veterans; in doing this the management trusts to do its share in solving the employment problems for these people.

The Company solicits applications for skilled labor in the above-mentioned trades in care of Suffolk Chamber of Commerce, or Post Office Box 696, Suffolk, Virginia.

Southern Convention Office

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

ATTEND MIDWINTER MEETINGS.

The following persons from the Southern Convention were in attendance at the General Council of the Congregational Christian Churches in Cleveland, Ohio, February 4-5: Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Rev. Roy D. Coulter, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Rev. W. Walter Hall, Dr. Stanley C. Harrell, Rev. Robert Lee House, Rev. Clyde O. Koon, Rev. J. Everette Neese, Mrs. O. H. Paris, Mr. Clayton A. Pugh, Mr. Cyrus Shoffner, Rev. W. W. Stevens, Dr. William E. Wisseman, Rev. Robert A. Whitten and Superintendent Wm. T. Scott.

Mrs. O. H. Paris, president of the Woman's Convention of the Southern Convention attended the meeting of the State Presidents of the Congregational Christian Women. Stanley C. Harrell is a member of the Executive Committee of the General Council. Mrs. Wm. E. Wisseman is a member of the Board of Directors of the Board of Home Missions, and Superintendent Scott attended the Superintendent's Conference in connection with the Midwinter Meetings held in Cleveland following the Special Session of the General Council.

LEADERSHIP CONFERENCE.

The Leadership Training Conference for the Norfolk-Portsmouth area was held at Rosemont Church February 13-16. The attendance was good and the interest in church work was greatly improved as a result of this conference. The conference for the Suffolk area for Sunday school teachers and officers will be held at the Suffolk Christian Church February 20-23. Faculty members serving on the faculty of these schools are: Dr. F. E. Reynolds and Dr. W. W. Sloan of the Elon College Department of Religion; Rev. B. V. Munger, Chapel Hill; Miss Leila Anderson of the Division of Christian Education of the Board of Home Missions.

BIBLE INSTITUTES TO BE HELD.

A series of Vacation Bible Institutes will be held February 24-March 3 for leaders in the Vacation Bible Schools for the coming summer:

February 24—Norfolk area, Second Church, Rev. J. E. Neese, minister.

A Seminar for Ministers, Religious Education Directors, Social Workers, Y.M.C.A. and Y.W.C.A. Secretaries on Pastoral Counselling and Ministering to the Sick, under the auspices of the North Carolina Council of Churches, with Dr. Russell L. Dicks of Duke University as the Resource Leader, will be held on Monday, March 7, in the United Church of Raleigh, corner of Hillsboro and Dawson. (Continued on page 14.)

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

Rationalize Our Divisions or Realize the Kingdom

Numbers of people have expressed surprise and made inquiries concerning opposition to the Merger which manifested itself at Cleveland. It should be stated at the outset that members of the opposition have rendered a service by drawing attention to important points which otherwise might have been overlooked. They have insisted on a realistic appraisal of the Basis of Union. The Interpretations were drawn up and approved to cover certain ambiguities and safeguard essential rights. Admittedly there are difficulties incident to this union. In all probability some have been over-emphasized while others have been overlooked. However much we may be perplexed at certain points, we are not cast down. To admit that we are unequal to the exigencies of Christian union, however complicated or difficult, would be a sad commentary on twentieth century churchmanship.

Much of the opposition could be summarized under the heading, "Ode to Freedom." The autonomy of the local church is defended at great length, as if it were the summum bonum of the Christian life. There is fear that this autonomy is jeopardized by the Basis of Union. Strange, is it not, that Christ had so little to say about freedom. On the contrary, we find him saying: "He that saveth his life shall lose it and he that loseth his life for my sake shall find it"—"Except a corn of wheat fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone." Undue emphasis on freedom may become an exceedingly selfish thing. Beneath the Cross the testimony of freedom concerning cooperation is ever this: "He must increase and I must decrease." Discipleship, rather than freedom, is the pearl of great price.

One speaker made the charge that many ministers present who favored union had members in their church who were not in favor of union. Granting the truth of this accusation, what does it prove? The same ministers in all probability have members who are not enthusiastic about temperance, missions, stewardship and race relations. But that fact does not invalidate the rightness of these causes. Since when has the ministry been supposed to take its cue from the attitude of the laity? It has a higher Cue.

Of course, the crux of the matter is this: some few claim that this Merger is not the will of God. They claim that the prayer recorded by St. John, "That they all may be one," has no reference or relationship to this union. Now it is one thing to admit that Jesus might not and probably was not thinking of our present denominational divisions, but it is quite a different thing to maintain that the prayer of Jesus has no relevance or application to our divided Protestantism. This is an arbitrary interpretation of the deepest supplication of our Lord. It limits the atoning work of our Savior. It places a premium on the Status Quo, and gives divine sanction to those who shirk in the face of a difficult task. Union, Christian union, must be more than unctious and irresponsible fellowship. It must bear the yoke of Christ.

"Repent," said the Master, "the Kingdom of God is at hand." It is at hand, thank God, now. Let us repent, cease rationalizing our divisions, and enter the Kingdom!

Blue Book Digest

The textbook for the Midwinter Meetings was a mimeographed copy bound in blue, bearing the title: "Dockets, Reports and Other Data in Preparation for the Congregational Christian Midwinter Meetings of The Missions Council, the Directors of the Board of Home Missions, the Prudential Committee of the American Boards, and the Council for Social Action." A perusal of this Blue Book gives a glimpse of our denominational work on many fronts, demonstrates the calibre of our denominational leadership, and reveals something of the magnitude of our total enterprise.

Since this document was prepared as a workbook and not for general circulation, perhaps it is advisable to lift a few significant items from its pages for your information. For instance, some of the major donations of the Congregational Christian Service Committee have been: 1,200 gallons of cane treacle from the Alabama Council of Church Women for Great Britain; 3,000 cases of grape juice to France; case of vitamins to Naples, Italy; boxes of candy, toys and school supplies for distribution in Germany. Plans are now being made for a service and rehabilitation work camp project in Puerto Rico this summer. Rev. Anthony Caliandro is carrying on a family rehabilitation program in Naples. Rev. Harold Schomer is the missionary representative in France. Professor Harold C. Harlow, Jr., represents the Committee in and around Athens, Greece; while Miss Ruth Nichols administers the program of the Committee in the area of Salonica in northern Greece. Four representatives are engaged in a strategic program of youth work in Germany.

One example of the many services of the Board of Home Missions is the following given by Philip M. Widenhouse: "For some time the denomination has been concerned with the problem of churches 'marginal' in character but with signs of promise. A strong committee consisting of two superintendents, Alden and Collins; two seminary men, Obenhaus and Woodward; and two board representatives, Tripp and Widenhouse, are at work on this problem of helping the churches develop their full potential strength." Mr. William K. Newman reports that the Christian World Mission Program provides $318,000 toward the construction of new churches and $126,886 for older churches during the year.

The American Board outlines what you and I, our four hundred missionaries and their 8,000 national co-workers can do to help save the world. Truly this is a great program—to home and abroad—to which we are unitedly committed!

What About China Today? A Statement from the American Board

The American Board is not closing down its work, nor is it being closed out. Much—the Foochow and Shaowu Missions—continues only indirectly affected by the upheavals in the North. Important service is being rendered by all our missionaries, whether still located where they were or transferred to quieter areas. Of the 41 missionaries in the North China Mission three months ago, 29 decided to stand by. Only six left China. Two were on the edge of retirement, and three are now at work in the Philippines. The Foochow Mission has been strengthened by the transfer of two families from North China and the arrival of a new family from the United States.

Is This Determination to Stand By Justified?

Most certainly, on at least four counts:

1. Chinese leaders requested it.—Mr. S. C. Leung said: "Purely as a Chinese I would speak emotionally. This is a civil war in China. All the trouble has been created by ourselves. We have no right to expect our foreign friends to stay on and suffer with us. As a Christian, however, I must speak rationally. Whether from the standpoint of idealism or from the standpoint of realism it is better to have our foreign colleagues to remain with us wherever this is possible. Ideally speaking the church is international in character and world-wide in scope. Its object is to serve the people. So long as there are people to serve it is our duty to stay."

2. Our own closest Chinese comrades in the North re-enforced the request.—What David Stowe wrote from Tientsin when he and Virginia made their decision to stay—barely three weeks before the birth of their second child—is eloquent: "Why should we shatter the solidarity and morale which which has been achieved through generations of missionary endeavor since our arrival in Tientsin?"

3. Our missionaries who have stayed on felt they could do no otherwise.—There has been not a word of criticism of those who for sound reasons accepted the offer of the Board that they withdraw. But Stowe spoke for all who decided to stay when he said, "We have been preaching faith, courage, the utter dependability of God, to people in America and in China now for years. Was it not time to try translating those great ideas from words into action! If the church is to meet and overcome the world-wide challenge of Communism, somewhere it has to stop running and start digging in. This looks like a place to dig." Our faith and witness as well as theirs, is strengthened by words like that.

4. Our experience in North China to date buttresses this position. Fengyang (formerly called Fenchow) and Taiku were captured by the Communists in July. They found four American women there: Mary Dewar, Louise Meebold, Emma Noreen, and Gladys Williams. Word has seeped out under the curtain several times. It has been uniformly good.

What of the Future?

The prospects are not too bright. We know that the present liberality of treatment by the Communists is more likely to be tactical and temporary than evidence of change in fundamental policy. Yet their position in the country is shifting from that of rebels against the established order to that of rulers responsible for establishing a new order. They must, it would seem, begin to abandon practices which have been largely destructive, and begin to promote constructive efforts of many kinds. They are undertaking an enormous task, even if their control stops at the Yangtze—which seems unlikely. They must now fulfill at least a few of the promises they have made. They will need all the help they can get, and if wise they will antagonize as few as possible of those who might help the people. Our schools, hospitals and rural reconstruction programs are too highly prized by the people to be wantonly destroyed.

Yet it requires faith almost to the point of credulity to believe that anything less than hard times are ahead for the Church in China. Such times began in North China for Lintsing and Tehsien in Shantung three years ago, and for Taiku and Fenyang last July; they are beginning right now for Tientsin, Paoting, Peiping and Tungchow. We have no assurance that trouble does not await the Foochow and Shaowu Missions. The essential loyalty of Chinese Communist leaders to Moscow is a matter of record, oft reaffirmed over the years and recently reiterated in print, and over the radio.

Life will be hard for our work and our workers, for our missionary friends and our Chinese colleagues. Living conditions will be austere beyond anything our people have known. There will be long periods when communications with us will be slow, difficult, and perhaps impossible. There may be interdicts against foreign subsidies even for the strictly humanitarian parts of our program. There may be gradual but steady tightening of the screws—anti-religious and anti-foreign agitation, and repudiation of some of what we regard as the essential freedoms of life.

The Past Three Years Have Been Invaluable.

During this breathing space, between two struggles for survival, Chinese Christians have renewed their strength for whatever may lie ahead. They have received convincing evidence that Christians in this country—in a profound sense the spiritual parents of their churches, and under God the source of much of their religious nurture—have cared for them, do care for them, and will continue to care for them.

Who can estimate what it has meant that:

Much property has been repaired and restored to active and continual use.

Relief of many kinds has been made available to meet desperate human needs.

Refresher courses have been possible for some of the more experienced pastors and teachers.

A select few have even had the chance for a year of study and refreshment in America.

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It was only $3.81. But when you consider the circumstances it seems like a goodly sum. The young mother who handed it over to me told me that she wanted me to take it for the Lord. "It is the Lord's money," she said. She was sick, poor, had two small children, and her husband made only a small wage. I brought it to the church, put it in an envelope and sealed it up, and labelled it "The Lord's money."

Seeing the surroundings I didn't want to take it. But I had no choice in the matter, when she told me that it was a tithe from her egg money. "The hens have laid right well," she said, "and there has been enough to eat and some to sell, and I have strictly kept the tenth for the Lord."

She is in the hospital tonight. I hope she lives because the little two-year-old son of hers, and that little four-year-old girl, will have a good mother if she lives. Her little tiny home was clean and although there had been adversity she believed in God, and the Church. She had faith in prayer, or rather, I should be using the present tense, because she is still living. She is kind to her husband. He told me so himself, although sometimes he fails her. She will make a good man out of him if she lives, and there will be better days ahead.

It was a real blessing to me to hear her talk. And it meant something to see the gratitude in her face as she thanked me for the prayer which I offered in her behalf. Funny how one often feels one should be praying for oneself in a place like that. Perhaps it was the prayer that I prayed for myself which the Lord heard. I said if the Lord spares me to go into my pulpit again I shall speak out for Him.

And what is more I shall try to be a better steward, and not feel that what I give is too much, but only try to give more, and serve Him better. There are those who could really do things with a tithe. Their tithe would mean so much. Hers was only $3.81. Who knows, maybe the Lord will use it yet to cause someone else to consider his stewardship, and do a bit better for God. At any rate her tithe has caused me to take an interest in her husband, and the two little children, and it may all turn out that God will multiply her tithe and in His own good time repay her manifold in the grace He shows toward her family.

Perhaps I shall add 19c to it and send it to CARE for one of those twenty-eight-different-kinds-of-seed packages for some poor family in Europe where her name would fit right in — Spenyovics. The name sounds awfully strange to me, but maybe our kind heavenly Father knows other people by that name and maybe it doesn't sound at all strange to him.

CHRISTIANITY FACES COMMUNISM.

[A talk by Miss Alice C. Reed, just back from Peiping, North China, Congregational Christian Educational missionary, before the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches in Cleveland.]

On February 1 the last of the seven stations of the North China Mission of the American Board of Foreign Missions, Congregational, passed into the hands of the Communists. The long months during which the "creeping terror" drew closer and closer, and the hordes of refugees crowded into temples living a miserable existence grew greater and greater, have come to an end.

During the nearly three years since I returned to Peiping following a year and a half teaching in refugee schools in West China, people continued to hope for the defeat of the Communists. The disillusionment was great when following the defeat of Japan the Chinese learned that instead of the peace for which they hoped they were in the midst of a civil war.

As one of our Chinese Christian leaders said, "This has destroyed the sympathy many people felt toward the Communists." As far as I was able to find out from careful questioning, not more than a tenth of the common people have been pleased when their homes passed into the control of the Communists. One of our thoughtful pastors remarked two months after his city changed hands, "People dislike them so much that they don't even like the good things they do."

Only a trickle of students have gone to Communist territory while thousands of the common people have fled at the approach of the Communist armies or escaped after their homes were taken. North China has not gone Communist because the common man has been converted to Communism but because the National Government was weak and ineffective while the Communists had a highly efficient organization both in its army and in its propaganda department. They knew what they wanted and have gone ahead ruthlessly to gain their end willing to sacrifice not only their own comfort but the lives of any number of the common people.

Some things in their program appeal strongly to the idealism of youth and seem not too different from our Christian teaching. Mr. G, whom I first knew as a teacher at Techow 30 years ago, told me last summer, "When the Communists first came to our village and told what they were going to do I thought 'This sounds good; it sounds like the things the church teaches.'" But, he added sadly, "When they began to put their theories into practice it was a different matter." Some things in their program appeal only to the lowest elements of society.

I have been asked why I am opposed to Communism. My answer has three parts: (a) Communists in China have encouraged personal vengeance—one of the things human society has been struggling to overcome for thousands of years. (b) They believe that the end justifies the means and use any means however cruel to gain their end. (c) There is a totalitarian system where the common man has no value or importance except as he is of benefit to the system.

The Communists know what they want. They have a plan. Students who take their course in propaganda are taught that Christianity is their last but greatest enemy. But in the meantime Christianity is being given a further chance. Our two mission stations in Shansi fell to the Communists the eleventh day of last July. Our missionaries had planned to leave fearing that it would be impossible to carry on any work. But the rapid advance of the Communists cut off their chance to escape, and we in Peiping waited anxiously for word. This came before long and at intervals more word has come. The Communists immediately posted notices that the missionaries and mission property were not to be disturbed. Schools, hospitals and churches were allowed to carry on though the textbooks in the schools had to be approved by the Communists. This was all in great contrast to the situation in Shantung,

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

INTRODUCTION TO PRESIDENT SMITH'S REPORT TO BOARD OF TRUSTEES.

Freedom of mind, of action, and of purpose are essential to the normal development of human personality. Freedom in the processes of education, the selection of faculty, the building of the curriculum, and classroom procedures, is necessary for broad, accurate information, and the effective training of the individual. The individual is the product of his training, whether that training be in the home, classroom, office, shop, field or factory. His training must bear the mark of freedom if he is to bear the fruitage of freedom in present-day society.

In America, we have been accustomed to freedom in its truest sense—freedom of speech, freedom of expression, freedom of enterprise—freedom within the law. Only in recent years have we felt the hand of restraint. This restraint has been necessary because of unusual disturbances occasioned by the war. Now that the war is over, the cause of freedom is fresh on our minds and we grow impatient under restraints and are asking for a return to the privilege of freedom purchased by our forefathers at great cost. We must preserve our freedom. We owe as much to posterity.

Freedom in education is the key to freedom in society. (Free schools and free colleges are essential to the continuance of free education.) Freedom from political restraints is necessary if our schools and colleges are to continue as free institutions. In America we have a dual system of education—a system of tax- or state-supported schools and colleges and a system of privately endowed and church related schools and colleges. Under our present systems neither system will brook any outside interference or domination of any kind. Each school must remain free to do its own job. All is good and well so long as freedom in cultural centers is tolerated. Non-cultural forces, however, are becoming impatient. They would find their way into our systems of education and have something to do with their support and something to say as to their conduct. Flattered with the idea of financial aid we close our eyes to the evils of control. When once political intrigue puts its hand of control on our system of education, it will be next to impossible to break such a control.

In America at this critical moment we should refresh our minds as to the history of education and of educational institutions outside of this country. It is possible, at times, I am sure to learn valuable lessons from what has happened to other people and countries. One hundred to one hundred and twenty years ago, Germany, France and Italy had a dual system of education comparable to what we have in this country—state supported and privately endowed church-related schools and colleges. The state began to increase its support and to tighten its control accordingly. The private schools closed and disappeared. In the case of Germany, the state seized complete control of its system of education and the state said where the schools should be, what should be taught, who should teach, and who should be taught. We do not need to be told the results. They are painfully evident.

In our country we are scenting the trail of education in European countries and are beginning to follow in their footsteps—federal aid to education. Federal control, limited or unlimited, will follow. Ultimately unscrupulous politicians will have something to say about this whole business of education. This would be tragic. The only way to prevent such conditions is to retain our privately endowed and church-related schools and colleges. The only way to retain them is to make them stronger, financially and otherwise. The only way to make them stronger is to substantially increase our financial contributions to them. It should not be necessary to remind ourselves that state appropriations to our tax-supported schools have trebled and quadrupled in the past ten years but that our support to our school, Elon College, has remained about the same. As a Board of Trustees, a church, and alumni, we now face a serious alternative to substantially increase the financial support of our college or prepare ourselves to watch it grow weaker, less important, and ultimately disappear from the field of higher education.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Contributions from our churches and Sunday schools for the college have been coming in very well. In comparing amounts received a year ago as of this date it is found that we are approximately one-third behind that of 1948. Weather conditions in 1948 were extremely unfavorable for church attendance in rural sections. This year unpaved roads have been difficult for traveling, otherwise, the weather has been quite favorable. Even though weather conditions have been more favorable, contributions from Sunday schools and churches have not been as large. It is hoped that this is not prophetic for the entire year. The college has its commitments and extensive financial demands are being made every week. If we are to keep the college in favorable financial condition, our churches, Sunday schools and friends must be considerate and generous. Amounts received from the students for tuition and fees are not sufficient to meet the current financial demands.

In this particular, Elon College is not alone. All schools must receive outside support if they are to continue their program and remain out of the red. In the light of existing conditions and the current needs of the college we are trusting that our churches and Sunday schools will be punctual in meeting their apportionments for the college. The college is always grateful for any cooperation and help given.

SHAOWU LETTERS.

The hospital carries on just about as usual. Out of our twenty-five beds we keep fifteen busy. Most of the cases at present seem to be malaria, typhoid, and amoebic dysentery. The out-patient clinic sees twenty to thirty patients a day. Like every other hospital in China we are having a terrible time keeping our noses out of the water. With this terrible inflation, our American currency has suddenly become worthless. Also our American backing has dropped considerably. The local fees don't bring in enough to buy medicines for the hospital work. This month we had just enough money to pay the servants' salaries. As yet the Christian doctors and nurses have had no pay. In this sort of situation, it makes free care almost impossible.

This month we opened a free Well Baby Clinic at East Gate, after struggling with carpenters and repair men for over a month. This time it was Ed that went through all the battles trying to get the work done. One of the church ladies is donating free time to help keep the big Chinese stoves running and help with the actual washing of the babies. We run these baby baths along with the weighing and measuring of the children because the mothers' homes are so cold that the kids go all winter unwashed unless we provide a place. They bring clean clothes and we provide a warm place, soap and warm water. The soap, towels, powder and even money for fuel has been given by American churches. It does one good to see this united work of America and China. Mrs. Lee will do the washing because children at an early age learn to be afraid of this white face of mine. They let me weigh and measure them with great howling and kicking on the babies' part. You can imagine how scared the baby would be if a white monster took his clothes away and started to wash him. So it pays for me to stay away and act as big boss. The kids are so cute, I surely hate my role.

This clinic is also being used by the Chinese doctors in our hospital to begin work for the blind. All kinds of eye diseases will be brought to the clinic. The money for this work was donated by an American woman.

Another use for the clinic will be to take care of the school nursing of Han Mei (our church school) which is very close. So you see Ed's efforts were not in vain.

The immediate future looks dark here as it does all over China. As a matter of fact, our troubles are merely a reflection of the afflictions the whole country is passing through. We are hundreds of miles from the Civil War and the Communist danger, and the local population is not faced with famine because of crop failure or despoiling armies. But the inflation, which I reported in my last letter as having apparently been licked by the issuance of new currency, went wild again; and whenever that happens, of course, everyone suffers except for a few speculators, but most of all those on fixed cash incomes such as employees of institutions like ours. And unfortunately, as with China as a whole, there is a deplorable tendency here to blame America for the hospital's plight, the boys saying that all their difficulties arise from the fact that we didn't come through with enough money in time.

However, like the rest of China, the people here show that baffling but admirable trait of not knowing how to get completely discouraged and give up. They have no clear idea of how they are going to hang on, and their efficiency and standards may be down to zero, and they may simply muddle along and hope, without basis, for some sort of lucky break just ahead. But at least they never completely surrender and stop trying, either in the war or adversity, like so many other nations and groups all over the world. They have done a lot of muddling through the past, but at least China has a 4,000-year history of unbroken existence just because of this quality. Recently I have been digging up my yard to plant a vegetable garden, and noticed that everywhere I dug I struck old fragments of brick, tile and pottery. Dick Jackson, excavating a six-foot hole in his yard to put in a septic tank, found the same sort of rubble all the way to the bottom. We were then told that it is the same all over Shaowu, at least within the city walls; the whole present city is literally built on the rubble of Shaowu's of the past, which have been razed, or gone to decay, time after time, as China's perpetual wars and famines and other disturbances rolled around; and yet Shaowu has always been a living city. You can see the heritage of the past in the habits of the common people, their apparent selfishness and miserliness coming from their age-old intense struggle for survival, but also their patient and uncomplaining acceptance of adversity, and their cheerful plodding along at their tasks, no matter what the prospects for the future. I notice also that when things get tough, the people here do not go insane or commit suicide or have nervous breakdowns or get high blood pressure or heart attacks or stomach ulcers or any of the other diseases that plague us when the strain of living becomes too great for us. It is a reaction to adversity that bears study, and the good features of which we would do well to preserve. It is easy for us greenhorns here to get discouraged when the outlook for the future seems so dim, but I think I can understand a bit of the spirit of our colleagues in North China, most of whom have turned down the Consul-General's recommendation to leave the country, saying that they prefer to stick it out, along with their Chinese friends and their work, and see what develops.

Of course when we elect to stick it out here we are not really sharing the experiences of our Chinese fellow-workers in the true sense of the word. The salary of any one of us foreigners would be enough to support the entire hospital staff, and we can depend on it through the days ahead, unless the foreign exchange rate fails us, or some disturbance makes it impossible for funds to be transmitted here from the coast. We have an adequate, even luxurious, diet, an iron stove in our house to take away the winter chill, and all the clothes we need. And if worst comes to worst we have the security of knowing that we are under the protection of a strong and permanent government—we don't really know what it means to be on the losing side, the way Japan and

NEWS FROM LOCAL SOCIETIES.

BURLINGTON.

In the January 20 issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN mention was made of a news bulletin published each month by the Burlington Auxiliary. Mrs. W. W. Sellars is the editor of the bulletin and it is called "This and That." Since it does tell something of our work, let us take a peep at the back issues and do a little reviewing.

From the September issue we find mention of the beautiful installation service prepared by Mrs. Russell Clem. The theme was "The Beauty of Holiness." As each officer was installed, a lovely nosegay was presented her. Holding this thing of beauty in her hand, she made her pledge of dedication.

October found us listening with much interest to Mrs. W. T. Scott as she presented the literature for the year. With much enthusiasm each circle took up the study of the selected material. Attractive year books were made and presented to each circle member by Mrs. W. W. Sellars, program chairman.

In November the Auxiliary had as their guest Mrs. Henry C. Sprinkle of Greensboro, who had just returned from a trip to Europe. She with her husband attended the Amsterdam Conference of the World Council of Churches. She spoke of the suffering and great need now existing in Europe and urged our aid. It was with thankful hearts that we who had so much could give an offering through our Committee for War Victims and Reconstruction for this very thing. This month the Auxiliary also shared with other city churches in the observance of World Community Day and the "Pack a Towel for the Teen Ager" project.

As we turn our pages to December we remember again the very beautiful Christmas program held in the church auditorium. A devotional on the Birth of Jesus, Christmas Carols, and special Christmas music by Mrs. J. R. Kernodle and Mrs. R. W. Brannock including "He shall Feed His Flock" from Handel's Messiah, made us realize that "The Lord is in His Holy Temple." The circles this month took needy families for their "Friendly Service." Plans also were made to assist in furnishing the Annex for the young people.

Now here we are at January. We see the name of Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, and recall what a wonderful time we had listening to Pattie review Twilight or Dawn. Pattie puts China in your hearts. Since the January meeting the Auxiliary has supervised a "spring cleaning" of the church.

The Auxiliary studies The Gospel Unlimited under the leadership of our pastor, Rev. W. Millard Stevens. This study is an important part of our spiritual growth.

We have not reached February in our "This and That," but its pages will hold much that will be of interest. More and more we would promote missions in our church, especially among our young people. To bring before them the need of missions would place in their hearts the seed that eventually bring forth the harvest.

May the blessings of God rest upon each Auxiliary and the work which is being done.

MRS. M. Z. RHODES,

President.

WINCHESTER.

The Winchester women are very happy in their missionary society and its work. As soon as we secured the Plan Book, our president met with her committee and appointed leaders for the year. It has been good to see how the women planned their programs and how interestingly they were presented. We have asked our pastor to present the study in Galatians at the Wednesday evening services and are looking forward to these studies in the near future. It is planned to have our study books reviewed at a covered dish supper to which we will invite any who will share with us. There will be two suppers—one perhaps in February and one in April. One book will be given by Mrs. Orville Hoover and one by Mrs. Whitten.

Our Society raises its finances by dues, and once a quarter, a special free-will offering is received. At each meeting the plate is passed to receive the money with which we buy Life Membership and Memorial certificates. We have averaged two a year for the past few years, I think. We have heretofore joined with others in sending clothing overseas. In fact, three of our women have established very sweet friendships with families in Germany, exchanged pictures, sent food, clothing, Christmas gifts wrapped as to a very close friend. The letters of gratitude that have come have been shared with the society and we have certainly enjoyed them. Our world seems larger for the experience.

This year, as just a small Friendly Service gesture, we mailed a little remembrance to Timothy Chang and another to Martha Huber, the daughter of missionary friends in Africa. Martha is in Florida, studying now, having recently left her parents in Africa to come to this country. As a new Friendly Service project it is planned that each woman will bring to next month's meeting, some little garment which she herself has made, or some contribution for little layettes for Indian babies, to be sent to Rev. Harold Case, to be used in his work with the Indians in North Dakota.

It was decided this year, that instead of sending clothing overseas, we would hold a "Rummage Sale" here at home, selling clothing in very good condition at very low prices. We secured a store on the main street of the town on Friday, which was the only day available. The rain poured, but we decided they were "showers of blessing" for our sale brought $88. There were several articles we thought would sell better at a later time than at a rummage sale, such as a lovely crocheted center piece, crocheted bed room slippers, a hanky with tatting around it, and even a white fruit cake, baked the day of our meeting. These were sold at auction at the December meeting. Of course, last year we had the "Unseen Guest" program, so we had to find another plan this year. Mrs. Clayton Pugh was chairman of the committee on arrangements for a supper meeting. She and her committee did a grand job and the meeting was largely attended.

At first, in order that our people might appreciate how their friends across the seas had suffered, we had a "soup line," serving only crackers and potato soup. There was a program on "War Victims" and how we might help. An offering was taken, amounting to $53.12. Then followed a real fellowship supper, when the committee served good old creamed

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Do you like parades? Richmond had a wonderful one last Monday (February 7) when the French Merci Train arrived. It was a wonderful occasion. Last winter the people of America sent boxcars filled with food and grain to the people of France, especially the children, and the Merci Train was their thank you. Merci means thanks in French.

There were cars for several states. One of them went to North Carolina. It was taken to Raleigh from Richmond. So the boys and girls of both states can be happy over this remembrance. A lady in Paris, the Countess de Fels, thought of doing this and the school children and their parents brought all kinds of gifts to the train. When they were unpacked there were handmade handkerchiefs, antique fans, dolls, doll clothes, vases, a wedding gown, a coach (like Cinderella's) and many other beautiful gifts.

The parade began when the Governor of Virginia's aide met the people at the train and began taking the box car to the State Capital. Thousands of school children stood on Broad Street to see the little gray box car with its medallions on the side. Shaped like shields these medallions, bore the seals (or signs) of the province from which they came. So warm was the feeling for the people who sent the gifts that many people cried. There was a girl dressed like the French girl, Joan of Arc, riding a big white horse. The Richmond Light Infantry Blues were in the parade, too. This is a very military group and they are famous for their uniforms and precision in marching. Just a few weeks before they were in the inaugural parade for the President. Their blue dress uniforms are very wonderful and one really hasn't seen a parade until one has seen the "Blues" as they are called.

After the parade was over, the gifts were unpacked and placed on display. Thousands of people have gone to see the lovely things. There were notes pinned to the gifts. Some of them said, "Thank you for the milk and bread. Here is my best loved doll." It makes me a little sad to think they sent us so much when we have so much food and sent them so little.

I am glad that we live in America where we can have parades and gather in the streets together without being afraid. It is good that we have enough to eat, too. I hope you will be seeing a parade soon.

Are some of you sick? So many boys and girls have the measles or chicken pox now. Sunday schools and schools have rooms empty because of it. I heard of one class of twenty-five with four present last Sunday. Special greetings to two little boys, away from home and sick with the measles. Hello and get well soon to Tommy and Jonathan! I hope all of you will soon be well and back at school and play!

THE CHILD WHO GIVES.

By HELEN GREGG GREEN.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Does Aunt Loretha smoke, Mommie?" five-year-old Bobby asked, as he cut out and pasted pictures in the scrapbook he was making for a Christmas gift. Then, answering his own questions, he said, "I know she does, Mommie; I saw her smoking one day. So I'll paste a pipe in her book."

When relating this amusing incident, Bobby's mother told us that she had encouraged Bobby to make, or to buy at the ten-cent store, gifts for his near relatives and many of his friends.

Little children should not only receive remembrances at Christmas time; they should also be helped to enter into the spirit of giving them.

An intimate talk about the different members of the family and close friends—the activities in which they like to engage and the kind of things they like to have near them or to use—is a good introduction to the child's consideration of what to give. It is wise to be as helpfully suggestive along these lines as the parent can, but when it comes time for the child to choose a gift, only such assistance should be offered as is quite certain the child desires—no more.

A friend of mine was worried because her small daughter seemed to be growing selfish. "I'm going to start preparing inexpensive presents for Vicki to give to her father and me and to her playmates," she said. "I shall help her to wrap up all of them, except the one for me; her father will help her with that one. So far she has been the recipient of most of the gaily-tied boxes. She needs to learn the joy of preparing them for others. When she is older I shall teach her to make simple gifts."

When boys and girls do make the gifts that they give away, the whole procedure should be treated with the seriousness and interest that all children's plans deserve.

I have never forgotten a gift that I made for my father when I was seven. It was a beribboned whisk-broom holder—for his dignified law office.

"Now, Mother," I remember saying, "this is to be a real surprise! Don't tell Daddy about it!"

One day, however, a slight suspicion having been aroused, I asked, Mother, you didn't tell Daddy about his surprise did you?"

Being ever-truthful, Mother admitted she had told him. I was overwhelmed with disappointment. All the joy in the gift vanished.

It is often difficult for parents to understand and appreciate the growing child's emotional reactions. For this reason adults frequently cause hurts and deep disappointments over things which to them seem trivial but which to the child are of tremendous import.

So, Mother, or Dad, when a present is made or has been bought, and you are taken into the secret and told it is to be a great and important surprise, do remember it is important, for your child may be testing the satisfaction that comes from carefully considered giving. Even if poor judgment has been shown, be sure that the child awakens to this only gradually and naturally and that in the meantime he experiences the full joy his unselfish effort deserves.

MARRIED

SHOEMAKER-SHOWALTER.

A wedding of interest to their many friends was solemnized at the parsonage of the Winchester Church by the pastor of that church on Friday afternoon, February 11, at 3:30 p. m., when Mrs. Elizabeth Schock Shoemaker was married to Earnest Floyd Showalter. The bride, a daughter of Aaron and Bessie Cling Siegrist, was born in Lancaster County, Pennsylvania, more lately a resident of Rockingham County, Virginia, near Linville. The groom is a well-known farmer, prominent churchman of Antioch Church, active in civic affairs and highly respected throughout our church.

Following a wedding trip to Baltimore and points north they will be at home to their friends at Harrisonburg, Route 4, Virginia. We wish for them much happiness.

TO EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIPERS.

The Executive Committee of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship met Thursday night, January 20 for the purpose of deciding where and when to have our Spring Rally. We decided to meet at Liberty Spring Christian Church, Sunday, March 27, from 2:00 until 5:00 p. m. We are planning a very interesting program, which we will tell you more about at a later date. We hope you will begin planning now to have a large attendance at this very important meeting.

It was brought to our attention at this meeting that the Pilgrim Fellowship is behind in paying their apportionment to the Southern Convention and we would like very much to have this paid.

It was suggested that we ask each Young People's group in Eastern Virginia to have a public program during Youth Week and take up a Special Offering for the Pilgrim Fellowship. If this is not possible, surely there is an appropriate place in one of your services or programs to take up this offering. Again, if you cannot do this, we would like you to make whatever contribution you can to this cause. We would like to say, that the projects of the Pilgrim Fellowship have been supported in the past by contributions from the various Young People's groups in the Southern Convention.

We will appreciate your cooperation in helping to raise this money and by your attendance making our Spring Rally a most successful one.

JACK BYRD, President.

Publicity Chairman.

FORSYTH FELLOWSHIP MEETS.

Seventy-five young people from our county churches and First Church, Greensboro, gathered at Winston-Salem on Sunday evening, January 30. Forsyth County Youth Fellowship officers are as follows: Bobby Jean Kimball, president; Lura Neal (Be-lews Creek), vice-president; Jo Ann Johnson (Salem Chapel), secretary-treasurer; Mr. & Mrs. Raymond Binkley and Mr. & Mrs. Watson Flynt, adult counsellors.

SEEING IS BELIEVING.

I was at the dedication of that church! I saw 102 certificates of appreciation given to men and the boys who had worked as volunteers to build that church. And I was surprised that we had loaned them and granted them so little. And when I asked about, I was told it was because they came into being late, and the treasures were stripped. There was nothing that we could do to help that church! But that group of people because they were artisans, organized themselves, found a foreman, and in the end the foreman was a volunteer as well as the rest of them and he and the minister went around San Diego getting the corporations to help with gifts of materials. I told them about the little old church in Connecticut where I go in the summer with a plaque on the front wall, "In memory of those who built this house to the glory of God," and I told them, "Perhaps some day there will be a plaque like that in this church for you."

Do you know every time I'm in a new church I realize that church extension means evangelism too. Built for the Glory of God! We who know what our churches mean to us can well realize what the need is of churches all over the country in these new communities. I have been told that perhaps 200 churches might be the fair share of what we should be building right now in these changing times and changing communities. But do you know we have only 33 under way! Because we have no further gifts through the Post-War Emergency Program, or through apportionment, and now in our Christian World Mission they have assigned to us $318,000 for new churches. Still far from adequate! Oh, how important that our Christian World Mission be a success. It will mean life for our denomination if we can get $318,000 for new high potential churches within this year and again next year."

CHRISTIANITY FACES COMMUNISM.

where, since the region was taken over in 1946 no regular church services have been allowed, two of our pastors have been imprisoned. Christians have not dared visit each other, or their pastors, and it has been dangerous to have a hymnal or Bible in sight.

Since Tunghsien and Yenching located to the east and west of Peiping were "liberated" some weeks ago, word has come through that as in Shansi religious freedom and protection of mission property and activities are promised. So as I said above, Christianity is being given a further chance—to see what it can do.

Most of our missionaries and most of the Chinese Christian leaders are still in North China, though they are few in number in comparison with the extensive propaganda department of the Communists. We may say as did the disciples of old of the few loaves and fishes, "What are these among many?" But with Christ's blessing the little became much. We pray that it will be so again. What a responsibility rests on the shoulders of these Christian leaders and missionaries.

But let us remember that the task is not just theirs, it is ours; it is the task of the Christians in America.

No one knows how long this chance we have will last. While it lasts, are those in China going to be hindered by lack of funds or lack of personnel? That is the question the Christians in America must answer.

Christianity is Communism's greatest and last enemy. Communism is Christianity's greatest challenge.

A splendid steamer was launched on Lake Champlain. She made her way safely across the lake and started back when a storm came upon her, the engines were disabled and she drifted to the rocks. "Out with the anchor!" said the captain, and the command was obeyed, but still she drifted, and, although the anchor was down, she crashed against the rocks with an awful force, and all because the anchor chain was three feet too short. Your morality, so far as it goes, may be a good thing, but it does not reach the standard of God, nor can it until you are safely united to Christ; and if you have put him out of your life and stand alone in the midst of the rising floods, then how wilt thou do in the swelling of Jordan.—J. Sunday School Lesson

THE STANDARDS OF THE KINGDOM.

LESSON IX—FEBRUARY 27, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Seek first his kingdom and his righteousness.—Matthew 6:33.

LESSON: Matthew 5-7.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 13: 44-53.

Help! S. O. S! Help! Three whole chapters of the Master's teachings, the very essence and heart of all He said, in one Sunday School Lesson!!!! How will one go about teaching this lesson? It is quite clear that he cannot take up three chapters, verse by verse—he could spend a whole quarter or even a whole year on today's lesson if he did that. He could of course simply take a few verses, or one section, and use that as the background of his teaching. But that would not give anywhere near what the Lesson Committee had in mind for this lesson. Perhaps the best thing he can do is to analyze this Sermon on the Mount and present the main divisions of it, or the topics treated by it, in a condensed form. That ought to be done and it can be done. In fact your scribe is going to try to do that even in the brief space of these Notes.

The Character of the Citizens of the Kingdom.

The Beatitudes present in a striking way the character of the citizens of the Kingdom of God. Certain qualities of mind and heart, humility, the capacity to be sorry for sin as well as to sympathize with others, meekness, an eagerness to learn and to grow, the spirit of mercy, sincerity and purity of motive, the desire for and dedication to the cause of peace, the willingness to endure even persecution for the sake of righteousness and the capacity to suffer for Christ's sake—these at least are some of the qualities of mind and heart that characterize the citizens of the Kingdom. It should be noted, too, that these qualities are the source of happiness or blessedness in human life. Happiness does not come from without, it comes from within.

The Function of the Citizens of the Kingdom.

In two brief—very brief—paragraphs, Jesus states the mission of the members of the Kingdom. They are to be as salt in the world, a seasoning, saving element or factor. They are to be as light, a cheering, guiding, cleansing, healing, life-giving force in human society.

The Citizens of the Kingdom and Law.

Their righteousness is to be beyond the righteousness of the scribes and Pharisees. That was formal, legal, external, cold, lifeless, hypocritical. In contrast the righteousness of members of the kingdom was to be inner, gracious, vital, redemptive, real. The motive, not the act was the ultimate thing that counted. The law said that worship was first, Christ said that right spirit in the heart was first. The law said that a man must not kill; Jesus said that a man must not harbor even hard thoughts in his heart. The law said that a man must not commit adultery; Jesus said a man must not stand on a street corner and think unclean thoughts as a woman passed by. The law said that a man could divorce his wife for the most trivial thing; Jesus said that only adultery was sufficient grounds for divorce. The law said that a man's words were made good by an oath in the sense of taking an oath; Jesus said that a man's words ought to be good even though he was not under oath. The law said that a man should love his neighbor but hate his enemy; but Jesus said a man should love his enemies and even pray for those who spitefully used him. The citizens of the Kingdom were to go the second mile, they were to take as their ideal perfection itself, they were to strive to be like God their Father, himself. Their lives were to be different from the lives of those not citizens of the kingdom.

The Citizens of the Kingdom and Religious Acts.

Sincerity, genuineness, reality was to be the distinguishing mark of the citizens of the kingdom in their religious acts and practices. Take for instance, the matter of giving alms, of administering charity. It was to be done not to be seen of men, but to help men, and to be seen of God. Its motive was concern for others, compassion, love, not a desire to get on the front pages of the newspaper. Or again the matter of prayer. Men were to pray not to be seen of men but to be heard of God. Prayer was not a matter of showing off, but of sharing the life of God. When men prayed they were to be sincere. Their prayer-were to be marked by brevity, simple language, a sense of need, a regard for others, and by resignation to the Father's will. A willingness to forgive others was absolutely essential to forgiveness for one's self. Fasting was likewise a matter of inner spirit, rather than of outward forms. Men were to fast unto God and not before men. In the giving of alms, in prayer, in fasting, and in everything else men were to be sincere, simple, submissive.

The Citizens of the Kingdom and Material Things.

The Master had something to say about material things. He did not condemn them. But He did subordinate them to other things. They were means to an end, not an end in themselves. They were temporal in nature. And the love of them was dangerous and deadly. They were to be put beneath the Kingdom—men were to seek first the Kingdom of God and his righteousness. But those who did thus seek the Kingdom first would be assured to a sufficient supply of material things. Faith in God was an antidote against restlessness and anxiety and worry about material things. The attempt to serve both God and gold was impossible. But one could serve God with gold.

The Citizen of the Kingdom and Others.

There are sundry rules concerning our attitude and conduct toward others. There is for instance the matter of judging others. It is both unfair, unscientific and unsafe. There is too a matter of personal integrity in some things—men are not to cast their pearls before swine. And even the citizens of the kingdom are not to be gullible and to let folks get by with everything. They are to be on their guard against wolves in sheep's clothing. They are to judge men, not so much by profession as by performance. "By their fruits shall ye know them," said the Master. Mere saying was not enough. It was those who do the Father's will who would enter into the kingdom. It was all summed up in what we call the Golden Rule. How shall we treat others? With a stroke of spiritual genius Jesus summed it all up in a few words, timeless and universal in their application. "Put yourself in the other

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

IV. JOHN.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

John ("the disciple whom the Lord loved"), was the only one of the Twelve to be present at time of the Crucifixion. He was drawn to the Master in those last moments by an ardent affection and he remained at the foot of the cross despite personal danger. Perhaps, too, he relied to no little extent upon his family connections with the High Priest. There at the cross Jesus placed his mother into John's care.

That this apostle was very close to Jesus is indicated by the fact that he, with Peter and James, witnessed the raising of Jarius' daughter; were nearest to the Lord during the agony; and were present at the transfiguration. Also it was John and Peter who were sent to prepare the passover.

Some time after the resurrection John left Jerusalem and took up residence in Ephesus. He remained for some time in Asia after which he visited Rome. In Rome he is supposed to have been arrested for his preaching and placed in a cauldron of boiling oil, but miraculously was saved from death. Afterward during the reign of Domitian he was banished from Rome and exiled to the Island of Patmos where he wrote his Revelation.

Clement of Alexandria, Polycrates, Tertullian and other ancient writers tell many stories of John's work in Asia. Two stories of his old age are preserved for us, one told by Cassian of how John used to play with a tame partridge, and when censured for his foolishness by one of his disciples answered, "The bow cannot be always bent." The other by Jerome describes him when he was too old to speak at length and contented himself with repeating "Little children, love one another."

There are adequate reasons for accepting John's authorship of the writings ascribed to him, namely: the Gospel, the Revelation and his three letters. Although John was "just a fisherman" his writings suggest he was well educated and an able scholar. We may reasonably assume that he died a natural death.

The price of power is responsibility for the public good.—Winthrop W. Aldrich.

WHAT ABOUT CHINA TODAY?

Old American friends have again been among them, serving in familiar ways, or bringing new and fresh ideas, methods, and material equipment to replenish depleted and outworn stores.

At least a few new missionaries, young, vigorous, ardent, have become known to them, an earnest and pledge that the international comradeship of the Body of Christ shall not be broken by the inevitable attrition of the years.

We Must Not Abandon Our Work in China Now.

The American Board, in continual consultation with other boards as to the wisest and most effective methods, will maintain, serve and strengthen in every way possible those who are bearing the Christian witness amidst the shadows that envelop China. Our concerns are primarily with the people of China, and their needs abide, regardless of political changes. It would be cowardly to withdraw our help to Christian schools and Christian hospitals and the bearers of the Christian evangel until forced to do so by circumstances beyond our control. That time has not yet come—it may never come. Our relations are primarily with a part of the Christian community of China—our brothers and sisters in Christ, a part of the Body of Christ, the organism through which his spirit finds expression in society. We should suffer no less than they if we voluntarily cut ourselves off from them. May God help us to be as faithful as they will be!

LETTERS FROM SHAOWU.

Germany were at the close of the war and China seems to be now, and see our society and everything we had faith in crumbling about us, with no place to flee to. With this feeling of security which we have, the financial success or failure of the hospital does not matter so much to us, and we can go ahead and plan other outlets for work, such as Fran's community health education projects with mothers and babies and in the schools, which are now going full tilt. But it is no cinch for the Chinese staff, in the position they are in, to plan and carry on worthwhile side projects which have no relation to their immediate livelihood. But Dr. Chu has just opened a prevention of blindness clinic at our East Gate branch, at which no fees are to be accepted. And when the Catholic Mission here, who are expecting a new electric generator to arrive from Shanghai sometime soon, offered to let us use the current to run our X-ray machine in a co-operative venture with their hospital, our business manager - X-ray technician immediately began spending all his spare time brushing up on the techniques of his new job.

The Jacksons, with their new baby, are now back from Foochow, and Miss Burr is back from America; so our mission circle is larger again; and the fellowship we get from our weekly hike in the country followed by supper and evening meeting, and such affairs as our Thanksgiving dinner together and our occasional evening of "Rook," is giving our spirits a good boost. And I am now finding that our married life, already six months old, is wearing better all the time, and that our cozy new home, finally completed and furnished, is awfully comforting and relaxing. I don't have any more country trips or excursions to report this time, but life goes on with never a dull moment and always full of interest.

fellow's place and then treat him as you would want him to treat you." It is to be worked at all times in all places by all men. In the light of it every sensible man cries out, "Who is sufficient for these things?" and every sensible man knows that his sufficiency for this high moral code is from God alone.

Hearing and Doing.

The wise man obeys the truth that commends itself to his conscience. When he does this he builds on a rock, his life has a good foundation against the stresses and strains and storms of human experience from within and without. The foolish man who fails to do this ultimately goes down in wreck and ruin.

A Note of Authority.

The words carried their own vindication. When even the common people heard the Master, they knew He spoke with authority. We will do well to hear and to heed His words.

We are apt to say that money talks, but it speaks a broken and poverty-stricken language. Hearts talk better, clearer and with wider intelligence.—William Allen White.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

It takes faith to run an Orphanage. It takes faith in God. It takes faith in our church people. If I had not had that faith I would never have accepted the work in the beginning. Faith has been with me all these years. After I was elected Superintendent of the Orphanage I went to the Lord in prayer and promised Him I would accept the work if He would stand by my side and bless me in this work. All the thirty-two years I have been in this work I have always felt that He is very near and that I could reach out my hand and touch the hem of His garment when discouragements stood before me and I needed His help. Many have been the times when our financial needs were more than we could meet, and many have been the times when offerings would come in from some unexpected source to take care of the need. I often think of a story Dr. George M. Muller told in his book. He was Superintendent of a large orphanage in Bristol, England. He was a man of faith and prayer. He said he gave his large group of children all the food he had for supper one night and went to his room, got down on his knees and told the Lord that he gave the children in his care all the food he had for supper and he would expect Him to supply food for breakfast. Sometime during the night someone filled the front porch with food, and the children had breakfast.

My father taught me a lesson in faith when I was a very small boy, three or four years old. He and a carpenter were laying a floor in an upper room, which was an addition to our home, and when they were nearly through they missed a little plane they had been using. They finally saw it between the ceiling and the flooring about half way across the room. The only way they saw to get to it was for me to crawl between the joist and get it and back out. I was afraid to do it. I remember Father said to me: "I will hold this candle over at this end so you can see from your end." I said, "Suppose I get fastened and cannot get back?" And Father said, "I will tear the floor up and take you out." I had faith to believe he would do it; so I crawled in there, got the plan and backed out. I knew Father would do what he said, and to this day I often think of that little instant in my young life.

Faith in God. Faith in our church people.

chicken on hot biscuits with all the dressings. It was a happy evening, and incidentally, the first meeting of its kind to be held in the social hall of our new parsonage.

We plan to unite with other church women of our city in the World-Day of Prayer.

It is nice to feel yourself part of a group that is part of a world group and to know that as we study, work, serve, pray and give together the circle widens, for truly there are "Horizons Unlimited."

In Memoriam

CARR.

In loving memory of Mr. J. W. Carr who departed this life after several months of declining health. It can be said he was faithful in his home and to his family. His companion preceded him several months.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will.

2. That we express our sincere sympathy to his two children.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one recorded on the records of Mt. Carmel Church and one to be published in The Christian Sun.

Mrs. W. T. COX,

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,

Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,

DUCK.

Our Heavenly Father, Who doeth all things well has recently seen fit to remove from our midst one who has gone in and out among us for a number of years, our friend and sister, Mrs. Mary R. J. Duck. She was one of the oldest members of Mt. Carmel Church.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.

2. That we extend our warmest sympathy and earnest prayers to her children that God's promises may fall soothingly upon their hearts and when life's work is done they may form an unbroken circle around His throne.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one placed on our church records and one published in The Christian Sun.

Mrs. W. T. COX,

Mrs. JULIAN CARR,

Mrs. OTIS V. JOYNER,

Committee.

HOWERTON.

On September 23, 1948, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call from our midst Mrs. Cora Howerton. Mrs. Howerton was a faithful member of Hines Chapel Church and was regular in attendance until failing health prevented. She was a good neighbor, a devoted mother, a loving grandmother and always untiring in her efforts to serve those she loved.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we are grateful for what her life has meant to us as individuals and also for what it has meant to those whom she loved and served.

2. That we realize God doeth all things well and we bow in humble submission to His will.

3. That we extend to her loved ones our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and pray God's blessings may rest upon them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, one sent to the family and a copy be entered on the church records.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. R. W. ISELEY,

Mrs. J. W. ISELEY,

Mr. MONROE MARTIN,

Committee.

GERRINGER.

On August 11, 1948, God called from her labors Mrs. A. D. Gerringer, a member of Hines Chapel Congregational Christian Church. In her life we saw a good expression of true Christian character. She was quiet, unassuming, humble, yet firm and steadfast in her devotion to Christian principles and practices. The very last place she went before she passed away was to her church. The problems of her church were her problems and she was ever ready to help in any way she could in building up God's Kingdom.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful member. Her life and devotion will be a sacred memory.

2. That the members tender their sincere sympathy to the family in the passing of their mother.

3. That while we shall miss her presence we will be consoled by the thought that our loss is her eternal gain.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy placed on the church records.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. R. W. ISELEY,

Mrs. J. W. ISELEY,

Mr. MONROE MARTIN,

Committee.

PHILLIPS.

On October 10, 1948, God in His infinite wisdom and great love saw fit to call from her earthly labors and bodily suffering Mrs. Noah Phillips. She was in ill health for a great part of her life, and bore her suffering in a quietness and meekness that was characteristic of her. The light of Jesus shone on her countenance. To know her was to love her. Her place in the Hines Chapel Church and Community is vacant and our hearts are saddened.

In recognition of her faithful and short life, we offer the following resolutions of respect:

1. That the Sunday school and church wish to express their deep sense of loss and gratitude for a beautiful life lived in our midst.

2. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her devoted family who ministered to her so faithfully during her illness, and commend them to our Heavenly Father for comfort and peace, realizing that His grace is sufficient for all our needs.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to her bereaved family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication and a copy be entered on the church records of the church.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. R. W. ISELEY,

Mrs. J. W. ISELEY,

Mr. MONROE MARTIN,

Committee.

APPLE.

"Blessed are the dead that die in the Lord." Such is the end of the Christian's earthly existence; such, we believe, marked the end of the earthly life of a noble mother, and a devoted wife, Mrs. G. P. Apple, a member of our church for many years, who passed away January 22, 1949. She always wore a pleasant smile which was an indication of her cheerful spirit. Mrs. Apple was in ill health for several years. She bore her pain with Christian fortitude, was patient in her suffering and had a calm resignation, which reflected a firm faith.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we rejoice in the triumph of her release from the burden of pain, to enter into the life more abundant, to be forever with the Lord.

2. That we share the sorrow of her loved ones, but comfort them with the hope which we have in Christ of meeting loved ones again in the land where flowers never fade and where sorrow and separation never come.

3. That while we shall miss her presence, we will be consoled by the thought that our loss is her eternal gain.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to The Christian Sun for publication, a copy sent to the family and a copy be entered on our church record.

Respectfully submitted,

Mrs. R. W. ISELEY,

Mrs. J. W. ISELEY,

Mr. MONROE MARTIN,

ROTHGEB.

Mrs. Keyser (Marguerite Daffan) Rothgeb was born in Culpeper County, Va., July 15, 1895, and was translated from this life, January 5, 1949. A daughter of William Pierce and Lizzie Pemberton Daffan, graduate of the Morrisville High School, a graduate of the Fredericksburg State Teachers College and a teacher in the Faquier and Page Counties for seventeen years.

The deceased was married to Keyser T. Rothgeb, September 22, 1934, and with her husband had made her home since their marriage at Leaksville. Mrs. Rothgeb was a member of the Leaksville Church and active in the work of the church. At the time of her death she was employed by the Leggett's Department Store in Luray. As a token of appreciation and respect, the store was closed for two hours during the time of her funeral. One of the officials of the company together with all the employees attended the services.

For a large store to close on a busy Saturday afternoon for one of its employees, is in itself, a real tribute of praise to the one thus honored. The Page News Courier gave the following in the account of her passings: "She was a woman of fine Christian character, a sweet and generous nature, liked by people in every walk of life and made friends with all whom she came in contact with."

A large congregation that overflowed the church gathered to pay a final tribute of love and respect to her untimely passing and to comfort the heart of her loyal and faithful husband in his hour of bereavement. Her pastor, Rev. R. E. Newton, conducted the services, being assisted by the writer. Burial was in the church cemetery at Leaksville.

In submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well and knowing that our loss is her eternal gain we give thanks for her beautiful life which enriched the hearts of all who knew her.

"Sweet was the soul, and brave the lips
That quivering uttered no complaints.
We give thee to our Father's heart,
Thou Christian saint."

Report From Fort Berthold Indian Mission Elbowoods, North Dakota

By HAROLD W. CASE

I have always bragged about our winters here, being moderate and enjoyable, but it seems that this year Old Man Winter has surely made up for his previous leniency. Snow, snow and more snow with one blizzard following another, and roads impassable for much of the time. And even now the wind is raising again so that it is futile to try and shovel out. It has driven me to the saddle again. Emergencies must be met in some way, which we are always endeavoring to do. Winter has been severe and is not over with yet. There will be considerable loss of stock this winter for the snow is so deep even in the timber where our cattle usually winter.

With the building of the Garrison Dam going on and the coming evacuation of the Indian people officially set for 1953, though we do hope for an extension of that time, the special church gatherings are becoming more and more meaningful. The people are going to be moved in so many different directions that our churches when moved or rebuilt in other locations will be made up of entirely different people. Whereas, now the Three Tribes are mainly in settled districts, when the evacuation takes place they will be shuffled considerably according to the location of their land holdings and will live in the five segments which constitute the remaining acreage of their reservation, and these five segments will be separated by this huge body of water, which is spoken of as the largest man-created lake in the world.

It is expected that probably one hundred families of our three hundred and fifty will leave the reservation. Here we have the task of moulding the thought of the white people in the towns they will move to, that they may be accepted as neighbors and into the fellowship of worshippers and followers. At home on the field we must keep very close to the people as they give up their homelands of generations with heartache and sorrow. There are many hardships and difficult adjustments to be made. They have lost confidence pretty much in Government administration, that only the Church remains as their source of security. They have that deep-down feeling that the Christian Church will not let them down, and we musn't. It is up to the Church to inspire these people to try to make something good out of their tragedy. It is up to the Church to lead in economic and spiritual stability. It is up to the Church to lend every aid to them in the acculturation process before them.

We have a new find in an Indian lad whose name is Fox. Already, he has some training and a gift of explaining the Gospel in both his own tongue as well as English. We hope some means will be available to keep him in his daily bread, for he has a family of four children, while he serves his people as a minister.

The task ahead is challenging. The opportunity is unusual. We need your prayers for such a time as this and we rejoice that we can carry on as your representatives. I shall always cherish the month I spent among you, the friendships renewed and new friends made, and I know that each one will always have room in his heart for the American Indian, whose land we have taken from him.

* * * * *

Legislation for settlement of our people's claim will be introduced in this 81st Session of Congress. No bill has been drawn as of this date. In addition to the five million dollars, they ask for nearly seven million more. All of which is only just compensation for satisfactory rehabilitation of the people. It means much acreage will have to be purchased back from the white people if their economic status is to be maintained. You can help by writing the Chairman of the Indian Affairs Subcommittee of the House, as well as your own representatives. Urge them to bring an end to the "Century of Dishonor" of our Nation's dealings with the Indian. Mr. Case urges that you do this at once.

New Parsonage at Winchester, Virginia

HOME OF REV. R. A. WHITTEN AND FAMILY

Conservative estimates of the cost of the new Winchester Parsonage at 108 West Clifford Street range up to $30,000. Clayton A. Pugh, who personally supervised the construction, made a valuable contribution to the church in the selection of materials and the cost of having the work done. Thus the actual expenditure to the church was less than $25,000.

This new building, in addition to providing a lovely home for the minister and his family, has also a spacious social hall in the basement with complete kitchen, making it possible for group meetings and meals served if desired.

This house is considered a monument to the loyal support and sacrificial giving of members and friends who made it possible.

News Flashes

Dr. Stanley U. North of New York City preached last Sunday morning at our Lynchburg Church.

Our sympathy to Rev. J. Frank Morgan of Windsor who was stricken with an illness last Sunday.

Dr. Thomas Anderson completed five full years of service as minister of Central Church of Atlanta last Sunday.

Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds of the Elon College faculty preached at the Suffolk Christian Church last Sunday morning.

Rev. George V. Gardner who has served the Congregational Church of Claridon, Ohio, until recently, is now living at 2127 Park Avenue, Richmond, Virginia, and is available for pulpit supply on Sundays.

Rev. I. Stuart McElroy, District Secretary of the American Bible Society with headquarters in Richmond, Virginia, spoke to the Piedmont Ministers' Association at Elon College on Monday, February 14.

Recent visitors to the Pfafftown Church near Winston-Salem were Mr. and Mrs. Worth Utt of our Elks Spur Church, Fancy Gap, Virginia. Visitors at the Winston-Salem Church included Dr. N. G. Newman of Raleigh, Mr. and Mrs. G. W. Seearce, Jr., of Greensboro and Happy Home Church.

Displaced persons, arriving ten thousand per month on our shores, are receiving immediate help through Church World Service in getting transported to their places of residence, having friendly assistance with their questions and necessary arrangements. Mrs. Jennie Pratt, our representative on Ellis Island, has daily opportunity to lend a helping hand and voice to scores of them.

From Angola, Africa, Henry McDowell reports that a missionary society is being formed in Elende, to carry the good news to contract laborers in the fisheries and plantations. This is a most significant step: our work has become indigenous when our missions become themselves missionary agencies. The chain reaction of Christianity has begun to release its power in Angola. It is "each one teach one" on a tremendous scale.

Executive Vice-President Elect of the American Board, David McKeith, Jr., began a six-month visit to our fields in Africa and the Near East on January 3. During the African leg of the trip is accompanied by John Reuling, Africa secretary of the American Board, whose administrative duties coincidentally demand a trip to our three Africa missions at this time. They are taking sound recording and photographic equipment, to collect materials for use by several newspapers and denominational agencies.

Rev. M. T. Sorrell, Superintendent of Faith Home, Danville, Virginia, reports the completion of the new dining hall, kitchen and chapel at the Home at a cost of $20,000.00. As pastor of the New Lebanon Church, Brother Sorrell reports progress on the new building at New Lebanon Church, and he reports that by March 1 or 15 it is hoped that the new building at the Third Avenue Church, Danville, will be completed. This new building project includes 32 Sunday school classrooms and three auditoriums. Congratulations to Brother Sorrell in his work.

TIMELY FILM STRIP.

On the theory a picture is worth a thousand words, the Home Missions Council in cooperation with the Foreign Missions Conference has prepared a thirty-minute documentary film strip dramatizing "World Day of Prayer" projects around the globe.

Entitled "March of Missions," the film strip contains pictures gathered from the best available sources, and selected by experts intimately familiar with mission projects.

The documentary features mission-on-wheels in India, where Vellore Christian Medical College operates a mobile ambulance van to remote rural areas, and pictures of missions-on-wheels in migrant camps here, where a fleet of "Harvesters" travel to give migrants a sense of Christian community.

Illiterate Navajos learning to read their own language; boys and girls of Turkey welcoming church school papers in their own new Romanized alphabet; foreign students in America sharing impressions and experiences, and the southern rural Negro learning to build a better home and a better church march across the screen, transforming "World Day of Prayer" offerings in living realities.

Accompanying the documentary is a lively, carefully timed commentary, designed to show the global sweep of prayer day projects, and their value in terms of Christian action.

Communities aiming to insure a record attendance at their "World Day of Prayer" observances should welcome "March of Missions" as an invaluable aid. The film strip is available for two dollars from the office of the Home Missions Council, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York 10, New York.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

V. PHILIP.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

When the Twelve were chosen, Philip was the first of the second quartet and, like the other four who had already accepted the call, was a native of Bethsaida, and also had been a convert to the teachings of John the Baptist.

Philip's name was probably given him in honor of Philip, the tetrarch, which may account for the "Greeks who came to worship at the feast" (John 12:21) choosing him to introduce them to Jesus. They approached the right man, for Philip was convinced that any who would "come and see" would believe.

Philip's philosophy of "the way" was that a "believer" must be tried, proven, and instructed before he is fit to go forth as a teacher of Christ. While, on the other hand, he was also convinced that one who had incomplete insight still could be possessed of a spirit through which he could advance the Kingdom of God.

He had three daughters. Two of them traveled with him and were later buried alongside their father in Hierapolis in Asia. The third married and remained in Ephesus.

Most of the Apostle's work was done in Hierapolis but he also preached in Ephesus, Phrygia, Lydia, and other places in Asia. There are conflicting traditions as to the manner of his death. He appears to have lived to ripe old age with some sources claiming he died of a natural disease at the age of eighty-seven. Whereas other ancient authorities scribe martyrdom either under Domitian or Trajan.

COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION MEETS IN COLUMBUS.

Since the Southern Convention had no reporter at the 27th annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education in Columbus, Ohio, excerpts from the report of Public Relations Director Lemuel Petersen follow:

Closing six days (Feb. 6-12) of discussion of the place of religion in community and world life, the International Council voted to establish a new educational department in the field of religion and public education. Dean Luther A. Weigle, of Yale University Divinity School, was chairman of the committee that recommended the new department. His report also provided for a permanent education committee on religion and public education, at least one-third of the members to be public school leaders. Cooperating in these measures are 40 Protestant denominations of the United States and Canada.

Weekday Church Schools Continue.

Interest in religion and public education was heightened by discussions on the Supreme Court ruling on weekday church schools made last year in the Champaign case. Dr. Roy G. Ross, general secretary of the International Council, reported that approximately 90 per cent of the nation's weekday church school classes had been able to continue, with some adjustments.

Nothing in American laws, court decisions, or traditions prevents "the school, within its own program, from making adequate provision for the religious interpretation of life," commented the committee headed by Dean Weigle. This committee called on public schools to expose pupils to the "belief in God as the Source of all spiritual values and material goods, the Determiner of the destinies of nations, and the loving Father of mankind."

In the same vein Dr. Samuel P. Franklin, dean of the School of Education of the University of Pittsburgh, said, "School leaders should study their school programs to see if they are doing justice to children's appreciation of their common religious heritage. Then the church must give public education the green light by removing the feelings of fear and threat over the separation of church and state issue."

Religion and Individual Problems.

The relation of religion to an individual's personal and civic life was the subject of several speeches and discussion periods. Dr. Roy A. Burkhardt, pastor of the First Community Church of Columbus and trustee of the Council, warned that churches cannot redeem the world unless they become more concerned about the individual problems and mental health of their members than they are about the size of their buildings and their prestige as institutions.

"Christian teaching can never be complete unless it includes the development of a deep, informed and wise sense of political responsibility," declared Jerry Voorhis, Chicago, executive secretary of the Cooperative League of U.S.A.

Carrying the community idea to its world outreach, Dr. Forrest L. Knapp, general secretary of the World Council of Christian Education, appealed for the day when "an American church will be willing to support a missionary who is not an American."

World Convention in 1950.

Dr. Knapp also outlined plans for the World Council's Convention on Christian Education, to be held in Toronto August 10-16, 1950. As the American-Canadian unit of the World Council, the International Council of Religious Education voted to participate with about 50 other branches. The 22nd Quadrennial International Sunday School Convention was also planned to be held during the 1950 World Convention.

A project that will relate American Sunday school children to other Sunday school pupils around the world was launched by the children's workers of the International Council. During 1949 Sunday school groups may order through their denominations special sets of colored Bible pictures at $1.00 per set, to be sent to overseas boys and girls.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.
Our Principles.

- 1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
- 2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
- 3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
- 4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
- 5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

CONCERNING THE PARSONAGE.

The traditional church parsonage has been the butt of many jokes. It is one thing to joke about a grotesque, antiquated building called a parsonage; it is quite another thing to live in it. Many heartaches are bound up with faulty plumbing (or lack of plumbing), inadequate heating facilities, ancient furnishings, leaking roofs and streaked walls characteristic of the typical parsonage.

Even today the parsonage with modern fixtures is the exception rather than the rule. Some ministers must draw heavily upon their reserves of grace and patience in order to cope with the limitations and deficiencies of their ecclesiastical domiciles.

The church with a modern, adequate parsonage is fortunate. It evidences a healthy concern for its pastor and family. It has an additional advantage when it is on the market for a new minister. No alibi or apology is necessary.

For maximum efficiency in his parish, the minister needs adequate living quarters and the usual labor-saving devices for the home. The church is to be commended which makes an honest effort to provide these. Happily, the number is increasing.

Churches contemplating building or remodeling their parsonages may receive helpful suggestion by writing to Mr. William Kincaid Newman, 287 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

"THEIR FINEST HOUR"

History contains few utterances more dramatic than that of Prime Minister Winston Churchill before the British House of Commons, June, 1940: "The whole fury and might of the enemy must very soon be turned on us in this Island or lose the war. If we can stand up to him, all Europe may be free and the life of the whole world may move forward into broad, sunlit uplands. But if we fail, then the whole world, including the United States, including all that we have known or cared for, will sink into the abyss of a new Dark Age, made more sinister, and perhaps more protracted, by the lights of perverted science. Let us therefore brace ourselves to our duties, and so bear ourselves that, if the British Empire and its Commonwealth last for a thousand years, men will still say, 'This was their finest hour.'" It was!

Christians have an unparalleled opportunity in our generation to distinguish themselves in the cause of Christian unity. Great effort will be required to give momentum to the movement. Indifference and opposition must be surmounted. But we have come at long last to the hour when a consideration of Church union is no longer academic. Each may strengthen or advance the cause in his own sphere of influence. Union must be promoted from the top down and from the bottom up. Some seed of Christian union may fall on stony ground, but others will fall into fertile soil and bring forth an abundant harvest. Therefore let us not be idle. We are privileged to reap where other apostles of Christian union have sown.

A few churchmen remarked at Cleveland that they would not hinder, neither would they promote the E. and R. Merger. What a pity! Of course, neutrality does not involve one in the possible consequences of opposition to that which may be the definite will of God. But a very considerable portion of our Lord's teaching emphasizes the truth that to neglect an opportunity to do good is to do evil.

It is entirely possible that a decade hence those who are now indifferent or opposed to our current Merger will remember it as their major blunder in churchmanship. Christian union must become a major objective in our thinking, praying, studying and planning. Concerted effort to this end may enable future historians to say, "This was our finest hour."

MRS. B. D. JONES.

Holy Neck Church lost a valuable member in the death of Mrs. Brock D. Jones. She had given many years of uninterrupted service in that church. Her husband and children found their places of usefulness in the same church.

But her influence was limited by no measure to her local church. Her strength was relatively unabated with the passing of the years, thus enabling her to take an active interest in the work of her church on conference, convention and national levels. Yet, she never paraded in denominational work to the neglect of her church and home. Sons and daughters perpetuate her name, spirit and work.

In Mrs. Jones we found an increasingly rare phenomenon of our day: the mother of a large, influential, church-going family. The home and church offer major opportunities for the development of womanhood at its best. Mrs. Jones found life's fulfilment in these two important spheres.

All my life people have been coming to me with plans to make over society and its institutions. Many of these plans have seemed to me good. Some have been excellent. All of them have had one fatal defect. They have assumed that human nature would behave in a certain way. If it would behave in that way these plans would work, but if human nature would behave in that way these plans would not be necessary, for in that case society and its institutions would reform themselves.—Elihu Root.

Our Christian World Task*

By PRESIDENT HENRY P. VAN DUSEN
Union Theological Seminary, New York City

I.

On the one hand, it is possible to say that there has been no previous hour in the nineteen centuries of Christian history when the churches officiated in the International Council (of Religious Education) were as aware of Christianity as a world reality; as alive to the Christian task as a world task; as ready, if not to face, in any event to be challenged to face, the titanic responsibilities of Christian education throughout the whole world. . . . Surely, no one would challenge the now threadbare truism that the most significant fact about Christianity in our period . . . is the double accomplishment . . . :

In our time, Christianity has become for the first time, a world reality; and, in so doing, has become the first truly world movement this planet has known.

In our time, the major Protestant Churches have begun to see their tasks as one task; and have begun so to face it, and to plan and work together, as though the Christian churches were One Church, truly a Body of Christ.

Of the second of those facts, the Council is one of the most significant manifestations. Of both facts, last summer's General Assembly of the World Council of Churches was both proof and symbol.

. . . no event so momentous as the Amsterdam Assembly happens by chance. It is the fruit of the vision and dreams, the plans and labors, of many men over many years; and it is possible only because of them. It is not an exaggeration to suggest: The hopes of two millenia, the prayers of centuries, the labors of decades, the intensive planning of years found fulfillment at Amsterdam.

More particularly, Amsterdam marked the confluence of two great developments within Christendom which have flowed down the past century.

One has been the effort to carry the Christian Gospel to the ends of the earth, to establish the church in every land—so that Christianity might become in fact what it has always been in ideal—and had never been in fact—a world religion.

The other has been the effort to draw together the many, diverse, separated bodies which all claim the name of Christ—to think, speak, and act unitedly—so that the Christian church might become in truth what it had always been in profession, and had never been in reality—a single living organism, the "Body of Christ" . . .

Christianity has, at long last, become a world religion.

Thus Christianity has become, potentially, a universal faith. For, to be universal, it is not necessary that a faith shall have established itself as the religion of all men. It is necessary that it have demonstrated its power to win the spontaneous and convinced adherence of men and women of every type, of every race and nation and class, from every kind of cultural background, and at every stage of cultural advance. In our time, for the first time, Christianity has become such a world faith. It is the first movement of any kind so to claim the allegiance of peoples of the whole earth.

On the other hand, the Christian churches have started to become a living organism.

It has gone forward—this tidal movement of Christian unity—through many diverse channels . . . :

In towns and cities—through associations of Christian ministers and lay folk; through union services, through church federations, through manifold collaboration.

In counties and states and nations—through comity agreements for division of missionary responsibility; through national church councils; through united organizations for home missions, for foreign missions, for religious education, for Christian publications. Far more than those in the pews know, the churches are even now planning their work unitedly and executing it cooperatively.

In lands of the youngest churches—hundreds of union projects—schools and colleges, hospitals and theological seminaries; dozens of organic mergers of previously separated denominations into single churches of Christ, transcending traditional denominational divisions.

On the world scale—a whole nest of world ecumenical bodies—pointing up toward this, the latest and most important—the World Council of Churches. One does not understand what was done at Amsterdam unless he sees the World Council as the keystone of a vast and intricate structure of Christian comity, cooperation and union. . . .

So much for the hopeful aspects of the present situation.

On the other hand, there has been no time during this modern period, not even the dark years of Fascist extension, of Nazi menace, of actual world conflict, when the actualities and the prospects of world Christianity were so threatened by uncertainties, difficulties, and ominous peril of worse things to come, as today. This year of our Lord, 1949, has dawned upon a world more gravely shadowed by apprehension than any "peace time" year within memory . . . the outlook of all mankind knows no easement from the overarching portent of World War II.

. . . The over-all picture of the Christian world mission at this moment, if we are to use the military metaphor, is less that of a triumphant advance than of a determined "holding" operation. That promises to be its predominant character in the days ahead. It is no part of Christian optimism to evade this ominous prospect; as it is no part of Christian realism to permit it to chill the temper of Christian confidence or cut the nerve of Christian effort.

III.

When we narrow our focus to North America which is, after all, your major concern and responsibility in this Council, the paradox of the world situation stands forth in vivid microcosm.

On the one hand, we are cheered by evidences of church health, of growth, of advance. We take satisfaction in statistics of increases in church memberships and church school attendances. . . .

But I trust not one of us is deceived by these surface indications of health and vitality. Not only are they shadowed by ominous portents on every horizon of the world scene. Not only are they qualified by reflections of these portents within our own lands—the progressive permeation of secularism, the complex of disturbing developments. . . . They are challenged also by the signs of stronger vitality and larger effectiveness within Christian groups and sects outside the main body of Protestantism, not represented in this Council. More important, these en-

Mrs. B. D. Jones, Sr., 70, Holland, Va., died Wednesday night (Feb. 16) in a Suffolk hospital after a brief illness. Surviving are five sons: Dr. Darden W. Jones, Franklin, Va.; Dr. Brock D. Jones, Jr., Norfolk; Elijah N. Jones, New York City; James Carlton Jones, Holland; and William Thomas Jones, Franklin; three daughters, Mrs. John G. Truitt and Mrs. Ernest H. Stephenson, both of Suffolk; and Mrs. Morris W. Pierce of Holland; one brother, Dr. Ben W. Rawles of Richmond, Va.; twelve grandchildren, and several nephews and nieces.

Mrs. Jones was a native of Nansemond County, the daughter of the late Elisha Rawles, and Mary Elizabeth Watkins awRles. She was a graduate of the Finney School in Suffolk, and was formerly a teacher in the public schools of Nansemond County. She was active in community and church affairs, having served as district superintendent of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Missionary Conference of Congregational Christian Churches, and later as president of the Conference. She was a member of the Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church and took a leading part in all its activities, served as president of the Woman's Missionary Aid Society, and was a teacher of a class in the Sunday school.

Upon the death of her husband, August 18, 1939, Mrs. Jones continued to farm and interested herself in community and rural improvements. Remaining in the old family home with her were one of her sons, James Carlton, who is connected with farming and business interests in Nansemond County and Holland; and one of her daughters, Mrs. Morris W. Pierce. They helped to make her last years happy.

The funeral was conducted appropriately at the Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church Friday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock by her pastor, the Rev. Luther B. Grice, D. D., and a former pastor, the Rev. N. G. Newman, D. D. The tribute which Dr. Newman spoke was in good taste and beautiful. The Holy Neck choir sang. Dr. Grice asked me to pronounce the benediction at the grave. The flowers were many, and from the size of the congregation and the number of automobiles parked in all available space, it would seem that almost everyone in the community and a goodly number beyond were there. One of the remarks made by Dr. Newman sticks in my mind: "Few of the women I have known had the ability to serve as she served, and fewer still did it." May I add a line: To me she was a noblewoman equal to every occasion and circumstance that confronted her in the rearing of eight children to mature manhood and womanhood.

THE CHURCH OF GOD'S DESIGN.

Since the Amsterdam Conference, as well as in that Conference, the term, "The Church of God's Design" is in the speech, and let us hope not just in the air—regarding the import of that meeting, and that terminology.

There are two major emphases of the Amsterdam Conference which can not be eliminated from pulpit consideration today—doctrinal preaching and teaching regarding the Christian's use of money.

As to the former the pulpit in Europe is far ahead of that of the United States. The Barthian attitude in theology of "Let God Do It" is not so bad considering what we have done. For a generation, or longer now, we have been under "Stirrer-Uppers" and evangelists "crying aloud in the streets," who claim to represent Him "whose voice was not lifted up in the street." Endeavoring to make us believe that greater physical activity, and more of our "good work"—their interpretation, of course, would bring us into the Kingdom of God and the Kingdom of God into us. God does not seem to be in a hurry! Jesus was not in a hurry. His ministry did not last over a long time. He did not seem to be nearly so anxious to "get things done" as to be doing them. For God is! And the Kingdom of God is coming. There are those to whom its coming seems imperceptible; but history does not miss recording events which prove its coming.

Another emphasis of that Conference was on the Christian's use of money. Perhaps in no act of Christian behavior have we been more remiss than in the just use of money. The United States has come to be fabulously and perhaps notoriously rich in money. However, this great wealth has never been justly allocated as its use and needs demand.

Persons and families of great wealth have given to colleges, set up foundations, erected hospitals and given great gifts to other worthy needs and institutions. To these donors are due real and hearty encomium. That way and means of helping mankind is commendable. Still, we face the fact that actual needs, even demands, increase more rapidly than giving increases. Witness now the call from colleges, small and great, asking for from one million to fifty millions increase in endowment, which increased demand upon college work make necessary. It is refreshing to remember now, with no discount of the work done by great State Universities, that the call comes from the colleges raised up and supported by "gifts" from Christian people. It is not to be forgot that those who then gave, and have continued to give had in mind what Bach so well expressed, "Lord, what I have is only thy gift."

Members of Christian churches whose incomes have remained in lower and middle-class brackets, have not so much become noted for increased and more liberal giving, and support of Christian institutions. One major tenet of the Christian religion is, that money used for the work of foreign missions pays in good returns, in favorable sentiment, mutual respect and in conversion to the Christian way of life. Let's exalt God and His doctrine of salvation in our pulpit work, and as well in the Christian grace of giving, "as God has prospered us."

Dr. Albert D. Stauffacher and Dr. Wofford C. Timmons, both of New York City, nationally known Congregational Christian Churchmen, sailed Monday, February 21, from Los Angeles, California, on the S. S. Lurline for an intensive six weeks' speaking and conference mission among the churches of the Hawaiian Islands. They will present the call of missions and evangelism. "The 'Big Three' in our world today are not atomic bombs, death germs and supersonic speed, or Stalin, Bevin and Truman, but, among the common people of the world the 'Big Three' are faith, hope and love," said Dr. Stauffacher on the eve of sailing.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The financial obligations of Elon College are not very different to those of any other institution or business. That is, we have certain bills that must be paid on the first and fifteenth of each month. Faculty salaries are paid on a monthly basis. For the institution to maintain its standing and efficiency all such bills must be met promptly.

There are different sources of income from which the college may receive funds for current demands. The church has always felt an obligation to assist in the support of its college. Fortunately, it has a definite plan and a very acceptable system for lending its support. Each church and Sunday school is expected to make contributions quarterly or more frequently. The total amount to be paid for the ensuing conference year is given to each church by its conference at the beginning of the conference year. These frequent or infrequent contributions are supposed to total that amount. The amount apportioned to the churches for 1950 is approximately 20 per cent increase over last year's apportionment. Due to the comparatively small amount apportioned to the churches for the college it is sincerely hoped that all churches will accept this small increase apportioned for the college and make their payments accordingly. The church has been very faithful in its support and the college is most appreciative.

A CHURCH IS BORN.

[Extracts from speech at the Mid-Winter Meeting by Rev. Kenneth E. Seim, Minister of the Colonial Church of Edina, Minneapolis, Minnesota.]

We were overjoyed when at our first worship service, which was held in the local school on March 31, 87 worshippers were present. A week later the Sunday school was started with five pupils and three teachers. Two months later on June 9 we were organized as a church and on November 3, when we closed our charter membership rolls we had 135 members. At present our membership is just under 300 and our Sunday school has an enrollment of 153. All this growth has taken place while we are still meeting in the school. We have high hopes of being able to move into our new church next month.

If there is anything unique and different in our situation it is the way the men of the church have taken hold and made things go. We are making our own pews and chancel furniture. A wooden cross was made by a member who is Superintendent of Streets in our little village. Offering plates have been made by a young dentist and I defy anyone to tell any of these pieces from the best that Whittemore Associates or the American Seating Co. put out. This same young dentist made the crowing rooster which is to be placed on our church steeple. A retired school teacher made a beautiful beaten copper book holder for the official membership roll of the church, a book plate for our hymn books was cut by one of the men, etc. I could go on and name a dozen other things which we will build ourselves in the future.

Mr. Seim then gave some striking examples of the power of the Christian faith to transform lives and to bring into active participation in the church young men and women who heretofore have found no place for the church in their lives. One such young professional man was a spark plug in raising the $20,000 needed to start building a church.

Continuing Mr. Seim said, "The work is truly needed in the area. It is a missionary field. One is surprised at the adults that have never been baptized, to say nothing of belonging to a church. I have baptized more adults on this field in three years than in all my other parishes combined! The area is growing in leaps and bounds. It is the second fastest growing area in Minneapolis and the surrounding suburbs. And that young families are moving into the area is attested to by the fact that we have 52 children on our Cradle Roll.

The Elon College Choir will appear at Newport News Friday evening of this week, at Suffolk Sunday morning and at the Norfolk Temple Sunday evening.

The World for Christ

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

American Board Mission,
Shaowu, Fukien, China,
February 3, 1949.

DEAR FRIENDS:

January has passed so rapidly I hardly know where it has gone. Over and through all, like an eagle hovering over its prey, has lingered the thought of the critical national situation. The question now seems to be "What will Communist China be like?"

Shortly after Christmas, a letter came from Yankou asking me (Dick) to come down to conduct a communion and baptismal service. Mid-winter is no time to travel on a rice boat I soon discovered. I was cold enough anyway but when I saw the boatman climb down into that icy water to move the boat off the rocks, I had a sympathetic chill. After three days and two nights, we arrived at Yankou (80 miles) to find that recently half of the city had been destroyed by fire (the business section). Rumors attributed the blaze to Communists but there was no evidence to prove it.

The service on the first Sunday morning in 1949 was a thrilling one for me. It was the first time I had baptized Chinese Christians. There were ten adults and ten babies. They had been prepared for baptism by the local preacher, Mr. Lin, who is not yet ordained. Two of the candidates, both old men, spoke a different dialect so that all had to be interpreted to them in another brand of Chinese. I had carefully prepared the service before leaving Shaowu and it was mimeographed. We followed the same service in the Pilgrim Hymnal which many of you use when you observe the Lord's Supper.

The Chinese Christians, in adopting the sacrament of Communion, have found it necessary to make some modifications. In the first place, no grape juice is available so sugar water is used (this is also used for feasts as many Christians do not drink wine). Secondly, bread is not available in the shops of the smaller towns so a type of unfrosted sponge cake is used. In South China the staff of life is rice and I personally think something made from rice would be far more appropriate for communion but such is the custom. We all know that the important thing in the observance of the Lord's Supper is not the physical elements but the spiritual fellowship with one another and with our risen Lord.

As we shared this common meal in commemoration of the Lord's last supper with his disciples, the feeling of the Oneness of all peoples came to me. Although, at first, we were prone to notice the differences between Eastern and Western customs and habits, we now are beginning to see a bit more deeply; we can see that we have more similarities than differences and that we humans are essentially alike—in our strengths and in our weaknesses. The color of our skins, the slant of our eyes may vary but in the inward man, we are One. Most nations and peoples will give lip service to the idea of the Unity of mankind, yet men go on killing, fighting and destroying. We who are Christians must pledge ourselves anew to bring to pass this peace and understanding, this common unity which we feel so deeply as we partake of the Lord's supper.

One fact is evident to us. The common people of China, just as the common people of America, do not want war. There is hardly a prayer I have heard which does not include a petition for peace. The Chinese seldom volunteer for military service. Draftees are rounded up in the country, chained together, and marched back to town to serve in the army. One of the reasons Generalissimo Chang fell from power so quickly, I believe, is because all he promised was war which nobody wants. I feel just as sure that if we questioned the common people of Russia or Holland, the same result would be found. When will the leaders of the world give up their mistaken ideas of military supremacy and might and listen to the voices of the people which universally say, "We are One people, basically alike, and our only desire is to live in peace with one another." As I gave the bread and the cup that cold January morning to more than one hundred of our Chinese brothers—to the farmer, his skin wrinkled by exposure and bitter toil; to the laborer who literally carries on his back the loads of mankind; to the mothers who work from dawn to dark to look after their families—my mind was consumed with these thoughts of our common unity symbolically expressed in this service.

After several days in Yankou, I went on down to Nanping where Dr. Ed and Frances Riggs were waiting with the truck. They had been down to Foochow. We made the trip back in one day (125 miles) just in time to begin preparing for Lunar New Year (January 28), the event of the year for the Chinese.

As part of the New Year celebration, I have been helping Pastor Huang with a series of evangelistic services using slides. The church has been packed full as usual when slides are shown. Several ushers have been planted in the crowds to keep the noise to a minimum and the results have been very good. I made a simple copying stand with which we are able to take pictures of Chinese characters and mottoes for use in preaching. My portable generator (purchased with some of the money given us by Southern Convention friends before we left the United States, puts out electric current (350 watts) for seven hours on a gallon of gasoline. As soon as the road to Kienning is repaired, we hope to be able to take trips into the country, using the truck, the generator and slides for our evangelistic and public health work.

Dorothy is enjoying a brief vacation from her teaching during the holidays. Lewis is growing daily and is developing a will and mind of his own. They join me in sending our love and greetings.

Cordially,
DICK JACKSON.

Twenty dollars still buys a ton of coal—delivered—to heat a mission school or hospital in China. It still pays tuition for a promising student at Union High School, Foochow. It still makes a hospital bed available for a needy patient for almost a month. It still buys enough rice to feed a pastor's family in Shaowu for three weeks. Twenty dollars—the cost of Christmas Day in most of our homes—can help bring Our Christian World Mission to life.

THE WORLD AT PRAYER.

By FLORENCE GORDON, Editorial Ass't
Foreign Missions Conference of North America.

Two little Indian boys in New Mexico hurried to school in starched white shirts; this was an important day. Fourteen women braved the swollen waters of Cranks Creek, Kentucky, to get to the Community Center. Sunset Gap, Tennessee, had icy roads, but a congregation gathered to "touch hands around the rolling world." At Tucson, Arizona, there were representatives of seventeen Indian tribes, besides Spanish-speaking people and "Anglos." Among the Navajo Indians at Ganado, a speaking choir of children had practiced for three weeks to take part in the service. Up in Alaska, cottage prayer meetings went on at Sitka from six in the morning until midnight; at Haines, a former opera singer came over from Port Chilkoot to sing Malotte's "The Lord's Prayer" and a friend sent a blossoming plant.

It was the World Day of Prayer. To millions the first Friday in Lent has come to have connotations: The World Day of Prayer. Traditionally, on the first Friday in Lent, Christians the world around unite in prayer for home and foreign missions. They keep the Day in the heart of Africa, in the frozen reaches of Baffin Land, in the bustling port cities of Latin America, in isolated villages of the Orient, as well as in thousands of communities in the United States and Canada. The service for the Day of Prayer finds its way into the walls of institutions; the sick, the aged, the blind, the residents in leper camps and tuberculosis sanatoriums, all share in the observance. Children join in the chorus of praise and petition; business women set their noon hour apart for corporate worship; groups of young people meet at night to pray together. There is no barrier of language, nor of distance, of color or creed; on the World Day of Prayer all make a common approach to the Father. Begun by one denomination in 1887, the World Day of Prayer has come over the years to be perhaps the greatest single unifying force among all Christian women everywhere.

Long in advance, the Foreign Missions Conference of North America mails the program, which has been prepared by the World Day of Prayer Committee of the United Council of Church Women, a group of women of several races and nationalities, to over seventy countries around the world, to be adapted and translated there, and distributed to the people in time for the Day. The Home Missions Council of North America and the home mission boards distribute the program to their home mission fields. The program on the uniform theme, "The Lord Is My Keeper," went overseas by airmail in July, 1948, for the coming World Day of Prayer, March 4, 1949. In at least two countries, India and China, correlation and extension of the World Day of Prayer observances has been made an integral part of the work of the National Christian Councils. Other lands have special committees which distribute the programs, administer the offerings, and gather up the accounts of the local services. When these reports are relayed to the Foreign Missions Conference each year, and added to those collected by the Home Missions Council and the denominations from within the United States and its possessions, they furnish a colorful, kaleidoscopic picture of worshippers of all races and nationalities in the Christian fellowship.

Nashville, Tennessee, had a city-wide service in a downtown church, but was able to draw on students of Scarritt College for Christian Workers from some twenty overseas lands to make the world fellowship real and close.

Frances De Pauw School of Los Angeles (Methodist), which has girls of Mexican, Cuban and other Central American backgrounds, as well as Chinese and Indians, maintained a twelve hour vigil of prayer. Each girl spent ten minutes at the altar, not leaving it till another girl arrived. At the close, the girls and staff all came together and followed the special children's World Day of Prayer program.

Flandreau, South Dakota, South Indian Vocational High School runs a garment factory in which some twenty Indian women and girls make garments for hospitals and schools throughout the whole Indian Service. Still sitting at their machines, they stopped very informally at noon-day to pray.

The World Day of Prayer was broadcast last year over the weekly chapel hour of the hospital at Tacoma Indian Mission Center, Tacoma, Washington. The ambulant patients crowded into the superintendent's office, where the broadcast originated, and the bed patients listened in with their headphones.

It is a lesson in geography, anthropology, linguistics, horticulture, as well as in the ecumenical movement, to read the reports that come in from all parts of the world. February 13 was one of the hottest days of the season, with many of the people still away at summer resorts. It was a day with two feet of snow on the ground, and absentees still away at the trapping camps. It came in the middle of the rainy season, but people would not be kept away. It came in the middle of the Chinese New Year celebration but Christians made it a part of the celebration. Flowering plum, narcissi and Chinese lilies decorated the churches in China; in Havana, "we had our Spanish service in the patio out in the shade of flamboyant trees." In Tasmania and Queensland, Australia, there were services in the cathedral; in the little red church at Jobat, South India, fifty Bhil women sat on mats on the floor while one of them led the service in Hindi. In Madras, Miss Dorothy Brockway, the principal of St. Christopher's Training College, one of the eight union colleges in the Orient which receive a share of the World Day of Prayer offerings, told the Tamil and Telugu students of the World Day of Prayer service which she addressed in 1947 in snow-bound Harrisburg, Pennsylvania.

At Tehran they said the Lord's Prayer in fourteen tongues. In Lima, Peru, a Chinese woman offered prayer who had often taken part in the services in her homeland. In Athens, the program was translated into Greek by a medical student. The stencils for mimeographing it were cut by a typist who refused any pay. A blind pastor and his wife made an Armenian translation; both Greek and Armenian versions were handed out in the churches of Athens and Piraeus the week before, so that worshippers could prepare their hearts.

Two preliminary meetings were

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

Do you behave well when you are in the Sunday school building or church? I hope so. I have seen youngsters swarming down the aisles, over the pulpit, jumping over the benches and pews, banging on the piano, racing up the stairs. Have you? I know that it is very hard to be still and to be quiet, but in God's house it is the thing to do. For grownups, too. I don't think they should smoke anywhere in the church building. That doesn't mean that we can't play, have fun and enjoy ourselves.

All noise and play gets tiresome just as all quiet and sit-so-very-still does. What to do then? Walk quietly or run with light steps. Practice on the piano at home! If you don't have one, then you don't need to practice at all. Do mind the teacher when she says to sit or stand. I know that you won't feel like it sometimes but she usually has a good reason!

God made the night so we could rest ourselves and our eyes. People who have visited in the far north countries of Europe where the sun only sets for a short while each night, say that it hurts their eyes and gets them out of their sleeping habits. So they have come to call those places "The Land of the Midnight Sun." God made the night for quiet time. Man made churches for quiet time. There, we can think about God the loving Father, and be quiet and feel restful. Not when you are little, but as you grow older you will begin to feel the calm and ease of being in church.

It is easier to be noisy and cause trouble when you are with a crowd. A bunch of boys have fun teasing their teacher, a group of girls may giggle and giggle. You don't have to be very good or very bad. Just be yourself.

When you go to Sunday school do these things. Try to be on time. You may miss a special treat if you are very late. Take off your coat or hat if the teacher asks you, take your money but keep it in your pocket or some safe place where it won't roll on the floor. Help if the teacher calls for you and be ready to sing, play or whatever.

Just for a little while once a week we have an opportunity to be together in God's house. Let's make it a happy time. If you like to show off, forget it! The teacher has seen many show-offs, stand-offs and—you know what brings you the most happiness. Be glad that you aren't living in the time of the Puritans and have to sit through two- or three-hour sermons!

If you have trouble remembering all these things, why don't you ask your mother or dad to help you remember? You can talk it over on the way to church.

Should you be very bad and the teacher speaks to your mother about what you did, be brave, face up and try to do better. Grownups do love little folks and because they were once little, they know how hard being "good" can be. There is a word that tell us about happy times at home, school or church. It is cooperation.

P. S. to Mothers: Jesus came that men might learn to love and live with one another. It is the first task of the teacher—to have happy boys and girls in accord. It is the major task of the home. Perfection in emotional behavior is never reached but in spite of the warnings of "frustrations" and "behaviorism" the parent must take as a prime duty the training of the child to obey the laws of God and man. "I don't wanna" can make wars, ruin a civilization and prevent church union!

WHEN JERRY DID NOT COME HOME.

By JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY.
(American Mother for 1947.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"May I go to play with Jack?" inquired four-year-old Jerry.

"Oh, he lives too far away," answered his mother.

"I've been there lots of times with the other boys; I know the way."

"Will you come back at noon, promptly, when the children come from school?"

"Yes, I'll come."

So Jerry went to Jake's—over the hill, four blocks away. His mother telephoned to be sure he had arrived, and Jack's mother promised to send him home at noon. She did send him but he failed to appear.

After a while Jerry's elder brother went out to search for him, and then his mother went out, but neither of them found any trace of the child. Later, his mother telephoned to the homes where she thought he might have gone, but she could find no one who had seen him. It was an anxious time, and Dad was out of town. Mother feared Jerry had gone off with some stranger; he was a sociable boy, exactly the type to attract outsiders. His brown eyes usually sparkled with enthusiasm and, as his aunt said, he "radiated personality."

At about two o'clock Jerry sauntered in. "Where have you been?" Mother demanded.

It seemed he had gone to the park and had played with some boys until school time and then, after loitering about the animal cages, he had come home a long, roundabout way.

Mother refrained from comment until Jerry had eaten his lunch. Then she said, "You will have to be punished; you broke your promise. This is very serious. You will have either to stay in the yard for a week or else to give up your desserts for a week. You may choose."

"I choose to give up desserts," he answered in a low tone.

"There will be some very nice desserts, and you will be obliged to eat certain foods that you don't like so well to take their place."

"I know; but it will be better than to stay at home for a whole week. I would be dreadful not to go out on the street for so long."

It was hard to have to punish him—he was so manly about it—and all Mother's worry and anger had disappeared before the punishment began, but she persisted. He cried just a little on two occasions, but he did not seem at all resentful.

Mother, very carefully, explained to him twice—before the punishment began and after it had ended—that he must either come right home when she expected him or have someone telephone to her. She told him she must always know his whereabouts. He realized the punishment was just, and it evidently made a strong impression on him, for since then he has never failed to come home on time or else to let his mother know the reason. He learned, also, to make few promises and to keep those he did make.

Be not apt to relate news, if you know not the truth thereof.

—George Washington.

NOW IS NOT THE TIME TO QUIT IN THE NEAR EAST.

By LUTHER R. FOWLE,
Istanbul, Turkey.

No sooner did the American Colonies successfully break their political ties with Britain, then American merchants and traders sent out their fast sailing ships to China, the Indian Ocean, and the Mediterranean in search of profitable commerce.

The second American Agency to reach overseas made itself so strongly felt in New England, that within 25 years of our independence the General Court of the Commonwealth of Massachusetts had chartered the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions, a corporate expression of concern and spiritual responsibility for all the children of men, of whatever race or creed.

In as early a time as that Business and the Church knew instinctively that our world was One World. How much more clearly we see it today at the cost of millions of lives and billions of treasure.

The first task of our American Board missionaries in the Ottoman Empire in 1820 was to seek fellowship with the great Eastern churches and their people. The proud Moslem then felt himself immeasurably superior to the Christian and in many ways he was. The "Christian" he knew was the oppressed representatives of races of long history belonging to the Orthodox Greek and the Armenian Gregorian Churches which for many years had been in a period of spiritual and intellectual eclipse.

So Americans learned the languages of the Near East—Albanian, Bulgarian, modern Greek, Turkish, Arabic—and in all of these grammars were written, a literature built up, the Bible translated, schools started—in short the darkness of post-Crusade Christianity in the Middle East began to show new light. Until 1914, some 25,000 students were in schools operated by or supervised from American Board Mission stations. Meanwhile a dozen hospitals with American doctors and nurses were carrying on their work throughout the land. Inevitably these activities had a substantial influence not only on the people directly touched, but on the thinking and development of every race in the land.

The defeat of Germany and Turkey in 1918 brought about the collapse of the Ottoman Empire and the loss of all the Arab lands to the south. Under the leadership of Musafa Kemal Ataturk there arose from the ruins a vigorous Turkish National Republic seeking a new life in terms of Western democracy. With this new Republic began a new relationship. The political, social and cultural reforms which have been carried through in 25 years are well known. American schools are crowded with Turkish youth and we can take in only about one-third of those who apply.

But Turkey's task is immeasurably burdened by the stern necessity of protecting her frontiers against which Soviet Russia presses, both in the Caucasus and along the Bulgarian frontier of European Turkey. We in distant America cannot appreciate that pressure. Yet to every Soviet suggestion of ceding Turkish provinces, or accepting Russian help in holding the Bosphorus or the Dardanelles Turkey has said, "No." So today this Turkish Republic holds the central bastion which alone seems to prevent Soviet Russia from descending to the Mediterranean, outflanking Greece and Italy, controlling Suez and the Arab lands and their essential oil. Turkey took this stand unhesitatingly in 1945, when none stood with her.

It is altogether fitting that we of America, in our own interest as well as that of Turkey and all non-Soviet lands, are now aiding Turkey in her road and transport systems, in harbor improvement, and in equipment essential to the protection of her borders.

The money spent through American educational and mission enterprises is the most economical American money spent in Turkey. For school tuitions and other income inside Turkey is far larger than the funds from America expended in these activities. In fact, since the American Board began its work in Turkey in 1820, it has expended American funds to the end of 1947 in the sum of $12,900,793.

It is interesting to note that the Navy Department is discussing the construction of a super-airplane carrier, to cost $124,000,000. One such ship is to cost ten times the sum spent from America in 128 years, in the endeavor to make known to all the people of the former Ottoman Empire the spirit and true foundations of Western democracy, the value of the individual, the importance of his education and responsibility. Mission representatives who have come to respect and love the peoples of these lands, whose languages and cultures they know, never dreamed that their labors might have wide significance for war or peace. Yet who can deny the part that these friendly messengers from the west have had, in the position now taken and bravely held by Turkey, in the wide struggle between the totalitarian and free worlds.

Now is not the time to quit. Turkey is sending vastly increased numbers of her young men and women to study here in the west. They will return, to strengthen the currents of democratic thought, and responsible public opinion. Let us not fail the sorely straitened lands of Europe who have been our partners against oppression and autocracy, as they painfully grope their way back to economic security, political stability and the better life that each and all seek.

COUNCIL OF RELIGIOUS EDUCATION MEETS.

Due in 1952.*

Prominent in the Council's discussion of future plans was the announcement that the completed Revised Standard Version of the Bible will be published in the fall of 1952. The New Testament was issued in 1946. Dr. Weigle, chairman of the Standard Bible Committee, will give his entire time to the Old Testament revision after his retirement from Yale Divinity School next June. The introduction of the completed version is to be timed with a nation-wide observance during Religious Education Week of 1952.

Toward Japanese Democracy.

The last address on the week's program was given by Dr. Paul H. Vieth, former religious education consultant to General MacArthur's staff in Japan.

"The Japanese are interested in everything western, including Christianity," Dr. Vieth said. "This represents a strategic opportunity for us to practice our doctrines of good will and service. Japan wants to re-establish its economy. Unless we help her do so we will injure the chances for the establishment of a democracy like that of the Western nations which have presumed to teach Japan the ways of peace and plenty."

PARABLES OF JESUS.

LESSON X—MARCH 6, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Do not be deceived; God is not mocked; whatsoever a man sows, that will he also reap.—Galatians 6:7.

LESSON: Mark 4; Luke 15:11-24.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 13:10-17.

The World's Greatest Story Teller.

Jesus was undoubtedly the world's greatest story teller. That is perhaps one of the main reasons why the common people heard Him gladly—He told stories, and He told them well, superlatively well. He would take a great religious truth, sometimes something that was quite abstract, or something that would be unintelligible to untutored and ordinary people, and put it in the form of a parable or a story, and thus help them to get the meaning of what He said. That is if they really wanted to know the meaning. For Jesus Himself recognized that His stories concealed rather than revealed the truth to some folks. And He was repeatedly exhorting men to take heed how they heard, to give attention to hearing. The main point is that Jesus taught many things by parables, which is another way of saying that He taught by what in many instances were simply stories. Religious leaders do well when they use the story as a form of teaching effectively.

Some Stories of the Kingdom of Heaven.

"Whereunto shall we liken the kingdom of God? Or with what comparison shall we compare it?" Jesus asked. He knew that it would do little good to answer the question with some theological, abstract term—the folks would not know what He was talking about. He therefore proceeded to put the thing which they did not know in terms of things which they did know. He spoke to them in parables. He told them stories.

For instance He told the story of the sower who went forth to sow the seed for his crops. With a few bold strokes he pictures the man as he scatters the seed for and wide across the broad acres, or perhaps more specifically over the smaller plot. Some of the seed fell on the hard, well-beaten path that ran between the plots of ground, and which took the place of fences as boundary lines, and lying there on top of the ground the birds quickly ate them up. Other seed fell in good soil, but it was simply a thin layer of dirt on the hard limestone beneath and although it sprang up, it had no root and quickly faded away and died when the sun's rays struck it. Other seed also fell in good ground and actually sprang up and grew rather well, but the thorns and weeds of the plot eventually choked the life out of the tender young plants. Some of the seed fell on good ground and not only grew up, but came to fruition. But even this seed brought forth varying yields. There, said the Master, we have a picture of what happens to the word of God when sowed in human hearts. Some of it never takes root and is lost, some of it does show feeble signs of growth, but the life has no root or depth. Other seed take root and give promise of bearing fruit, but alas the things of the world choke out the life. But all is not loss. Some of the seed fall on good ground and it bears fruit, in varying quantities to be sure, but the point is that it bears fruit. Let a man think over that simple story and he will begin to get the point, he will see the truth therein embedded. There are of course other points in the story, but one is best prepared to interpret a parable when he looks for the main, central truth, rather than to make the thing walk on all fours, make every detail a main point.

There is the story of how the kingdom grows. It is like a man who plants seed, and tends to the growing crop, but after all the life process is a mystery to him. "It grows, he knows not how." The kingdom grows gradually. It has inner life and vitality. Man may, and must do his part, but it is God who gives the increase. Man is not to bring in the kingdom by his work. He can help by his cooperation.

The kingdom seemed so small in Jesus' day, even as it may seem small in our day. Well, it is like a grain of mustard seed, which is the smallest of all seed, or at least it was in comparison with other seed in Jesus' day. But great things from little things grow. A mustard seed, small as it was, could become a great herb or tree which could give shelter to the birds and sanctuary for their nests. Despise not the day of small beginnings. Mighty oaks from tiny acorns grow.

It should be noted that Jesus emphasized, by repetition, the vitality of the inner forces of the kingdom. The words, like seed, have tremendous vitality and life-giving power. Ideas are dynamic and transforming. The kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but power.

A Story About Two Sons.

The lesson for today is related to Temperance Sunday. The Lesson Committee therefore wisely chose portions of Scripture which deal with sowing and reaping. The parables or stories presented above presented it in the field of the physical world. The other story given presents it in the world of persons. It is the well-known and well-loved story of the Prodigal Son and of the Elder Brother. Here indeed is a living story, drawn out in flesh and blood of the inevitable and the inexorable relation between sowing and reaping. The Prodigal Son shows self-expression gone to its logical limits, the ultimate reaping of the whirlwind because one had sown to the wind. There is a tragic element in the picture of that boy far away from home, feeding swine and eating the same husks that the swine themselves ate. But there is something thrilling in the picture of him "coming to himself" and arising and going unto his father with penitence in his heart and confession on his lips. This story does concern sowing and reaping. But it concerns something even more infinitely deep and precious. It shows God's heart toward His erring children, His grace to those who have failed who in penitence turn to Him. That is why the story is immortal.

Then of course there is the ugly and the vicious spirit of the elder brother. He sulked when he should have shouted for joy. But he was symbolic of many of the religious leaders of that day. And he is symbolic of many self-righteous people of this day. The Master knew what was in man and He here draws the picture out of that knowledge of man. It may be heresy, but if it is make the most of it. I prefer the prodigal son to the elder brother. How about you?

Censure is the tax a man pays to the public for being eminent.—Swift.

OUR. CHRISTIAN WORLD TASK.

couraging evidences are, for the most part, surface symptoms.

IV.

This, then, is the setting for your discussions in these days. What does it mean for the enterprise of Christian education? . . .

I have urged that the world situation is reflected in microcosm on this continent. We may carry the point one step further, and suggest that the North American situation is reflected, in miniature and in epitomy, within Christian education. This is just as we should expect. For education has been a special preoccupation of the American people in the recent period. The newest trends, in both thought and method, have had their earliest development and their fullest and most extreme exploitation here. It is here, much more than in the pulpit or in any other aspect of its manifold program, that the church has been compelled to face the movements of modern thought and modern life, to confront their sharpest challenge to old patterns of belief and practice, to come to terms with modern culture, and to make accommodation to it. In this noteworthy sense at least, Christian education has been on the frontiers of the church's life, has served as advance guard and pioneer, has functioned as the growing edge of Christian adventure and advance.

The results are too well known to you to permit detailed exposition. It has been an exciting role and a difficult one—this role of bridge between tradition and novelty, between past and future, between an institution which, on the whole, continues relatively unmodified in outlook and habits and a world of culture and conviction, of presuppositions and practice, which has been moving, on the whole, steadily and rapidly away from the church. Hard-pressed to continue contact at both ends, to maintain status within the kaleidoscopic transmutations in general education and culture and to preserve the confidence of the churches, Christian education has had no alternative but to effect almost day-by-day accommodation, often through hurried improvisations.

. . . I should like to declare my belief that the church school has been given an impossible task. Confronted by a prodigious expansion in secular education—buildings, equipment, budgets, personnel; seemingly unlimited civic funds at their command; new divisions, departments, subjects spawning with exultant unrestraint; one sees the church school, at once breathless and excited, intrigued and affrighted, panting to keep pace; limited in time available to one or two hours weekly in comparison with five full school days; limited in equipment to the meager facilities of the church building in comparison with the magnificent learning factories of secular education; limited in personnel to the undependable services of an inadequate staff of ill-trained volunteers in comparison with vast regiments of highly trained professionals; limited (many would contend) by traditional ideologies in comparison to the newest fashions of an ever-changing secular mind. Recourse has been had to all manner of ingenious expedients. . . . But who would question that, generally speaking, the end-product in the eyes of the pupils upon whom these comparisons strike with inescapable vividness is a poor showing in comparison with "general education?"

This has been true equally in the realm of thought and in the area of method.

Far more than any other aspect of the church's program, Christian education has had to come to terms with dominant trends in the thought of the times. Church worship could perpetuate traditional patterns; the pulpit could continue its accustomed message and manner of presentation. But the church school, meeting but once weekly, without much support of traditional liturgy, the keen young minds of the nation's youth, fresh from intriguing and persuasive indoctrination in the latest dogmas of contemporary thought through the week-day classroom, has had no alternative but to meet the challenge head-on and make such adjustment as it could. That adjustment, inevitably, has been in either of two opposite directions, and often extreme in both directions—either rejection of the modern mind, which has driven an impossible chasm between the one-hour a week teaching of the church school and the twenty-hour a week teaching of the secular classroom; or accommodation to the modern mind, which often impresses youth as a somewhat hurried and harassed and humiliating revamping of Christian faith, to be tacked on to the fringes, or squeezed into the interstices, of a predominantly secular outlook.

. . . To meet, at all adequately and effectively, the needs of this tense and tragic hour at any point will be superlatively difficult. But, two things at least are clear. The hour is striking for a quite new, far more rigorous and far more vigorous, thrust of massed Christian attack on every hard-pressed front. In that advance, the only weapon of significant power is Christian faith in its full richness and profundity and certitude. More than that, this is the only message from our churches, whether on the far frontiers of the world mission or in this nation or in the immediate program of Christian education, which has any chance of arresting the attention let alone claiming the allegiance of those who understand their world's peril and care deeply for its salvaging, those who are worth reaching. Finally, it is the only message which accords with truth and reality, which is worthy of the Lord of all being and all life.

IT MAKES A DIFFERENCE.

Some years ago, at a drawing-room function, one of England's leading actors was asked to recite for the pleasure of his fellow guests. He consented and asked if there was anything special that his audience would like to hear. After a moment's pause, an aged minister arose and said, "Could you, Sir, recite to us the Twenty-Third Psalm?"

A strange look passed over the great actor's face. He paused for a moment, and then said, "I can, and I will upon one condition; and that is that, after I have recited it, you, my friend, will do the same." Impressively, the great actor began the psalm. His voice and his intonation were perfect. He held his audience spellbound; and, as he finished, a great burst of applause broke from the guests.

Then, as it died away, the aged minister arose and began to recite. His voice was not remarkable; his intonation was not faultless. When he had finished, no sound of applause broke the silence, but there was not a dry eye in the room, and many heads and hearts were bowed in reverential awe!

The great actor rose to his feet again. His voice shook with uncontrollable emotion as he laid his hand upon the shoulder of the aged minister, and said to the audience, "I have reached your eyes and ears, my friends. This man has reached your hearts. The difference is just this: I know the Twenty-Third Psalm, but he knows the Shepherd."—World's Crisis.

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

The Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage met in its regular annual meeting on February 16, with eleven out of fifteen members present, to consider the Superintendent's report as to the activities of the Orphanage during the year, 1948; and to transact such other matters that might come up for consideration.

The Superintendent's report showed that the Orphanage children had had excellent health during 1948 and that all of them gained weight except three girls. (They had been dieting to keep from getting too large.)

It also showed that the farm and dairy had produced well; that the children had had plenty of garden vegetables. We are now having plenty of turnip salad.

The Christian Orphanage has always been blessed with a splendid Board of Trustees; men and women of business ability, who are very considerate and fine to work with. It is a pleasure to serve as Superintendent under their leadership.

Early last year we decided to build a poultry house and put in a flock of chickens. We went to Greensboro and bought an army barrack and moved it down here and set it up. It makes an ideal poultry house. We had lots of hens given to us and we bought some pullets, and then we raised eighty during 1948. They are producing about 130 eggs per day. We had an expert to cull them since Christmas, and out of eighty hens he only discarded eight. The children here have all the eggs they need and are enjoying them to their hearts' content.

The weather continues to give us lots of rain in this section. The ground has not been dry enough to plow but three days since the first of December, 1948. It has greatly hindered the farmers in getting their land broken for their spring crops. But we do not worry. Every year we have a time to plant and a time to harvest.

THE WORLD AT PRAYER.

held with the deaconesses of the Dondi area in Angola, so that they might prepare the village women for the service in the Umbundu language. In Luluabourg, Belgian Congo, the village women studied the Bible verses of the program for two weeks before the Day. The Czech women enjoyed the Day so much that they planned for another prayer service before Whitsunday. In Lahore, Pakistan, all the denominations, the YWCA and the Salvation Army observed the Day, and a YWCA worker writes, "It was such a blessed service that the committee decided to have two services, one in April and one next November." Scotland reports a growing desire to hold monthly meetings to prepare for the Day. In Johannesburg, the program was translated into three Bantu languages, and many Bantu "joined the chain of prayer for the first time." Eight nationalities gathered together at that Bantu meeting in Johannesburg," writes a participant, "and as we lifted our voices in praise in a well-known hymn, the thought came to me suddenly that Heaven must be like that, all one in Christ, all barriers of race and creed fallen away."

It has often been mentioned that Queen Salote of the Tonga Islands, where the Day begins, regularly leads her subjects in the World Day of Prayer service. This year Queen Salote was visiting in Auckland, New Zealand, but she gathered a group of friends from the Islands about her and had a special World Day of Prayer service there. In a written statement she explained that she has observed the Day for twenty-two years.

The village of Star Child in North Kwantung, China, is in a country community isolated by miles of difficult transportation and by century-old customs which are largely untouched by our scientific age. In the small rural church there, the pastor's wife led the service. The report that was sent to the National Christian Council is translated literally in order to convey its original charm.

"A rural community is not able to get away from the holiday atmosphere of the New Year festival. The World Day of Prayer came exactly on the fourth of the New Year. The sky was bright and the air was warm. Many of the women wore the new clothes which are a part of the celebration. Smiling happily they came into the church, where they saw the benches arranged in a circle. At the opening of the circle was hung a map of the world. The chairs were bound together by a paper chain of many colors. This was a symbol of the inner meaning of the women of the world at prayer together.

"The chairman first of all talked about the map, so that a world consciousness would underlie the hour of prayer. Then the program issued by the Kwantung Synod (that sent out by the Foreign Missions Conference) was followed. Fifteen young men and women had been invited to take part in the program, some to sing, some to tell the special stories and some to lead in prayer. The meeting lasted for an hour and a half. Although we live in a country village, far removed from any city, in an humble little town, still we could be a part of the world united in prayer and could lift our earnest petitions that Christ's Kingdom would come on earth and that Christ's followers would be faithful to Him."

A woman said, "I never miss the World Day of Prayer service; it makes me feel connected with all the world." And a little girl, "After this, I am going to pray for everybody." There, probably, we have both the cause and the effect of the World Day of Prayer.

You are more likely to fail in your career from acquiring the habit of drinking liquor than from any of the other temptations likely to assail you. I have known of but few exceptions to the rule.—Andrew Carnegie.

REPORT FROM AFRICA.

stances the women and children have to do public service on the roads.

We called at the home of our pastor, Rev. Jayme Velinga, whose ordination I attended in 1946. He and his wife have been sent to this area as missionaries by the Umbundu Church, in the interior. Many of the drafted laborers and many of the families are from our own highland Christian communities and the people back home feel a deep responsibility for those of their number who have been taken away and also for the thousands of others who are not attached to the church, but for whom there is no hope in these camps and compounds.

Senhor Jayme and his wife and their eleven children live in a little two-room adobe house with an extra little hut a few feet away serving as a kitchen. The cleanliness and neatness of the house and the children has to be seen to be believed. We were invited in to have tea and a little fruit which they had secured somewhere, and then went out to inspect the garden. In this land of high prices Sr. Jayme's salary of $28 a month doesn't even begin to care for his family and so a big garden is essential. The whole family had pitched in and cleared several big patches of ground, perhaps an acre in all, of heavy thorn trees as high as a man and with spikes like three-penny nails. This brush had been piled in a sort of hedge to act as a deterrent to lions and then a well had been dug by hand. Fortunately they had to go down only eight or ten feet to strike the back seepage from the river. Little trenches were constructed and the water was drawn up by hand in improvised buckets (a second-hand, four-gallon oil tin costs $2 U.S.) and fed into the trenches. By this primitive means they managed to grow a lot of beans, tomatoes, cabbage and other things, some of which they eat themselves and some they sell to the vegetable-starved laborers in the camps.

One of the missionaries used a special gift to buy a small hand pump such as many American farm kitchens used to have and a short length of pipe, for about four times what these things cost in the United States, and for a time everything went well with all of the kids taking turns on the little pump, keeping it going continuously. However, the inevitable happened, and one of the little boys, not being used to even the simplest machinery and not noticing anything when the pump came loose from its plank base, broke it, and it is now in Benguella for repairs which will cost perhaps a quarter of a month's salary. Lest someone be tempted to give this worthy man a little engine and power pump let me hasten to say that he would have to pay as much for a quart of gas as you pay for a gallon and a half, and that a few hours' pumping would exhaust the very limited water supply.

After an hour or so in and around Sr. Jayme's home we took him into the car with us to visit one of his charges. In addition to his work at the cane plantation his parish includes a large number of fisheries, with several thousand workers, spread out over perhaps a hundred miles of coast. As we left, the mother and her flock of children lined up on the little veranda and sang a very touching song to speed us on our way.

Sr. Jayme has to visit the various parts of his spread-out parish on foot, on a bicycle, or by begging rides on the occasional heavy truck that comes through the desert or on the sailing barques that serve the fisheries. Each plantation or each fishery has a leader, one of the workmen, chosen by his fellows, who keeps the services going, runs a little night school, and serves generally as a morale builder. There are also three or four unordained evangelists paid by the up-country church who help Sr. Jayme.

One of our greatest needs is for a missionary family to be located at the coast to help in the city work of Lobito and Benguella, and to move up and down the coast in these plantations and fisheries, encouraging and guiding the pastor and the lay leaders and establishing friendly relations with the many Portuguese managers so that the difficult conditions under which the men work may be alleviated in so far as is possible, and particularly so that the doors may be opened to the devoted representatives of the African Church as they go about their important task. The Church is willing and able to give large missionary offerings to keep its own representatives at work, but it is obviously unable to do anything towards providing the necessary missionary help and supervision. This is the task of the American Church. The great desire of the pastors, lay leaders and workers on the Coast is for a full-time missionary colleague and helper. They are exceedingly grateful for the occasional visits that Dr. McDowell is able to make from his station in the interior, and recognize that he can't do any more in the face of his heavy responsibilities there, but their pleading for one of their own is almost pathetic.

The death of Jan Hofmeyer in Johannesburg is generally conceded a blow to liberal forces in South Africa which will be deeply felt, especially by our missionaries. The Jan Hofmeyer School of Social Work, founded by our missionary, Ray Phillips, in 1938, will carry on the name honorably and well.

REPORT FROM AFRICA

By JOHN A. REULING

Lobito is the headquarters for our Coast work. The European part of the city is built on a 200-yard wide sand spit which runs out into the Atlantic Ocean parallel to a jutting headland, thus forming a beautiful deep harbor about two miles wide and four or five miles long. The American Board owns a house on the Bay side of this spit, which is at present occupied by Mrs. Jean Hollenbeck. Dr. Henry McDowell of Elende had come to the Coast to meet us and one of our Portuguese associate teachers was in the house waiting for a ship home so we were well cared for.

The European part of the city is beautiful, but the Native city is another matter. It is located at the head of the Bay in the desert, with not a blade of grass, a single tree, or any other thing of beauty. Little mud houses are crowded in together in the relentless blazing tropical sun. One small tap serves the entire community of perhaps 3,000 people, and women have to wait in line for hours to fill their water casks. All firewood has to be brought in on women's heads and is very expensive. A more dreary, desolate, dirty place is hard to imagine.

And yet in the midst of all this filth and its attendant misery, which is completely beyond the control of the people who are there under compulsion of one sort or another, many do manage to have some sort of family life and raise children who are well mannered, neat and clean. Our Mission outpost in their midst has given them a spirit and a will which overcomes all difficulties.

Our first evening in Lobito we were taken to the whitewashed building which serves both as church and school. The African pastor, Sr. Jesse Chipenda, as fine a man as there is in any land, met us and showed us the building. At first there were just a few people, but within a very short time the building filled up with perhaps 250 men, women and children. Pastor Jesse played the little rickety portable organ while one of the teachers led the singing. We were then introduced and spoke to the people, giving them greetings from the Church in America and trying to give them a little encouragement as they strive to preserve their integrity and to advance in the face of handicaps that would overwhelm most of us. At the conclusion of the service a group of women stood and sang for us and then the leader stepped forward and presented Dr. McKeith with a beautiful bouquet. Where they got it in this desert and what it cost them I cannot imagine. The woman who presented it was fine looking, neatly dressed, and with a colorful kerchief around her head. Much to our surprise we saw when she turned to leave the platform that she had a sleeping baby strapped to her back.

While we were still in Lobito Bay, Dr. Henry McDowell took us for a day's trip into the desert to the South. The whole trip, both ways, wasn't more than 180 miles, but the barren nature of the country, the rough track which served for a road, and the complete absence of any kind of traffic gave an illusion of remoteness which is hard to describe.

Our first stop was at Dombe Grande. Here a river flows from the highlands, through the desert, and into the sea. A company has secured the rights to the river bottom and has large plantations of sugar cane and palm nuts which are ground to produce oil. The Africans who supply all of the plantation labor are brought from their homes in the interior under a sort of labor draft. They have little or no choice in the matter and have to go when called, for terms varying from a year to two years. The pay that they receive for this service is sub-economic, so their wives and children in the interior have to scratch as best they can, and that best is very meagre indeed, particularly as in many in- (Continued on page 15)

Beloved Orphanage Superintendent Passes

CHARLES D. JOHNSTON

October 23, 1870—February 27, 1949

The Southern Convention has sustained a great loss in the death of Mr. C. D. Johnston, Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. In his seventy-ninth year, Mr. Johnston earned his release from the bonds of mortal life at ten o'clock Sunday night, February 27, in his home at Elon College, N. C. His call came to him as it should have come—in his home with his loved ones after another day of devoted service to "his children" at the Christian Orphanage. There was no lingering illness, but a quick call and he was ready.

Affectionately known as "Uncle Charlie," Mr. Johnston was for 33 years the kind and efficient Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. Drafted by his church to the distinguished position he proved himself a faithful, efficient and trusted servant of the church. He was the kindly "father" to more than 600 children coming to the Orphanage during his service. Most of these boys and girls have grown into manhood and womanhood and they rise up to call him blessed.

Taking the responsibility of directing the Christian Orphanage when the institution was ill-housed and inadequately financed, Mr. Johnston gained the respect of the church until today the Orphanage is liberally supported by the church and by many outside the church. The improved facilities of the Orphanage, together with a well-directed program are a tribute to his good management. Not only has Mr. Johnston served the Orphanage for these many years, but he has also been a valued member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College, and has served his church on other boards and committees, always doing his best to serve when called upon. He was a loyal member of the Elon College Community Church.

Mr. Johnston's place will be difficult to fill at the Orphanage and in the church at large. May God raise up other laymen who will love the church as did "Uncle Charlie" Johnston.

Funeral services were conducted at 11:00 on Wednesday, March 2, and his body was laid to rest amid a beautiful floral tribute in Magnolia Cemetery. He is survived by a large and distinguished family of children and grandchildren.

A full report will appear later in THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Superintendent Scott and Dr. Stanley U. North of the City Work Department of the Board of Home Missions, New York, visited extensively the churches of the Convention during the past week. Places and opportunities of Church Extension were found. Dr. North expressed himself most favorably with the work being done in the Convention but also expressed amazement that we are not doing more to establish new churches in growing communities both in Virginia and North Carolina.

DRAMA TO BE PRESENTED FOR WORLD DAY OF PRAYER.

The true story of Congregational Church establishment in small towns is to be presented as a drama for the World Day of Prayer on "Living—1949."

The building of a church in a typical American community will be the subject of NBC's "Living—1949" program on Sunday, March 6 (4:35 p. m., EST), when the documentary series marks the World Day of Prayer. The title: "A Blueprint and a Prayer."

This story of modern religious life reflects the plight of communities, springing up everywhere, whose residents have no church facilities. It is, in particular, the true story of the Rev. John F. McClelland, Congregational minister, who moved in on churchless Silver Spring, Maryland, and established a church, first in the public park, now in the high school gymnasium.

The Montgomery Blair High School gym will be the scene of a special pick-up during the broadcast. With the floor swept up after the Saturday night school dance, folding chairs brought up from the basement, improvised altar set up under the basketball scoreboard, the members of Congregational Christian Church will be gathered for worship.

The script is by Lou Hazam, regular "Living—1949" writer, resident of Silver Spring, and member, with his family, of Congregational Christian Church. Ben Grauer will be narrator, and Milton Katims will direct the orchestra.

NATIONAL CONVENTION ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The educational agencies of the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Congregational Christian Churches will sponsor a National Conference on Christian Education at Lakeside, Ohio, June 28 to July 1, 1949. It will offer an opportunity for us to demonstrate "Our United Witness for Christ," which is the conference theme. The purpose of the conference is to dedicate ourselves to a united witness for Christ through:

1. Facing our opportunity for Christian Education together.
2. Finding new resources for personal religious living, Bible study, worship and fellowship.
3. Considering the mission of the Church in the modern world and the responsibility of Christian Education.

More than 750 Congregational Christian people are expected to attend this meeting. There will be 1,500 delegates in all. It will be the first large national gathering of representatives from both denominations meeting to work together and to become acquainted with one another. This is an opportunity for thinking about the concerns of the Christian Education program in our church life.

The program will include seminars for every kind of worker in the church—sections for workers with every age group, for ministers, laymen, and many subjects of general but imperative concern for church members today. There will be specialization seminars on the various functional parts of the church program. Such things as drama, worship, radio and television, various social problems, as well as teaching methods and techniques with various age groups will be the subjects of some of these discussions. There is to be a set of seminars which are of general nature. These will be personally enriching and inspiring and instructive to people who are working in places of leadership in the educational program of our churches.

There will be platform presentations by well known church leaders. Dr. Henry Smith Leiper will keynote the conference with a message from the World Council of Churches, of which he is a staff member, and of the Ecumenical movement in Christendom. Dr. David Baker, editor of The MISSION PERIOD AND OUR CHRISTIAN WORLD MISSION.

March, April, May and June constitute the Mission Period of the Convention. The tragedies of our world without Christ ought to enable us to see the joy and peace in a world with Christ. Our gifts laid upon the altar to give Christ to the world—that is a practical part of "Our Christian World Mission." We ought to be concerned and we ought to work for the full payment of our missionary apportionment. That will be the minimum of an earnest effort on the part of the churches of the Southern Convention to give Jesus Christ to the world.

We cannot and we must not fail the Richard Jacksons and their colleagues in Shaowu during these trying days in China. Jesus Christ is the only answer to the problems of China, as He is the only answer to the sorrows and strife of the whole world. Our entire Foreign Mission Apportionment must be raised if we are to do anything like our reasonable share in Shaowu and in the other mission stations of our denomination around the world.

We must establish new churches within the Convention. There are opportunities and new communities awaiting our action. The only thing holding us back is the lack of money! If our churches will raise in full their Home Mission Apportionment we will have two or three new churches to report within the year.

Under the new Apportionment Schedule adopted by the Convention and its Conferences, Shaowu and Church Extension are included in the total Foreign and Home Mission Apportionment. We urge our people to devote themselves to the raising of the Missionary Apportionment in full.

Many of our churches will use the Cent-A-Meal Plan to help raise in full the mission apportionment. We strongly urge our churches to participate in this plan. Stickers for coin boxes have been sent to pastors for distribution among the members of our churches. There are approximately 10,000 families in our churches of the Southern Convention. There are 122 days in the Mission Period. If every family in the Convention would give just a cent a meal during March, April, May and June, it would mean that $36,000.00 could be raised in this way alone for the advancement of the Kingdom for which Jesus Christ died. Is that asking too much?

Give Jesus Christ a chance with your life and substance during Mission Period. Obtain information concerning the Cent-A-Meal Plan from your pastor, or write direct to The Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C., and material will be sent.

The Congregational Christians have a world parish of nearly 40 millions of people. We have committed ourselves to give Jesus Christ to these people. They cannot receive unless missionaries be sent. Missionaries cannot go unless we will give of our means. We have committed our lives to Jesus Christ and His work. Let us fulfill our commitment by our gifts.

CONVENTION-WIDE EVANGELISM.

Spasmodic and desultory efforts in evangelism produce negligible results. Greatest gains in membership during recent years, according to denominations, have resulted from organized, cooperative efforts.

Our Convention could be organized for a comprehensive, aggressive program of evangelism. Every church would be asked to make definite plans for an evangelistic campaign. An evangelistic pool could be constituted by asking every pastor to volunteer for one or more weeks of service outside his own parish. This would enable every church, regardless of size to have outside assistance or a visiting evangelist. The strong would help bear the burdens of the weak. Every local church would sense our united strength, would realize that it was not alone in its evangelistic efforts. The effect would be cumulative. Ministers and laymen would gain most valuable evangelistic experience. The movement would go from strength to strength and from victory to victory. Why not try it?

EVANGELISM AND CHURCH UNION.

We dare not make corporate church union a substitute for evangelism. But union should heighten and multiply our evangelistic opportunities. With comity arrangements coming to the fore and gaining wider acceptance among the denominations our United Church should face its greatest evangelistic challenge.

There are scores of cities in which there is a Congregational Christian and an Evangelical and Reformed Church. The Merger will strengthen their resources and enable them to adequately take care of their comity assignments. It is relatively easy for two churches to establish a third. Churches projected on this basis become A-1 exhibits in the United Church.

Our day demands churchmanship of a high order. Leadership and financial resources are essential. The Merger will enable us to use national leadership of a high calibre, plan our program of church extension on a national scale, and move with precision and strength into areas of opportunity. Failure of the Merger to materialize would be a calamity to our program of church extension.

CHARLES D. JOHNSTON.

The Christian Orphanage and the Southern Convention have lost a stalwart leader, and many of us have lost a friend of long standing in the sudden passing of Brother Charles D. Johnston. Devoted to his appointed duty, consistent in Christian service, unostentatious in speech and living, he exemplified the spirit of his Master. His genius for management found superb opportunity for expression in his long and fruitful tenure of service at The Orphanage. His contagious Christian faith was imparted to many children who came under his influence. Countless parents and children are indebted to him. May his mantle fall on a worthy successor.

URBAN EVANGELISM.

The Board of Home Missions sponsors a luncheon each year at the Mid-Winter Meetings. Last year at Grand Rapids it featured rural work. This year at Cleveland it emphasized the City Church. The work of Dr. Fred Hoskins, minister of Plymouth Church in Des Moines, Iowa, has attracted wide attention, and he was asked to speak at the Cleveland luncheon.

Excerpts from his address are quoted:

"Men are looking for salvation, they are hunting comfort, begging for hope, asking for guidance and praying for courage and appealing for instruction. They want to be saved. If we of the churches have been seeking a justification for launching a program of evangelism, there is need aplenty and need imperative. These needs are particularly apparent in urban churches. Most every city in America is growing rapidly. The social scientists will give you graphs and statistics. You know it from over-crowded housing and from new housing. You know it from visitors in your church.

"There are more young families than ever before. More of them are having children than for a long time has been true. A greater proportion of these are having larger families than most of us have known in our ministry. The opportunities for evangelism through religious education are without parallel in our experience.

"Most every church has a group of folk who are members only nominally. Here is an opportunity for evangelism so easy to overlook and so important to be met. You see, there isn't such a thing as a church not having a field for evangelism.

"Again, in most every city, the population is fluid and becoming increasingly so. People are moving from the Southside to the Northside, from the Eastside to the Westside, from the Westside to the suburbs and acreages. And every house, even on the Eastside or Southside, as soon as it is vacated by one family, is moved into by one or more other families. Beyond all this is the significant and ever increasing flow of people from city to city. Scarcely ever does the moving van take a trip without exangelistic implications."

Mr. Hoskins then listed the resources of the urban church, which he maintained are "plentiful," and he placed "a sufficient gospel" at the top of the list. Among the other resources are its minister, "who believes that the unique service of the church is worship, the primary task of the church evangelism and the essential method of operation education and fellowship."

Mr. Hoskin said: "The urban church has a resource also in its city-wide (Please turn to page eleven.)

The Call of Christ Is the Call to Evangelize the World

WORKERS TOGETHER WITH GOD.

In every community, even close by the church, can be found those who have not yet enlisted under the banner of Jesus Christ our Saviour. If we believe that the gospel is "Good News," the "Evangel" as proclaimed by John 3:16 or Acts 4:10-12, we should realize that it is our duty as Christians to try to win them for Christ and the Church. As the salesman is enthusiastic in extolling the quality of the merchandise he sells; as the broker boosts the value of the stocks and bonds he has to offer; as the craftsman cries the quality of the articles he has produced, so we, too, should eagerly proclaim the Evangel and the quality of life it will produce when hearts are yielded in full commitment to Him, to those who have not found our Lord. If we have tasted and found "that the Lord is good, his mercy everlasting and his truth abiding to all generations;" if we have experienced God's peace in our hearts, we have "Good News" to tell to others.

God is ever seeking to enlist men, women and youth to help him in the job of creating a new world, a better world. If you would share in this glorious enterprise offer to God a consecrated life willing to be used in soul winning. Pray for someone for whom you covet the joys of a Christian experience. Pray until your interest in that individual compels you to go and tell him what great things God has done for your own soul. Let him know that you are concerned about his salvation and that you want him to share the joy you experienced when you let Christ come into your life. The zeal for spreading the Gospel of Christ must burn in the hearts of believers until they become so concerned about those who have missed the way that they must go and seek them. God is calling you and will use your life to witness for Him.

God did not address the call directly to Isaiah when He said: "Who will go for us?" But Isaiah heard God's voice. His ears were in tune and his heart open to the call of his Lord. He was in the presence of God; so close that he could hear Him speak; so consecrated that he had only one response: "Here am I, send me." Our ears may be so tuned to latest things and dulled to lasting things that we may miss the voice of the Eternal, calling us to witness for Him. God forgive us if the love of clinking coins, the pursuit of pleasure or the desire for temporary things has kept us from hearing His call. Jesus comes close to each of us; if we will we may hear His gentle entreaty as the Master's voice brings this call and promise: "Follow me and I will make you fishers of men."

ROBERT A. WHITTEN.

EVANGELISM AND SPIRITUAL LIFE.

The young men from our homes who enter the military service of our country feel that it is their duty, as far as it is humanly possible, to carry out the orders of their commander or superior officers. We of the Church frequently speak of ourselves as "soldiers of the Cross." That really means "soldiers of Christ." We read in the gospels that Christ, our Commander, once called men to "come follow Me and I will make you to become fishers of men." Again we read where He said, "Go ye into all the world, and preach the gospel to every creature." Are we obedient? When I see a group of church men, or women, or young people, I cannot help but think of what might happen if each one should take seriously the business of being a Christian and if every one tried seriously to win another to Christ and His way of life. May we think on these things and then act.

T. FRED WRIGHT.

WE CAN ALL WORK.

Sometimes we think that evangelism is to be done only by ministers, and especially by those who give themselves to holding evangelistic meetings. That is a bad mistake.

There were only twelve disciples of Jesus but seventy were sent on a mission of evangelism. And they had good success.

Religion may be taught; but Christianity is more often caught. What you remember about that excellent Sunday school teacher of your childhood is not something she said—you remember what she was, and what she made you want to be. You "caught" her spirit.

Everybody can be good, and be good for something. Not all can preach from the pulpit and be a leader of a congregation, but everyone can live the Christian life and thus help to win others to that winsome way of living.

A visit to the home of those who do not know Christ may be the beginning of evangelism in that home. An invitation to attend Sunday school and church is another step in the right direction. To take people with you to Sunday school and church and to see that they have a hearty welcome into the fellowship of Christian workers and worshippers is to bring them close to the fellowship of God. "Introducing men to God" is simply explaining to them the sources of your deepest joy and sublimest friendship. "From whence cometh my help? My help cometh from God." That is evangelism on the level where every Christian may share.

The understanding friendship of the Church is an absolute essential for evangelism. Death-bed stories, dramatic preaching, and even lengthy prayers cannot take the place of the warmhearted interest of the Church for people who are outside of the fellowship of those who care. One reason so few people join our churches is that our churches are so little interested in the people outside the inner fellowship. This is a cause for penitence, and a change. The change may mean that some of us will take a car load of people to church each Sunday, and that special emphasis will be put upon Sunday school and church attendance from now until Easter.

Children are born to families every month of the year. Why should this rule not apply to the Church? Saints may need a revival once each year, but sinners need a new birth at all times. Our Convention is asking the churches to seek for converts every month of the year, and in this the Convention is right. Now is the time for pastors, deacons, teachers, and all church people to organize the fellowship of believers so the people of the community will come to believe that we really want new members of the household of faith.

In conclusion let it be remembered that those who pray also work. Without prayer the work is ineffective, and without work the prayer is crippled. The two need to go together.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

We were all very pleased with the Leadership Training School held this week in the Suffolk Church. Some seventy-five teachers and Sunday school workers attended regularly, and more than one hundred attended some of the classes. The following Sunday schools were represented: Berea, Bethlehem, Cypress Chapel, Franklin, Holland, Holy Neck, Liberty Spring, Oakland, Mt. Zion, Spring Hill, Suffolk, Waverly and Windsor. By unanimous vote it was requested of Supt. W. T. Scott, and the Board of Christian Education that the school be held again next year.

The Rev. Bernard V. Munger, Chapel Hill, N. C., taught a class in "Teaching Youth," and several leaders of young people were greatly pleased with his course. Dr. Ferris E. Reynolds, of the Elon faculty, preached in the Suffolk pulpit Sunday morning, and made such a fine impression his class was unusually large. He held their interest right through to the end. Many were the expressions of praise for his work. His was a course in "The Life of Christ."

Perhaps Miss Leila Anderson had the largest number of those who were actual teachers in Sunday schools, for one reason she covered all the departments in her course from Juniors to Beginners, and because also teachers of classes in those departments seemed very anxious to have help in their work. Her class was large and very enthusiastic. She was exceedingly well prepared to do her work, and made special preparation for every session. Members of her class were very generous in their praise of her work.

Much of the good of such a school as the one we have just enjoyed is beyond the classrooms. The fellowship with one another was great. Those taking the courses, many of them at least, came early and lingered after classes were over. Mr. Floyd A. Turner, the superintendent of the Suffolk Sunday school, and the writer, along with a goodly number of our own teachers were delighted to act as hosts and hostesses. The cooperation of everyone was appreciated. Superintendent Scott brought greetings at one of the "chapel services," and Mrs.

Frank C. Laubach spoke briefly at another of these services. Mrs. Laubach spoke to the combined women's classes of our church on Sunday morning much to their edification and delight. On Monday morning Dr. Stanley U. North addressed the ministers of the Eastern Virginia Conference, and he and Superintendent Scott held several conferences with pastors of this area.

By the time this letter reaches you we shall have helped to entertain and heard the Elon Singers. They always make a good impression here, and our folks are delighted to have them both in our church and in our homes.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

THOSE ABSENT MEMBERS.

How did you vote? Thirty per cent is the average of church attendance of Protestant Christians. Those members who attend the services of the church are voting for its progress. Those who stay away without a reason are voting too, but their ballot is against the church and its program. Those who remain away from the church miss the fellowship of old friends, the joy of making new friends. They lose the joy of sustaining grace and communion with God that comes when believers worship together. The church member who continually absents himself from the church eventually loses interest in it, thereby missing the help his church has to offer in his own Christian living. The Church loses too. And what a loss! The non-attendant has withdrawn from the church his helpful suggestions, sympathetic understanding, and in most cases his financial support and even his prayers. Perhaps the greatest loss the Church of God sustains through its members who willfully and deliberately stay away from its doors is their influence upon people who are not believers. The world, fairly or otherwise, is judging the church's value by the attitude of its members. And church attendance is one point of criticism. The successful business man must guard carefully his assets. He must keep a watchful eye over that which earns for him the greater dividend. He is also most careful to put into service any assets temporarily out of circulation. The church is made up of believers and they are her greatest asset. A beautiful building, a well-trained choir and a consecrated minister are not enough. It may be said with gratitude that every church has among its membership hard working, devoted servants of God; but it must be admitted with sorrow and shame that every church roll also carries the names of those who at some happy floodtide of their experience united with the church; and then, for one reason or another, drifted away from its influence. It is this group which needs the church so much. The church needs them. As never before the church needs to present to the world a united fellowship. We must win them back. The first step in preparation for Christian living and soul winning is a yielded will, absolute commitment to God without reservation. Prayer is the communication line between man and God. Keep the channel clear, for God is always waiting to hear His children when they desire communion with Him. Pray as if all depended upon God and work as if God were depending entirely upon you. "The fruit of the righteous is a tree of life; and he that winneth souls is wise." (Proverbs 11:30.)

GRAHAM YOUTH WINS FIRST PRIZE.

Billy F. Andrews, a young member of our Graham Sunday school and church at Providence Memorial, came off with first prize in the recent Declamation Contest sponsored by the Young Republicans of North Carolina. Billy, a star athlete of his school and a stirring public speaker, won the $100 prize Saturday, February 12, at a State-wide meeting of Young Republicans in Winston-Salem. He triumphed over nine other contestants as he spoke on the subject, "The Republican Party in the Future."

He is a youth that one can be proud of. He not only will prove a leader in political circles in the future but will be one of our strong leaders in the church. He spoke very highly of his minister, Dr. F. E. Reynolds, and of his church as "being one of the oldest churches in the State." To him, as I talked with him, his church was held high in his regard and he spoke lovingly of the work of the church. Our congratulations to you, Mr. Billy F. Andrews of the Providence Memorial Church, Graham, N. C.

THE STALEY-ATKINSON-NEWMAN MEMORIAL FUND FOR CHRIS- TIAN EDUCATION AT ELON COLLEGE.

Some years ago the Eastern Virginia Conference voted expressing a desire to establish a foundation for Christian education at Elon College honoring three of our outstanding churchmen—Dr. W. W. Staley serving the pastorate, Dr. J. O. Atkinson

There are 195 churches in the Convention. Ninety of these churches accepted their quotas; ten of the remaining made some contribution; ninety-five neither accepted their quota nor have made any contribution to the fund. A number of the churches that accepted their quotas went far beyond what they were asked to pay. Some of these churches have paid their quotas in full. In addition ty for this department. In order that the program might be inaugurated at once the college advanced money out of its undesignated funds to make the total amount of $100,000.00 available. In September, 1947, Dr. W. W. Sloan was added to the department as a professor of Christian education. Dr. Sloan has done and is doing a very good job in this field. In advancing the funds for this purpose the college anticipated funds from the churches sufficient to repay the loan. Of the amount owing the undesignated fund, $12,500.00 is needed now. It would be a great help to the college if churches and individuals owing pledges would make a special effort to in the field of missions, and Dr. J. U. Newman in the field of Christian education. Other conferences approved the plan and voted cooperation. Later the Southern Convention in session gave its approval and authorized the solicitation of funds. The amount to be raised was $100,000.00. This amount was apportioned to the several conferences constituting the Convention on the basis of ten times the conference apportionment for the college as of 1943. The college, in co-operation with the church, undertook to induce the local churches in the Convention to accept their quotas and pay the same either on a cash or time basis.

to church contributions quite a number of friends have made individual contributions totaling $18,414.31. A grand total of $110,729.36 has been secured in cash and pledges. A total of $86,653.76 has been received in cash leaving $27,075.60 to be paid. Some of these pledges are made to be paid over a period of five years. The long term pledges have from one to two years more to go. It is hoped that all churches will raise their quotas so that the foundation may be set up for $110,729.36 instead of $100,000.00. The foundation was authorized to enable the college to increase its curriculum in Christian education which would call for larger teaching faculmake some contribution. These unpaid pledges are good and we are confident that they will be paid in due time. At present the college finds itself greatly in need of funds.

As we review our campaign to date it is evident that our churches that were willing to comply with the request of the conference have done a most excellent job. In fact, it is outstanding. The completion of this campaign will enable the college to make a much greater contribution to the church than otherwise would have been possible. The college and I, personally, would like to express appreciation to all who have contributed

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

LEARN

The first part of our mission in the world is to learn. We need to know what our world is like, and what kind of people are shaping our destiny.

Our Mission Boards

Our Southern Convention Board receives money for missions, appropriates for work within this area, and forwards money for work in the United States to the Home Boards in New York City, and for overseas work to the Boston office of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions.

These boards are all elected by our church people, and we are composed of people who are interested in the spread of the Gospel at home and abroad.

China

For 101 years our Church has been at work in China. We began with the Foochow Mission, which now centers in Foochow City, Dionghoh and Pagoda Anchorage, and Ingtai.

Last year the mission celebrated its hundredth anniversary, a year late on account of the war. The departments and institutions all shared in the celebration. They included: city and rural churches, Fukien Christian University, Willis F. Pierce Memorial Hospital, Foochow College, Orlinda Childs Pierce School for Girls, and the Union High School.

We have thirty-three missionaries in this mission. Several of them have been in the Southern Convention, and others are known by our people. Rev. and Mrs. Robert E. Chandler were in our home the Eastern Sunday that our first baby was born. Mr. and Mrs. Leonard Christian are well known by our Reidsville people. Others we know are Albert Farout, Miss Jennie Jacobs, Rev. and Mrs. A. O. Rinden, Miss Helen H. Smith, Rev. and Mrs. E. Walter Smith (who went to school at Duke), Mr. and Mrs. Guy Thelin, and Miss Eunice Thomas. These are some of our friends in China.

WORK

The second part of any worthwhile endeavor is work. This is very true of Our Christian World Mission. Knowledge does little good unless it is used.

There are many ways in which we can work at our world-wide mission. Here are some:

Letters

A letter from you to one of the missionaries may give just the lift that missionary needs. If you were in China today, would you want letters from America? Practice of the Golden Rule may demand that you write to our missionaries.

Letters to the people with whom the missionaries work are also very helpful, when properly done. A million letters from our million members to a million Chinese might do more than an army with banners in making China Christian. Who knows?

Letters to your friends may make enthusiastic supporters of missions, or even secure candidates for mission work.

Meetings

Good mission meetings come from hard work. Programs that teach and inspire to Christian activity require real effort. We need many more good missionary meetings in our area.

Missionaries are glad to come to our churches and our homes to tell us what is being done on the other side of the earth. But it takes work to issue invitations, plan meetings, and see that the guest is properly cared for.

Money

Money will not save the world, but it takes money to heal the sick, feed the hungry, teach the ignorant, and preach the Gospel.

Last year we gave $1.20 per church member for missions at home and abroad. It will take a long time to save the world at that rate.

PRAY

Prayer is the third element in our world mission. It is a Christian mission, and without prayer there can be no Christians.

Prayer Is Requested

The first civilians to enter Japan after the recent war were Christians. In humility they asked what Christians in America could do for the Japanese. The first request was for prayer.

Angie Crew in Japan, the Jacksons in China, and missionaries around the world urge us to pray for them.

Let's Pray

During this mission period, let's pray daily for our missions and missionaries. They wish it; we can do it. God answers prayer.

In order that we may be together in our intercession, here is a daily prayer list:

Our Prayer List

Sunday—The Jacksons in Shaowu, China.

Richard is a minister working with other ministers, trying to reach a million people. Dorothy is Richard's wife in the truest meaning of the word, and a missionary in her own right. Lewis is the baby boy. We want him to be good and charming, like his parents.

Monday—The Riggs in Shaowu.

Frances we commissioned as a nurse, and Ed is a doctor. Both are badly needed in the hospital and among a million people.

Tuesday—The Shaowu Pastors.

Their task is not easy today.

Wednesday—Hospital Workers in Shaowu.

On them depends the health of multitudes.

Thursday—The Shaowu Mission.

Churches, members, schools—all who are reached in any way.

Friday—Foochow Mission.

The 33 missionaries, native workers, schools, hospital, members of churches and prospective members.

Saturday—Missionaries listed in first column of this page.

They are our friends. We must remember them at a throne of grace.

OUR UNITED PRAYER

O God, "our Father," we pray for missions and missionaries. We cannot see the places nor the people, but thou art there—everywhere that people live. Make thyself known to all who seek for knowledge or fellowship. Keep thy people from harm. Strengthen all good impulses, and transform faith into accomplishments. Let the tests of these difficult days show the power of God's sustaining grace through Jesus Christ.

Amen.

EVERY CHRISTIAN AN EVANGELIST.

While at the General Council and Midwinter Meetings in Cleveland, Mr. Whitten asked me if I would write a short article on Evangelism for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. I told him that I would and then I thought—who am I to be writing about Evangelism! I, who do so little toward evangelizing the world; I, who like Martha of old, am so “cumbered about many things” that Christ’s words, “and ye shall be my witness,” sometimes seem far removed and I find myself thinking they apply only to Dorothy Jackson, Frances Riggs and other missionaries on foreign lands. Then something that Dr. Hatanaka said as he spoke to the women state president at Cleveland, made me realize anew that the words of Christ, “ye shall be my witness,” can and should apply to every Christian wherever they may be. Dr. Hatanaka said, “Every Christian who comes to Japan, if a true Christian is a missionary, by their words, their acts, their attitudes they can help to evangelize Japan.”

Just so, you and I, here in America can be evangelists—just in our daily contacts as we let the Spirit of Christ shine through a consecrated eye.

Although apparently overshadowed by the merger proceedings, to me the most significant thing that came out of the Oberlin Council was “The Call” to our Congregational Christian Fellowship “to confront the world with the gospel of our Lord Jesus Christ—to bestir itself in recruitment for Christ and having heard the Call to answer that Call with a renewed personal commitment to Christ as we set our faces toward the task, for only when those about realize we have been with Jesus will our efforts be successful.

MRS. O. H. PARIS.

NOTICE OF MEETING.

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention Women will meet in Suffolk, Virginia, for a semi-annual session on Tuesday, March 8, at 2:00 p. m. Mrs. O. H. Paris, president, asks that all members be present.

WORLD DAY OF PRAYER, MARCH 4.

Join with women around the world on this day and make your prayer one for lasting peace everywhere. Women could bring peace if they wanted to and tried hard enough.

The service, written partly by a Chinese woman, is built around the theme, “The Lord Is Thy Keeper.” Beginning with Psalm 121, it ends with the hymn, “O Jesus I Have Promised.” Through participation in this service, may we be true followers of our Lord, Jesus Christ. May we be concerned for definite persons, believing that the power of God can change human nature, and may we pray in conclusion: “Revive Thy Church beginning with me—just now.”

Let us all make a special effort to attend a World Day of Prayer service on March 4. While there, we might think of those to whom our offering is sent: Christian training for American Indians, Christian training for Negroes in America, work among migrants, Christian literature for people who have just learned to read, gifts to Christian colleges and schools in India, Japan, and work among illiterates. Surely we are making great investments here.

The World Day of Prayer began with Mary, the mother of Jesus, as she prayed The Magnificat found in Luke 1:46-55. In 1948, the service went to 74 countries, and offerings have already amounted to $195,000, the largest ever. In 1949, we can think on these words: “Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on me, the works that I do shall he do also; and greater works than these shall he do, because I go unto my Father” (John 14:12).

If you cannot attend a service on the World Day of Prayer, join with others around the world in a prayer for peace. Here is part of the Daily Prayer of High Resolve:

“In hatred of war and its killing we are united. Hold us to a new high unity, our Father, and in that unity give us grace to change our behavior that wars may cease and Thy Kingdom come. Grant us strength to melt our pride into humility, to change our race and class prejudice into fellowship, to turn our selfishness into sharing. Rewrite into our hearts the sure knowledge that Thine is the Kingdom and Thine the power.

“In this chill hour of the world’s winter of indecision, grant to all mankind the shining courage to follow the difficult road of the man of Galilee, the Christ of Calvary—our Lord.” Amen.

If you do not attend a service, make this your prayer on Friday, March 4.

WAKE CHAPEL.

Our Women’s Missionary Society at Wake Chapel is making progress and we are happy to report good attendance and interest in the programs presented monthly, following along the theme, “Horizons Unlimited” as given in the packet.

At a special meeting held on Monday evening, January 31, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was with us and reviewed “Twilight or Dawn.” Needless to say she thrilled our hearts as we listened to her report on our mission work in China today. Eighteen of our members and two visitors enjoyed a bountiful covered dish supper and an hour of fellowship together prior to her review.

For our February program we used a film on China which was an especially good follow-up of the book review. We are using for our devotions the study book on Galatians. Later we hope to have our pastor give us a summary-review on this book.

Plans are being made for a joint World Day of Prayer service with the other churches of our town on the fourth of March.

MRS. GARLAND RANSELL,
President.

HAPPY HOME REPORTS.

Our year so far, has been busy, having already given Friendly Service gifts to the Indian Mission School, and sponsored a Thanksgiving banquet for the Pilgrim Fellowship.

Our Thank Offering service was given at the regular worship service, giving the church opportunity to share in the offering for C.W.V.R.

The Home and Foreign Mission study book reviews have already been given by two of our members.

The two adult Sunday School Classes (which most of our members attend) assemble jointly each Sunday morning for the Bible Study, “The Gospel Unlimited.”

We sponsored the pruning of the shrubbery on the church grounds, in

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. House, Editor

YOUNG FRIENDS:

Tomorrow (Friday) will be the World Day of Prayer. We have been having these prayer days for a long time. The mothers, grandmothers and aunts are the ones responsible for this day. It is a time when the men do not plan or lead the service.

This year we have been studying about China and three wonderful Chinese women planned the program. They decided which scripture, prayers and theme should be used. Part of the money that the women bring will go to China for Christian teaching.

Our good friend, Mrs. Frank H. Peters of Ohio has sent a poem for the day:

Prayer for Children.

For all the little children
Who need our tender care,
We offer our petition
On this World Day of Prayer.
Many we know are homeless,
Hungry and sad and cold.
Gather them close our Father
Into Thy loving fold.
Keep those who are neglected
From suffering and from harm
Gather them all in safety
In Thine encircling arm.
May He who in tender mercy
Said suffer them all to come.
Guide them and give them shelter
At last in Thy heavenly home.

It was good of Mrs. Peters to write this poem and to send it for this day. See how many things women and girls can do! Keep homes, care for children, teach, write poems and work in church. I am glad that we are a part of a denomination that allows women to be ordained and to hold high positions in the church. Our moderator (like a president) is Miss Helen Kenyon. Few women have held such an office in any church in our country.

I hope that more and more boys and girls will think of choosing the church as their life work. There are churches which need choir directors, organists, secretaries, leaders of religious education—all of which can be done by trained women. Men can serve in these ways as well as being ministers.

THE FAITH OF A LITTLE CHILD.

(ANONYMOUS.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Fear often seems to be the first mental problem which one has to combat in raising a child.

When our little girl, Gloria, was a baby, we made up our minds that the word fear should never be used in any connection before her and that every effort should be made to have her grow up without a knowledge of that emotion. However, this was not to be.

When Gloria was about two-and-a-half years old, we had a little French maid to whom she became very much attached. Gloria jabbered to her constantly, and the maid put on a show of listening by keeping up a steady response of, "Oui, oui!" This so delighted the child that she soon named the maid Oui-oui.

All seemed to be well, until suddenly, without warning, we became aware that Oui-oui was having a joke of her own by frightening Gloria with stories about a little black dog. We noticed that each time we asked Gloria to go to another room for something after the darkness of evening had barely begun to approach, she would reply, with the evidence of dread suffusing her countenance, "No, no, 'ittle b'ack dog." We were horrified.

Realizing the seriousness of the situation—that, unless she was reconditioned, fear at this tender age might produce ill effects that would never be overcome—we spent anxious moments wrestling with the problem. Under the existing conditions we could no longer exclude the word fear and its meaning from the child's vocabulary; we had to bring this hidden difficulty out into the open and unmask it.

We found that Gloria was afraid of the dark only when alone, so as she had been taught that God was another Father—as loving as her own daddy, and much wiser and much more powerful—we told her that God would protect her wherever she happened to be, in the dark as well as in the light.

One winter evening, a short time before her bedtime, I sent her on an errand to a little sewing room under the front stairs. She went to the open doorway between the living room and the hall and then stopped; there was no light in the hall or in the sewing room—only a faint glimmer from a light in the upper balcony.

"Go on, dear," I called out.

"'Fraid; dark, Mamma; 'fraid!"

"No, dear," I replied, and I did not go to her. "It is not very dark in there, and, besides, you know God is in the dark as well as in the light."

There had been no mention from Gloria of the "'ittle b'ack dog," so I felt we had gained something.

The dear child, in simple trust, advanced one step—slowly; again she took a step and stopped. Then she cried out, "Dod, oh Dod, I'm a tom-in'!" and she paddled boldly ahead and went into the dark sewing room.

That moment will always be recalled by me with a great thrill of joy. Gloria had become conscious that she was not alone—that the strong, loving Father would be wherever she had to go—and all fear had vanished.

SAVING SOIL AND SAVING LIVES.

The earth is man's rightful domain, but history proves that man has not properly kept the earth, since he has permitted large portions of it to go to waste, opening a possibility of starvation—the very thing which man first set out to avoid. Next to disease, man has always had himself as his worst enemy. Apparently this enemy has been his inability to use his intellect for preservation of the earth committed to his care.

Wherever man has touched the earth it has broken down and washed away. A path to a cabin means the beginning of a gully that may be destined to destroy the whole hillside. Until recent times man has not worried about erosion of soil for he could move when his land no longer produced. Growth of population and other economic factors have overtaken him in his flight from less productive to more fertile acres. He is now forced to rebuild rather than migrate.

Saving the nation's soil is an engineering job, but efforts of engineers must be supplemented by man's love for the soil, his willingness to cooperate, and a vision to realize the size and importance of the problem.

All this becomes more thought-provoking when it is realized that the United States is helping to feed the world. And tragic is the thought of what would have happened in many portions of Europe during recent years had it not been for soil production in this country.

The relation of saving the soil and saving lives is not far to seek. These two savings are becoming more and more inseparable, and the church has an important stake in both.

FOR YOUNG ADULTS.

An excellent handbook on young adult programs is now ready for use in 1949. The title is The Young Adult Fellowships Guide Book for 1949.

Written by Oscar J. Rumpf of the E. & R. Church, it was planned in consultation with our Congregational Joint Committee on Older Youth and Young Adult Program.

It offers a year's program suggestions in these four areas: Basic Topics; Bible Themes; Mission Study; and Young Adult Specialities.

There is a brief introductory chapter on such questions as: Who are these Young Adults? Where are they? What are they thinking about? How to get an organization started, etc.

Attractively printed, well illustrated, 28 pages. 25c.

Order from 14 Beacon Street, Boston, Massachusetts, or 19 South La Salle Street, Chicago, Illinois.

Young Laymen—Young Church. By John Oliver Nelson of the Federal Council. 160 pages. Associated Press. $1.75. Stocked by the Pilgrim Press.

Reports in vivid form things young adults are actually doing in such areas as:

We Argued Belief in God.
We Opened Our Bibles.
We Traced Current Theologies.
We Sent a Missionary.
We Joined the World Church.
We Made Vocations Out of Jobs.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Messenger of the Evangelical and Reformed Church will speak the second night on The Church and Its Place in the Modern World. A great pageant is planned for the third evening's program, to depict the work of our denominations in this day and age. A communion service will close the conference on the last evening. It will be conducted by Dr. Goebel and Dr. Truman Douglas of our own Board of Home Missions. There will be inspiring worship services led by Dean William Faulkner of Fisk University. Some of the members of the two youth fellowships will lead the worship in the opening session of the conference.

Afternoons will be given over to creative recreation and skill workshops. Children's workers will find amazing help under the guidance of expert leadership in their laboratory and workshop sessions, where they will learn techniques and skill in ways of working with children. There will be various assembly meetings in the afternoon periods—a time for laymen, laywomen, church school superintendents, youth, and students, to get together in their respective groupings for mutual benefit to their total programs.

The various state conferences in our denomination have been given quotas of delegates. If you are interested in attending this meeting, please contact the State Conference Headquarters, or write to the Rev. Henry R. Rust, 14 Beacon Street, Boston 8, Massachusetts. He is the Program Director and will be glad to receive your registration or your questions about the conference. Lakeside, Ohio, is an adequate conference center. It will be a happy time for the delegates who can be there on the shores of Lake Erie for this National Conference on Christian Education. The average cost per delegate will be $27.50. You will want to register for this conference early. The deadline for registration is April 1.

EDITORIAL.

cooperative enterprises, including surveys, visitation evangelism, radio and union meetings. Greatest of all its resources," he pointed out, "are its members, known and unknown, who are eager to see the church do its job and are equally eager to do their part."

With the need, the opportunity and the resources, the final step is to get them together and to work. For this, Dr. Hoskins has the practical suggestion of establishing a major board in each church, comparable to that of a Board of Deacons or Trustees, whose primary responsibility will be to initiate, guide and motivate the church's evangelistic emphases.

This Board would plan and place responsibility for continuous collection of names of people of all ages for whom the church has a responsibility. Obviously this would include those who sometime should become members, those already members, but still to be converted and those who are carried on the rolls in the category of questionable or absentee members.

Another duty of this membership board would be to assign members the task of inviting others, believed spiritually ready to affiliate with the church. One church has for this task a group of people known as The Fellowship of the Concerned. They take the names of persons assigned and stay with them a month, or a year or two years, or whatever length of time maybe required to consummate the commission.

Still another job of this suggested Membership Board would be to see that all new members, young or old, from whatever church or from no church, are given adequate instruction in their faith.

Considerable experience at this point demonstrates that people are eager to learn what the church stands for, how it operates, what it aspires to do and what it expects of its members. A Pastor's Class for children lasting one, two or three years, happily is becoming standard practice.

This board would take responsibility for carefully and intelligently integrating the new members into the worship, the life and work of the church. It will make a plan and place responsibility for the continual effort to relate absentee members to churches where they currently are living. Similarly it will make a plan and place responsibility for re-kindling of the fires of devotion in the hearts of that sad group of persons who are members of the church in name only.

In closing, Dr. Hoskins said, "The church's evangelistic emphases, however they are made, are out in the areas where every Christian's Christianity is put on trial. It is the critical, sensitive, growing edge of the Kingdom. Every sermon, every teacher, every officer, every member is relevant to success or failure."

As the stag which the huntsman has hit flies through bush and brake, over stock and stone, thereby exhausting his strength, but not expelling the deadly bullet from his body, so does experience show that they who have troubled consciences run from place to place, but carry with them wherever they go their dangerous wounds.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

JESUS' MINISTRY TO HUMAN NEED.

LESSON XI—MARCH 13, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: I came that they may have life, and have it abundantly.—John 10:10.

LESSON: Mark 5; 6:3-44; Luke 7:18-23; 19:1-10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 25:34-46.

The lesson for today shows Jesus meeting human need on several levels. It also shows Him as Master over Nature, over disease, over death. He is indeed able to supply all our need according to the riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

The Sick in Mind.

The story of the healing of the Gadarene demoniac brings help and hope to many modern men and women. For not only are there thousands of people in institutions for the mentally ill, but there are even more thousands outside such institutions whose lives are a tangle and jangle, and who are living at sixes and sevens with themselves and with others. There are those who are sick in mind as well as those who are sick in body. And in many instances the tragedy is greater. Indeed one of the worst features of mental illness is that both those who suffer from it, and the members of their family, feel a deep sense of shame because of it.

To be sure God does not heal every case. The point of the story is, however, that Jesus has power to bring order to a disordered mind, power to cast out the unclean spirits of fear and worry and vindictiveness and many other ills of the human mind. Religion can play a large part in mental health. God has not given us the spirit of fear . . . but of a sound mind. As Dr. Fosdick put it, the religion of healthy-mindedness. Faith is the secret of many cures. In his book, A Guide to Confident Living, Dr. Peale shows how again and again religion has helped and can help in cases of mental illness and troubled minds. Mental illness is getting far more attention in our time than heretofore, not only because there is more of it, but because mental hygienists have learned the place and power of religion and religious faith in the healing process.

Jesus and Death.

The story of the raising of Jairus' daughter has many interesting and helpful truths. In the critical hour when his only daughter lay at the point of death this man instinctively turned to Jesus. He had a great faith—he believed that Jesus could save his daughter. But his faith must have suffered a great shock when word came to him on the way back home that his little girl was dead. It was quickened again however by Jesus who bade him not to fear but to have faith. And his faith was rewarded, for Jesus demonstrated his power and sovereignty over death by calling the damsel back to life again. To be sure not every critically ill girl of that age, or of any age is cured before she dies or brought back to life here after she dies. But here is the pledge that death does not have the last word over life. Indeed death is as much a part of life as is birth. And Christ has power over death. He hath brought life and immortality to light through His glorious gospel and through his resurrection.

Jesus and Disease.

Mark introduces an intrelude to the story of the healing of Jairus' daughter by the story of the healing of the woman who had an issue of blood for twelve long years, who was no better, in fact was worse, even though she had consulted many doctors. At the mere touch of her hand on the hem of His garment the woman was healed. The story does not condemn physicians. They are God's healers or helpers in healing. And modern medicine is doing miracles every day in healing the sick. The story simply shows that Jesus is Master over disease, that He is concerned with meeting human need at the level of bodily health, that ultimately it is He who healeth all our diseases. And there are many instances where God has healed and raised up people after the doctors themselves have felt that there was nothing else that they could do. Furthermore in this as in the other cases in today's lesson there is a marked emphasis on faith in the healing process. Faith has curative power. Even faith that borders on superstition helps. But the story in no way gives any encouragement to those who have no faith in doctors, to those who resort only to faith in the crises and emergencies of life. If my wife or my child became ill, even if not critically ill, I would call a doctor. And I would be showing my faith in my works. I would do everything I could as if everything depended upon me, and I would pray as if everything depended on God.

Jesus and the Hungry.

The feeding of the five thousand also has many interesting truths. But the central truth is Jesus' response to human needs as manifested in hunger. As He stood before that multitude which had had nothing to eat all day, and which was hungry, He was moved with compassion, and He moved into action. Jesus has a deep concern for the hungry people of the world. And His followers and His Church are truly expressing His spirit when they are seeking to feed the hungry people of the world. It is significant, however, that it was the need for the things of the spirit that moved the Master first. It was when He saw the multitudes as sheep without a shepherd that He began to teach them many things. Mere material things will not meet the needs of the world. Man cannot live by bread alone. And even as we try to give the hungry bread, we need also to give them the Bread of Life.

The Marks of His Ministry.

Poor old John the Baptist! It was he who had announced the coming of the Messiah and who had bade men get ready for His coming. But when Herod put Him into prison, doubt and despondency laid hold upon him. Then, too, Jesus was not acting like the Messiah ought to act, He was not doing the things that John said He would do. So John sent two of his disciples to Jesus to ask if He really were the Messiah, or whether they were to look for another. In reply Jesus told John's disciples to tell their master what they had seen. And what had they seen indeed? Well the blind were seeing, the lame were walking, lepers were being cleansed, deaf people were hearing again, even the dead were being raised again. But the climax and the crowning feature was the fact that poor were having the gospel or the good news preached to them. There are many ways in which the church can bear witness to its faith in the Lord Jesus Christ, but unless it is doing the things Jesus did, its witness is not effective. It must meet human needs at all levels if it is to be true to the Lord Jesus Christ.

THE CALL OF CHRIST IS THE CALL TO EVANGELIZE.

church where I no longer live I am not really a part of the church. I am required to pay taxes where I live. I must send my children to the school of the district where I now make my home. The law requires me to become a part of the community which has become my home.

Do we treat religion in a manner inferior to that in which we treat taxes or schools? The church is not a past sentiment, but a present activity. If I keep my name on the church roll "back home" I am hurting that church. Its apportionment for various needs is based partly upon the number of names on the roll and the other members must pay my share. My name on the roll of a church in which I am no longer active also gives that church a false sense of bigness which is harmful.

Keeping my name on the church roll where I used to live not only hurts that church, but it harms the church where I am now living. I tend to be inactive in the church where I live. That church needs me. It should be my church home. Even if I attend its services and try to take part in its program I have no vote and cannot hold office—it is not my church. I am not in any church. I am like a man without a country. Being definitely a part of the local church makes me a more thoughtful, consecrated Christian.

This is true whether there is a church of the denomination of my childhood in my community or not. Why do I belong to the particular denomination I do? It is largely by chance, not because my denomination is better than another. I should put Christianity above denomination. Therefore I should become an active member of the church in the community in which I find myself, regardless of what tag is on the church building.

One denomination automatically puts its members on the church roll of the community to which they move. In a city each church is assigned certain streets or blocks. If a member moves across the street into the territory of another local church his membership is immediately transferred to the church in whose section he now lives. That denomination insists that a Christian belongs to something much larger than the single organization. While we do not use that method, the principle is right.

In one of the most active churches of our Southern Convention new members make a pledge to God which reads: "In order that I may remain an effective Christian, I promise that if and when I shall move from the area served by this church I shall immediately ask for a letter of transfer to the church of my choice in the community to which I shall have moved."

How many churches of our Southern Convention are thus putting active Christianity above sentimental attachment to the individual church of our childhood? Every Christian should do this. The person who puts Christianity above sentiment will ask that his membership be transferred to the church of the community in which he now lives.

LAY EVANGELISM.

It is a real joy to prepare a good size prospect list, stick it back in your head, and in the corner of your desk, and then pray over it. In my experience a prospect list should be made bravely. It should contain those who have long walked outside the church, and have been often approached about making a decision for Christ, and have not done so. It should contain the names of those whom no one expects to unite with the church, or at least this particular church. Naturally it should include the names of all those people who attend the church or Sunday school but have not yet united with the church. Little children in Sunday school are often a lead to parents who are prospects. And it should have on it the names of people new in the community and those who have selected no church home, whether new or otherwise. This list should be bravely, carefully and faithfully made. It should be a list gotten from many sources but tactfully and in the spirit of love and common sense. This list should be used, renewed, followed up, and kept up to date at all times.

It is a job to ask a few of those who have the interest of the church deeply at heart, who want to win others to Christ, and who have a good spirit of cooperation, to come for a session of instruction and prayer. This meeting may be held in the pastor's study, or any other proper place, but it should be a "place apart" where deep and sweet fellowship may make for divine teamwork. If they will express themselves as to what they think of working to win others, of what part businesslike measuring of the opportunity should play, the manner of preparing prospect lists and their value if any; and volunteering of the names of persons whom they would suggest as prospects. There should be prayer, last and always—prayer thanking God for the privilege of working in His Kingdom, gratitude for His help and blessing, and a prayer for the guidance of the Holy Spirit in the work at hand. Now notice that I am not thinking of a special evangelistic campaign necessarily, but rather a constant expectancy toward the receiving of new members into the fellowship of the church all along during the year. However, I do feel that it is good to set a certain Sunday, a few weeks or perhaps not more than a month ahead, wherein you will receive the new members into the church.

Then in that quiet place let the pastor go over names of the prospects with the thought of having those in this inner group choose to take certain ones whom they feel impressed to call on, and then let them go out after them. They will want to consider what they are doing, and do it at the appropriate time and place. It is good if they will "close the deal" with the prospect, getting his promise to make his public commitment and received into Church at a given time. However, each of these lay workers will find the pastor ready to help them if they need it. They should complete the job as nearly as they can and leave more difficult cases to the pastor. Frequently the worker will feel that it is easy to go just so far with the prospect and leave the final results up to the minister. There is great joy and greater service if he takes some pride in completing the job. I am happy that there has always been in the churches I have had the privilege of serving some men and women, yes, and young people, who were willing to do this kind of personal work for their church and the Christ.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

Life in this world is only a choice of difficulties. If we avoid them in one direction, it is but to meet them in another. It is hard to be a Christian, but it is harder not to be! When those who have once seen the vision and "tasted the heavenly gift" draw back, they invite experiences with which the trials of the saint are light and sweet. The really "hard" thing is to "kick against the pricks." The way of the transgressor is hard.

The Orphanage

CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR MEMBERS OF THE SUN FAMILY:

It is with a feeling of sadness that we pass on to you this week's Orphanage Letter. It was written by one who even then was concerned because of the illness of a little child. Yet before the letter had reached the office in Richmond, its writer, who had been "father" to so many orphan children had gone to be with his Father in the world beyond.

The writer's heart is sad because a friend of many years has gone away. He was my friend when I was a child. He has always been a friend of children.

May we show our appreciation of this great, good man by continuing our support of the work which was his constant care.

J. T. K.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Last week little Rachel Wilkins became very ill. (You remember reading in my letter more than a year ago how she and her little brother were rescued from a burning building in Virginia.) She was running a fever of about one hundred, four and one-half degrees. The matron in her building called me and I went up to see her. Now when a little child gets real sick we feel our heavy responsibility more and more. I sat down by her bedside and looked at her. She was so sick and hot with fever and could not retain anything on her stomach. We had the doctor to come to see her and he prescribed for her. We tried out different fruit juices and the doctor's medicine, but nothing seemed to stick, and did not for several days. But she is very much better at this writing.

Anyone's heart would go out to a little helpless child under such circumstances; her father dead and her mother quite a distance from here and could not come to see her. But she is an inmate of the orphanage family and will have the best of care.

The money you send to the Christian Orphanage is used to care for and train little homeless and dependent children. The orphanages in North Carolina are giving a home and training to nearly four thousand children, and still there are appeals to take more. Not a week passes that we are not called upon to take some little child; many of them very worthy cases. We do not have room to meet all the requests, and neither do we have funds for their support. The only thing that would make me want to be rich would be to help others who are in real need, especially little children.

The weather during the last days of February have been pretty, and it gives us the garden. But we realize the weather man has some cold rainy days in store for us in the month of March. Your writer well remembers about fifty-five years ago that the trees had budded out and the woods were green by the last of March, and on the first of April there came a storm and cleared off and then turned cold, and there came a freeze which killed the buds and the woods turned black instead of green. Our wheat and oats are looking so pretty and green that we hope we will have no such weather this year.

either money, labor, or goodwill to this worthwhile undertaking. As we think of this job well done may we get ourselves ready for the next great undertaking for our college and church.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

It certainly is not news that there are fifty-two weeks in the calendar year but it would be good news if every Sunday school and church in the Convention could make a payment on their college apportionments at least once a month, if not once a month once a quarter every fifth Sunday. If payments are made by the quarter they should be sufficient size to make up for the other two months in the quarter.

The college program is continuous throughout the year. We take two weeks' vacation at Christmas, a week's vacation during holidays, and ten days between the regular college session and summer school. Even when school is not actually in session expenses are practically the same. There is no let up in the cost of running a college. The sources of support for the church-related college are limited and not too generous. Elon College has always depended to a certain extent on the church for its support. Today the college finds itself in need of additional funds to keep current accounts balanced. Even though contributions are small they mean much to the college and the college is most appreciative of the cooperation and support of the church.

MARRIED

JERNIGAN-REGISTER.

The wedding of Miss Maude Elizabeth Jernigan, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Fletcher Lee Jernigan of Godwin, and the Rev. Fred Page Register, son of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Register of Sanford, and pastor of Wake Chapel Christian Church at Varina, took place Friday, November 12, at 6:30 o'clock in an attractive candlelight service in Whitely Auditorium at Elon College. Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of the church, performed the double ring ceremony.

After the ceremony a reception was held in the living room of West Dormitory where the bride and groom received their guests. Mrs. A. L. Hook and Miss Lila Clare Newman served cake and punch, with Misses Evelyn Booth, Barbara Hayes, Shirley Joyner, Millie Johnson and Mrs. Carl Stouffer assisting.

The bride is a senior at Elon, majoring in business administration, and a member of Tau Zeta Phi Sorority.

The bridegroom, a graduate of Elon, Class of '46, was president of the student body and a member of Kappa Psi Nu Fraternity. He is currently pastor of Wake Chapel and Plymouth Church, Fuquay Springs and Amelia Church, Clayton. He is a student now at the Duke Divinity School.

In Memoriam

BEAMON.

We, the members of Oak Grove Missionary Society were saddened September 25, 1948, by the passing of our beloved friend, member and deacon, W. C. Beamon.

To pay tribute and desiring to express love and respect from our church for one who served so faithfully and will be greatly missed by his many friends and neighbors and most of all by his family where he served as a devoted father and husband.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we shall miss him in the sweet fellowship of our work together. We shall always cherish the memory of his friendship.

2. That we are grateful for such a true friend and member, one who possessed such strong Christian character and lovable disposition and such beautiful personality.

3. That we extend to his bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to the Great Comforter whose grace is sufficient for every need. And pray God's watchful care may sustain them.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent the family, a copy entered on our church record and a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. T. R. ELLIS,
Mrs. ELSIE EASON,
Mrs. W. K. PARKER,
Committee.

HASLETT.

Mrs. Julia Morgan Haslett, wife of J. J. Haslett, of Suffolk, Va., died February 14, in the Norfolk General Hospital after several months of illness. She was the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Lucius H. Morgan, members of Holy Neck Church. Beside her husband she is survived by six sons, and one foster son: James E., Julian M., Thornton J., Lucius T., Carlton J. and Guy N., all of Suffolk, and a foster son, Fred Morgan, of Suffolk; two sisters, Mrs. Garland M. Faison and Mrs. Nell M. Gatling, both of Portsmouth; five brothers, Spurgeon H. Morgan of Chicago, L. F. Morgan of Rocky Mount, N. C., V. R. Morgan of Elizabeth City, N. C., V. C. Morgan of Roanoke Rapids, N. C. and Jephtha S. Morgan of Suffolk; and seven grandchildren.

Mrs. Haslett was a good mother in a happy Christian home. She and Mr. Haslett served their sons faithfully throughout the days of their childhood and youth, and they saw to it that every comfort and kindness was returned to them. Her love for the Church was great, and her prayers for the well-being of all her loved ones were constant. Her family will greatly miss her, and her church and community are bereaved at her death. A large congregation of loved ones, neighbors and friends filled the church at her funeral; and an unusually large number of flowers brought comfort to the family. Her pastor spoke a brief message showing how God's promise of the crown of life to those who love Him had been vouchsafed to her in that already with her large family and God's blessings her life had been crowned. May the Father's love be ever upon those whom she has left behind.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

POWELL.

On Sunday evening, February 6, 1949, our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, saw fit to call from our midst, Mrs. Carey D. Powell, Sr., following several months of illness. Funeral services were held at Wake Chapel Church on Tuesday conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Fred Register, assisted by the Rev. J. Lee Johnson.

Mrs. Powell was beloved and esteemed by a host of friends and neighbors. Surviving are her husband; four daughters, Mrs. C. B.

Clark of Fuquay Springs, Mrs. Boyd Jones of Baltimore, Md., Mrs. C. A. Rowland of Varina, and Mrs. Linwood Forrest of Apex; eight sons, Rex. G., G. Ray, Horace C., Cary, Jr., Hoke C. and Douglas, all of Fuquay Springs, Eddie of Holly Springs and Dewey of Apex.

In submission to the will of God and knowing that our loss is her eternal gain, we give thanks for her beautiful life which enriched the hearts of all who knew her, and pray His richest blessings on each loved one.

We will observe the World Day of Prayer. We plan to have Miss Evelyn Strader speak to us in July.

As yet, our society, being rural and widely scattered, has not been successful in observing World Community Day and May Fellowship Day. We would welcome any suggestions.

(NOTE: The editor of this page suggests that the May Fellowship Day and World Community Day programs might be used in the local society meetings, and the entire membership of the church might also be invited. You might cooperate with other rural churches in your community, or invite them. Pot-Luck luncheons or suppers seem to be quite successful in some communities. Some of your members might attend services sponsored by the Council of Church Women in Reidsville.)

Plans for the United Evangelistic Advance of 1949-50

Adopted by the Biennial Meeting of the Federal Council of Churches at Cincinnati, December 3, 1948

The Christian Gospel is "good news" about God. Its background is bad news about men. The Gospel is both the clue to our understanding of the Bible, which is above all else a book about the Gospel, and the core of the Christian revelation. The essence of the "good news" is not that God is love, or that He is Father. It is rather that the loving Father so loved that He gave His Son for the salvation of the world. The Gospel is news about something that God did in history or rather of something He became in history, in Jesus Christ the "Word became flesh." The Gospel is thus "good news" about mighty acts of God in behalf of man, whereby God entered in Christ into the human struggle in history, created human perfection, made atonement for sin, conquered death in the Risen Christ and established by His Spirit a new Communion, the Christian Church.

Evangelism is the presentation of the "good news" of God in Jesus Christ, through the power of the Holy Spirit, so that men may put their trust in God; accept Jesus Christ as their Saviour; follow and serve Him as their Lord in the fellowship of the Church and in the vocations of the common life.

The basis for the Evangelistic Advance is the perennial need of all men for salvation from sin and perdition through the Gospel of Jesus Christ. This need is all the more evident in our precarious and tragic situation. The total claim of the Lord, Jesus Christ, lays an inescapable burden of responsibility on us relative to ourselves and our neighbors, and it will not let us rest in complacency, in the proclamation of a partial Gospel, or in the presentation of the Gospel to only a portion of the human race. Today, Christ calls His disciples in all the churches to proclaim the Gospel to every creature everywhere by word and by deed.

While denominational programs of evangelism are still in progress, and evangelism is the continuous task of the churches, God has provided us an opportune time to engage in this work with a greater degree of unity between October, 1949, and December 31, 1950, than heretofore. Denominational programs of evangelism which will then be in progress may easily blend with or be enhanced by The United Advance. The Advance will mark a natural culmination or fruition of all denominational programs.

The year 1950 marks the end of the first half as well as the beginning of the second half of the twentieth century. This turn of time may well lead us to repent for the awful record of these past fifty years and to a rebirth of obedient faith through which God may bless us with His favor.

Let it be frankly acknowledged that the effectiveness of the Advance will not be determined by any novelty of method, but by the prayer, preparation and consecration which we put into this opportunity which God has placed before us. In our evangelistic efforts we must become as much concerned about the quality and character of the evangelizing task as we are about reaching the vast numbers of unreached. In all of our activities for the Advance we must keep uppermost in our minds its four major objectives:

1. A spiritual quickening of the ministry and membership of our churches. Christians today need to be motivated and empowered for their evangelistic responsibility.
2. The reaching and winning of the vast unchurched multitudes of the nation for Christ and His Church through every accepted means and method.
3. The careful instruction and assimilation of every new member who is brought into the membership of the churches.
4. The enlisting of all members who have moved to new communities and have failed to identify themselves with any local church where they now live, to the end that all the church and the unchurched may be transformed by the power of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, thereby giving to society new creatures in the church, in the home, in business, in politics and in social relations. During the fifteen months' period, special effort should be made to persuade the commitment of this unrelated group to the life and activities of some congregation.

CITATION PRESENTED TO UNITED CHURCH, RALEIGH

As the 1949 Institute of Religion came to a close Tuesday of last week, Raleigh's United Church was honored by a citation presented it by the Board of Home Missions of the Congregational Christian Churches. The citation, shown here being given by Alfred Grant Walton of Brooklyn, New York, former president of the Board of Home Missions on the left, commended the Raleigh church for founding and maintaining its nationally-known Institute of Religion for ten years. Accepting the citation on the right is the Rev. Allyn P. Robinson, Jr., pastor of the United Church when the Institute was first launched. Looking on in the center is Supt. William T. Scott, who presented the award with Dr. Walton. Looking on at the right is the Rev. Frederick Eutsler, present pastor of United Church and observing on the left is Dr. Amiya Chakravarty, Indian Educator and writer, who gave the feature address at the final session of the 1949 Institute.

The citation reads in part: "... From this pulpit men and women of prophetic and statesman-like insights, tested by notable achievements, representing various fields of human interest, have dealt realistically, constructively and fearlessly with issues of local, regional, national and world concern. Here the unpopular as well as the popular, the controversial as well as the accepted points of view have found a free platform, conditioned only by the honesty and integrity of their exponents.

"The United Church of Raleigh, small in membership and resources, yet great in prophetic insight and community service, denominational by tradition but ecumenical in spirit; of the South but truly of the nation, and an inspiration to free men everywhere who seek to know without fear or favor the will of Eternal God:

"You have validated religion in the hearts and minds of thinking men who know full well that without the light of truth, democracy is doomed to die. Your Institute of Religion, with its classes, vital and illuminating, its lectures, avoiding the sensational but daring to be factual and challenging, its forum, characterized by democratic give and take, has won community support on its merits." The unmarried young people of high school age and over of our Lynchburg Church met recently to organize a "Miss and Mister Club."

Mr. W. E. Briggs, one of our good laymen of the Reidsville (N. C.) Church, was the speaker at the church service in Reidsville on Sunday, February 27.

Congratulations to Tommye Ring of our Winston-Salem Church as the winner of first place in presenting the alma mater song for the Reynolds High School of Winston-Salem.

Church membership in the United States, in relation to population, stands at an all time high of 53 per cent. Sixty-three per cent of these are Protestants, 35 per cent are Catholics, and 6 per cent are Jewish.

Miss Leila Anderson and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill have been leading very profitable Vacation Bible Institutes in Eastern Virginia and North Carolina. Sessions have been held in the Norfolk area, Suffolk area, Henderson, Greensboro and Asheboro.

Mrs. Frank C. Laubach, wife of the distinguished Congregational Christian Missionary to the Philippines and other parts of the world, has been delighting audiences in North Carolina and Virginia with her strong messages during the past ten days.

Dr. Mary Frances Thelen, professor of religion at Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, and a member of our Lynchburg Church, is delivering a series of five lectures on "The Prophets," beginning March 3, in St. John's Episcopal Church in Lynchburg. Dr. Thelen is greatly interested in our church in Lynchburg and is one of its most loyal members.

Rev. E. Carl Brady, Robbins, N. C., is our new pastor at Niagara. Services will be held there under the leadership of Brother Brady on the first and third Sundays. Our Niagara Church is small, but an enthusiastic group. They have maintained an active Sunday school even though they have not had a pastor. Under the leadership of Brother Brady we are confident this church will grow as the community develops.

The ministers of the Eastern North Carolina Conference had a profitable meeting in Henderson on Tuesday, March 2. They met at the Congregational Christian Church in Henderson in the afternoon and enjoyed a delicious supper in the home of Rev. and Mrs. J. F. Apple. Those in attendance were: Rev. J. Frank Apple, Rev. E. M. Carter, Rev. R. T. Grissom, Rev. T. Fred Wright, Rev. T. D. Sutton, Rev. C. Carl Dollar, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Mrs. Frank C. Laubach, Miss Leila Anderson, Mrs. T. Fred Wright and Mrs. J. F. Apple. The ministers agreed that there should be a permanent organization and regular monthly meetings. Rev. R. T. Grissom was elected president and Rev. E. M. Carter was elected secretary. The next meeting will be held at Shallow Well Church on Monday, April 4, at 4:00 o'clock.

Dr. Gloria M. Wysner, secretary of the Committee for the Near and Middle East of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America, left New York on March 2 for a two-month survey of mission work in ten foreign countries. Her itinerary includes visits to mission stations and conferences with church leaders and government officials in Algeria, Tunisia, Egypt, Turkey, Palestine, Iraq, Iran, Arabia, Trans-Jordan and the Anglo-Egyptian Sudan. Dr. Wysner will assist mission groups to develop cooperative mission projects in various fields of Christian activity. She also will explore the possibilities for conducting a mass literacy program in North Africa, which later will be undertaken by Dr. Frank C. Laubach, noted missionary educator, now in Siam. In Palestine, she will study refugee problems with a view to assuring church boards in planning relief measures.

RALEIGH CHURCH CITATION.

In his remarks in regard to the presentation of the citation to the United Church, Raleigh, N. C., appearing on the front page, Supt. Scott told the church membership that "we have been led and encouraged by the presence and work of the United Church of Raleigh—dating back to Old Bethel Christian Church founded in Raleigh near 1800.

"The union of the Christians, Friends and Congregationalists, forming the present United Church, has further demonstrated the commitment to broad and inclusive foundations laid by our fathers.

"By your steady devotion to liberty; by your steady and potent declaration of the principles of freedom, of truth and fellowship and right, you of the United Church have shed light upon the way in which we should walk as one people in one world."

TRIAL IN BULGARIA.

The President of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America declared that the "real issue" in the trial of 15 Protestant Church leaders in Bulgaria "appears to be the conflict between loyalty to God and loyalty to an earthly power" as he urged all members of the 27 denominations in the Federal Council's constituency to join in prayer for their "persecuted" brethren.

The text of the statement by Bishop Stamm, a bishop of the Evangelical United Brethren Church, follows:

"Each day's developments make it clearer that there is a systematic attack upon churches in several countries in the Soviet orbit. Wherever leaders of the church challenge or even assert independence of the totalitarian regime, they are subjected to various kinds of persecution. This includes restricting freedom to preach the Word of God, hindering religious instruction of youth, prohibiting Christian youth movements, interfering with training of clergy, arresting and imprisoning church leaders. The fifteen Protestant leaders who are under arrest in Bulgaria and who go on trial today illustrate the gravity of the situation. Although they may be technically on trial for violating certain laws of the State, the real issue appears to be the conflict between loyalty to God and loyalty to an earthly power.

"Protestants throughout America will wish to express their sense of Christian fellowship with those who are bearing a Christian witness in the face of hostile forces. The only way in which we can help our Christian brethren in this crisis is by our prayer for them and by manifesting a solidarity of spirit with them. Whatever may be the outcome of the trials so far as their personal fortunes are concerned their Christian witness and faithfulness will not be in vain.

"We remember also others who are suffering for conscience sake. In the present situation an attack upon the religious liberty of one group is an attack upon the religious liberty of all."

"ONE GREAT HOUR."

Saturday night, March 26, at 10:00 o'clock (EST), will be one of the most significant hours in the history of Christendom. At that time One Great Hour, a radio broadcast, will be heard over the four major networks, CBS, NBC, ABC and Mutual, plus hundreds of non-network stations. Sponsored by our Congregational Christian Churches, together with more than twenty other Protestant, Anglican, and Eastern Orthodox communions, One Great Hour will present famous people, powerful drama, thrilling music. Sixty minutes of Christian witness over the nation's radios will follow. Do not miss it!

One Great Hour will reverently dramatize Christ's redemptive and healing mission to mankind, featuring true-life examples of vital and co-operative mission work in Christ's name being done in Europe and Asia.

The concrete aim of One Great Hour is to raise at least $10,000,000 for Relief and Reconstruction services of the cooperating churches on Sunday, March 27, the day after the broadcast. Our Congregational Christian goal for that morning is $500,000 for Relief and Reconstruction (formerly CWVR) in Our Christian World Mission. The goal for the churches of the Southern Convention is $7,000.

Here is a chance for us to use the radio for Jesus Christ and his redemptive power. Here is a chance for whole families to join in one great witness. Here is a chance for us to respond to the pitiful cries of suffering children, mothers and fathers across the seas for food, shelter, and the bare necessities of life.

Our people of the Southern Convention are earnestly urged to set aside 10:00 p. m., Saturday, March 26, for One Great Hour. Our people are urged to gather around the radio and hear this great story of Christ's healing, and then they are asked to place their offerings for Relief and Reconstruction in the special offering envelopes and take them to Sunday school or church on Sunday morning, March 27, dropping them on the offering plate. Offering envelopes for every member of the family may be obtained from your pastor or Sunday school superintendent, or from the Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Don't fail to join with fifty million other radio listeners for One Great Hour, Saturday night March 26, at 10:00 o'clock. This will be the greatest cooperation program in recent church history and one of the most significant radio programs in the history of radio. Let us make the radio the mouthpiece of Jesus Christ in One Great Hour, and let us joyfully place our liberal offerings on the offering plates of our church that the healing hand of our Lord may be taken throughout the whole wide earth. One Great Hour offerings should be sent to The Mission Board, Elon College, N. C., designated "Relief and Reconstruction."

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

CORPORATE UNION

The couple called the minister. Their marriage had not been going well and was headed for the rocks. The minister attempted to counsel with them, but found them feverishly preferring charges the one against the other. He finally called a halt to their acrimonious proceedings, and declared that they must begin on a new and higher level. No solution would be found by meeting every minute charge with a counter charge. The central purpose of their marriage must take precedence over all details. They must forget the unpleasant details of the past and earnestly press forward toward the supreme goal of spiritual rather than mere technical union.

Perhaps there is a lesson here, a very important lesson for church union. To much of the discussion of our E. & R. Merger has moved on the basis of technical details: Criticism of the Basis of Union, the percentage of voting churches, the validity of the Interpretations, skepticism of the writing of the constitution. Now some members of the opposition are urging that their case be placed in the hands of lawyers.

Every minister knows that the possibility of saving a marriage diminishes when either party employs a lawyer. The party is more concerned with establishing his own rights than in maintaining union. Mutuality has been defeated.

Moses, the greatest of all lawgivers, was never permitted to enter the Promised Land. With all due respect to the profession, does anyone expect lawyers to lead churchmen today into the Land of Promise? Prolonged debate, litigation, and needless delay may frustrate the will and plan of God. Details must ever be subservient to the great central purposes of life. We must have unswerving faith in the compatibility of all God's children. There is a Tide in the affairs of men which, taken at its flood, leads on to corporate fortune. Woe unto those who miss the boat!

EDITORIAL MUSING.

Laymen have determinative positions in our churches which either block or buttress the influence of the ministers. Our churches cannot go forward until our laymen are prepared to advance. A pastor spoke these words to his people recently: "The layman's task is as sacred as the minister's. God calls men to Christian laymanship as definitely as he calls men to the ministry. Without the dedication of laymen whom God critically needs at this hour the work of the ministry would be ineffective. The laymen of this church can carry Christ where I could never go. You have relationships that are not available to me. You can bring about reforms in business and the professions that are beyond my reach.

You can put skill, influences and resources at the disposal of the church which I do not possess." Any church will become a stronger unit in God's Kingdom whose laymen take this message seriously.

Lamentations should be included in our Lenten reading. Jeremiah describes the calamities which had befallen Judah and Jerusalem. Every experience which might prompt sorrow or regret are put into the picture of woe. Singing has turned to sighing. These emotions are aroused by the fall of Jerusalem. There is confession of guilt, exhortation to repentance, and prayer for mercy. We remember that Jesus wept over that City long after it had been restored. Is there any city (or congregation) over which Jesus does not or could not weep today? To what extent have our sins of commission and omission contributed to the world's sorrow? How dynamic and far-reaching have been our efforts to alleviate suffering and heal the broken hearts of our generation? We are tempted to magnify our own sorrows, cover ourselves with self-pity, and remain oblivious to the deeper tragedies around us which we might enter redemptively. Ponder anew these lines by Elizabeth Cheney:

Whenever there is silence around me
By day or by night—
I am startled by a cry.
It came down from the cross—
The first time I heard it.
I went out and searched—
And found a Man in the throes of crucifixion,
And I said, "I will take you down,"
And I tried to take the nails out of His feet.
But He said, "Let Me be
For I cannot be taken down
Until every man, woman and every child
Come together to take me down."
And I said, "But I cannot hear You cry.
What can I do?"
And He said, "Go about the world—
Tell everyone that you meet—
There is a Man on the cross
Waiting for them to take Him down."

Race Relations Sunday may be observed in an innocuous way. Some ministers and churches let it pass. Some utter a few pious platitudes. Few use it creatively. One congregation cried out that it was "ruined" because a Negro minister had been invited to speak in its pulpit, although the invitation was cancelled just before Race Relations Sunday. One wonders in just what way the church was "ruined": in man's estimation or God's? Methodist Churches in Texas make a tangible expression of their Race Relations observance with an offering for their denomination's Negro school. One lone church mailed a check for $1,201.67 to the Samuel Houston College in Austin! Think what the churches of the Southern Convention could do for Franklinton with a similar observance! Dare we face it and try it?

Protestants in Roman Catholic Mexico*

By DR. NELSON DREIER.

Mexico is in a dynamic mood for change and development. This is true from practically every standpoint. The radical anti-clerical movement of a few years ago is spent. The Catholic Church is active on every front to gain its former position of control.

Many liberal people had their eyes opened in the period of the revolution. Thousands of them have departed the superstition of Romanism and are either free liberal spirits or are looking to the Protestant Churches for their spiritual direction. Many Protestant Churches are full to capacity, a large number of the new adherents are people of influence and power in civic and governmental circles.

Our record in the work of the American Board is very good. We are in a position that will make it possible for us to wield an influence greatly in excess of our numbers. The high moral, spiritual and educational standards set by our early missionaries has not been forgotten.

From the days of Pastor Stevens, 75 years ago, a graduate of Pacific School of Religion, who was martyred at Auhaluco in the compound of our mission property by a mob incited by the priest of the Cathedral across the city square, to the present hour is a story of devotion and love given by missionaries and their friends in the homeland.

Marguerita Wright, born of missionary parents in Mexico, was our one man mission through the difficult days of revolution and recurrent recession. In recent years she has been joined by Larry and Connie Stanton and Malcolm and Lois Hayes who supplement her in evangelistic oversight of the churches, in educational work, and in the growing program with youth. We have raised up numerous national leaders outstanding among whom are Elena Ortiz in religious education and Arturo Villalobos in church music.

We face the opportunities of the present hour with high hope and definite determination that the strategic position in Mexico where currency is favorable to multiplying our gifts, and where the people are open to our not be neglected.

We propose a five-year program all of which we hope can be encompassed within our Christian World Mission. It calls for the relocation of the Colon School in Guadalajara and a new physical property. A new church in Hermosillo thriving metropolis of the north. The training of national leaders both lay and professional to man the new opportunities. We are anxious to help the people in Guadalajara to get the new church which they so much desire and which they are committed to do everything within their power to achieve. We must provide clinical service in connection with social work projects. The salaries of our teachers and ministers must be brought up to level of decency and respect. It is important that we enter new communities where whole congregations of 100 or more people are beckoning us and saying if you cannot help us soon we will be compelled to turn to the emotional sects for assistance in obtaining leadership and buildings to house worship and education.

We must spend some money to rehabilitate the splendid buildings at Colegio el Pacifico in Mazatlan. We must provide a more adequate building and property for Ramona Salazar in her impressive and history-making social service program. We must train many laymen to supplement the leadership of our missionaries and national pastors in many preaching points calling for our help.

Mexico in many ways is unique among our mission fields. It is near enough to us so that many can go and see the fruits of our mission. It has thousands of devoted friends in the conferences of the west and across the country who are determined that we will develop a strong work that will be well-nigh self-supporting by the end of the five-year program.

An important phase of the Christian World Mission is the response by our churches to the Great New Day in Mexico.

From Peiping to Mindanao

By RAYMOND BLAKNEY.*

When last I wrote, we were in Peiping. What happened to Peiping, you already know. What the future holds for the devoted friends still there, I don't know, but I anticipate no physical danger for them. When the consul's warning came last November 9, like all the rest we studied our problem. We reached the conclusion that under the Communists, the evangelistic work I was doing had no great future. We packed to go home. Two days before the scheduled departure, Miss Alice Cary's good letter came from the American Board office in Boston—not asking us to go to the Philippines but stating the case. It seemed to us a call.

So here we are in our new home, up on a hill overlooking Lake Lanao, on the large island, Mindanao. Beyond the lake and all around us, lush volcanic mountains rise. Mindanao is what you think it is, tropical, heavily decorated with coconut palms, lots of jungle, monkeys, parrots, crocodiles, and brown-skinned people.

Most of Mindanao's people are "Christians," which usually means Roman Catholic of sorts, dressed in American-style clothes and speaking a bewildering variety of languages that are rather pleasant to hear but also English to some degree. Their new nationalism is quite intense but they do look in the direction of the United States for leadership and they are very friendly. In Lanao Province, however, all around us, are the Moros or Maranaos. The Moros are an ominous-looking tribe, fiercely Mohammedan and pistol-packing but still friendly in their morose way. They have been slow to send their children to the public schools and such English as they have is very limited. Tomorrow, on their market day, they will swarm down into the town square to buy and sell. Then the roads will flash all the violent colors of the rainbow from their native clothes or wrappings. There will be much betel-nut chewing and spitting from mouths full of teeth blackened with a combination of tobacco and iron. There is romance in this town.

But that's not all. The large room in our house is used on Sundays as the church auditorium for a little group of Evangelical or Protestant Christians. It is part of what is now the United Evangelical Church of the Philippines and our new assignment

SUFFOLK LETTER.

They were a small army of little boys. Just little fellows all dressed up in their best Sunday clothes. How nice they looked! They filed into the reserved pews in the beautiful Whitely Auditorium at Elon. Quiet, sturdy little men they were. Following them were larger boys, sober faced and just as manly. They formed a group of future American citizens. Following them were as many girls, little ones and larger ones. All of them well dressed, all of them sad. I could but breathe a prayer for both the boys and the girls. Uncle Charley was gone. He was their friend. More than that for many of them he was the only Daddy they had ever known. He loved them. They knew that, and they loved him, too. Kindly grown-ups showed them to their places, and they packed into their pews.

There were wet eyes everywhere. Most of us had never witnessed such a scene. The hearts of all of us were touched. And well so, for they were wards of the Church. They were "Uncle Charley's" first and always, and now in a more realistic sense, they were ours. His quiet form lying in state up front silently reminded us of that trust. Could he have put it in words, his quiet, gentle voice would have been pleading for them. It had often. He spoke to church after church, conference after conference, right from the touch of their hands, and from the embrace of their arms. He told his story in subdued tones, but with an eagerness never surpassed on our church floor. The church honored his words, for his were words backed up with deeds—a lifetime of loving deeds.

More than that "Uncle Charley" had carried their cause into many fine business and professional offices. His gentle, sincere manner, and his big heart and good business sense gave him a hearing. They heard his story and opened their hearts. The Orphanage prospered, and became a home for many lads and lassies. God heard his prayers. The farmlands grew larger, and the farm was improved. New buildings were added, new faith and interest were created. And every boy and girl who was received there was given a home.

There was a very large congregation at his funeral. But hundreds who knew him and loved him could not get there. A large family of his own sons and daughters and members of their own families were there. His love for them had not lessened because of his absorbing interest in the little motherless and fatherless children. Church leaders, ministers, business and professional men, paid homage to his kindly heart, his great life, and his good success. V. R. Holt, president of the Orphanage Board of Trustees and his fellow members led the procession of honorary pall bearers. Their faces expressed the loss of a beloved friend and the realization of a large responsibility now resting more heavily on their shoulders. But they had been wisely selected, and will do their work well.

Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon, had lost a college treasurer and a faithful member of the Board of Trustees; Dr. Jesse H. Dollar had lost a leader in his College Community Church. They conducted the services. The College Choir sang. The flowers were many and beautiful, and from many sources. Under a beautiful noonday sky his body was laid to rest in the community cemetery on a rounding hill overlooking many of the fields which he developed and near the place which he loved.

CHRISTIAN ARCHITECT IN JAPAN.

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth William Dowie, 1738 Bentley Avenue, West, Los Angeles, Calif., have been appointed for a three-year term of service in Japan by the American Board. The Dowie's hope to sail for Japan within the next fortnight. Mr. Dowie, who is an architect-engineer, will go out as adviser to the Reconstruction Committee of the Council of Cooperation in Japan. This Council represents the interdenominational and interracial United Church of Japan and is responsible for the rebuilding of churches, schools and missionary residences in Japan.

Mr. Dowie, who is an experienced bridge engineer and designer, as well as an architect draftsman, served for twelve years in Formosa (1913-25) as a Presbyterian missionary from Can-

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

VI. NATHANIEL.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

Nathaniel, son of (Bar) Tolmai, or as he is more often known, Bartholomew, when told by Philip that he had found the Messiah argued that the Messiah could hardly have come from so insignificant a place as Nazareth and Philip being unable to meet his objection merely said, "Come and see."

Jesus described this man as one who valued the spiritual things of life and sought to become everything that a true "son of God" should be. He was candid, open minded and unusually free from sin. He was truly a noble soul.

It is of interest to note that he was a native of Cana, a little town near Capernaum, in which Jesus performed his first miracle and also where the nobleman found the Master when he came seeking him to heal his son. Scholars have been unable, however, to definitely place the location of the town.

Nathaniel was one of the seven who had fished all night and caught nothing to whom the risen Christ appeared and said, "Cast the net on the right side of the boat and you will find some" (John 21:6).

The traditions concerning him are of little or no value although legend would have us believe that he preached the gospel in India and there died.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

CHARLES DAVID JOHNSTON.

On Sunday night, February 27, about 10:00 o'clock, Mr. Johnston had retired. He rang for his daughter, Rebecca, who answered the ring. She saw that her father was in serious condition. He had suffered a heart attack. She did manage to get a physician and Mr. Less Wagoner from the orphanage farm to her father's bedside before the end came. It was evident that the attack was fatal and that a most valuable life was coming to a close.

The funeral was conducted from the College Chapel Wednesday morning at 11:00 o'clock by the writer, assisted by Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of the College Church. Music was furnished by the Music Department of the college. The Board of Trustees of the orphanage and of the college attended the service in a body. A large number of relatives and friends, many from a distance, attended the service. Floral designs were numerous and beautiful. It was the kind of service that Mr. Johnston would have appreciated.

Mr. Johnston was a member of the Board of Trustees of the College and was treasurer of the college. Before coming to the orphanage as Superintendent he was Registrar of Deeds for Alamance County having served in that capacity for twelve years. He declined an additional nomination at the hands of his party to consider the call of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage and of his church to assume the important position as Superintendent of the orphanage.

At the time of Mr. Johnston's coming to the orphanage it was in hard straits financially and otherwise. By strictest economy, sound business principles, and constant hard work, Mr. Johnston built the Orphanage into one of the finest institutions of its kind in this section. He loved his work. He loved little children. It was a joy to him to be a friend to the friendless and a helper to the dependent. In the very atmosphere of simplicity he grew great in spirit and in service. For thirty-three years he piloted our institution for unfortunate and dependent children. During his service he literally built this institution into the hearts of the people of the church. Any reasonable appeal to his people for the orphanage always met with a ready and a complete response. He did all his church asked him to do and did it well and has the thanks and the sincere appreciation of the people as a whole for a difficult job well done.

Mr. Johnston was reared in the Christian Church joining the church at Long's Chapel with his parents. Later he transferred his membership to Haw River and then to Graham. From Graham he came to the Elon Community Church where he was a faithful, loyal, devout member of the church. He lived a consistent Christian life and died in the faith. May the blessings of God be upon His children and families, friends, and the work that was dear to his heart.

The college adjourned classes, in honor of and for the love that all had for Mr. Johnston, on Wednesday morning from 10:00 to 12:00 o'clock.

EVANGELISM.

As the physical life of our Lord ebbed out He said to His disciples, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." That command should be written over the door of every church, emblazoned above every altar, and stamped indelibly on the hearts of every Christian man, woman and child. This command expresses the purpose of His coming and the consuming passion of His life. During the days of His flesh, He taught, persuaded, healed and brought back to life those who had died that all men, that the world might know that He was the Christ, the Son of God, the hope of the world, and the Savior of man. When He could speak and teach no more He laid these responsibilities upon the hearts of those whom He had taught and commanded them to go the ends of the earth and speak in His stead that all men might experience the power of God that He had released in the world.

The church today has one task—that is to give Christ to the World. We may give Him by word of witness. We may be slow of speech but we can at least speak out of what we have experienced. We may tell "What great things the Lord hath done for us." When we speak out of experience we speak with certainty. It is not a theory, speculation, or implication but positive knowledge. The man born blind said, "Whether He be the Christ or no, I know not, but this one thing I know that whereas I was blind I now see." There was no gain-saying about his seeing. It was an indisputable fact. When a man has experienced Christ he has the boldness of the Spirit with which to tell his story.

Then we may give Christ to the world by the witness of life. The power of a Christian life is irresistible. Its influence is beyond control. When Moses had spent a season with the Lord his face did shine with a whiteness that was revealing to all who saw him. When the disciples had been blessed with His fellowship all took knowledge of the fact that they had been with the Lord. Peter was so filled with Christ and the power of His Spirit that his very shadow was full of healing for the sick and afflicted.

The church needed the power of God then, and it needs it today. Man is the only medium through which the power may come. But first of all man must be worthy. Are we who live today willing to pay the price that the Gospel of Christ may go to the ends of the earth and all men have the privileges of life in Him and for Him.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The local church is an important and essential unit in our church organizations. In fact, it is vital to all undertakings and without the local church there could be no overall organizations. For this fact, the local church must add its support. No local church should be content to plan its program for the year without providing for sufficient funds to carry on its own affairs. It also should provide for forward steps, new undertakings, and new obligations. At the same time the denomination has institutions. These institutions have been founded by the church and the church is obligated to provide a certain amount of support and this support must be forthcoming if these institutions are to fulfill their purposes and render the services that the church expects of them. When the local church lays its plans for the ensuing year the support of these institutions are, or should be, provided for.

The Convention has indicated the extent of the support to be given the (Continued on page 14.)

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

LEARN

Life will be too short for most of us to learn all we would like to know about our mission fields. However, if we can master one or two ideas each week, there will come a time when we can think, and talk, with reasonable intelligence concerning our Church around the world.

North China

Our North China Mission started in 1854 in Shanghai, where Elijah Bridgeman years before had translated the Scriptures into the Chinese. Today most of that area is Communist territory.

On the map that will appear very soon we can locate Tehsien, where our hospital and school have been utterly destroyed—by bandits, the officials say. Fenyang and Taiku were occupied last July, but Mary Dewar, Gladys Williams, Emma Noreen and Louise Meebold were at work in the hospitals and schools at (my) last report. The Oberlin Shansi School buildings in Taiku, vacated when the schools migrated west during the Japanese occupation, have been occupied by the Communists.

Tsinian was occupied in early fall. The theological seminary is still there, but the Cheeloo medical school moved to Foochow last summer.

In Tunghsien, Peiping, Tientsin, and Paoting, our other stations in North China, we have—or had—12 schools and two hospitals, programs of rural service, public health, and social service. What has, or will become of this, under Communist domination only the future will tell.

Shall We Leave China?

This question is very personal to the missionaries, and to Board Secretaries. It may be very difficult to stay during the next few, or several years. If we leave China in the time of great trouble, to whom shall these four hundred million people turn for aid?

WORK

What work can we do that will make it easier for our missionaries to build the Church wherever they are?

The answer to that must be personal, but it should be definite. It doesn't seem right for the missionaries to spend all of their energies while members of the churches in America conserve theirs.

Books and Boxes

Suppose you were in China, Japan, or some other place where books were not abundant, and you received a fine book of poems, a stirring novel like The Big Fisherman, or even a beautiful copy of the Scriptures from a member of a church back home. How it would warm your heart! And make you feel that you were not alone!

Angie Crew, and others, tell how much the old clothes sent from America mean to the people who have so much less than we. The greatest worth is not the warmth that comes to the body of the wearer, but the assurance that people of the Church, people they have not seen, remember and care.

It is not too much trouble to get together a few things to send to the missionaries at home and abroad. Just a bit of work does the trick. And it makes so much difference to those who give and those who receive.

"One Great Hour"

When the four great broadcasting companies of America get together for an hour's broadcast, something important is happening. When the various religious sects pool their talents and time, we should take notice.

That is what will happen at ten o'clock on the night of March 26, 1949. American is to be told the needs of the world, and what we can do about those needs. It will just be too bad if we church people go to sleep, or for other reasons do not hear the broadcast.

PRAY

Prayer will not save the world, some say. Neither will money, armies, or the atom bomb save the world. But the world will not be saved unless people pray. People who pray are the kind who make the world a better place. Prayer releases power that would not be available without the prayer. Hence, men ought always to pray, and to faint not.

Our Prayer List

Sunday—Chinese Christian Leaders.

Bewildered Government officials who are anxious for China to be Christian, Ministers who lead churches, especially those in Communist areas, Teachers in colleges and universities and lower schools, Business and Professional people, Officials of local churches. Try to think of their problems, and to pray as they do.

Monday—Hospitals in North China

They are needed, and should be Christian in every sense. Pray that doctors and nurses and all workers may show the Christian spirit in all ways, and be able to witness to their faith by their words and work.

Tuesday—Schools in China

Pupils, parents, teachers, buildings, equipment—these are all important if China is to win the long struggle to intelligent, Christian living.

Wednesday—N. China Missionaries.

There were thirty-three. Most of them are still there, we think. They will need opportunity to work, protection of life and property, wisdom and grace beyond the ordinary.

Thursday—Bible Societies in China.

Communists close the Bible, but China needs an open Bible, known and read of all men.

Friday—Missionaries We Know

Rev. and Mrs. Earl Ballou, Miss Alice Murphy, Rev. and Mrs. Robbins Strong, Rev. and Mrs. Malcolm White, Rev. and Mrs. James A. Hunter, and others.

Saturday—Our Other North China Missionaries

Among them are Rev. and Mrs. Alfred D. Heininger, Rev. and Mrs. Robert B. Whitaker, and Miss Ruth Van Kirk.

OUR UNITED PRAYER

Good Master, Thou who didst heal the sick and cleanse the leper, listen to the prayer of thy distressed people around the world. They are sick in body, mind and soul. Some are keenly aware of their illness, and many are unconscious of their deadly malady. Let not our blindness keep our hearts from making their intercession to God. Give wisdom and skill to doctors, nurses, ministers, teachers, and all who try to lift men out of their ignorance, hunger, homelessness, and sin. Have mercy on the multitudes being taught that mercy is not a virtue, and give them courage to be merciful. Keep us who read these little lines sensitive to world needs, and make us to know that we can help Thee to create a Christian world, perhaps in our time. Let us not fail Thee today, or any day. Amen.

PROGRAM FOR APRIL.

Our society program for April is planned for a time to get acquainted with our missionaries for special study. The program has been planned and worked by Miss Virginia Brinkley, 310 Cedar Street, Suffolk, Va.

For the worship center, use a globe of the world with a tall white candle, representing the Light of Christ and placed high enough so that the light shines down upon the globe. Place six lower unlighted white candles around the globe, each representing the six missionaries (and their wives) for special study. These candles are to be lighted from the Christ candle as the women taking part in the service tell about each of the missionaries. An open Bible and white bowers will add to the effectiveness of the worship center.

CALL TO WORSHIP:

To people plunged in shades of night;
Go messengers of peace and love,
Like angels sent from fields above,
Be thine to shed celestial light.

Go to the hungry—food impart;
To paths of peace the wanderer guide;
And lead the thirsty, panting heart,
Where streams of living waters glide.

Thy love a rich reward shall find
From him who sits enthroned on high;
For they who turn the erring mind
Shall shine like stars above the sky.

HYMN: O Zion, Haste, Thy Mission Fulfilling.

LEADER: Long years ago when the world was still in darkness, God saw the great need of his people. Out of his pitying heart of love, he gave a promise—one which involved the greatest sacrifice the world has ever known. And so nearly two thousand years ago God sent His Son to be the Light of the World that we may not walk in paths of darkness but may have the light of life. To symbolize this Light of the World and to honor our Savior, let us light this tall center candle which represents the Light whose radiance still brightens the earth today and without which there would be darkness and despair across our lands.

Unfortunately there are still areas in the world where this light has not reached, and so when Christ said, "Ye are the light of the world," he charged us with the carrying of this light to those in darkness.

We have met here this evening to do honor especially to our six missionaries who have been chosen for special study this year. In honoring these "Heralds of Christ" we shall be honoring, too, all people who have heard and obeyed the call of Christ: "Go ye into all the world."

Let us now see how these missionaries add brilliance to the Christ candle by the work that they do.

FIRST WOMAN: The Christ candle shines brighter in our world today because of the work done by the Rev. David M. Stowe among the people of North China. (Explains work of the Stowes.)

SECOND WOMAN: The rays from the Christ candle reach farther across the lands when we light the candle representing Miss Dorothy Blatter, who preaches the 'Gospel of good books for children' under the American Board of Foreign Missions in Istanbul, Turkey. (Explains her work.)

THIRD WOMAN: This candle which I now set aflame represents the spreading of the gospel by the missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. Raymond B. Blakney, in Peiping, China. (Explains their work.)

FOURTH WOMAN: Our next candle which I now light symbolizes the work of the Robert Grants who are at present career missionaries in Japan, being the first new Protestant missionaries to arrive in Japan after the war. (Explains their work.)

FIFTH WOMAN: See how the flame from the candle which represents the work of our medical missionary to India, Miss Carolyn Weeber, strengthens the other lights. In what better way can the story of Christ be carried to the far corners of the earth than through the healing of weak and diseased bodies? (Explains her work.)

SIXTH WOMAN: People like the Lee D. Bergsmans do their share in spreading the gospel throughout the world and thus help to keep the Light of Christ bright. The candle which we light now represents their work as missionaries in Johannesburg, South Africa. (Explains her work.)

LEADER: What a task these "Heralds of Christ" have in helping to bring his Kingdom on earth. Many sacrifices have they made to keep the flame of the Light of Christ undimmed. We have a great responsibility in helping them; they need our encouragement, our gifts, our Prayers. Paul said that missionaries are persons who believe the world is wrong side up, that it needs to be turned the other side up, and that they are sent to help do it. It will be largely through their efforts as missionaries and with our help that world evangelism may finally be realized.

CLOSING PRAYER.

(Note: The full program may be had from Miss Virginia Brinkley (address above), including the explanations of the work of the missionaries. Be sure to write to her if you want this program for April.)

RADIO DOCUMENTARY ON ASIA MISSIONS.

A series of five 15-minute documentaries, "World Without End," is now being offered free to local councils of churches and radio stations by the Foreign Missions Conference of North America. The first two programs include an on-the-spot documentary of the 37,000-mile trip made by S. Franklin Mack, Chairman of the World Radio Committee, the Rev. Everett C. Parker, director of Programs and Production, PRC, and Niklaus Hagmann, Chief Engineer of radio station WJZ, New York City. The voices, the songs, the dreams of the nationals served by the missionary enterprise are recorded.

The third program is the story of Sam Higginbottom, missionary in Allahabad, India. The fourth is a drama of Albert Schweitzer, famed medical missionary. The fifth, entitled "Each One Teach One," is an interview with Dr. Frank C. Laubach, promoter of a world literacy campaign, by S. Franklin Mack.

The Children's Division of The Board of Christian Education met at the home of Dr. and Mrs. W. E. Wiseman, Greensboro, N. C., March 3. Mrs. W. J. Andes is chairman of this important committee of The Board of Christian Education. Plans were made for aiding churches planning for Vacation Bible Schools during the summer.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Do you remember some stories last fall by Rev. Douglas A. Smith of England? Here is another one by him:

THE VOLUNTEERS.

By DOUGLAS A. SMITH.

"One volunteer is worth ten pressed-men," declares an old proverb. Who will volunteer to serve Jesus our King?

Years ago a coastal vessel was in difficulties after it had sprung a leak from below decks, and water began to pour in. The captain urged the men to get to the pumps, but even then the water gained on them. Could the hole be blocked? The ship's carpenter was called into service, and he did his utmost to close the hole. Heavy seas continued to pound the ship. At last the captain asked for a volunteer to go down into the hold, to try to plug the hole, by supporting the planking the carpenter had fixed. The first volunteer was the captain's young son, Tim. He went below. After heavy buffeting the ship at last made its way to quieter water. The captain hurried below to relieve his son from his post; but it was unnecessary. Tim needed no human aid, he had given his life to save the ship and his shipmates. It looked as though the straining planks had slipped, and Tim trying to fix something else into the hole had had his arm trapped, and so was unable to escape from the rising water. He was drowned.

Recently an English Royal Air Force padre, the Rev. Hubert Cecil Pugh, a former Congregational minister, was posthumously awarded the George Cross. "Mr. Pugh," said the citation, "chose certain death to pray with injured airmen who were trapped in the flooded hold of a sinking ship. He simply explained that he must be where his men were; and through his comrades demurred insisted on being lowered into the damaged hold. It was three-quarters full of water with the deck awash and caving in. When he knelt down to pray the water reached his shoulders. Within a few minutes the ship plunged and sank. He had every opportunity of saving his own life, but without regard to his own safety he gave his life for others. He chose death to help others."

Alfred Sadd was a missionary of the London Missionary Society, stationed in the Pacific at the time of the attack on Pearl Harbor. When the Japanese invaded the islands many of the white people were evacuated. The young minister was urged to leave, too. But Alfred Sadd was not made of the stuff that runs away. He chose to stay to look after his fellow Christians. Soon afterwards Japanese soldiers landed on the island. Alfred Sadd and some companions were immediately arrested and taken to another island. The Japanese ordered a parade of the prisoners, before some officers, who sat behind a table. Between the prisoners and the table a Union Jack flag had been laid on the ground. An officer commanded Alfred Sadd to march to him: this Mr. Sadd did, but he walked around the Union Jack. He was instructed to return and then walk directly to the table, which would have meant treading upon his national flag. He walked forward, reached the flag, picked it up in his arms, kissed it, and handed it to the Japanese officer. Alfred Sadd and his friends were condemned to death. As the prisoners stood in a row, the young missionary broke the ranks, stepped forward and bade his fellow-countrymen have courage, and be steadfast. So he died, the first of the group to be killed. He was faithful unto death.

Jesus our Lord was a Volunteer. He gave His life for His friends. He called Himself "the good Shepherd," one who lay down his life for the sheep. "The hireling," He said, "flees when the wolf comes." The hireling is a "pressed-man." But the Volunteer is steadfast, faithful; he gives "not counting the cost." As we are thankful for the lives of such men, and especially of Jesus, let us volunteer to serve Him, "The King of kings, the Lord of lords."

SCHOOL AT HOME.

By MARY ELIZABETH THOMPSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"No school today," said John Burgess. "The roads are just a glare of ice, and look at that rain coming down!"

"Too bad," sighed Mrs. Burgess, as she thought of her little live-wire Jackie and her almost grown-up daughter Alice. They would quarrel—Alice was so bossy, and Jackie resented being bossed.

However, matters turned out much better than Mrs. Burgess had anticipated. She had not realized how strong a hold the discipline of school had already taken on her small son.

There was no kindergarten in the town where the Burgesses lived, and so Jackie had arrived at the age of six without having had the benefit of its helpful lessons in self-government and cooperation. In the beginning he had found first-grade requirements hard to understand, but as he had gradually become somewhat adjusted, the school routine had fascinated him.

So, this morning, while his sister did the breakfast dishes and helped prepare the dinner, Jackie, at her suggestion, quite willingly sat at a small table near her with his books and pencils. He forgot all about Alice being his sister; she was now his teacher and must be treated with proper respect. Lessons went on quietly and seriously.

The effect was just as pronounced on Alice. She didn't nag nor pass sarcastic remarks.

Mrs. Burgess could not help smiling to herself when she heard their father ask Jackie to hand him a ruler and Jackie first asked permission of his "teacher" to do this, and Mr. Burgess, grasping the seriousness of the situation, politely asked to be excused for having interrupted the lesson.

Recess time came and Jackie enjoyed it just as much as he would have done had he really been at school. Alice and he were as playful and friendly as a couple of kittens.

Mrs. Burgess made no comment, but she did considerable thinking. Such a morning of quiet harmony was indeed a refreshing change. She would remember to ask the teacher to tea soon. Anyone who could influence noisy Jackie so quickly to become an obedient and diligent student deserved gratitude. "Not only that," she thought to herself, "perhaps this teacher could give me some helpful suggestions regarding home discipline."

A minister asked a little converted boy, "Does not the devil tell you that you are not a Christian?" "Yes, sometimes." "Well, what do you say?" "I tell him," replied the boy, "whether I am a Christian or not is none of his business."—New Encyclopedia of Illustrations.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

A WORSHIP PROGRAM FOR LENT.

By FLETA MAY MOFFITT, *Personal
Chairman, Southern Convention
Youth Council.*

CALL TO WORSHIP:

Holy Spirit, Truth divine,
Dawn upon this soul of mine;
Word of God, and inward Light
Wake my spirit, clear my sight.

HYMN: "Spirit of God, Descend Upon My Heart."

SCRIPTURE: Matthew 25:14-29.

THOUGHT FOR LENT: May we be awakened to a desire for more generous giving and sacrifice, not only of our material possessions, but of self.

Give . . .

Give as the free air and sunshine are given,
Give as the waves when their channels are riven,
Lavishly, joyfully, utterly give!

Not the waste drops from thy cup overflowing,
Not some small part of thy gifts ever growing,
Give as God gave thee who gave thee to live.

LEADER: The story is told of a young oak tree growing strong and bearing with great pride its crop of acorns, when one day it heard a bramble talking:

"These forest trees are our greatest enemies. Look at the space they occupy and the amount of nourishment they take from the earth. Sure they give of their acorns and of their trunks for building materials all for nothing. For nothing, Charity!
That's what it is, and who wants charity. As for that, blackberries give but they prick in return. I don't believe in living just to give, and for nothing!"

The oak tree listening began to think, "Why should I give of my acorns and shade and of myself?
What do I get in return?" More and more these selfish thoughts took possession of the oak and slowly its sap turned to poison causing the tree to start drying up gradually.
The seasons came and went, but the oak tree shrank into itself and withered. The wind whispered around the tree, "Give! give, or how shall you receive? Bless or there is no room for blessing!" But the tree only murmured to itself, "Why should I?" It was already rotten at the core.

CLOSING THOUGHT:

I would give my life as a growing oak
That reaches for star and sun,
And give of itself with a good tree will
Till its growing time is done.

CLOSING PRAYER: Master of us all,
may we seek not to be comforted,
but to comfort; not to be understood, but to understand; not to be loved,
but to love.

(pause . . .)

Master, no offering costly and sweet May we, like Magdalene, lay at Thy sacrifice
Dear Lord to Thee, Dear Lord to Thee.

Amen.

WINCHESTER YOUTH FELLOWSHIP.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of the Winchester church has been busy this winter. Our social hall of the new parsonage has provided an ideal place for young people to meet and enjoy both religious and social gatherings.

During the winter we have held our Sunday evening meetings here, and have been entertained at supper meetings by various groups of the church from time to time. Following the meal, which is enjoyed before a friendly, open fireplace, aglow with crackling flames, a helpful and inspiring worship service is conducted. There is usually time for visiting together and enjoying fellowship before the regular evening worship service of our church, which most of our young people attend.

On January 30, beginning Youth Week, we sponsored at the evening church service, the new sound film,
"Salt of the Earth." The president of our own Fellowship, Eugene Russell, Jr., presided. Betty Trenary read the scriptures, and Ralph Pugh led the song service. The service was well attended and the picture proved one of the most inspiring we have shown.

It was our plan to close Youth Week with a debate, but because of the necessary absence of two of our debaters on February 6, we postponed our program until February 13. Permission had been gotten from the regular quarterly conference of our church, and the service was announced for 7:00 p. m. on February 13. The boys set up the tables and chairs. The girls set the tables and decorated them with candles and flowers. The Fellowship invited members and friends of the church for a supper meeting.

We served apple sauce, pickles, coffee, ginger ale, potato salad, cookies and cake, and asked our friends to bring a sandwich. There was a veritable feast and nearly one hundred people accepted our invitations.

The subject for debate, "Resolved,
That the Sinner Makes More Sacrifices Than the Saint." Mr. C. D. Bennett, a Handley High School teacher, was moderator. Strange or perhaps by coincidence, the affirmative debaters were Freda Seldon, Betty Koon and Evelyn Allen, all girls; while the negative side was presented by Ralph Pugh, Eupene Russell, Jr., and Howard Carper, Jr., three boys. The judges were: Mrs. Edgar Nelson,
Mrs. Robert Newman and Mr. J. C.
Shanholtz. Their decision was in favor of the affirmative but it must be said to the credit of the boys that they did a good job, to be arguing against their own convictions, since all these young people are fine dependable members of our Winchester Church.

It was the consensus of opinion that our evening was well spent. Following the worship service, there was the debate, in which our young people presented in a striking manner some heart-searching thoughts which every Christian should consider. The debate really presented a challenge for higher Christian living.

We plan to continue with our supper services. Our attendance is increasing weekly. We try to present a worship program with a deeply spiritual note. Perhaps there are other groups who would find our experience to be their own. Why not try it?

SPECIAL TRAINING FOR THE TWELVE.

LESSON XII—MARCH 20, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Every one who asks, receives, and he who seeks, finds, and to him that knocks it will be opened.—Luke 11:10.

LESSON: Mark 6:7-12, 30-44; Luke 11:1-13.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 10:5-16.

Learning How to Work.

"And He called unto Him the twelve and began to send them forth by two and two, and gave them power over unclean spirits. . . ." The Master used a sound educational method in training His disciples—He taught them to do, by doing. He had undoubtedly given them again and again the theory of the thing, but He knew that theory without practice would never get results. He knew that the only and the best way to learn is to learn by doing. He knew, too, that they would make some mistakes, they would not be able to do as He did, but in doing they would always be learning how to do better. This principle of learning to do by doing is the foundation of the laboratory method in schools and colleges, of practice teaching in Teacher Training Schools, of apprentice school practices, and of many other kindred activities in modern educational and scientific institutions. It is basic to the religious life, too. One may learn something about prayer from reading about prayer, but one really learns to pray by praying. If he waits to pray until he knows how to pray he will never learn to pray. The same thing is true about any kind of Christian service. It is a mistake to refuse to try to do something for Christ and the Church until one thinks he is an expert in the matter. Do what you can the best you can and you will learn to do better and better. There are thousands of people who could win others to Christ if they would simply do the best they can do. One factor in the "Special Training of the Twelve" was the lessons in learning to do by doing.

Learning to Wait and to Relax.

"And He said unto them, Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest a while." The disciples had been out on their special mission and they came back to tell Jesus "all things, both what they had done, and what they had taught." By the way that would give them an opportunity to make helpful and constructive suggestions so that they could profit by their mistakes and do better next time. For while practice makes perfect, bad practice makes perfectly bad. Jesus knew that life has its rhythms. Periods of work should be followed by periods of rest. Intake must follow outgo. If one gives one must make provision to receive. Every one needs to learn how to wait as well as how to work, and this is true of the Christian worker as well as of other workers. The bow must be unbent if it is to keep its resiliency. A preacher needs to take a day off as well as the manual laborer. Christian workers need times when they not only rest physically, but when they spend quiet time with Jesus. This is real re-creation, life is renewed from within. We need to take time to be holy.

Learning to Use What We Have For the Master.

There are many truths embedded in the story of the feeding of the five thousand as recorded in today's lesson, but in keeping with the general topic of the lesson, we should note the special training Jesus gave His disciples in using what they had. A quick canvass of the situation revealed the fact that they apparently had only five barley loaves and two small fishes, and that for a great crowd of five thousand. But at Jesus' suggestion and insistence they brought that to Him, and lo, it was more than enough to meet the needs of the huge crowd, for everybody including the disciples had plenty to eat and there were twelve basketfuls left over. Ah, what great things we would do for the Master if we only had more money or more talent or more time, or more what have you. But Jesus would teach us to use what we have in His name and for His sake. If we do that miracles will happen sure enough. It is not what we have but what we use that really counts.

Learning to Pray.

"And it came to pass that as He was praying in a certain place, when He ceased, one of His disciples said unto Him, Lord teach us to pray, as John taught his disciples." Prayer in Jesus' life was evidently something vital. It was no mere formal repetition of words, no mere saying of prayers, but praying. The disciples were tremendously impressed when Jesus prayed. And they asked Him, through a spokesman—was it "The Big Fisherman?"—to teach them how to pray.

In response the Master gave them a form or formula for prayer. It is what we call the Lord's Prayer, but might better be called the Model Prayer, for Jesus said "when ye pray" or "After this manner pray ye." He did not mean of course that when one prayed he had to use the same words or the same form. He was simply giving the framework in which prayer was to be set, the principles and the spirit of true prayer. A recognition of God's Fatherhood and His dignity and holiness, a desire that the Father's kingdom be established and that His will be done on earth as in heaven, petition for daily needs, even physical needs, a sense of sin and of the need for forgiveness, a realization of our need for help, and the ascription of the glory for all this to the Father who alone could give the victory—this in essence is the Lord's Prayer or Model Prayer. Furthermore Jesus emphasized the virtues of sincerity, brevity, simplicity, submission in prayer.

And in a thrilling climax He emphasized the grounds of faith and hope in prayer—the Father's character and wisdom. If a child asked for a piece of bread would a father give him a stone (even if he did not have a loaf of bread for him?); if he asked for a fish would he give him a serpent? if he asked for an egg, would he give him a scorpion? Well, said Jesus, apply that same rule of thumb to God's dealings with His children. If an earthly father knows how to give good gifts to his children, how much more will God in His wisdom and His goodness give good gifts to His children. Not always what they ask, not always what they want, not always what they think they need, but good gifts. His goodness and His wisdom sometimes must withhold as well as give. All of us need to learn "the patience of unanswered prayer."

Judgment of people is often wiser than the wisest men.—Kossuth

Book Reviews

TEACH US TO PRAY. Charles Francis Whiston. The Pilgrim Press. $2.50.

Anyone who can teach us to pray more intelligently, more consistently and more fervently is a friend indeed to whom we are immeasurably indebted. Dr. Whiston has done just this in Teach Us to Pray. The author deals at some lengths with the theological foundations or presuppositions of prayer, rightly insisting that prayer must have doctrinal substance as well as emotional fervor. The great elements of Christian Prayer, together with time-honored techniques of cultivating the prayer life are clearly and convincingly set forth. This is a good book for any season, especially the Lenten season. It should prove to be equally helpful to both ministers and laymen.

THE COST OF DISCIPLESHIP. Dietrich Bonhoeffer. Macmillan. $2.50.

Perhaps you have never heard of Dietrich Bonhoeffer. Neither had this reviewer until the book arrived. Now he seems to be one of the authentic Christian voices of our tragic era. His book is scholarly, but it goes beyond scholarship—to Discipleship!

Rheinhold Niebuhr describes Bonhoeffer as "one of the truly creative spirits of our age." In Nazi Germany he carried his Christian loyalty to the actual point of taking up his cross and going to his own Golgotha. A teacher and preacher, he was arrested by the Gestapo and thrown into prison, and was executed at Flossen-burg just a few days before this concentration camp was liberated by the Allies.

By all means include this book in your Lenten reading, preaching—and discipline!

WHAT CHURCHES CAN DO ABOUT ECONOMIC LIFE—PROGRAMS AND RESOURCES. Cameron P. Hall. Department of the Church and Economic Life, The Federal Council of The Churches of Christ in America, 297 Fourth Avenue, New York, N. Y. 30c per copy.

This is a source book giving forth pages of answers to the ever-recurring question, "What can we do about it?"

Stimulated both by increasing economic tensions and by the call for their Christian solution from the world assembly of churches at Amsterdam, many church people are looking today for "a handle with which to take hold," in their own lives and communities.

Many practical starting points are described in this pamphlet. They cover, among others, ways of studying and influencing the economic policies and practices of the church itself, conducting occupational get-acquainted programs, studying the great Biblical themes and passages which are guides to social action, arranging off-the-record gatherings of like-minded or contrary-minded individuals, conducting "little Pittsburgh" conferences, and considering legislation on economic issues and relations. Under each heading are specific proposals which can be applied to adult men's and women's societies, to Bible classes, and to youth groups. This is an excellent guide to special activities during Lent. It is also valuable for year-round reference.

A special boon to workers in this field is the twelve-page reference section, giving a seldom-assembled list of addresses of Protestant, Roman Catholic, Jewish, labor, business, farm, consumer government and other agencies concerned with economic and social action; names and addresses of pertinent labor, business, farm, consumer and religious periodicals; and a list of books that contribute thought to the many subjects covered.

CHRISTIAN UNITY IN THE MAKING. The First Twenty-Five Years of The Federal Council of Churches of Christ in America—1905-1930. By Charles S. MacFarland, General Secretary Emeritus. FC, NY. 375 pages.

Fascinated by the living and open-eyed style of this writer, I had read over a hundred pages almost at a breath. This monumental work, done by appointment of the Executive Committee, completes a group of books, in a lifetime three dozen, which deal with its substance and undergird it.

In 1905 there convened at Carnegie Hall in New York the Interchurch Conference on Federation, among whose lay members were George Wharton Pepper, Justice David J. Brewer, Henry Wade Rogers, Robert E. Speer, John R. Mott and Woodrow Wilson then of Princeton. Twenty-nine denominations were represented. Due to a motion in 1902 by Elias B. Sanford, "In the minds of such men as Dr. Sanford, Frank Mason North, Charles L. Thompson and their associates the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America was born at that moment, after years of pregnancy and patience."

Then followed those years of lonesome toil and hardship and lack of funds which come at last to success through the deathless devotion of a few men of vision—of whom finally Charles S. MacFarland came to be, by way of broadening secretarial appointments, the spear point and symbol.

"In 1911 there began the expanding circle of service." The Commission on the Church and Social Service, Commission on Peace and Arbitration, in 1912 on Christian Education; 1913, Church and Country Life; 1914, Relations with Japan; White and Colored Races; 1917, General Committee on Army and Navy Chaplains; General Wartime Commission of the Churches; 1918, France and Belgium; 1919, Religious Bodies in Europe; 1920, Committee on Ecumenical Conference—resulting in Christian Conference on Life and Work at Stockholm in 1925; 1923, Research and Education; 1924, Goodwill Between Jews and Christians; Eastern Chs., Mercy and Relief, 1927, Young People and Children; 1929, Churches Abroad, etc.

The multifarious interests and proposals of the Council in all these realms must necessarily involve criticism. I have grown to be aware that every man is conditioned by the current of his approach. I have been up Mt. Washington by four trails and have seen photos from overhead, but I have never seen Mt. Washington, and the other day was shocked by a postcard of the Great Gulf—memory fades. As this book narrates the successive attitudes of the Council on, among other crises the League of Nations, every step seems inevitable, but there were divergent and no doubt equally inevitable views. The important thing is, that the Council did a great and unprecedented work, covering the whole world, and blinking no interest in it. Such has been "Christian Unity in the Making."

The Orphanage
CHAS. D. JOHNSTON, Supt.

DEAR FRIENDS:

No longer will subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN read the weekly letters of Charles D. Johnston, superintendent of the Elon Christian Orphanage, for, as it does to all men, death has come to Mr. Johnston.

With Mr. Johnston's passing, a Christian Gentleman has departed from our midst, and no finer words in tribute can be said. His death leaves a lonesome void, but, at the same time, shining above that void are the ideals that motivated his life—the ideals of the Christian Gentleman.

Nowhere will Mr. Johnston's absence be felt so keenly as among the children and the workers at and with the orphanage.

A few weeks ago, when the Board of Trustees of the orphanage met, the members realized that Mr. Johnston had failed in health since the last meeting of the board. They saw that he was losing strength, and they were greatly distressed. The board members couldn't then, and can't now, picture the orphanage without his kind and gentle wisdom.

The board extends its sympathy to Mr. Johnston's family and rejoices with its members in the wonderful heritage that he has given them and their children. Even in their sadness, they could not but be very proud of their father.

Mr. Johnston came to the orphanage over thirty-two years ago, an answer to prayer. In his capacity of superintendent he was loved by the children of the orphanage, by those who helped him with his task of caring for the children, by his Board of Trustees and by the Southern Convention. He loved his work of training homeless boys and girls. And his results stand for themselves.

The beautiful tribute paid to him by Dr. L. E. Smith at the funeral services touched a responsive chord in the hearts of all those present. But the evidence of the profound grief that was felt by Mr. Johnston's "children," those still in the orphanage and also those who had returned from their separate ways of life in the outside world to pay a last loving call, showed what "The Man" had meant to hundreds of children who had lived with him and felt his guiding hand.

The Board of Trustees is deeply aware of its responsibility in finding a successor to Mr. Johnston. Its members realize the difficult task of obtaining one who can provide that spiritual leadership that combines the personal touch with Christian ethics in training children, that combination of Mr. Johnston had but which so often is translated into sternness and unapproachableness in lesser men.

However, the board is fortunate in that it has the spirit of Mr. Johnston to guide it. It has the tangible results of his leading hand in front of it, and it has an awareness of the importance its decision will make to the future of the orphanage.

Always there will be Mr. Johnston's image to guide those whose decisions must necessarily affect the orphanage. And with that guiding spirit before them, the board members have faith that they will fulfill the duties vested in them.

IRIS L. HOLT McEVER,
Member, Board of Trustees.

MISSIONARY CAREER ENDS.

Mrs. Helen Curtis Fowle, wife of Luther R. Fowle, for over 35 years a missionary of the American Board in Turkey, died Sunday, February 27, in the Booth Memorial Hospital, New York City, at the age of 62.

Mrs. Fowle was born in North Adams, Mass., and was a graduate of Wellesley College, Class of 1908. After teaching for a time in the U.S.A. she went out to Turkey in 1911 under the Congregational Woman's Board of Missions, now merged with the American Board, as a member of the faculty at their girls' school in Marsovan. A year later she married Luther R. Fowle, lay missionary and business agent in Constantinople, now Istanbul, Turkey (1912).

Mrs. Fowle leaves her husband, Luther R. Fowle, treasurer and business agent of the American Board Near East Mission, and five children, all but one born in Turkey, namely, Curtis Fowle of Old Greenwich, Conn.; W. Farnsworth Fowle, CBS World Correspondent, now in Paris; James Warren Fowle on a traveling fellowship abroad, now in Paris; Miss Helen Joy Fowle, 76 Irving Place, New York City; and Richardson Fowle, a student at Williams College.

Mrs. Fowle also leaves a sister, Mrs. Edw. Lewis, Manchester-Green, Conn.

Mrs. Fowle lived in Turkey under three regimes, the Ottoman Empire with Sultan Abdul Hamid; the Young Turk Government, and the present Turkish Republic. With her husband she maintained a hospitable American home overlooking the Bosphorus. She not only promoted the general work of the mission, but specialized in social work among girls including summer camps and playgrounds.

FROM PEIPING TO MINDANAO.

is to work in the United Churches of Mindanao. It is a field of somewhat staggering proportions, considering the distances, the rough roads and the need.

We arrived in Mindanao on December 22, and spent Christmas with Dave and Margy Hamm and their young son, Robin (nine months). Dave has been here two years, assigned to work with the Maranaos and to build a church for all, not to mention numerous other projects, such as a printing press, library, dormitory for Moro boys, etc. Dave is also pastor of the local church. He is a busy man.

Thus far, I have been on two trips—one over to Misamis, where I spent two days with the ministers of the Northern Conference and on the other trip to Cagayan for the Eastern Conference meeting. I could dwell at length on the hospitality of the Christian friends. Suffice it to say that every town one visits wants the missionary to live there. Nevertheless it is better for the missionary to live apart. It is much too easy for the new churches to depend on the "Amerikano" pastor.

Our ministry here includes some fairly able men, many of them young and that is refreshing after China, where young Christian leaders were few. Unfortunately, too any of them have had only the equivalent of a high school training and thus merely reiterate, year after year, the faith once delivered to the saints in these parts. Silliman University in Dumaguete, on Negros Island, has a good Theological School of which Jim McKinley, one of our American Board family, is dean. They are doing a grand and wholesale job of building an educated ministry but the supply is still far from meeting the demand.

We have 172 churches in Mindanao. They are spread around the north and south coasts of the island and are numerous enough so that they will have to be visited in groups. I was interested to learn how this all got started. When the Philippines won their war of liberation from Spain, the spirit of freedom was really in the air. The people also wanted freedom from the Spanish Catholic Church which had been a chief instrument in their former oppression. At the strategic moment, some very able American Board missionaries arrived and people enough for many churches rushed to them.

Educating and organizing these new

Evangelicals was another matter. There were grave language difficulties at first. As ever, there were far too few trained workers to do the job and to this day that is still tragically true. For example, in Mindanao, which is wholly an American Board field, we have only three families at the moment to do what is required. (One family which I have not yet mentioned is that of Elton ("Bud") Brown, down at Davao in the south. His job is to rebuild the churches destroyed during the Japanese war. He has reconstruction funds to work with but never enough and day after day he drives his huge truck here and there with material and plans. He is young enough to take it and it is indeed a job for a young man with a tough constitution.)

When our people became Evangelicals, they already had a stock of ideas about Christianity, acquired under Rome's tuition. It included much superstition, vestiges of which may still be seen in the crude crosses, chalked or painted on the nipa huts in which they live. As American education made its way into public schools, old superstitions gradually dropped from the more advanced people in the communities.

In their place came the militant orthodoxy of the average American Protestant of the year 1900—vigorous and colorful in its day—but now somewhat irrelevant, since times and needs have changed. It persists, I believe, because of the constant pressure of Roman Catholicism, the lack of contact with the world beyond the islands and the lack of schools comparable, say, to those in China. As I see it now, education in our churches is the main job before us.

There is so much that I should like to tell about the trip from Peiping here, but that can wait. We came out on a U. S. Navy LST to Chingtao and on a transport from there to Shanghai. There was a hectic two weeks in that frantic city. At last we got our visa to the Philippines, which is desperately anxious to keep out both Chinese TB and Chinese Communism. The best we could get was a temporary visitor's visa, good for six months and renewable for six more months. At the end of that time, as in the U.S.A., the law requires that we leave the country and reapply for admission. That may mean that we shall come home, perhaps in December of 1949. But we hope to finish out our term here until 1951. Meanwhile, blessings on you all and much longing from us for the sight of you all once again.

A book on the nature and power of Christian prayer

Teach Us to Pray

By CHARLES FRANCIS WHISTON
With a Foreword by Nels Ferre

Untold thousands believe that prayer is the answer to the world's ills. Many need to be taught concretely how to pray, for great praying is more than great believing.

Prayer rises as high as the individual's concept of God. To give it proper balance, a right theology of prayer must be accompanied by right techniques of prayer. This is ably demonstrated in Teach Us to Pray. $2.50

Ohio Girl Assumes International Post

Miss Margaret Ruth Blemker of Bascom, Ohio, has been appointed an Associate Secretary of the American Board, with special responsibility for work in the Near East. Miss Blemker recently spent three years as a teacher in the American School for Girls, Izmir, Turkey, conducted by the American

MISS BLEMKER

Board. "While it is true," she comments, "that Turkey is no longer the land of the Sultan, the veil, the Harem and the fez, there are still many old and picturesque features to delight the traveler. On the other hand nothing so much impresses the visitor to Turkey as the similarity in many respects with western life, and modernization which has come rapidly since the establishment of the Turkish Republic twenty-five years ago."

The daughter of Rev. and Mrs. R. W. Blemker, Miss Blemker was born in a Reformed Church manse and her father is now pastor of the Union Evangelical and Reformed Church of Bascom, Ohio. She is a graduate of Heidelberg College and holds her Masters' Degree in Personnel from Syracuse University.

"Americans are warmly greeted on every hand in Turkey today," Miss Blemker says. "She is looking to us, not only for military aid, but also for moral support and example."

Among the things which Miss Blemker highlighted as coming out of her recent experiences as a teacher in Turkey was "respect of the young for their elders" which modernization has not killed in Turkey; the expansion by the Turkish Government of its educational system, even into the interior; the development of community centers in every town and city where there is democratic participation in public affairs and the popularity of the study of English and of American schools. "Our American Board schools have more applicants than they can admit," she comments.

During her summer vacations in Turkey, Miss Blemker was able to broaden her knowledge of the Near East by visiting interior Turkey, Syria, Palestine and Egypt. On her way home to America in the summer of 1948 she traveled through Italy, Switzerland, Germany, France and England.

Miss Blemker is now understudy for Miss Mabel E. Emerson who will be retiring this coming fall. As she views her new work she says, "It is a high privilege as well as a challenging responsibility, at this time when so many of the world's problems seem again in a crisis, to be permitted to work in a new capacity with the American Board. In this age when information of all sorts is penetrating the old world, it is reassuring to know American Board schools and hospitals, publications and service groups are on this frontier in Turkey."

News Flashes

Dr W. E. Wisseman will assist Rev. W. J. Andes in revival services at the Winston-Salem Church, the week of March 28-April 1.

Chaplain Ostrander of the Virginia State Penitentiary will address the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association at the meeting on next Monday in Suffolk.

Salem Chapel and Belews Creek Churches, near Winston-Salem, are planning for a new parsonage to be built soon at Belews Creek Church. Rev. Allen Hurdle, a Duke Divinity School student, is pastor of these churches.

Mrs. F. C. Lester and two children (Dorothy and Harry) are spending a few days with Mrs. Lester's parents in Florida. Dr. Lester returned to Asheboro in time for the Bible School Workers Institute on Thursday, March 3.

Rev. Earl T. Farrell, pastor of the Haw River Church for the past several years, has resigned to accept a call from the Cypress Chapel-Damascus-Oak Grove Pastorate in the Eastern Virginia Conference. He will take up his new work June 1.

Henry E. Fries of Winston-Salem was buried March 4. Mr. Fries was a friend of our church there; his church—the Fries Memorial Moravian Church—having used our building for about two years while their building was in the process of being built. For seventy years he served as superintendent of the Sunday school of his church.

Mrs. J. W. Whitt, a member of long standing of our High Point Church, is now living at 223 North Cherry Street, Winston-Salem. She had not had a copy of THE CHRISTIAN SUN for a long time and recently had the privilege of reading the last several copies. "How I have missed my church paper," she stated. Mrs. Whitt has been ill and in the hospital recently. Possibly some of her friends would like to subscribe to THE CHRISTIAN SUN for her and thus she could receive a copy each week.

WIDE-AWAKE LAYMAN AND WIFE CELEBRATE GOLDEN WED- DING ANNIVERSARY.

Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Pugh, delightfully entertained with a reception in honor of their Uncle and Aunt, Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Oates, of Winchester, Va., and High View, West Va., who were celebrating their Golden Wedding Anniversary. Mr. A. C. Oates is owner of the Oates Building Materials Yard, and has several farms and orchards at High View, West Va.

They both have been ardent members of the Timber Ridge Congregational Christian Church for over fifty years. They were among many to receive certificates by their pastor, the Rev. Roy D. Coulter, on the occasion of a Jubilee Service held at Timber Ridge last summer.

Mr. and Mrs. Oates were recipients of many lovely gifts from their friends in Winchester, and from the members of Timber Ridge Congregational Christian Church, who were in attendance at the reception. Both Mr. and Mrs. Oates are among the outstanding and ever loyal supporters of Timber Ridge Church.

WILLIAM RICH LICENSED AT PROVIDENCE.

On Sunday night, February 27, at 7:30 o'clock, in the Providence Memorial Christian Church of Graham, N. C., Mr. William Rich, a member of the Providence Church, was licensed to the Gospel Ministry.

Dr. Reynolds, pastor of the candidate, delivered the sermon, using for his subject, "Pastors According to God's Heart," based on Jeremiah 3: 15. Dr. Bowden, representing the Committee on the Ministry, made the address to the candidate. Dr. Scott, representing the Southern Convention, made the address to the people and Rev. Kenneth Register, president of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference, made the declaration of licensure and gave the prayer of dedication.

The church choir rendered special music for the service.

This was a most impressive service and one which will have a lasting effect upon the hearts of those who were there to share this service with us.

Providence Church is to be congratulated for the part it has played in producing a messenger of the gospel. May God grant that some of our other churches may be led to do the same.

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

DR. STANLEY U. NORTH VISITS THE SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

Dr. Stanley U. North, Director of City Work Department of the Church Extension Division of The Board of Home Missions of Congregational Christian Churches, New York, accompanied Superintendent Wm. T. Scott on a tour of the churches of the Southern Convention during the week of February 19-25. Beginning in Lynchburg, February 19, they studied the developing work of our Lynchburg Church. Dr. North was impressed with the opportunities awaiting us in Lynchburg. Extensive plans for developing the work are now under way under the leadership of Rev. J. B. Allan.

Going from Lynchburg to Norfolk, Dr. North and Supt. Scott attended the Bay View service on Sunday night, February 20, meeting with the congregation following the service. About eighty people were present for the church service and conference. Rev. and Mrs. Johnson L. Griffin are beginning their work at Bay View with enthusiasm. The Sunday school is crowding the facilities of this church, and building plans must be completed shortly for the making available more facilities for the children and young people.

On Monday, Dr. North addressed the Eastern Virginia Ministers' Association at Suffolk and that afternoon met with the pastors of the Suffolk area, visiting Bethlehem, Union (Southampton), Windsor and Berea (Nansemond).

On Tuesday, the 22nd, they visited the churches of the Norfolk-Portsmouth area, going to all nine of the churches, and in the afternoon met with the pastors of these churches at Bay View to discuss plans for aiding Mr. Griffin in his work at Bay View. Enthusiasm prevailed at this point over the prospects for the developing work at Bay View. Indications are strong that our Berea (Great Bridge) Church will soon be in the midst of an expanding city. Dr. North urges that we be prepared in these two points of the Norfolk area for developing strong and vigorous work. He urged the ministers of the Norfolk and Suffolk areas to be vigilant for opportunities for church extension.

Dr. North is of the opinion that new churches will start with vigor if pastors and laymen of local churches become interested in the matter of church extension in their respective areas.

Wednesday, Thursday and Friday were spent in North Carolina, including visits to Burlington where the Beverly Hills development was given special consideration. Dr. North addressed the members of the Burlington (First Church) on Wednesday evening, the 23rd, and on the following day met with the pastor and others in making plans for the development of the Beverly Hills project. Our two churches in Greensboro—First and Palm Street—are both contemplating building, each of these churches having on hand substantial building funds, and plans are now being made for the beginning of construction at the earliest possible time.

Dr. North's visit ended in Raleigh where he visited the Long-Meadow section in suburban Raleigh. Dr. North is of the opinion that a new church should be started in Raleigh as soon as it is possible. Raleigh needs another Congregational Christian Church if we adequately cover that city.

We are profoundly indebted to Dr. North for his helpful visit to our area, and we sincerely hope he will be returning again soon.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MEMORIALS.

One way for the church to enrich its life and perpetuate its influence is to solicit and erect appropriate memorials. The church becomes thereby the lengthened shadow of many people. New churches, church fixtures, improvements and a variety of items may be secured as memorials. Examples, old and new, abound.

The Rev. George Edwin Stickney was for ten years Director of Christian Education in Minnesota and has recently become Superintendent of the Montana State Conference. His father was a pioneer in Northern Minnesota and North Dakota in establishing Sunday Schools and churches. A beautiful memorial window in Plymouth Church, Fargo, N. D., was placed there by the family and friends, in memory of Dr. and Mrs. Stickney.

Mr. Guy Elken was a beloved deacon in the Congregational Church at Mayville, N. D. He served on the board of directors of the State Conference. In memory of Mrs. Elken, a life-long member of the church, the members of the family contributed $15,000 to the repair fund of the church with the suggestion that the money be used to purchase new carpeting.

The 1948 treasurer's report of the Euclid Avenue Church, Cleveland, lists thirty-five memorials received since 1912. The treasurer of the North Dakota Conference reports a number of memorial gifts for the Pilgrim Park Fund.

There are always needs in the home church, in conference, convention and missionary enterprises. And there is no better way to commemorate one's loved ones than by making possible the satisfying of such needs by memorial gifts. It is gratifying to note the continuing stream of Life Memberships and Memorials registered by the Women of our Convention. These "living memorials" give needed vitality to the work of the Kingdom in our day. Do not neglect these opportunities in your church.

THE EDITOR MUSES.

Janitors serve an indispensable if not an honored place in the life of the churches. How greatly we are indebted to these ecclesiastical servants! Their name is legion. Many of them are remarkably versatile, serving as sexton and general factotum. It is the custom of some churches to remember their janitors on their birthdays with testimonials and gifts. The lowliest office in the church may be dignified by faithful service. Newspapers carried the account of Stanton Carr, popular janitor of University Methodist Church in Los Angeles. Skilled in every trade, he kept the huge campus church in shipshape. "He was," said the pastor, "the most popular man in the church."

The deaf are entitled to the gospel, but little preparation is made for them in the majority of churches. Some churches are equipped with hearing aids. The Second Baptist Church in Richmond is providing a Sunday afternoon service each month for the deaf. Sign language is used to translate the sermon. A film is presented. This church is rendering a distinct spiritual service. The deaf have the gospel preached to them.

Christ Methodist Church in Baltimore made the headlines recently. It has served unhearing worshippers since 1896. The workings of the service are described as novel, yet quite simple. As the Rev. J. Lee Williams preaches the sermon, his assistant, the Rev. Louis W. Foxwell stands beside him and conveys the message to the congregation by means of sign language. The Rev. Mr. Foxwell, better known as "the signer," has complete hearing, but he has used the sign language since childhood because his parents are deaf. The signer speaks with his face as well as his hands. His expressions change, his lips move sometimes—while his hands busily translate the words into symbols.

Some of the gestures are obvious, even to those unfamiliar with sign language. Others are more difficult, but are soon learned, and prove quite logical. For example, the word "Jesus" is formed by pointing with the left hand to the right palm to indicate the scar wound from the Cross.

The Reformed Church has an honorable and interesting history. Its origin reaches back into the continent of Europe. It is one of the two movements which developed out of the Protestant Reformation in the beginning of the Sixteenth Century. So many abuses had crept into the Roman Church that the need of a drastic reform began to be felt by many spiritual leaders. The Papal System came under wide criticism. Ulrich Zwingli, Martin Luther and others began to preach a more evangelical Gospel. At first all the participants in this effort to reform the Church were called "Reformers." Ultimately the followers of Luther became known as Lutherans, while the followers of Zwingli retained the name Reformers. The principles of the great Reformation soon crystallized into the well-defined propositions: Justification by grace through faith, which was doctrinal statement, indicating the way of salvation; the Bible as the only rule of faith, which was a practical statement indicating the way of life; and the universal priesthood of believers, an ecclesiastical reform under the banner of religious freedom. It is heartening to know that the E. & R. Merger will put us back into the main stream of the Protestant Reformation and give us a more substantial historical background.

How little do they see what is, who frame their hasty judgments upon that which seems.—Southey.

Concerning the Arrested Protestant Leaders in Bulgaria

*A Statement by the American Board

The democratic world will be shocked and stabbed awake when they learn and fully understand what lies back of the recent arrest and conviction of fifteen leaders of the Protestant churches in Bulgaria. A storm of officially inspired persecution has fallen upon these Christian leaders and their churches. The Bulgarian Government seems to be carrying out the policy of denying freedom of religion and of ruthlessly suppressing all religious groups which are not completely subservient to the State.

Spiritual Kin.

Protestants around the world will wish to assure these Bulgarian leaders and their terrorized congregations of a sense of spiritual solidarity in a common fellowship and the common cause of evangelical Christianity. They are our spiritual kin. We cannot reach them except by means of prayer, but all the world should know not only what is happening to them but of the undying concern which evangelical Christians around the world have for them and for all the oppressed people of Bulgaria.

Attempting to Break Christian Ties.

Many of the evangelical leaders were arrested in 1948. Some of them are among the fifteen pastors who have just been tried. They were accused on three counts: espionage for the United States, treason and black-market dealings. Although individual leaders conceivably may have overstepped some present Bulgarian law, the basic reason for the persecution of these Protestant pastors is that they strove to place loyalty to God above earthly commands. At the moment, the Bulgarian Government is considering a law outlawing all mission work in Bulgaria, prohibiting all connection between evangelical Bulgarian churches and churches outside the country, and providing for the confiscation of mission property.

*Editorial Note: The eyes and ears of the Christian World have followed the trail and conviction of 15 Protestant pastors in Bulgaria, four of whom were sentenced for life. One was a Congregationalist. The sentences were declared a "travesty of justice" by Bishop Paul Garber of Geneva. Many of our readers will welcome this timely article which gives the interesting background of Congregational efforts in Bulgaria.

American Board Started Evangelical Movement in Bulgaria Nearly One Hundred Years Ago.

In 1857 when most of the Balkan Peninsula, including present-day Bulgaria, was part of the Ottoman Empire, Cyrus Hamlin of the American Board went from Istanbul to make a survey of this region known then as European Turkey. He found there people of various religious backgrounds. He was particularly impressed by the Bulgarians, who though poor and almost completely illiterate were ambitious, liberty loving, thrifty and eager to learn. Mission work was opened in 1858 and within a few years several centers were opened for boys and girls and literature in the Bulgarian language was prepared and distributed. Purpose: to make better Christians and good citizens.

The missionaries have constantly held to their purpose to serve the highest interests of the Bulgarian people. They have refrained from partisan politics. They imposed no religious tests for admission to their schools. Their primary purpose was to encourage in their students a personal and living faith in Christ and to prepare them to go out as sound-thinking, conscientious, industrious and self-reliant citizens of Bulgaria. In 1878 the Marquis of Bath paid high tribute to the missionaries along these very lines commenting also on their relief work for the needy and oppressed, and saying: "There is hardly a town in Bulgaria where persons are not to be found who owe to them the advantages of a superior education. The result of their teaching has permeated all Bulgarian society, and is not the least important of the causes that have rendered the people capable of wisely using the freedom so suddenly conferred on them." Since 1933, the thirty-six congregations of the Protestant churches in Bulgaria, which resulted from the work of the American Board missionaries, have become self-governing and self-supporting. No subsidizing have been granted them and no funds sent except for general humanitarian relief. Their pastors and lay leaders have been men and women of sturdy character and devoted Christian service, shepherds of simple, Bible-loving congregations made up of humble people of meager means living mostly in small towns or villages. The kindergarten movement started by Elizabeth Clarke became a foundation stone in the whole State educational system. The Folk School at Pordim, where young men and women were trained in modern methods of agriculture, animal husbandry and housewifery was founded by Dr. and Mrs. Edward B. Haskell. Concern for people of the crowded city of Sophia led to the opening of a community center in the heart of the industrial section of that city.

First Weekly Newspaper—First Bible in Bulgarian.

In 1871 the town of Samokov was made the center of the Mission's educational work. Courses were opened to train leaders for the evangelical church. On June 30, 1871, the first number of the weekly evangelical newspaper, Zornitsa was published. It was the first continuously appearing paper in the Bulgarian language and survived all difficulties until suppressed in October, 1948. The distinguished missionary linguist, Dr. Elias Riggs, helped establish this paper and brought with him from Istanbul the first translation of the Bible into the Bulgarian language. Also in 1871 the first Evangelical Church Society was organized in the rural town of Bansko. Four years later the Bulgarian Evangelical Society was organized.

Missionaries Stood By.

The Bulgarian evangelical Christians and the whole nation to this day revere such missionary names as Haggell, House, Thomson, Clarke, Riggs, Washburn, Long, Challis, Davis, Ostrander, Baird and Count. They were cherished as devoted friends of the nation completely free from political interests or connections. After the first World War, the Samokov schools moved to Sofia, and became the "American College" with a separate Board of Trustees, part of the Near East College Association. It was closed in 1942 by Nazi influence.

In view of all these facts, it is impossible not to interpret the policy of the present Bulgarian Government as ruthless suppression of religious groups which are not wholly subservient to the State.

Tuchiness, when it becomes chronic, is a morbid condition of the inward disposition. It is a self-love inflamed to the acute point.—Drummond.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

All of a minister's pay does not come in the salary check. Some of it comes to him when he sees several fine young couples come into the worship services Sunday morning after Sunday morning. They are among the thinking and choosing people of the community. To know that they have thought and chosen to make the habit of church attendance a part of their regular program is something to make any minister feel good. I know several couples like that. Some of them have to make plans ahead to be able to attend the Sunday morning church service, but it is plenty good pay to the minister to see that they have chosen to make whatever plans necessary and that they are right there.

There is a couple—and may their kind increase—who walk right down near the front with their two little children, and take their place Sunday after Sunday. Some more of the pastor's pay is in seeing little children come into the regular morning church service with their parents. The minister knows that while the little child may not sit up still and quiet every minute of the time nevertheless he will be taking in most of what is going on. And more than that he knows that the family which comes to church with the little children right along with them will be parents who are later proud of their sons and daughters. It is good pay to see parents and children worship at the big morning service right along together in a family pew.

There is a bit more good pay—pay that does not show up in the salary check—but something that makes the minister quite as glad to see some dear, faithful member who has been sick for a long time, who has been greatly missed by him in their pew, back in place again. I saw that last Sunday morning! It made me very happy. I couldn't buy raiment with that sort of pay, but I could preach much better, pray much better and be a better pastor. And how happy that whole family was! 'Twas mighty pay.

Yes, and how about being down town where the streets are crowded and the crowd is moving swiftly on its way, and some shrill childish voice cheerily sounds out about the pounding tread of many feet, "Hi! there, Dr. Brown! Mother, that was Dr. Brown!" No, the preacher will not need to pay any income tax on that, but I am here to tell you it is plenty good pay. It says to you that there is a child that knows you and honors you, and loves you. It says there is a child that represents a home where the church is honored and the children are told about the preacher as though he were a dear friend. The little voice opens the window to the heart of the most sacred precincts of the home, and you walked faster and happier because you know there is a home that will call you when they need you and let you be of some service to them. That's good pay. That is the kind of pay that makes good preachers, good communities, and good going for really great and worthwhile futures.

LETTER FROM REV. D. P. BARRETT.

MY DEAR BRO. SCOTT:

Your much appreciated letter came to me in San Juan the day after my arrival. Thanks so much for your kindness in all you have done in union with many others of the Southern Convention to make my visit to Puerto Rico a real joy and comfort.

We had a wonderful trip and a hearty reception to the Island and friends without number greet us nearly on every step along the streets of Ponce.

Arrived here from San Juan last Saturday where I have been ever since.

Attended three services last Sunday and a dedicatory service of a new church building Tuesday evening of this week.

We shall leave Ponce this afternoon for San Juan where we shall expect to attend the great meeting of the fiftieth anniversary of Evangelical work in Puerto Rico.

A reunion of all denominations working in the Island will be a splendid proof of the progress in Evangelical work during these years of half a century. It is believed that 5,000 will be present. Will let you know more about my observations within a few days.

Until then I remain yours most cordially,

D. P. BARRETT.

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

Shaowu, Fukien, China,
January 20, 1949.

DEAR FAMILY AND FRIENDS:

When unanswered letters are mixed with Christmas notes from 1947 and when many of those very letters are from busy people whose living conditions are more rugged than ours, then it is time for drastic action. And so once more I take to the mimeograph machine. While it is busy grinding out Chinese examination papers for an Mei School, I'll get busy with putting my thoughts to all of you good folk on paper.

First, a word of thanks for snapshots—only you who are also far from friends and family can know how much they mean to us. And then, thanks for writing us, especially for details of your lives and work.

Second, a word about the Communist-Nationalist war. Last month when the Voice of America radio newscast announced that China was engaged in the biggest battle of her long history, we were preparing for our Synod Annual Meeting. As winter set in, we were enjoying our first electric lights from our own generator and the comfort, unusual here, of our wood stove. So peaceful was Shaowu that even the inflation seemed to have reached a lull. One of the pastors upon his return from a meeting in Shanghai said, "Shaowu is heaven; even my dog here fares better than I did in Shanghai." But the Shaowu people know their country is engaged in a terrible civil war. Every morning enroute to school a certain drug-gist asks me, "What news?" Whoever happens by at that moment stops in his tracks—the coolie carrying wood, the wounded soldier looking for a bargain, the clerk hurrying past the peddlers. All stop, not to stare at the foreigner, but to hear what the American radio says about the war.

The early January lull on the front, due to weather or peace-feelers, or both, now seems to have broken. Inflation resumed its spiral even before. Hearts lightened at Christmas by talk of peace, are heavier than ever. "Where is there peace on earth?" Refugees have begun to reach Shaowu; they daily come to beg rice, medicine and money.

Still, rebuilding from last year's fire continues—shop-homes better looking than the former ones. Christians with rice (the only thing comparable to a steady income or a bank account in America) quarrel over re-

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

FIRE PARTIALLY DESTROYS THE LATE J. O. ATKINSON HOME AT ELON COLLEGE.

Just as chapel adjourned this morning, Friday, it was discovered that the house formerly owned by Dr. J. O. Atkinson and family was on fire. The fire started in the attic on the northeast corner. Alarm was given. The fire departments of Elon College, Gibsonville and Burlington responded. The flames were confined largely to the attic and the second floor.

In early fall the college had the roof of the house insulated. The insulation and the slate roof held the flames until the fire department could get the fire under control. The roof and the ceiling to the second floor were completely destroyed. The remainder of the house, of course, was simply soaked with water.

There were two faculty families living in the house and one married student. A third member of the faculty had moved out only a few weeks before. The students responded to the call and removed all furniture from the burning building. The college has sustained quite a loss as a result of the fire and three families have been greatly inconvenienced.

During the war the college purchased this property from the estate of the late Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson. An additional room and two baths were added. There were four comfortable apartments and they served the college well.

The house was erected in 1892 by the late Jake Long, attorney. Dr. J. O. Atkinson purchased the home from Attorney Long in the summer of 1897. All of Dr. and Mrs. J. O. Atkinson's children were born either in this house or while they were living there. The place held a lot of sentiment for the Atkinson family as well as for the college and the community. Should the college elect to rebuild on the same lines, it would cost in excess of $30,000. The loss is supposed to be covered by insurance. Future plans will await the decision of the insurance company. All students entering Elon College since 1892 and all people who have lived in the community will recall this home. It was one of the largest, best built and most neatly kept homes in Elon College. It was a credit to the community. Its loss will be a source of regret by many people.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

The financial needs of Elon College are accentuated today, perhaps more decidedly than any previous day in many years. The expansion of the facilities and the growth of the college in recent years have brought it to a position of prestige in relation to similar colleges throughout the country. If it is to maintain its present position and to keep pace with sister institutions its financial support must be increased accordingly. Today as never before money determines the efficiency and the position of the college. The expenses of operation have increased in such proportions and the need for increased faculty salaries is emphasized with almost every issue of our daily papers. State and Federal Governments are providing funds in such large amounts for our tax-supported schools that the constituents of our church-colleges will be almost compelled to make increased funds available for our institutions.

It is good of the Southern Convention to apportion $15,000 to the churches of the Convention for Elon College. It certainly would be of tremendous help if our churches would pay these apportionments as the months come and go. The college's expenses accrue daily and should be paid on the first of each month. Every dollar received from the church helps materially in meeting our obligations. The college is most grateful for the churches' assistance.

lief clothing, and getting it to the really needy is a difficult task. Wool yarn is so scarce (there is none for sale anywhere) that even the well-to-do look cold. But there is still freshly dyed cloth spread to dry on the lot by East Gate Church; the noodle racks are not often empty; fresh vegetables still line the street; and people give feasts for engagements, weddings, funerals or anything a bit special.

There is even some optimism about the outcome of the war despite all the American news reports that Nationalist China is doomed. As one young man said, "Look what happened in America last November. Truman was elected despite all the contrary predictions. Anything might happen now."

Local politics are none too calm, however. Last fall several brothers were arrested, apparently for organizing a third party—with guns. The newly decorated entrance of the Democratic League's headquarters, practically next door to us, is nothing but a gate now that the party has been outlawed. A few nights ago shop fronts on the next street were placarded with signs accusing a local leader of misappropriation of funds (rice).

Though the Chinese are famous for their ability to compromise a way through a crisis, many are fast losing even that small hope. What does all this mean to us? Like most missionaries, we are thinking of the possibility of flight, but living as though to stay. If conditions are such that no funds can reach us, Dick may stay alone. Our fellow Chinese may be able to take care of one person. But then—broken families may mean ineffectual work, too, if separated long. And so back and forth our thoughts go. It seems we always have to make decisions before we really know enough to act wisely.

Every day, enroute to Han Mei School, I make that interesting walk through East Gate "shopping center" stepping over peddlers' wares, dodging dogs, chickens and children. Sometimes I catch the eye of a smiling child. When his smile suddenly fades, I realize he was not greeting me; he was smiling at his own affairs when I appeared and frightened him. Other children holler "foreigner" at me; but once in a while someone really smiles and my courage to face the stares and strange unpleasantnesses is renewed.

And what is Deedee (Chinese for "little brother") doing? He is outgrowing his clothes as fast as any youngster and making our home—

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

LEARN

This week we study India with its 500 million people. The study may well continue for a lifetime.

Madura Mission

The American Board began work in 1812. The Madura Mission was established in 1834. In this area, about the size of Massachusetts, work is carried on in seven stations, thirty organized pastorates, and with 40,000 Christians.

On September 27, 1947, the Church of South India came into being. It is composed of Anglicans, Methodists and Congregational Christians. Rev. J. E. L. Newbiggin, a Scots missionary, was elected the first bishop.

Ceylon Mission

The Ceylon Mission began in 1816. Dr. John Scudder, the first missionary physician ever sent abroad, joined the mission. Two large hospitals are now administered by the Ceylonese Christians. The Church is part of the Church of South India.

Marathi Mission

The Marathi Mission dates from 1813, and works through eight stations among a million and a half of the Marathi race, one of the strongest in India. Our missionaries work in close cooperation with the Indian Church.

Two years ago Rev. B. P. Hivale started the Ahmednagar College with an enrollment of 335 students, 45 of whom were Christians.

Our Missionaries

The Christian Church inherited India through the Congregationalists. We now have about eighty missionaries on the field. Dr. Hale Cook worked with the Gleasons in Carroll County a few years ago. He and Mrs. Cook are at Wai. He has studied agriculture, medicine and theology, and has degrees in these subjects.

WORK

What can we do to help India? Not much, you say. But surely we can do something.

Mrs. Joseph Moulton tried to make us think that we could help when she spoke in our area. Miss Lillian Picken thrills those who hear her story until they feel that they can be partners with the Indian people. Rev. and Mrs. Robert C. H. Mueller are out there because our people in Reidsville support them. Ask the Reidsville people if there is something you can do for India.

Not Enough Workers

In India, as everywhere else on the mission fields, there are not enough workers. What can eighty people do among 500 million? They are teaching a few people how to make enough to eat; they bring good health to a fortunate few; they are lifting the level of intelligence; and they win some to Christ. But there are not enough workers to make a very great impression on the masses. And yet there are multitudes anxious to enter the Christian Church.

There are several churches in the Southern Convention that could send two or more missionaries to help the hard-pressed workers on the field. Yes, there are many individuals who could pay all the expenses for a missionary doctor, teacher, farmer or preacher.

Why Don't We?

Why don't we send the needed help? That is too hard for me. We think that we can't; but that's when we count church money, not when we look at our bank accounts. It had not hurt us to send the Jacksons and Riggs to Shaowu. The Reidsville church is doing better by its own program since it is sending missionaries abroad. If you want your church to grow, send out a missionary to help where one is needed most. The most excellent way is to send one of your own choice young people.

PRAY

The map on the last page will help you to locate the people for whom you have been praying. This week we leave China and go to another important part of the world. India has recently received its freedom, and is fashioning its own destiny. It will be good for the world if India can become Christian. To that end you are asked to pray.

Our Prayer List

Sunday—Leaders of the Church of South India

They are working a merger that is more difficult than the one we recently voted.

Monday—Government Leaders.

They are blazing new trails, and fashioning customs that may last for centuries

Tuesday—Mission Institutions

Schools, hospitals churches. So many people are yet untouched by learning, medicine or Christianity. The institutions are important.

Wednesday—Rev. and Mrs. Robert C. H. Mueller.

Join with our Reidsville people in praying for their missionaries in India.

Thursday—Rev. and Mrs. Joseph Moulton, Rev. and Mrs. Loy Long, Miss Lillian Picken, Dr. and Mrs. Hale Cook and the other missionaries of the Marathi Mission.

Friday—The Ceylon Mission

This area is now independent, but the Christians want the fellowship of American Christians.

Saturday—The Madura Mission

Mention names we know, like Rev. and Mrs. James Hess, Rev. and Mrs. Edward Nolting, Mr. and Mrs. Loyd L. Lorbeer, and Dr. and Mrs. Edward W. Wilder.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR LITTLE FRIENDS:

Does your mother ever say, "Why don't you eat? Goodness, you will never get to be big and strong eating like a bird," or something like that? The other day I was reading in a magazine for parents about a mother who persuaded her little boy to eat carrots by letting him scrub them.

Now, I don't have any problem with wanting to eat. I need to be told to "eat like a bird," but I like to cook and plan things to eat. For some reason sweets seem better than vegetables, but they aren't as good for us the doctors say.

Recently a newspaper featured the Suffolk Cook Book. The book was compiled by the Girls' Class in 1927. Many of the recipes call for things that are hard to get now but it has some wonderful recipes. Cook book making is an interesting way of making money and I remember that the Bay View Church of Norfolk has a cook book, too.

Suffolk (and the country around it) is famous for its good food. The peanuts, ham and vegetables from there are delicious. Although we cook our food very rapidly and preserve its minerals, the flavor isn't quite like the food cooked on wood fires in iron pots in days gone by. I remember butter beans and corn being good cooked this way. I have a fondness for corn-bread and sweets.

When I was a little girl I ate two kinds of cake that I especially liked. One was what I called "chocolate" but it was actually a vanilla batter iced ("streaked" they used to say) with chocolate. The layers were very thin and sometimes there were as many as seven of them! The other is a mixture of spices and fruit that is called Japanese cake. One of my great aunts makes it even now. A recipe for this wonderful cake is in the Suffolk Cook Book.

It is interesting to see the different kinds of things to make and the names of the people who made up, or owned, the recipe. There are names familiar to Eastern Virginia people: Staley, Leathers, Truitt, Rollings, Bradford, etc. It would be delightful to try all of them.

Cooking is not only important but it can be such fun. The same thing can be said for eating! Girls need to know how to cook, and boys, too. I think Boy Scouts learn the fundamentals of cooking.

Really good cooking is one of the most creative of arts. Every year the state of Virginia has a contest to see what chef or cook can make the best meat dish, pastry or salad. The Southland is famous for its food. Maybe I am a bit prejudiced because the first food I ate was prepared by Suffolk-trained cooks, but I do think it is one of the culinary centers of the country.

Churches are known by the kind of food they serve. There are some outstanding cooks, like Mrs. Apperson of Newport News who makes rolls for hundreds that taste as good as those made for a dozen. At conference time the church women prepare food that is bountiful and tasty.

Jesus ate with his friends. It is a friendly, pleasant habit. Don't bother with being persuaded, eat and enjoy the wonders of God's love for all these things He has given us!

OLDER AND YOUNGER CHILDREN.

By JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY.

(American Mother for 1947.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Why is Jimmie so reluctant and timid with regard to doing even very simple little things, Mrs. Evans?" inquired the kindergarten teacher.

"Oh? Do you think he is?" Jimmie's mother seemed surprised. "I'm so busy seeing that the boys are clean, as well as properly fed, and in trying to keep the house in order, that I really haven't noticed."

"Perhaps he is dominated by his older brothers," ventured the teacher.

"Now I shouldn't wonder if Ned does boss Jimmie too much."

"I'm going to try, at school, to bring Jimmie forward, so that he'll develop confidence in his own ability, but the difficulty may be more of a home problem, Mrs. Evans. Will you please watch how your boys behave when they are together?"

That night, when Mr. Evans drove into the yard, Jimmie darted down the driveway to meet him. "Oh, Daddy," he began, "a garage in the next block burned up. There was a car in it and—" But here Ned interrupted—to say that the owners could not get the garage door open. Then instead of allowing Jimmie to finish his recital, he continued the narrative himself.

Mrs. Evans was on the porch. "Ned!" she called, "Jimmie began the story. Let him tell it."

Both boys looked surprised. Jimmie was embarrassed and could tell little more.

"Let us not interrupt Jimmie when he is talking," whispered Mother to Ned afterwards. "If we give him a chance, he may learn to tell a story as well as you do."

The next morning was Saturday. Mrs. Evans heard a commotion in the backyard. "Oh, you're no good! You can't lay the bricks straight; the wall will fall down. Go away." Ned gave Jimmie a little push. Then he called to the boy next door, "Hi, Jerry! Come over and help me lay bricks."

Jimmie went into the house.

"Why don't you make the boys let you play?" inquired his mother.

"Ned says I can't do it right."

"But you can. Here, show me what an even wall you can build with your two-by-four blocks."

Jimmie was fighting back the tears, so mother had to begin laying out the wall. "We'll make a window here, and this will be the door," she said.

The little fellow became interested and, encouraged by her warm appreciation, worked on alone.

"Now," she said, regarding the finished job with approval, "you can convince Ned that you are able to build a wall."

That afternoon they all went to Cousin Jack's birthday party. Jimmie hung about his mother's chair, altogether too much.

"Run and hide," she said when they played Hide-and-Seek in the garden, but the little boy was too fearful to venture. "Here, quick, behind this bush." She held the branches aside, and he slipped in. The next time, she helped him hide behind the garage with another boy. Before the game was over, he was playing with the others in a fairly natural way.

"It's high time we were looking after Jimmie," said Mrs. Evans to her husband after the boys were in bed. "Why he didn't have enough assurance to take his turn rolling a tenpin ball this afternoon."

"I know." Mr. Evans laid down his newspaper. "Ned finds fault with everything Jimmie does. It is bad for both boys. I blame myself for not having seen this sooner."

EASTERN VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP TO MEET AT LIBERTY SPRING.

One of the liveliest groups of young people in the Eastern Virginia Conference will be host to the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship when it meets March 27 at 3:00 o'clock at Liberty Spring Church. Jack Byrd, president of the organization, a member of Cypress Chapel Church, will preside. The young folks of Union (Southampton) Church will present the devotional service. A trio of girls—Shirley Page Richardson, Florence Dora King and Ada LeClaire Brinkley—of Suffolk will sing a special number.

An address will be made by Mr. George Poole of Portsmouth. Four departments of the Pilgrim Fellowship will be represented in reports made by Anne Johnston of Holland on Missionary Action; Personal Action will be presented by Audrey Mae Duling of Newport News; Interdenominational Action will be represented by Hugh Vernon White, Jr., of Holland; and Social Action by Harry Lee Weaver, of Holy Neck Church. Others are on the program.

The young people of several of the churches have already sent in their annual contribution of not less than $5.00. Many others are urged to do so before the meeting at Liberty Spring. Many of the young people of the Conference have never seen the Liberty Spring Church. They are urged to attend and enjoy the fellowship with this fine rural church which has every modern convenience.

NORTH CAROLINA-VIRGINIA YOUNG PEOPLE'S SPRING RALLY.

The North Carolina-Virginia Young People's Conference will hold their Spring Rally in Reidsville, on Sunday, April 3. Registration will start at 2:30, with a registration fee of 10c. The theme of the Rally will be, "For the Facing of This Hour." Dr. W. W. Sloan of Elon College will speak briefly on Puerto Rico. Miss Maxine Garner of Woman's College, will speak briefly on Race Relations. You will hear reports of the activities of our conference during Youth Week.

You will hear about some important events, such as summer camp. The Rally will end about 7:30.

I will see you on Sunday, April 3, at 2:30 in Reidsville with your 10c for registration fee and your sandwiches for supper. (The Reidsville Church is furnishing drinks and cookies.)

This is our first big event since our new officers took over, so let's show our interest by attending the Rally. It will be a great inspiration for everyone who attends.

SCHEDULE OF SUMMER CAMPS AND CONFERENCES.

Following is a list of important conferences to be held during the summer and should have the immediate attention of all pastors, Sunday school superintendents and leaders of young people.

We have endeavored to arrange this schedule to the best possible convenience of the greatest number of people and we hope that even now our churches and young people's groups will begin to look forward to these special events:

1. Woman's Convention and School of Missions, Elon College, June 13 to 17. In connection with this school all of our Student Summer Service workers will be called in for special instruction for their work in Daily Vacation Bible Schools throughout the Convention.

2. June 20 to 25, Young People's Summer Conference at Elon College. This will be for the young people of the entire Convention from fifteen years up. We hope that this school may even surpass those of its kind held in the past years.

3. July 10 to 16, Junior High Camp at Crabtree Creek. We were unable to secure one of the larger camps for this period, or any other suitable period during the summer, and the registration for this camp will be for young people twelve, thirteen and fourteen years of age.

4. Valley of Virginia Camp, August 21 to 26.

We have found the E. & R. leaders very cooperative and we desire to have a sizeable exchange of young people in all camps and conferences during the summer—as well as an exchange of leadership. The dates for the E. & R. camps and conferences follow:

1. July 3 to 8, Young People's Summer Conference at Catawba College. There will be room in this school for any number of young people from our Fellowship.

2. July 10-16, Junior Camp at John's River (They are holding ten reservations for young people of this age from the Southern Convention).

3. July 10-16 and July 17-30, Junior High Camps at John's River.

4. July 31-August 13. Young People's Camp at John's River.

Although the personnel for our summer program is not complete, the following have been elected as deans, and correspondence concerning the various camps should be directed to them: Crabtree, Rev. Wm. J. Andes, Dean; Elon Young People's Conference, Rev. Jesse H. Dollar, Dean; Valley Camp, Rev. S. E. Madren, Dean. The E. & R. Camp and Conference Director is Rev. Josh Levens, c/o First Evangelical and Reformed Church, S. Church and W. Horah Sts., Salisbury, N. C.

JESUS AMONG PEOPLE OF OTHER RACES.

LESSON XIII—MARCH 27, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: God shows no partiality, but in every nation any one who fears him and does what is right is acceptable to him.—Acts 10:34 and 35.

LESSON: Mark 7:24-37; Luke 7:1-10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Acts 10:34-35.

A Man of One Country, and of Every Country.

The visit of Jesus to Tyre and Sidon was the only time, as the writer of these Notes recalls, that Jesus went out of His own country into a foreign country. He was preeminently a man of one country in the sense that He lived and labored in His own country and primarily among the Jews. This was because He knew that He could best accomplish His mission by concentrating His efforts on the people who for centuries had been prepared for the coming of the Messiah, and through whom eventually the message would be proclaimed. With the limited time that He had on earth and with the limitations imposed upon Him by circumstances, it was imperative that instead of scattering His effort, He intensify His mission to the Jews.

But this does not mean that He was nationalistic or narrow, that He was a man of only one country so far as His love and His redemptive mission were concerned. His compassion and His concern were universal both as to race and religion. Humanity was one in His thinking and He responded to human needs wherever He found them. Jesus was a Jew but He was also a Universal Man, indeed the favorite name for Himself was "the Son of Man." It might be remarked in passing that one of the difficult problems that confronts many ministers is the proportion of time that one ought to give to outside interests, and even outside church activities. One suspects that one of the most effective ways for a minister to help to bring in the Kingdom of God is to develop intensively the local church. If a fellow scatters himself all over the landscape he is liable to do an injustice to his local work.

Jesus and a Canaanite or Syro-phoenician.

The first case in today's lesson concerns the healing of the daughter of a woman who was a Syrophenician or Canaanite. As such she was of course a foreigner and as such she was held in disdain by the Jews. Indeed the Jews often referred to Gentiles as dogs. Thus it was that when the woman came to Jesus as He was trying to get a little seclusion, and besought Him to heal her daughter who had an unclean spirit, Jesus replied that it was not meet or fitting to take bread from children and give it to dogs. The words are not as harsh or as heartless as they seem. There is a little play of humor in them for Jesus uses the word for little dogs or puppies under the table. The remark was probably a rebuke to the disciples and a test of the faith of the woman. And she has a ready mind and a quick tongue, for taking the words of the Master she said that she would be glad to have the crumbs that were left over. The woman's faith and love brought a quick response from the Master and He told her that her faith had won the victory. And it came to pass even as He had said. When she returned home, there was her daughter lying on the bed, but with the demon gone out of her. It is the story of faith as the secret of receiving.

Jesus and a Greek.

The next foreigner whom Jesus meets is a Greek, a man who lived beyond the Jordan, in the Greek section of Decapolis—The Ten Cities. In this case the man was deaf and dumb, two defects that are, of course, intimately associated with each other. Taking the man aside, undoubtedly to avoid attraction and curiosity and sensation seekers, Jesus spat, and then putting His fingers into His ears and touching his tongue, He said, "Be opened." And the miracle happened, for not only was the man able to hear, but still more marvelous, he was able to talk at once. How was it done? It was done by a direct act of the power of God. It was done by breaking the laws we know. In this case Jesus used aids to faith—He spat upon His fingers, and He touched the ears and He touched the tongue of the man. There are aids to faith. Faith operates both with and without aids, that is visible, material aids.

Jesus and a Roman.

A centurion was a Roman. This particular centurion had a servant who was ill. This man though a soldier had a warm heart and a personal interest in his servant. He had heard about Jesus and he sent a select group of Jews to enlist His aid. As as soon as He received the message Jesus went with the delegation. But when He drew near the house the centurion with an inspiring display of humility came to meet Him and suggested that it would not be necessary for Jesus to come into the house—he did not feel worthy of that honor. All that would be necessary, said the man, would be for Jesus to speak the word and the servant would be healed. The man's faith and humility amazed Jesus—it was the greatest display of faith and He had seen thus far in Israel. And again faith received the victory, for the centurion's servant was healed at that same hour.

The common element in all these stories is of course that Jesus was dealing in each case with a foreigner. But Christ regarded not the color of a man's skin, or the race to which he belonged. He saw men as men, men as children of God, men as human beings. And His healing touch and His saving grace were for all men, regardless of race or religion.

How indefensible our racial prejudices are! How trivial are our distinctions between men on the basis of color or creed or class or culture! How unchristlike are so many of our attitudes toward other peoples, both in our own lands and in other lands. All of us need a baptism of the spirit of Christ in our attitudes toward, and our relations with, other peoples. Racial prejudice and racial discrimination are among the worst of sins. And alas they are in the best of people. These things ought not so to be. Christ has broken down the middle wall of partition and we are all one in Him.

FREE GRACE.

A Sermon

By REV. DURANT D. NASH, SR.,
Hopewell, Virginia.

"He that spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?"—Romans 8:32.

How many of us have looked up to our Heavenly Father and thanked Him for this day? Did it cost you anything? No, it did not. It is free, just as the air you breathe is free. The life you have is the breath of God. He gave it to you. Money cannot buy it. It is free. How freely does God love the world! While we were yet sinners, Christ died for the ungodly. "While we were 'dead in sin' God spared not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all." And how freely with him does he "give us all things!" Verily, free grace is all in all! The grace or love of God, whence cometh our salvation, is free in all, and free for all.

First, it is free in all to whom it is given. It does not depend on any power or merit in man; neither the good works or righteousness of the receiver; not on anything he is or has done. It does not in any way depend on his good temper or good desires, for all these flow from the free grace of God; they are the streams only, not the fountain. They are the fruits of free grace, and not the root. They are not the cause, but the effects of it. Whatsoever good is in man, or is done by man, God is the author and doer of it. Thus is his grace free in all; that is, no way depending on any power or merit in man, but on God alone, who freely gave us his own Son, and "with him freely giveth us all things."

But is it free for all, as well as in all? To this some have answered, "No, it is free only for those whom God hath ordained to life; and they are but a little flock. The greater part of mankind God hath ordained to death; and it is not free for them. Them God hateth; and therefore, before they were born, decreed they should die eternally. And this he absolutely decreed." Oh, how could any one charge a loving God who gave his only Son, and with him free grace, and everlasting life, that whosoever believed in him should not perish, and charge God so unjust as to decree that man is born into this world for which he had no choice, to go to heaven or to go to hell, and there is nothing that he can do to change his fate. If you believe this doctrine, you make our blessed Lord and Savior Jesus Christ an impostor; one who went to the cross, suffered and died in my place that I and you and everyone who believeth in him could have everlasting life. Hear Jesus as He said, "Come unto me all ye that are weary and heavy laden and I will give you rest, in my Father's house are many mansions; if it were not so I would have told you." Is that the decree of predestination? But you say, "That is not the predestination which I hold. I hold only the election of grace. What I believe is no more than this: that God before the foundation of the world did elect a certain number of men to be justified, sanctified, and glorified. Now all these will be saved, and none else, for the rest of mankind God leaves to themselves. So they follow the imaginations of their own hearts which are only evil continually, and waxing worse and worse, are at length justly punished with everlasting destruction. Is this all the predestination which you hold? Consider, perhaps, this is not all. Do you believe God ordained them to this very thing? If so, you believe the whole decree; you hold predestination in the full sense which has been above described. But it may be you think you do not. Do you believe God hardens the heart of them that perish? Believe God (literally) hardened Pharaoh's heart, and that for this end created him? Why this amounts to the same thing. If you believe Pharaoh, or any one man was created to be damned, you hold all that has been said of predestination. And now may I ask one or two questions? If God decreed and ordained that man is born into this world to be saved or lost, to go to heaven or hell, why did Jesus come? Thanks be to a loving Father that is not a respecter of persons, God so loved the world that He gave us free grace, and with it he gave us all things.

Who then can be saved? All men, everywhere. Is this free grace of God the Father to be in vain for you? Remember, God made you in His own Image, not to go to hell as some would have you think, not to be saying it is no use, if God wants to save me he will, and if not I won't be saved. God made you for his own, not to be deceived by the devil, who would have you believe that you will be saved in time if God wants to save you. Present yourselves. "He that spareth not his own Son, but delivered him up for us all, how shall he not with him also freely give us all things?" Yes, "thanks be unto God for His unspeakable gift."

NEED UNLIMITED.

During 1949 Church World Service, our cooperative Protestant overseas relief agency, is asking for eight million pounds of clothing, shoes and bedding for overseas needs. These are vital to care for the needs of new refugees in Palestine and Greece, to meet the still existing wants of many parts of Europe, to care for millions in China, Burma, Japan, Korea, Okinawa, the Philippines, India and Pakistan. The list of desired items is rather long and specific, topped by men's heavy clothing, the hardest of all items to get. Two thousand bales or approximately 200,000 pounds per month are needed. Heavy clothing for women, and children, layettes for infants, light clothing for men, women and children and bedding, sheets, blankets and quilts come next in order. Sturdy shoes in wearable condition are also needed for all ages. Church World Service is no longer accepting women's high-heeled shoes because low-heeled walking shoes are so greatly needed.

The monthly requirement of 65,000 pounds to meet the eight million pound goal looms large, but broken down and divided among Protestants throughout the country, the needed contribution from each is almost negligible, less than a pound apiece. For Congregational Christian Churches, only 250,000 pounds is asked. Send your gift of clothing now to the Church World Service Center, New Windsor, Maryland. Remember, too, that 8c a pound will pack your gift and see it delivered overseas.

ONE GREAT HOUR.

Saturday night, March 26, is the time for "One Great Hour," the united appeal for overseas relief funds of the churches of America. The time is 10:00 p. m. The stations of three major networks will carry it. Ask your friends to listen, too. Send your gift to the Convention Office.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

At the funeral services for Mr. Charles D. Johnston, one little boy from the orphanage was heard saying, "I wonder what will happen now." That thought no doubt has been in the minds of many people. I'm sure all the children have wondered, and you of the Southern Convention have asked the same question.

The members of the Board of Trustees feel very keenly their responsibility in answering that question. We all know that it will take time to find a worthy successor to Mr. Johnston as superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. I think you would like to know what is going to happen in the meantime. I want to assure you that during the time needed to find that superintendent, the children of the orphanage will be well cared for, and the general business of the orphanage will be carried on. We are well equipped to do just that.

Miss Hattie Brakefield has been head matron for many years. She knows and loves the children and is quite familiar with the everyday life at the orphanage. She is well qualified to take over the responsibility of seeing that everything continues as it should in the three separate homes.

Mrs. Estelle Lynch Perry is the efficient office manager and will redouble her efforts, if need be, to keep things running smoothly.

Mr. Less Wagoner has for a long time been more than the farm manager. He has assisted Mr. Johnston in all things pertaining to management and upkeep of the orphanage. He is well acquainted with all such details and will continue the efficient management that has been true of the past.

And last, I wish to say something of the faithfulness of the chairman of the Board of Trustees, Mr. V. R. Holt. Many years ago, Mr. Johnston and Mr. W. K. Holt, father of the present chairman of the board, agreed to serve the orphanage, the one as superintendent and the other as chairman of the board. The only provision was that the other should accept. Mr. Holt remained chairman until his death. His son came on the board at that time and later became its chairman. Thus, Mr. Vitus Holt is doubly endowed—he has an inherited love for the orphanage as well as a deep interest that has grown with his service. As the years have gone by Mr. Johnston came to rely more and more upon Mr. Holt's help and willingness to be of assistance. His home is near the orphanage, and as Superintendent Johnston is no longer there, he is giving whatever time is needed to guarantee smooth and efficient management.

Mr. Johnston is sorely missed by everyone and in everything pertaining to the institution, but the board is very grateful for those who are with us and who are carrying the load in such a splendid way during the time

"UNCLE CHARLIE."*

By Robert Armster Whitten.

Through the years he proved a friend,
And father to girls and boys;
All broken hearts he sought to mend
With gladness and with joys.

He proved a father to many a son,
A dad to many a girl;
He's living still in hearts he won
To bless our weary world.

His heart was big, and brave and strong,
It beat for the orphan child;
His life he gave for this youthful throng
With meekness, calm and mild.

To each he gave at its best,
As he ministered through the years;
Courage inspired in every breast,
Gave hope instead of fears.

He built with mortar, brick, and stone
A house where children live;
Through love he made of it a home,
The best he had to give.

He builded other buildings fair,
Character of lasting worth,
In human hearts with loving care,
The greatest work on earth.

"The teacher says it is necessary to build up Jimmie's self-confidence—that he needs to experience the joy of success. It was a good thing I went to the kindergarten yesterday. I can't see how I have been so blind to Ned's bossy, disagreeable ways. If not corrected, they will bring results quite as serious for him as for Jimmie. I think we should encourage Ned to help Jimmie."

"Yes, that is a very good idea, and it will work out especially well if we are careful to see that each boy has the opportunity to be with those of his own age only, during part of his playtime. Then our boys will have more pleasure in each other's companionship, because of the different experiences they will have and the opportunities these will give them for exchanging confidences."

Depression, gloom, pessimism, despair, discouragement, these slay ten human beings to every one murdered by typhoid, influenza, diabetes or pneumonia. If tuberculosis is the great white plague, fear is the great black plague. Be cheerful.—Crane.

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

well, just that, making our home. He loves our young amah almost as much as he does us and we're all wondering what his first word spoken with real understanding will be Foochow or Shaowu dialect, the national language or English. He seems to connect "da-da" with his daddy; so maybe English will win. But later, Chinese, one dialect or another, is bound to be uppermost; its grammar is so much simpler. Personally, I can't wait to have a natural interpreter right in the family.

A word about the weather—Quoting freely from the November 6 New Yorker, "Since the Chinese traditionally depend for warmth on clothing and fortitude" (in Shaowu we might add "and firebaskets") and the "winter here is raw and gray, Westerners who have been softened by the idea that environment should be controlled rather than philosophically accepted, bear the chill for awhile by pretending they are camping out, but eventually they break down in misery and long woolen underwear." This is one reason why we look a little deformed in winter snapshots. But we are thankful we have such clothing. Millions more in our world would probably like some of the same.

Those millions—India, Africa, East Indies, Palestine. It is hard for us to pray for them, we who are fairly comfortable even in China. "Peace—blessing—love." What does the ragged, poorly feed peasant soldier fighting his fellow countryman there in North China know of such words? the poorly educated dark African hated and secretly feared by the white African? What do the men who make rioting, hating, killing mobs anywhere know of these words? We can only be silent before the mystery of the world's terrors as we are before the mystery of the world's wonders. God can understand prayers without words. As men learn more about that vastness within the atom and the vastness of our universe, may God help us learn more about the human spirit—its vast capacity for good, so much of which is turned now toward evil. May we each one more wholeheartedly turn our own abilities toward the good God would have in His world.

Affectionately,

INFORMATION DESIRED CONCERNING REV. JAMES O'KELLY.

Owing to the fact that some things have been uncovered about Rev. James O'Kelly's early life, we may wish to revise the first chapter of his life as published in 1910.

In the first place he says in his pamphlet on slavery that he was a native of Virginia. Taking this as a clue and the records of Mecklenburg County, Va., it was found out that he manumitted a slave in that county in 1785, and in 1789 he and his wife were given a life interest in a tract of forty acres of land by his friend, Tignal Jones. At what time he became a citizen of North Carolina we know nothing with certainty, but the first deed in Chatham County, North Carolina, is dated 1797 and this gave his residence as Chatham County.

By consulting the law office in Virginia it is found that several people by that name came to different counties in Virginia from 1612 to 1658—William O'Kelly came in on the 23rd of March, 1657, Sisly O'Kelly and Robert O'Kelly, August 20, 1642, John and Thomas O'Kelly, June 8, 1657, and Thomas O'Kelly, February 17, 1658.

If any reader happens to know anything further about the O'Kelly family of Virginia and North Carolina it will be appreciated as a favor if you will be good enough to let me have it: W. E. MacClenny, 118 St. James Avenue, Suffolk, Virginia.

The Vocabulary of Missions

By TRUMAN DOUGLASS

There are times when the vocabulary of missions, like the vocabulary of Hollywood, shows signs of distressing monotony and an impoverished imagination. In place of the movie industry's "corn," the missionary movement relies on the sonorous cliché. In the two fields of activity—movies and missions —this paucity of language takes somewhat divergent forms. Whereas Hollywood habitually employs the ninety horse-power word to describe the one-half mouse-power film, the missionary movement has a genius for characterizing the most interesting and important enterprise on earth in lifeless, repetitive, monochromatic language.

DR. DOUGLASS

of martial speech have lost some of their punch with me. If a psychoanalyst, engaged in giving me the word-association test, were to shout "strategic opportunity" in my ear, I should probably come right back with "tactical error."

The reports of all missionary agencies are highly fictitious. In their summaries and statistics they inevitably depersonalize and generalize what is personal and particular. Therefore they need to be approached with sensitized imagination and an eye for the personal realities behind them. Missions—to use a phrase which is fast becoming another cliché—are people. And people are seldom monotonous, repetitive, or uninteresting. They are not like reports any more than they behave like polls.

If the unhappy connotations of the word could be avoided I should like to call attention to the significance and variety of those ministries performed in the "regular" work which the Board helps to make possible. In a time when much emphasis is placed upon the importance of keeping the Church and its agencies in a condition of "mobility," something should be said for the grace of staying put. In the face of the tendency to exalt sheer mobility as being in itself a supreme value, the missionary agencies clearly need to do a better job of exhibiting the romance of their "regular" work—work which is carefully planned, adequately equipped, and continued over a long enough period to make a difference to those for whom and with whom it is done.

I.C.R.E. SCHEDULES NATIONWIDE CELEBRATION IN 1952.

Plans for a nationwide celebration of the publication of the complete Revised Standard Version of the Bible in 1952 were launched during the annual meeting of the International Council of Religious Education, according to Rev. Philip C. Landers, associate general secretary.

Publication of the revised New Testament occurred in 1946 with a public presentation here at a mass meeting during the annual meeting of the International Council.

In 1952 it is expected that simultaneous inter-church mass meetings will be held in communities in the United States and Canada on Tuesday evening, September 30, to coincide with the public release.

"Emphasis in all these services will be placed on the use of the Bible in individual lives and in Christian teaching," stated Mr. Landers, who originally proposed and developed the idea.

Copies of the new version will be presented to outstanding organizations and persons of each community in these services. A national radio hook-up with American and Canadian officials speaking is proposed.

AMSTERDAM, CONTINUED.

In their first meeting since the Amsterdam Assembly (August, 1948), over seventy-five delegates of United States member churches convened at Evanston, Illinois, in order to carry forward World Council activities in America. Bishop G. Bromley Oxnam, of New York, presided at the American Conference. Major speeches at the meeting, held at the First Methodist Church of Evanston, March 21-23, were made by Bishop Oxnam, Mr. Charles P. Taft, Dr. Franklin Clark Fry and Dr. O. Frederick Nolde, the World Council's secretary for international affairs.

Noting that "the laity constitutes more than 99 per cent of the Church," the American Conference will plan a North American meeting of Christian laymen to find ways and means of applying Christian principles in daily life. Such regional meetings were called for by the Amsterdam Assembly, which declared that laymen regard the Church as "a place for the satisfaction of a religious need isolated from the everyday realities of a modern world." Findings of this conference will be passed on to the Geneva headquarters of the World Council.

PASTORS' PAY UNDER STREET SWEEPERS'.

Toronto pays street sweepers over $2,000 a year, and that is not enough. But the United Church of Canada has been trying to support a ministry whose minimum salary, which is not always paid, is around $1,800. The rise in the cost of living makes this an impossibly low figure, so the church seeks to do something to raise it. A laymen's committee has been formed to lift the minimum to $2,400, "immediately if possible, but by 1951 at latest." A Canada-wide laymen's organization has been set up, which has issued a pamphlet on The Position of Our Ministers directed to the church members. Attractively printed by the United Church Publishing House of Toronto, this pamphlet should stir the people who are in position to remedy a shameful injustice. It points out that "of the 2,016 active ministers of the United Church, only 373 at the present time receive more than $2,400." A chart shows that if 100 is taken as the base figure for 1939, ministers' salaries have risen only to 130 by 1948, while the cost of commodities has risen to 180, and the cost of food has passed 200. Labor income has climbed from 100 to 275 and farm income has risen from 100 to 360. With the fall in purchasing power of the dollar, the $2,400 which the committee seeks will fail by $600 of supporting a standard of living equal to that provided by $1,800 a decade ago. As a consequence, the effectiveness of pastors as well as the health and educational standards of their families is suffering, and the church is finding it increasingly difficult to interest young men in the ministry. The new initiative of the Canadian laymen is therefore propitious. We hope it will also become contagious. The situation which prevails in Canada exists here in aggravated form, and without the democratic equalization of salaries which the United Church wisely observes. Living costs have soared higher on this side of the border, and pastoral salaries have usually followed the same deliberate pace as in Canada. But where is the laymen's committee? Who is ready to give our church members the truth concerning this matter, which concerns every church in a similarly succinct but accurate form? Isn't this a job that the commission on the ministry of the Federal Council of Churches could help the laymen do?—The Christian Century.

DISPLACED PERSONS.

Help place a displaced person. Do you know of a house that needs a family to live in it? Have you heard of a job that will need a worker? Could you and the other members of your church, together, find the fare from New York to your town for a displaced person or perhaps a family of three or four. Wouldn't all of you together stand behind that family to make sure they really begin a new and happy life in your community? That's all you need to bring a D. P. family from despair to hope. The second step in making the plan a reality is to get the necessary assurance forms and fill them out. They are available from your State Council of Churches at Richmond, Va., or Durham, N. C.

Your contributions to "One Great Hour" will mean far more than their dollar-and-cents value. They will bring a Christian hope to the war-scarred men, women and children of Europe and Asia. They will tell them that someone in the world really cares.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE EDITOR MUSES.

One Great Hour (Saturday 10-11 p. m.) should be a thrilling experience for many within and without our churches. Some are apt to become callous or irritated by unending appeals, but others will allow each cause to stand on its own merit. Hunger and frustration are widespread. Millions are ready to embrace communism, many are prospects for atheism. American Protestantism should meet this situation with wisdom and strength. Hunger can be alleviated. Faith can be restored. We are not alone. There are great reservoirs of cooperation. One Great Hour should be definitive and redemptive. Listen! Pray! Give! Behold the salvation of our God!

"Schism" was militantly charged by Rev. James W. Fifield, Jr., of Los Angeles at the Cleveland Council meeting when the Merger was approved. Speaking for the anti-merger forces, he claimed that approval of union would break the hearts of this minority group. The Christian Century announced that under his leadership First Church, Los Angeles, has voted two to one against the Merger. One wonders if there are not broken hearts over the decision. Evidently the action of this great church is not sustained at the bar of public opinion. The Christian Century correspondent writes:

"The entire Protestant community here is profoundly disturbed over this action as a sign of a threatened rift in the Congregational Christian Churches. While they have no interest in the internal affairs of any particular denomination as such, they are aware that such a rift can but have a deleterious effect upon the ecumenical movement as a whole. They feel that at a time when all churches are challenged to present a solid front against organized foes seeking to destroy Christianity, it is most unfortunate that inner denominational differences are permitted to get in the way of the larger demands of the Kingdom of God. They realize that the rift provides material for those critics of the church who rejoice to see members of a Christian body at loggerheads among themselves. All pray that counsels of unity and amity may yet prevail.

CLEVELAND CONFERENCE CALLS FOR "RIGHTEOUS AND DYNAMIC FAITH"

"If America's leadership is to deserve the confidence of the world, it must be characterized by a righteous and dynamic faith. No people is ever great, even in worldly terms, without a faith and nothing would be more dangerous than to have the present material power of our nation employed carelessly, detached from the guiding direction of a policy based upon righteous faith."

Thus spake the National Conference on the Churches and World Order in its message to the churches, adopted in the closing hours of a four-day meeting in Cleveland, Ohio, March 11. It had been called together by the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America to appraise the critical problems that have arisen during the past year to threaten the peace of the world and the moral use of the great power as a world leader reposing in the United States and the American people.

"By both word and deed we must cultivate a faith which provides a serene courage amidst the insecurities of our day," the Message stated in the concluding paragraph of a 2,800-word document. "There is no simple resolution of our complex responsibilities. Our generation is destined to live in the midst of uncertainty and turmoil. In such a world we declare that God rules. We are not doomed to chaos. We are laborers together with God, and with Him all things are possible."

Meeting once again in the Hotel Cleveland—scene of the pre-San Francisco United Nations Conference of four years ago when strengthening amendments to the Dumbarton Oaks proposals were made—the 1949 gathering is said to have attracted the largest attendance of Protestants in the post-war era.

Delegates were made conscious of the moral hazards and fateful consequences invoked in the use of the tremendous power resting in the hands of the United States by the keynote speaker who warned that war was not inevitable and that if it came the United States leadership, possessed of great moral and physical assets with which to lead the world to peace, would not be able to escape primary responsibility.

The Message adopted by the Conference and commended to the churches for study and action declared that the nation must resist both the temptation to use its power irresponsibly and to flee the responsibilities of its power. The paramount question, it was observed, is whether as a people we have the spiritual power for such leadership.

Acknowledging the dangers of worldly power and the possibility that sight of human values may be lost in the pursuit of technical supremacy, the Message called upon their fellow-Christians not to be deaf to the cry of the people for deliverance from the death, misery, the starvation of body and soul visited upon them by economic disorder and recurrent war.

Other appeals in the message include intensification of United Nations' efforts to bring about multilateral and balanced reduction of armaments; the putting of basic national strategy in the hands of persons who have faith in the achievability of peace; and the control and coordination of all elements of national power.

Churches, said the message, must sharpen the sense of moral obligation, mitigate national pride and pretention, and "preach the Majesty of God under whose sovereignty we are called upon to build a more inclusive community of mankind."

Mrs. Leslie E. Swain, the only woman speaker on the speaking program, predicted that unless the West changed its attitude toward Asia, it might lead to the formation of a Far East bloc. Mrs. Swain, who attended the meeting last month of the Executive Committee of the World Council of Churches in Switzerland, declared, "Unless we move quickly we shall find the East doing exactly what we have done . . . facing their problems without consulting the West." She attributed part of the ill will of Asiatic countries to what she termed the failure of the church to make Christianity a world-wide institution.

Dr. Walter M. Horton analyzed some of the difficulties that beset the United States in the application of moral influence in world affairs. He said the present communism hysteria coupled with a fatalism about the inevitability of war—which he joined Mr. Dulles in challenging—constituted a menace to the moral use of American power and served as an inducement to war. The Oberlin professor urged the delegates not to discard Christian principles for "purely political expediency," nor on the other hand to abandon "realism" in treating problems of power politics.

Godspeed to Missionary Recruits

I

Miss Maxine Helen Stavroulakis, daughter of Mrs. Alice Jones Stavroulakis of Canton, Illinois, flew from New York Monday, March 14, by Pan American Airways for South Africa, where she will teach for four years under the American Board. Miss Stavroulakis will be on the faculty of Inanda Seminary, Natal, South Africa, a fine Christian school for Zulu girls founded and conducted by the American Board.

Miss Stavroulakis has been living for the past three months or so at the Walker Missionary Home, Auburn-dale, Mass., where under the direction of Dr. James Dexter Taylor, distinguished Congregational missionary scholar from South Africa, she has been studying the Zulu language. Zulu is one of the most complicated languages. Along with having a very difficult grammatical structure it is characterized by three distinct "clicks" which come from the Hottentot language. These "clicks" are incapable of reproduction in written English.

II

William S. Barker, Jr., World War II veteran, son of Mr. and Mrs. William S. Barker of 39 Fairview Drive, Wethersfield, Conn., sailed March 10 on the Queen Elizabeth bound for Mt. Silinda, Southern Rhodesia, as a career industrial missionary under the American Board.

Born in Hartford, Conn., 23 years ago, Mr. Barker was educated at Norwich University in Vermont and Rensselaer Polytechnic Institute (Class of 1945 B. S. in electrical engineering). During World War II Bill Barker was Assistant Engineer on a U. S. Destroyer with the 7th Fleet in the China Seas and following release from the Navy he worked with the General Electric in Pittsfield, Mass.

There is a double pull toward Africa for Mr. Barker because he is not only going out as a teacher of industrial arts among the African people, because he believes that that is the best way he can invest his talents toward building a Christian world, but he will join his fiancée, Miss Marie Bushong, R. N., daughter of Rev. and Mrs. Eugene M. Bushong of Longmeadow, Mass. Miss Bushong and Mr. Barker will be married and assigned to work at Silinda, Southern Rhodesia, she as a nurse and he as an industrial teacher.

In his work at Mt. Silinda Institute, Mr. Barker will have charge of the Industrial Department where African young men are trained as cabinet makers, blacksmiths and brick and tile makers. The African mahogany from which the furniture is made comes from part of the Mt. Silinda forest, formerly owned by the mission, but recently sold to the government. Before he actually takes over his work at Mt. Silinda Institute, Mr. Barker will study the native tongue, Ndau.

On the eve of sailing Mr. Barker expressed his motivation simply by saying: "I believe that teaching is the best way I can devote my life to the service of Christ and that as a teacher of industrial arts I can help the African people. Jesus was a carpenter and through the centuries Christians have been workers. In learning to take pride in a job well done also learn to build a good life and to find satisfaction in it."

III

Miss Corrine M. Nordquest for the past four years a Director of Religious Education in the First Congregational Church of Hyde Park, Mass., and the First Congregational Church of Auburn-dale, Mass., sailed March 10, on the Queen Elizabeth bound for South Africa as a career religious education and social work missionary under the American Board.

Miss Nordquest, who is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman R. Nordquest of 1733 West 7th Street, Ashtabula, Ohio, and was born in that city, is a graduate of Schauffler College, Cleveland, Ohio, with special advance work at Andover-Newton Theological Seminary, Newton, Mass. Her New England home has been at 479 Huntington Avenue, Hyde Park, Mass.

For the past four months Miss Nordquest has been studying Zulu with Dr. James Dexter Taylor, Acting Secretary for Africa of the American Board, learning among other things the three distinct "clicks" which come from the Hottentot language and which are incapable of reproduction in written English.

On December 12 she was Commissioned by the American Board in the South Congregational Church, Rev. Francis L. Cooper, minister, of Brockton, Mass., and at the service was Chief Albert J. Luthuli, Zulu Christian layman from South Africa, then on a visit to the U. S. A.

On November 28 Miss Nordquest was consecrated in the Second Congregational Church of Ashtabula, Ohio, Rev. Clarke M. Cochrane, minister. She will be the representative in Africa of both the South Congregational Church of Brockton, Mass., and the Second Congregational Church of Ashtabula, Ohio.

On the eve of sailing Miss Nordquest said: "As far back as I can remember, I have been interested in people of other countries and in the work of missionaries. The hope for a world of peace lies in the permeation of all of life with Christian standards and ideals. The supreme need in our world today is for more people with Christlike character. I would like to have an active part in the great missionary enterprise of bringing the gospel of life, love and joy to millions who so earnestly seek it and desperately need it."

Abolish lashing ambition. Stifle stinging jealousy. Wreck remorse's whip. Regret no yesterdays. Hobble feverish hurry. Trust serenely. Choke complaints with commendation. Make "Smile and Push" your motto.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

A deacon is one who is elected by the congregation to be a helper of the pastor and the people in matters pertaining to the church. The dictionary says: "One who attends to the business affairs of the place of worship, and to the wants of the poor, and advises the minister." You can readily see that why he should have the qualities assigned to him in the sixth chapter of Acts (Acts 6:1-5):

- (1) "men of honest report"
- (2) "full of the Holy Spirit"
- (3) "and wisdom"
- (4) "whom we will appoint over this business."

Therefore it seems to me that it is very clear that a deacon should be a good and true man of God, having the Spirit of Christ, and being full of tact and wisdom, one who in love and meekness of spirit would try to be a real helper—not only of the pastor, but of the church in its business affairs, and of the members in their want or need. A group of goodly men, full of the Holy Spirit and wisdom, can have a great deal to do with the worth of the church to their community and the world.

Paul in writing to Timothy about deacons says (I Tim. 3:8-13) they are to be "grave, not double tongued, not given to much wine, not greedy of filthy lucre." That is they are to be sincere and reverent, not guilty of what is known today as "double-talk," or "two-timing"—not a drinker, not a cheater in the name of "good business." Paul in this passage insists that he be a man proved and tested, and being found blameless let him use the office of deacon. He also calls attention to the fact that he is to set a good example in his home as husband and father; and that his wife is to be "faithful in all things."

Therefore I feel that it is assumed by a church that when it elects a person to the office of deacon it recognizes that he is a man of well known goodwill, honesty, tact and Christian faith. The more business ability and training he has all the better, but he must be first and last a good man—he must be above reproach. No wonder Paul says: "For they that use the office of deacon well purchase to themselves a good degree, and great boldness (or effectiveness) in the faith which is in Jesus Christ" (I Tim. 3:13). The Church has conferred on a member one of its very highest honors when it elects him to the office of deacon.

It is clear, then, from the Scriptures that deacons are distinct officers in the church; they are to help supply the wants of the poor and to help look after the sick, needy, bereft; and in many churches unless there is elected or appointed a special Board of Finance they are to look after the financial and material af-

GOD STILL COMFORTS LONELY HEARTS.

By Rev. John Dale Kempster, Interlachen, Florida.

The best of good people get lonesome at times

And a little depressed in their hearts
And lose for a moment the peace of the mind
Nor revive till the trouble departs.

The Apostle St. Paul, was a wonderful man
His equal we never have seen
And yet even he was lonesome at times
And longed for a change of the scene.

There isn't a doubt that he prayed unto God
And he knew that his prayers would be heard

But God sent no angel, but just a good man
To bring him the comforting word.

The message that Titus did give unto Paul
To humans will never be known
But it certainly cheered the heart of St. Paul
And his gratitude quickly was shown.

We are living just now in a saddened old World

Men yearning for strength to endure.
So let us give cheer to the lonely of heart fairs of the church. They should assist their minister in their prayers, their counsel, and in any ways of encouragement and help that may occur to them. They help with the serving of The Lord's Supper; and in the absence of a pastor the chairman of the board of deacons, or one of its members presides over any business session of the church.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

THOMAS.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

An honest doubt never did anyone harm—rather what is harmful are doubts which one continues to hold despite adequate evidence. Thomas doubted, or rather was slow to believe, but when convinced he uttered what is perhaps the noblest confession in the Gospels, "My Lord and my God."

Thomas was a charming man with little appreciation of personal danger. When the other apostles would have dissuaded Jesus from going to Bethany where Lazarus lay dead, Thomas on the other hand was all for the adventure. He was deeply devoted to Jesus and so long as He was with them, Thomas was ready to do anything. It was when Jesus announced at the Last Supper that he was leaving them that Thomas was filled with perplexity. He was very much of a materialist and with the Crucifixion was persuaded that all was over with the Master, and yet he was found in the company of the rest "on the first day of the week" when they met for conference. When the Messiah first appeared to the apostles though for some reason Thomas was not with them and refused to believe until he, too, had the experience of sight and feeling.

The "Acts of Thomas" was written probably during the second century by a man named Lucius. This purports to give an account of the life of the Apostle. It records that he was assigned to India. At first he did not want to go, then was persuaded by a vision which sold him as a slave to an Indian merchant. Thomas was a carpenter by trade and was instructed to build a house for his Master; he took the prince's money but distributed it among the poor.

We do not know how he died but Roman Martyrology relates that his body was taken from India to Edessa and during the crusades was removed to Ortona in Italy.

Perhaps the most disturbing victims of the war are the youth of Europe and Asia. A whole generation has grown up under the abnormality of war and lack of any community life. They often lived like little animals, surviving as best they could. Many were subjected to distorted ideologies which have complicated their physical sufferings.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

WHERE DO CHRISTIAN CHURCH YOUNG PEOPLE GO TO COLLEGE?

Recently I received a copy of a letter written by a very good and interested friend to Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, pastor of the Elon College Community Church. In this letter he stated that a very fine group of Elon College alumni lived in his city but that a very few of these alumni ever came to his church. He was lamenting this fact and rightly so. Ordinarily, they should and would be expected to attend his church and the college would be most happy if they did. The writer of the letter emphasized the fact that his church had been loyal to the college in every respect stating that it had always supported the college in every way possible, that it paid its conference apportionment in full for the college, was raising its Staley-Atkinson-Newman Memorial Fund apportionment, and in other ways supported the college financially. He felt that the alumni should regard these facts. This pastor friend is exactly right in all of his contentions. The college agrees and certainly will use its influence to the fullest extent to induce its alumni to attend his church and Congregational Christian Churches located elsewhere in our Convention and beyond the bounds of our Convention, but both the church and the college must be realistic and considerate in this very important matter. Not many of the alumni in reference are members of the Congregational Christian Church. The majority of them are Methodists, Baptists, Presbyterians and others. They belonged to these denominations when they entered Elon College. It is our responsibility so long as they are students in Elon College to see that they are properly instructed in the Bible and related subjects and that they attend divine services but it is not our responsibility to endeavor to have them join the Congregational Christian Church. We could not afford to have the reputation as a proselyting school. We must insist on all accepting Christ and uniting with the Church but should leave the matter of choice of a denomination to the students themselves. We could wish that they were members of our church and would attend the Congregational Christian Church when they leave college but they are not and the chances are that they won't.

There is a way and a very good way to get Elon alumni to attend our church when they leave college and that is to make sure that our young people, our sons and daughters, go to our college. If we would send more of our young people who are members of our church to our college, our college would send more of its graduates back to our church. By sending our young people to our college we not only help the college we help our church as well. It is certainly one good way to help improve the solidarity of our church. When our young people are trained in our college they meet each other, form friendships, and create mutual interests in the affairs of the church. There is much more to be realized on a college campus than a mere education acquired from the study of the arts and sciences. It takes more than facts and figures to build a character.

I am not pleading for you, our Congregational Christian Churches, to send your young people to Elon College merely for the sake of Elon College but for the sake of our church as well. For the past two years we have had more students than we could take care of. We were compelled to turn many away. All indications are that Elon College will be completely filled by the end of May. We have more bonafide applications today than we have ever had this early in all of our history.

Where do our Christian Church young people go to college? Where do the young people of your church membership go to college? Come to Elon College. Try it and see. It will prove itself to be a good college and will meet the spiritual and social needs as well as educational standards.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

At the beginning of the church year the apportionment table for the requirements of the Convention and the denomination is put in the hands of the officials and membership of the local churches. Each church knows exactly what the Convention expects of it, how much the church is asked to give to contribute for the support of all the boards, commissions and institutions of the church. If each local church would begin at once to work and contribute to meet the needs fully and as quickly as possible each church would find itself in a much more favorable position and the causes to be supported would be in a much more favorable position to meet their usual demands. These boards, commissions, and institutions are creations of the church and are necessary for the carrying out of its program and support of the work of the Kingdom at home and abroad. The church took a long step in the right direction when it founded Elon College, providing for the training of its young people who are potential leaders and officials of church in every age. Elon College was founded not as a temporary measure but as a permanent institution with the hope that it would grow in efficiency, in service, and prestige as the years pass. The church has done a good job in supporting the college. We come now, however, to the place where if the college is to measure up to the church's demands and expectations that it must have increased funds and I am sure that the church will be delighted to increase its contributions to help meet the needs of this new day in the field of Christian higher education.

Laying the groundwork for the study of industrial workers, a preliminary World Council report, compiled in Geneva, pointed out the breakdown of "natural communities of family, village, church and neighborhood," and described industrial man as "a nameless unit in a mass." The revival of the "ancient gods, Fate and Chance," accounts for the "great development of betting and gambling . . . astrology and other forms of superstition."

The American delegates mapped out the World Council action in the United States on economic life, youth work, international affairs and overseas relief, and considered questions of theology and church unity.

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

LEARN

"The Darkest Continent" will be our area for study this week—Africa, land of extreme poverty and great wealth, land of racial tensions and of great opportunity for Christianity.

South African Mission

Mission work was begun in Africa in 1835 among the Zulus. In South Africa we are responsible for 140,000 people. The situation here is critical, for political reactionaries are making the race problem acute. Only one experienced missionary on the field in direct contact with the churches is fully conversant with the Zulu language. Here is a tremendous task and opportunity for the ten new missionaries recently arrived on the field. The Bantu churches themselves, with some 30,000 members, do missionary work among less privileged Africans.

West Africa Central Mission

Work in the Portuguese Colony of Angola among the Ovimbundu people was begun in 1880. In 1927 this field was divided between the American Board and the United Church of Canada, and much of the work is done cooperatively. At Dondi there is Currie Institute for Boys, Means School for Girls, Sara Hurd Scott Hospital, Union Theological School and Union Press. Here twenty-five missionaries try to serve over 700,000 people for whom we are responsible.

East Africa Mission

In 1893 a Negro woman, Nancy Jones, from the Zulu Mission (now South Africa Mission), helped to start the work in East Africa. Religious, educational and medical work is being carried on in 43 places where our responsibility is for a population of 60,000. Here in Southern Rhodesia the need and demand for education is greater than can be met by government plus missionaries. In 1946 this Mission agreed to receive less mission aid each year for the next three years, becoming self-supporting by the end of 1949. Every indication is that this will become a reality.

can see what sacrifice this must have meant and what a large proportion of the church members must have participated. If we would give in like proportion, how much we could do to make the light of Jesus shine on a dark continent!

WORK

How can we help? By our gifts and by our prayers. More missionaries are desperately needed in our Africa stations. Christian leaders there feel that the only hope for Africa is more missionaries and better tools for them to use so that native African workers can be trained in the Christian way of life. This will make it possible to combat the forces of materialism and communism which threaten to "take over" in Africa.

"A Firm Foundation," the American Board Report for 1948 makes plain our task:

South Africa—"A great act of faith equal to the faith of those Africans who are willing to risk all to lead their people is required by American Christians that these confirmed Christians in South Africa may not be left entirely leaderless."

West Central—"The problems of Angola are many, but the Christian solution of all of them is quite possible if the people of the Church in America and Canada will in any degree match the consecration, sacrifice and devotion of the people of the Church in Africa."

East Africa—"The faith, hard work and self-sacrifice of the African people should be matched by a willingness on our part to train more leadership for their churches and schools and to start for them some of the badly needed projects that they are not now able to handle themselves but that they will be able to take over within a period of from eight to ten years."

A Missionary Representative

Our Reidsville Church has a representative in Dondi, West Central Mission, Miss Harriett M. Summerville, who since 1946 has been a teacher in the Means School for Girls. How fine it would be if some other church in the Southern Convention would pay for sending a new missionary to one of the spots in Africa where new recruits are so badly needed!

The Africans Help Others

In West Central Africa the Christians raised $4,000 for taking the Gospel to remote parts of Africa and to people in the labor camps on the coast. When the average wage for men is 12 to 15 cents a day and for women and children much less, you

PRAY

Our prayers this week are for the Christians of Africa and for their leaders, our missionaries. Let us pray for the consecrated African leaders who are attempting to lead their people in paths of righteousness and peace. Let us pray that more missionaries will be found to give the needed "lift" to the African national leaders.

Our Prayer List

Sunday—The 1,347 African evangelists at work in our three fields.

They need strength, training, and faith in their attempts to lead their people in the Christian way.

Monday—Our Schools.

They provide the much needed training for the children and young people of "Darkest Africa." From the kindergarten in Galangue (West Central) to Adams College in South Africa the need for teachers is great; the call for trained people is urgent. Of the evangelists listed above only 55 are ordained.

Tuesday—Our Hospitals—one in East Africa, one in South Africa, and two in West Central Africa.

Many of our stations have no medical service at all, which is hard on our missionary families as well as on the nationals. Let us pray for the three American doctors, the six nurses, and the eight African doctors as they attempt to fill a great need.

Wednesday—Our Social Centers in the great city of Johannesburg in South Africa.

Our prayers are needed here, where we help in a School of Social Work for training Christians; in welfare centers for Bantu men, delinquent girls, and African mothers. Rev. and Mrs. Ray Phillips have labored in this field since 1918.

Thursday—Rev. and Mrs. Carl R. Dille.

They are serving as rural evangelists in Elende Station of the West Central Africa Mission. Graduates of Defiance College, they were serving rural Christian churches in Pennsylvania before they went to Africa in 1940.

Friday—Rev. and Mrs. Henry C. McDowell.

The McDowells do church and educational work in Elende Station. He first went to Africa in 1919, but for health reasons returned to the States and was principal of Lincoln Academy, Kings Mountain, N. C., from 1937-44.

Saturday—New Missionaries who have gone to Africa since 1946.

Five to East Africa, ten to South Africa, and ten to West Central Africa. They need our prayers, for their task is a difficult one.

DISTRICT RALLIES.

Annual spring rallies (for North Carolina districts) will be held at the following dates and places:

Halifax District—March 29 (Tuesday), at Virgilina, Va.

Greensboro & Burlington Districts—March 30 (Wednesday), at Greensboro, N. C.

Sanford & Asheboro Districts—March 31 (Thursday), at Pleasant Grove, N. C.

Henderson and Raleigh—April 1 (Friday), at Henderson, N. C.

Our guest speaker for the Rallies will be Miss Elizabeth McGuffie of our Chicago office. She is the Associate Secretary for Women's Work for our denomination. She is to talk on Materials and Methods in Women's Work and will also conduct a Bible study.

The meetings will all start at 10:00 a. m. and close at 3:30. p. m.

The Rallies are always inspiring and helpful to all who are in woman's groups, and we hope that all who can may avail themselves of the opportunity to come and hear Miss McGuffie, as well as others who will be on the program. Of course, not one of the least valuable parts of such meetings is the contacting of old and new friends.

In order that no confusion will result from using new names of districts, here is the list of old names matched to new ones:

Formerly Alamance District—now Burlington District.

Formerly Chatham-Lee-Moore District—now Sanford District.

Formerly Durham-Wake District—now Raleigh District.

Formerly Guilford-Rockingham-Forsyth District—now Greensboro District.

Formerly Halifax District—now Halifax District.

Formerly Randolph District—now Asheboro District.

Formerly Vance-Warren District—now Henderson District.

Mrs. F. C. Lester is president of the North Carolina Women, and is responsible for planning the rallies for North Carolina.

Mrs. R. L. House is president of the Eastern Virginia Women, and therefore responsible for planning rallies for Eastern Virginia. (I am sorry that it is not possible to print dates and places for Eastern Virginia, as no information has been received by the editor regarding them.)

ANGIE CREW'S ADDRESS CHANGED.

Please note that Angie Crew's address has been changed again and is: Miss Angie Crew

NEWS FROM LOCAL SOCIETIES.

BEREA (GREAT BRIDGE).

The Ladies' Auxiliary of Berea is happy to report that we are enjoying our year's work as we strive together to achieve the goals for our Master's work. We have had all-day meetings each month with covered dish luncheons and everyone looks forward to this true fellowship one with another.

We have all received spiritual inspiration from our Bible study and devotionals each month presented to us so sincerely by Mrs. Grace Dozier.

Our public service was held November 7, 1948, at our evening service. It was led by our president, Mrs. E. E. Waterfield, with other members assisting her with the program. A special message for this occasion was delivered by our pastor, Rev. Ellis N. Clark. This service was largely attended by our congregation and many visitors.

The World Day of Prayer was observed on March 4, 1949. We enjoyed observing this day with a united service of eight churches of this area.

We have sent two large boxes of clothing to the Indians at Elbowoods, North Dakota. We always enjoy our Friendly Service project, and also the opportunities of friendly service at home that are so near to us. We have sent sunshine baskets to the shut-ins and aged, and we have remembered the sick with get-well cards and flowers. We also enjoyed a shower for Baby Clark and now we can announce a new member of our Cradle Roll, Ellis Newsome Clark, Jr. He will be better known to us as "Buddy" Clark.

We had the pleasure of having Mrs. Laubach, a missionary, the wife of Dr. Frank Laubach, visit with us and conduct a service on February 23, 1949.

Our story of On Our Own Doorstep will be completed at our next meeting by our president, Mrs. E. E. Waterfield. This book was presented to us in parts by Mrs. Elsie Mae Clark, Mrs. Mildred Nichols, Mrs. Lola Eason, Mrs. Etta Daniels and Mrs. Jane Smith. This study has truly aroused us to the opportunities that await us in our home mission work.

We ask God's blessings on us as we look forward with much enthusiasm to accomplish our future achievements for the year.

MRS. RUTH K. SOREY,
Reporter.

BURLINGTON.

About 300 garments were recently brought to the Woman's Auxiliary meeting for Easter gifts to the Christian Orphanage at Elon. One woman from the group sent 100 sweaters to the Orphanage.

Mrs. Levi Aldridge was presented with an orchid on behalf of the Auxiliary, on her eightieth birthday, in recognition of her life of beauty and service.

On Monday, March 28, at 6:45 p. m., all seven circles will join together for a covered dish supper and study of our Home Mission book, On Our Own Doorstep, by Frank S. Mead. Mrs. W. W. Sloan of Elon College will not only discuss this subject, but will show pictures and give first hand account of what she and Dr. Sloan saw during their visit to Puerto Rico during the Christmas holidays.

SEVEN SUGGESTIONS FOR LENT.

1. Be present as far as possible at every service of the Church. The benefit will be to others as well as to yourself.
2. Read the Scriptures regularly and meditate upon what you read.
3. Pray until prayer becomes a habit.
4. Keep a strict watch over your lips.
5. Deny yourself some luxury and add the cost of it to your Easter offering.
6. Let self-examination be a daily duty. Be sure you are moving.
7. Make your Lent positive, not merely negative.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

YOUNG FRIENDS:

It is spring! It arrived according to the calendar last Sunday. I know it is here because I have heard the peepers. They are the brownish frogs that make such a noise! Robins are about, too, and from my window I see a yardful of yellow, white and purple crocus blooms. Pussy willow is in the house and kites are flying.

Last Saturday I paid a visit to the country and I could see that it was springtime there, too. This was a very special visit. I went with seven high school youngsters from my church to Bon Air which is not very far from Richmond. This is a school for girls who have gotten into trouble. Some of them don't have any parents, some only one, some have stayed away from school, others have stolen things or hurt someone. They come from all over the State of Virginia and are from twelve to eighteen years of age. Every month they hold a birthday party for the girls having been born during that month. There were five March girls and we went to take them a birthday cake and presents.

It was fun to be with them. All of us get into trouble sometimes. Mothers are apt to say, "It's human nature." These girls don't look any different or act any different from us. They have no bars or bolts on their windows and one of the cottages where the best-behaved girls live doesn't have a lock on the door! They are free to leave but few of them try it. A girl is sent to Bon Air to be punished but she usually gets a wonderful education. The rule is that every girl sent there must spend 350 perfect days—no accidents to equipment, no temper tantrums, no tardiness, etc. One girl has been trying for over two years to get her 350 perfect days.

In the lovely wooded place there are the buildings: cottages, school, chapel, laundry and even a little dime store where the Bon Air girls go once a month for their shopping! Four or five dogs are a part of the little community and a young red-headed worker named Doris Foltz. She met us and took us to the building where the party was to be. We met the matron and then the girls. The oldest was 18, two were 14, one 15 and a 13-year-old. Our boys and girls were soon acquainted and playing games and singing together.

The cake had five candles and was decorated in green because it is the month of St. Patrick. Each girl was given a box of candy with a tiny china animal tied to it. They seemed to like their gifts and told us good-bye politely and asked us to "Come again when you aren't going to bring us something." We walked around the grounds, saw the youngsters returning from an afternoon movie, met a young tow-head who is mothering 500 baby chicks and looked at the lovely murals in the library of the school. You would have liked them—huge paintings of Russian, Mexican and Indian boys and girls.

We have to live by rules and laws or we would soon have trouble all of the time. It takes all of life to learn to follow the rules and not to fuss about them, I think. There are these girls and others who do not learn so quickly or never had a chance to learn them. I felt very happy that they were at beautiful Bon Air instead of locked in a dark jail. They play basket ball at the YWCA in Richmond, they make field trips to the museums and they have religious instruction. Ministers serve them and Miss Foltz. She is paid with money that comes from the churches and our own denomination supports this work.

I hope that you don't find following the rules too hard. Let us all work—mothers, fathers, teachers, ministers, and children—that we may learn to follow the good, simple ways of Christian living and help others find rules easy, too. It is a hard job and it will take us all. In the meantime it is good that such work is being done for younger people. Each month a church nearby remembers the girls of Bon Air. It is a kind of Friendly Service.

GRANDFATHER'S FAVORITE.

By JANETTE STEVENSON MURRAY.

(American Mother for 1947.)

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"My boys fight so much. What do you think causes it?" inquired Mrs. Watson of her guest, an older woman whom she had invited in for tea. "They are five and seven, you know—old enough to know better."

"Why, all young boys scuffle and tease each other. They are just like puppies."

"Yes, but our boys seem to do an unusual amount of it. The other morning they began before breakfast and kept it up, until I finally punished both before I sent them off to school. As a result, we were all in a bad humor, and I thought what a poor way it was to begin the day."

Just then Tommy appeared. His brown eyes sparkling with interest and enthusiasm, he was soon telling them about the store they were building in kindergarten. Then he brought his drum and showed their guest how he could keep time. He lingered after that, still eager to talk.

A little later, Robert, the seven-year-old, came in. He dutifully shook hands, but he seemed bashful and wandered off to the far end of the room at the first opportunity. He was soon taken up with his own interests. When urged, he played several pieces on the piano; he also answered all questions readily, but with overemphasis. Evidently, his mother was making an effort to draw him out so that he would have a share in the visit.

After both boys had gone to the yard to play, Mrs. Watson discussed Tommy's sociability and his obvious pleasure when occupying the center of the stage.

"From what I have observed, Tommy is a true extrovert," her guest remarked.

"O yes, I remember learning about that," said Mrs. Watson. "I suppose then that Robert, being just the opposite type, is an introvert. It is hard to keep him from feeling out of things—imagining that he has been slighted. My father, who lives with us, openly makes a fuss over Tommy, declaring his pride and confidence in him upon every occasion. He does not notice Robert so much."

"But doesn't Robert resent this?"

"Why, I don't know. I have tried so hard myself to be fair to both of them that I haven't thought of Grandpa's favoritism making any difference."

"I am quite sure that you are fair. Still, your father's attitude may cause some of this constant teasing and scuffling. Every boy covets his grandfather's favor. Not getting his share might make Robert jealous, so that he would want to take it out on Tommy by constantly picking on him. It might also make Robert feel inferior

SPEAKERS ANNOUNCED FOR INTERNATIONAL C. E. CONVENTION TO BE HELD IN TORONTO.

Dr. Leslie C. Sayre, Dr. James McCracken and Dr. Dicran Kassouny will be among the leading speakers at the 40th International Christian Endeavor Convention in Toronto, Ontario, Canada, July 5 to 10, according to announcement by the program committee. Youth from all United States and Canada will attend.

Dr. Sayre, who is secretary and editor of the adult division of the Missionary Education Movement of the United States and Canada, will address the Friday mass meeting when the theme will be "Build With Christ Through World Friendship."

The morning quiet hour services will be conducted by Dr. McCracken, pastor of Riverside Baptist Church, New York, formerly of McMaster University, Hamilton, Ontario.

Dr. Kassouny, who has been president of the Syria-Lebanon Christian Endeavor Union for eleven years, will be a speaker at the Sunday afternoon popular meeting. He is now taking advanced studies in medicine at the Deaconess Hospital, Milwaukee, Wis. Last summer, Dr. Kassouny was a delegate to the World's C. E. Union Conference at Bournemouth, England.

A parade with more than 10,000 delegates from Canada and the United States expected to march, has been planned for Saturday afternoon.

Arrangements are being made to have a daily question and answer radio period conducted by Dr. Daniel A. Poling. At the morning assembly periods talks on Christian Endeavor will be given by the Rev. P. Marion Simms, associate general secretary.

Speakers for evening programs at the convention who have already been announced by the program committee are Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union; the Rev. Ernest R. Bryan, general secretary of the International Society, and the Rt. Rev. C. Ritchie Bell, president of the Canadian Christian Endeavor Union.

A LETTER FROM JAPAN.

A letter to the Sunday school children of America from the Sunday school children of Hiroshima, Japan, has been released by Dr. Paul H. Vieth, who recently returned from a year's work in Japan as religious education consultant to General MacArthur's staff. The letter was released through the International Council of Religious Education. The text of the letter follows:

To the Sunday School Children of America:

To this day we have received many gifts and letters from our American friends. We, members of the Sunday school, were able to get back on our feet with your encouragement and sympathy.

Our American friends and ourselves are all branches of the Vine, One Body of Christ.

We wish to continue this friendship forever. We have been able to rebuild our church school with your sympathy and prayer. Today is our joyful dedication day. We want to express our heartfelt gratitude.

FUMIO OHNO,
Nagaregwa C. S.,
Hiroshima, Japan.

The letter was written by a Japanese girl during recent dedication ceremonies for a rebuilt church school building in Hiroshima.

Dr. Vieth is a professor of religious education at Yale University Divinity School, New Haven. He was formerly a staff member and has served as chairman of many important committees of the International Council.

TWELVE CHARACTERISTICS OF CHRISTIAN ENDEAVOR.

1. Christian Endeavor is a Christ-centered youth organization whose essential principles are: Confession of Christ, Service for Christ, Loyalty to Christ's Church, and Fellowship with Christ's people.

2. It has a dynamic name which at once declares its purpose and objective.

3. It has made an outstanding contribution through nearly seventy years of service.

4. It has maintained a wholesome tradition and has developed a great reservoir of respect and goodwill.

5. It emphasizes the covenant basis of membership, which is expressed in commitment to a common statement of Christian purpose.

6. It is a voluntary group committed to specific objectives.

7. It has universal adaptability.

8. It has a warmly evangelical program but does not neglect social emphases.

9. It is an outstanding recruiting agency for full time Christian service.

10. It employs the "learn by doing" technique.

11. It develops loyalties to the local church and denomination.

12. It develops an ecumenical outreach that is not only national but worldwide.

and cause him to become introspective."

"Yes—turn his mind in on himself and his grandfather's neglect. I'll speak to Grandpa about partiality and ask him to favor Robert for a while; we'll see if it will make any difference."

Several weeks later Mrs. Watson met her friend at a party. "You diagnosed my difficulty correctly," said the former. "You know Father is one of the kindest of men, and when I pointed out the results of his favoritism he blamed himself severely for his shortsightedness. He has used great tact in shifting the emphasis of his favor, and now Robert fairly basks in his grandfather's approval, and the boy is so happy and serene. Also, the children take more interest in each other, and their scuffling is more playful. I can see, too, that Robert is less secretive and is developing more confidence in himself."

The Christ.

Jesus had been with His disciples intimately for some time now. He felt the time had come for Him to question them about the conception which men in general, and they in particular had of His person and His mission. Thus it was, that while they were apart from the crowds, in a kind of retreat in the Northern part of the land, He asked them, "Who do men say that I am?" Their reply was illuminating and suggestive. There was a division of opinion among men as to whom He was, but they all agreed that He was a great man, one of the prophetic line, and among the greatest—John the Baptist, Elijah, Jeremiah, or some other prophet. He was no ordinary teacher or preacher.

Then turning to them again, He asked, "But who say ye that I am?" Peter, acting as Jesus said under the inspiration of the spirit of God promptly replied, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." To be sure Peter did not know all that was involved in the words, the Christ, or the Son of the living God in the sense of giving them a theological definition. But he was saying that out of their intimate association with Him, and out of the observation of Him, they felt that He was indeed God's Anointed, that He was the fulfilment of the hopes of Israel. For them at least, Jesus was God's Christ, God's Messiah.

Strangely enough Jesus charged them that they should tell no man. The time was not ripe to make a public announcement of His Messiahship. The people were not ready for it, and an announcement now would interfere with His as yet unfinished task. Furthermore they had to be instructed in the deeper and the stranger meaning of what the Messiahship really meant and demanded.

The Cross.

Hard upon their recognition of Him as the Messiah or the Christ, Jesus began to teach them that He must suffer many things and be rejected by the elders and the chief priests and scribes, and be killed, and—we must not forget these words either—that "after three days rise again." He told them plainly and openly. It was too much for Peter, and he took Jesus to task for the words and rebuked Him soundly. The idea of the Messiah suffering, the idea of God's Son being treated thus. But it was true. Indeed it was embedded in the divine plan. His saving ministry was to be effected by His suffering and by His death. Peter's words came as a subtle temptation, and Jesus promptly rebuked him. The Cross had already long ago cast its shadow across His path.

But more this principle of the denial of self was the law of discipleship. The disciple is not above his Lord. "If any man would come after me, let him deny himself, and take up his cross and follow me," said Jesus. One must turn from self as the center of life if he would be the Master's disciple. Self-denial is the first law of discipleship, whatever may be the first law of life. One trouble with much modern religion is that there is no Cross in it.

Confirmation.

The Transfiguration undoubtedly had a double significance. In the first place it deepened the faith of the disciples in their Lord and prepared them in some measure at least for what lay ahead. Moses and Elijah were names to conjure with among the people of Israel, and as representatives of the law and the prophets it gave dignity and meaning to the Transfiguration when these towering personalities appeared and conversed with the Master. Furthermore the voice that came out of cloud saying, "This is my Son, my chosen; hear ye him," had a tremendous effect. It made an indelible impression on Peter for when years later he wrote his letter to his fellow Christians in an effort to bolster their faith and to strengthen their loyalty, he referred to the voice which they heard which came from heaven when they were with Him in the holy mount. In spite of the fact that He must be humiliated, indeed, by virtue of that fact, the Father was well pleased with His Son.

The Transfiguration also strengthened the Master for the ordeal that lay ahead of Him. Moses and Elijah spoke with Him of His "decease" or His "departure" which He was about to make. We do not know what they told Him about that unknown world of the spirit about which we know so little. But they use a word that means much. It was not death as a dread or final thing, but a departure, a going out into another world and another life where personal values were conserved. As the Son of Man the Son of God must have thanked God and took courage.

The Consecration.

"And it came to pass, when the days were well-nigh come that He should be received up—there it is again in another way, received up—He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. He had put His hand to the plow and He did not look back. He had made His decision to drink the cup to the last bitter dregs and He would not be swerved from His high purpose. Jerusalem was the place where the issue would be settled, and to Jerusalem He would go. He never had courted danger nor had He presumed upon the plans of God. But when in the voluntary obedience to the Father's will, it became necessary for Him to go to the Cross, He set "His face like a flint" as one version has it, and steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem. How important and determinative moments of insight and high resolve are. For tasks in hours of insight willed can be through days of toil fulfilled. All of us need those moments of surrender and commitment to high purposes which strengthen and stead the soul in times of stress and strain and which sustain us in the hours of crisis.

DISREGARDING GOD.

I know a mother who as an idiot child. For it she gave up all society, almost everything, and devoted her whole life to it. "And now," said she, "for fourteen years I have tended it, and loved it, and it does not even know me. Oh, it is breaking my heart!" Oh, how the Lord might say this of hundreds here! Jesus comes here, and goes from one to another, asking if there is a place for Him. Oh, will not some of you take Him into your hearts?

Sermon Given on "The Church and Economic" Sunday

By REV. BERNARD V. MUNGER,
Chapel Hill, N. C.

As a spokesman for Christ in the Church, the preacher should point out the features of our society which are contrary to God's will, and which make it harder for you and me to live Christian lives. As Christians, we should all give serious consideration to those features of our society, to the end that we both understand wherein they are contrary to God's will, and have some grasp of how we are to live if we would overcome the difficulty they present to our Christian living. God grant that as we consider the relation of our faith to our economic life, we may all move in the direction of fulfilling our Christian duty!

To talk about the injustices and inequalities of our Capitalistic system would be like condemning a robber for having bad breath. We should get right at the fundamental principles undergirding the economic system called Capitalism. And, though that will take a bit of analysis which runs the risk of becoming academic, it should be worth the extra attention that it takes, for it will help us to understand the contradiction between the Capitalistic view of this world and the view of the world which is shared by Christians. You see, Capitalism really got under way when Adam Smith, and others like him, declared economics to be a science, to be the working out of natural processes. Adam Smith set forth this interesting proposition: "The natural effort of every individual to better his own condition, when suffered to exert it with freedom and security, is so powerful a principle that it is alone, and without any assistance, capable of carrying on the society to wealth and prosperity." Out of the expressions of man's natural selfishness, there would come satisfactory economic life. Why? Because this was "Natural Law" in action. Such a belief could only have been expounded successfully in an age when the predominant scientific view was that the world-processes were but the pre-determined, mechanical operations of Natural Law. So, when economics became a science it, too, proclaimed that its pronouncements were but the description of "natural" processes. Thus, the God of Capitalism is "Natural Process," and the will of the God of Capitalism is "selfishness given free expression." The end of these "processes" when unrestrained, would be the wealthy, prosperous society. Such a society, Capitalism assumes, would be a wholesome society.

Now, that would be just so much "academic theory" were it not for this point: this is an assumption that natural, selfish, fallen man can develop a wholesome society on the basis of the natural expression of his instincts, his desires, his urge to better his own conditions. That, you see, is nothing short of a downright denial of the whole Biblical point of view! The Biblical point of view is that natural, selfish, fallen man is absolutely incapable of creating a society in which justice, brotherhood, and peace prevail! The Biblical point of view is that men must be redeemed by God before they can live in obedience to God's will, and that only those who are obedient to God's will can achieve peace, brotherhood, justice, and love! Thus, from the Biblical point of view, this basic concept of Capitalism is erroneous. There is really no greater error than to declare that natural man, sinful, fallen, selfish man, can, on his own, work out that type of society which will be wholesome, just, and peaceful!

Capitalism, by insisting that its principles were "scientific" and in accordance with "Natural Law," joined readily with the other scientific views of life and insisted that the principles of morality, humanitarianism, and theology did not apply within the "scientific domain!" Thus, from that day forward, whenever the humanitarian, the moralist, or the theologian spoke critically of Capitalism and demanded a change, the answer always came back simply and dogmatically: "Would you tamper with Natural Law?" Until one of the present-day defenders of Capitalism can say: "The love-gospel, condemning all self-assertion as sin, is a false approach to the problems of life!" Remember that God sent Christ to proclaim the love-gospel in all its fullness. Then listen to this true child of a capitalistic economy say, in effect, God just doesn't have the true approach to the problem of life! I would have you hold on to those facts about our economic system, for not to know its principles for what they are, is not to understand why the Christian understanding of life is considered completely irrelevant to our economic life, and why the role of religion, throughout the days of Capitalism's orgy, was considered an entirely private and interior role, having nothing really compelling to say to this whole area of living!

Put into common oft-repeated words, this means that "business is business" is the insistence of Capitalism. "Business is business," and nothing else. Business is business, and it operates according to its own "natural" laws! Let the moralist, the theologian, the humanitarian, and the reformer rave about the will of God. That is for private life! All talk about selflessness, about justice, about love, and about cooperation is talk about irrelevancies. Business is business, and it thrives on selfishness and competition.

That should help us understand why the basic questions in our economic relations have not been "is it just, is it fair, is it productive of community, is it conducive to the good life for all?" Rather, there has been but one question: "Does it pay?" God forgive us Christians who have even agreed with these blasphemers of God and allowed them to convince us that questions of justice, community welfare, and God's will as revealed in Christ, were always to be conditioned by the prior question: "Does it pay?" God forgive us for allowing the very principles of Christian behaviour to be mocked!

God, however, is not mocked. We've already paid a high price for our attention to the natural and the material, and our neglect of the spiritual! And it looks as if we'll continue to pay. For God's judgment which has been upon us in depression, and sufferings, and wars, in the past, is now upon us in the haunting spectre of Communism. This Communism which now makes us afraid and despairing, is God's judgment upon us. And oh, the irony of such judgment. For it was Capitalism which gave birth to the very ideas which gained a new interpretation in Communism. Where, for instance, did Communism get the idea of economics as the primary and motivating cause of all human history, if not from the Capitalistic system which claimed in word and deed, that the primary purpose

The Orphanage

The big tractor balked last week. And it cost $300 to get her started again.

Fish for dinner were enjoyed very much last week. Fish are not produced on the farm, so they were a real treat.

Miss Hattie Brakefield is back after spending a few days in the Alamance General Hospital.

Easter dresses are beginning to arrive, and the Easter parade for the girls and boys looks very promising.

The recent cold snap played havoc with eight acres of wheat which, up until that time, promised to bring in a big crop.

Mr. Less Wagoner took one of the boys to McPherson's Hospital in Durham last week. He was suffering with a sinus infection.

The dairyman reports that very soon now the milk production will pick up quite a bit. Springtime has something to do with it.

A big need: China, the hotel kind which doesn't break easily, for two buildings. The Young Adult Class of the Burlington church is planning to provide it for the Baby Home.

Two children, who underwent very serious eye operations several months ago, were carried back to Dr. McPherson's Hospital in Durham for a check-up last week. Mr. Wagoner says the eyes of both were found to be in excellent condition.

Three girls from the orphanage are in the senior class of high school this year. The members are planning a trip to Washington soon to see the sights. The minimum cost is $20. Wouldn't you like to send one of these girls?

In Memoriam

HOLLAND.

In loving memory of Mrs. Mary Rawles Holland who was called to her heavenly home December 15, 1948, we, the members of the Missionary Society of Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church, wish to honor her memory and express our appreciation for her faithful life.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to the will of our Heavenly Father who doeth all things well.
2. That in her death, we have lost a loyal and devoted member.
3. That we extend to her loved ones our sincere and heartfelt sympathy and pray God's blessing upon them.
4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the Christian Sun for publication, one sent to the family, and a copy be entered on the records of our society.

Mrs. W. JOHN NORFLEET,
Mrs. LUTHER GRICE.

REDD.

On January 2, 1949, God in His infinite wisdom and great love called from our midst our oldest member, Mrs. Mollie Redd. She had been a member of Bethlehem Christian Church, Nansemond County, for seventy-six years. She was a good neighbor, a devoted mother and always untiring in her efforts to serve those she loved.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That this church has lost a beloved member for whom we mourn.
2. That we extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and etrnest prayers.
3. That God's blessings may fall upon their sad hearts and give them comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, one placed on our church records, and one sent to the Christian Sun for publication.

Mrs. J. E. HARRIS,
Mrs. TOM POOLE,
Mrs. ANNIE R. SMITH,

JONES.

Mr. Fleming B. Jones passed away at his home near Nathalie, Va., on December 21, 1948, at the age of 63. He was a member of Liberty Christian Church.

Mr. Jones married Miss Mattie Guill, and his death occurred on their 38th wedding anniversary. He is survived by his wife; three daughters, Mrs. Elsie Jones, Mrs. Anne Silby and Mrs. Henry Frank of Rice, Va.; four sons, Hersey, Herman, Ernest and Lawrence; and four grandchildren.

The funeral was conducted at Liberty Christian Church by the pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes and assisted by Rev. O. D. Burnette. The burial was in the church cemetery.

May the Father God strengthen the family in this and all times of need.

JUDKINS.

Josephus C. Judkins, 71, died March 15, 1949, at his home at 300 York Street, Suffolk, Va. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Georgia Pierce Judkins; a daughter, Mrs. R. E. Johnson of Nansemond County; four sons, L. J. of Martinsville; L. T., J. E. and J. T. of Suffolk; a sister, Mrs. Minnie Spivey of Bethel, N. C.; and six grandchildren.

His was the kind of life that exalts the Christian home, the dignity and beauty of honest, faithful work, and the worship of God in the church Sunday after Sunday. Of his kind it can be said: "They are the salt of the earth."

The funeral was conducted by his pastor, assisted by the Rev. E. D. Poe, interim pastor of the First Baptist Church of Suffolk. The attendance was large and the flowers beautiful. May God's divine blessings be upon the bereft.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor.

HOLLAND.

Mrs. James L. Holland, 79, died February 26, 1949, at her home, 425 Jackson Street, Suffolk, Va., after a long illness. Mrs. Holland is survived by her husband and five daughters: Mrs. H. A. Spivey, Petersburg, Va., Mrs. C. B. Thompson, Nansemond Co., Mrs. Oscar Beaton and Mrs. Ervin C. Wilkins of Suffolk, and Mrs. J. H. Moore of Portsmouth, Va.; five sons: J. E. Holland of Hopewell, S. H. Holland of Cape Charles, Linwood Holland of Norfolk, Paul and Godwin Holland of Suffolk; a brother, John Godwin of Windsor; 25 grandchildren and 12 great-grandchildren.

Mrs. Holland was well known for her Christian life and devotion to her large family. She was a member of the First Baptist Church of Suffolk, and mother of the superintendent of the Primary Department of the Suffolk Christian Church Sunday School, Mrs. Ervin C. Wilkins. The funeral services were conducted by the writer, assisted by Rev. E. D. Poe, interim pastor of the First Baptist Church of Suffolk. A very large congregation of friends of the family attended the funeral. May our gracious heavenly Father comfort the bereaved.

WEIGHED IN THE BALANCES.

of man was to acquire wealth and prosperity? Would Communism have dared declare that morality and religion have nothing to say to economics, if Capitalism had not already declared that and got away with it? Would Communism have dared declare that the selfishness of a class was blessed by Natural Law, had not Capitalism already declared the selfishness of men to be so blessed? Would Communism have ever dared declared that its principles were beyond criticism by moralists, theologians and humanitarians, had Capitalism not already declared an economic system "scientific" and thus, impervious to criticism? Communism, in large part, is but a contrasting expression of the same principles which underly Capitalism. Which is why some of the most penetrating Christian thinkers of this generation reject both Capitalism and Communism, because they have both sprung from the same source of error, and are both destructive of personality and community! Capitalism and Communism are twin errors, because they both deny the need for God's redemptive activity in Christ, and put their trust in "natural man" as he follows the processes of "Natural Law." That is why the Amsterdam Assembly of the World Council of Churches could say: "The Christian Churches should reject the ideologies of both Communism and Capitalism, and should seek to draw men away from the false assumption that these extremes are the only alternatives." So spake many Christian leaders—yet, so great has been the power of Capitalistic propaganda over us, that there are many who call themselves Christians who today suspect the "loyalty" of those who in the name of Christ criticize an a-moral and anti-Christian system. It is to such a pass that we have come!

II.

But, what then shall we say to these things? Is there something constructive that we can say, and do? I think so. I would give you these brief suggestions, and hope that you apply them on your own, as you seek to bear Christian witness in this area of life.

We should be moved first to humble penitence because of our share in continuing this lie that there is a whole area of life which can declare its independence of God and His will! Would God that each and every one of us were truly sorry for the way we have contributed, knowingly or un-knowingly, to the idea that business is business, and that selfishness makes for good economics.

Secondly, we should be moved to thanksgiving to God Who in His mercy has greatly mitigated the evil of capitalism. Only the mercy of God has made it possible that we should even think Capitalism sufferable. He gave us such a world of abundance that even our exploiting selfishness has been unable to deplete its great resources. In spite of our selfishness which is against His will, our wastefulness, and our downright denial of all ideas of stewardship, His world can still supply our extravagance.

But we should also be thankful that God, in His mercy, has so strengthened our humanitarianism, our morality, and our religion that we have been able to act in ways which have greatly mitigated the evil of capitalism. That is something we Christians have been so slow to declare, and give thanks for. Justice, mercy, social concern, humanitarianism, and philanthropy have all mitigated the evils of capitalism. And, all these things come from God. Let thanks be given then, that even a system based upon natural selfishness could not keep His ways from expressing themselves.

Still further, we should thank God that He has inspired in this country such a love for democracy, that our country has always been at least as much a democracy, as it was a capitalistic country. For it has been that which has made it possible for us to mitigate the evils of capitalism through protective legislation. Therein lies not only a cause for our thanksgiving, but our opportunity for further nation-wide progress.

Finally, let us stand obedient before God who has given us so much guidance in Book and Saving Lord. Let us confess with sincerity that Jesus and the New Testament have more to speak to us about the meaning of life and about behavior in life, than we can find any where else. Would God, that we who call ourselves Christians were convinced that Jesus' teachings must be taken into account by Christians, in all areas of life. Whether it pays or not! Would God that you and I would go forth into tomorrow, committed to such a living expression of God's will that those who see us would get an exhibition of how "God's redeemed" live, and become convinced that only the redeemed of God can live in community, in justice, and in peace! . . . That is our calling, yours and mine. And one of the hymns which puts it simply, and convincingly, is this prayer-hymn of dedication:

Forth in Thy Name, O Lord, I go,
My daily labor to pursue,
Thee, only Thee, resolved to know,
In all I think, or speak, or do!
Amen.

There can be no true recovery from war until people regain their dignity as human beings. Food, clothing and material aids are of little use unless people have the desire and the will to live.

Report of African Itinerary

By JOHN A. RUELING

After our few days on the hot desert coast where so many Africans from the interior have to go to work, Dr. McKeith and I have come up into the highlands where the bulk of our work is. It is now the rainy, or summer season. Many of the days are sunny, too much so for comfort, but at times the rain comes down for long periods of time in a fine drizzle, and at times in pouring torrents. It really is an experience to drive along, as we have several times, with rain coming down so hard that they you can hardly see more than a hundred feet ahead and over roads that tax not only the frame of the sturdiest truck but the frames of the passengers as well. A few days ago, just at dusk, an unexpected lake in the road wet the ignition of Rev. Samuel Coles' International ton truck that we were traveling in and we stalled. Fortunately there was a lull of about ten minutes in the pouring rain, and we were able to get going again, much to our relief, as we were in the middle of a scrub forest perhaps ten miles from even the most primitive native dwelling, thirty miles from a country trading post, and 125 miles from a garage.

During the past few days we have visited a number of "outstations" and "centros." A "centro" is a place where an ordained pastor is located, with a large school, and frequently a nurse. To each centro are attached a number of outstations or villages, each with its village leader. Each village has a school, and perhaps children to go on into the centros where they live in "boarding departments," that is, in huts they build themselves and eating food they raise themselves, all under the supervision of the elders of the village.

Elende Mission Station, where Miss Mary Hurlbut, Rev. and Mrs. Carl Dille and Dr. and Mrs. Henry McDowell are located, serves an area as big as several New England states, with five centros, 384 outstations, 6,000 full church members, 5,000 catechumens, an uncounted number of school children. The Africans themselves carry the whole burden, except for the training work done at the central station. Of course the missionary staff gets out into the centros and villages as much as possible, but with such a large number it is impossible to visit many in the course of a year.

It has been our privilege to visit a number of centros and villages in both the Elende area and in the Galangue area where Rev. and Mrs. Sam Coles are the only missionaries. We have never failed to get a most enthusiastic reception. The people of the village frequently spend days cutting a road through the bush so that we can get to them for an hour's call. As we approach we find them lining the road on both sides, singing songs of welcome and pelting the car with leaves and flowers. They show us their villages with pride, singing to us beautifully, and listen carefully to what we have to say. These Christian villages really show in a remarkable way what the Church can do for Africans, and, more important, what they can do for themselves when shown how.

RICHMOND, VA., THURSDAY MARCH 31, 1949.

NUMBER 13.

NORTH CAROLINIAN HEADS YALE DIVINITY SCHOOL.

The Christian Sun congratulates Liston Pope on his appointment as Dean of the Yale Divinity School. Dr. Pope is on leave now studying social relations in Liberia and South Africa, but will return at the end of this semester to assume his new duties. He follows two great Deans: Charles R. Brown and Luther A. Weigle.

Dr. Pope is a sociologist as well as a minister. A native of Thomasville, North Carolina, he attended Duke University where he received his Bachelor of Arts degree in 1929 and his Bachelor of Divinity degree in 1932. He and the Editor of The Christian Sun were classmates at Duke.

He has been visiting speaker for endowed lectures at eight other colleges and seminaries including the Hebrew Union College in Cincinnati and received nine honorary degrees.

He was director and assistant pastor of Church at High Point, 1932 to 1935, and then went to Hartford, Connecticut, to Humphrey St. Church from 1935 to 1938. He served as assistant professor of social ethics on the Yale University from 1938 to 1944 and as associate professor from 1944 to 1947. In 1947 he was appointed Stark Professor of Social Ethics.

In 1940 he received the John Addison Porter Prize for his doctoral thesis on the relation of the mills to the southern community. This thesis was later expanded into a book, "Millhands and Preachers," and is still widely read by both sociologists and clergymen.

From 1944 to 1948 he was editor of "Social Action," the monthly magazine of the Council for Social Action of the Congregational Christian Church, and he was chairman of the Industrial Relations Division of the Federal Council of Churches from 1945 to 1946. He has been active in promoting the merger with the Evangelical and Reformed Church.

He is married to the former Miss Bennie Howell of Durham, North Carolina. They have two children.

Among Yale graduates representing the Southern Convention are: D. J. Bowden, H. G. Councill, Jr., A. Lanson Granger, H. S. Hardcastle, R. L. Jackson, F. C. Lester, W. T. Scott and J. H. Smith.

Mr. Millard Jackson of Winston-Salem, father of Helen Jackson, passed away on March 18. The funeral was held in the Congregational Christian Church of Winston-Salem, and from there the body was sent to Oblong, Illinois, Mr. Jackson's home. Rev. W. J. Andes, pastor of the Winston-Salem Church, drove the family of Mr. Jackson's to Oblong, where burial services were held. Helen Jackson is a student at Elon and a very active officer in the Convention Pilgrim Fellowship.

Dr. Daniel A. Poling, president and editor of The Christian Herald, has been invited to visit Japan by General Douglas MacArthur and Colonel Roy Parker, Senior Chaplain of the United States Army in Japan. He is leaving about April 1 for an extended tour through Japan and through South Korea. As a member of the President's Committee on Religion and Welfare in the Armed Forces, Dr. Poling will devote most of his time gathering information for this group. During his visit, he will conduct pre-Easter conferences with many of the resident chaplains. He will also be the speaker at the Easter sunrise service in Tokyo. Dr. Poling, who has been president of the World's Christian Endeavor Union for over twenty years, will also visit Christian Endeavor leaders in Korea and Japan.

Chicago Theological Seminary conferred the degree of Doctor of Divinity upon Dr. Hiroshi Hatanaka during Ministers' Week. In the citation, President A. C. McGiffert said: "Hiroshi Hatanaka, President of Kobe College; world traveler; humble, stouthearted, independent, able leader in the higher and hopefuller education in your native Japan; symbolizing in your person the blessings of the tie that binds hearts in Christian love even when war snaps the ties that should bind the nations; minister of the gospel of Jesus Christ who is our peace, who made both one and broke down the middle wall of partition; on recommendation of the Administrative Council and by the authority of the Board of Directors of The Chicago Theological Seminary, I confer upon you the degree of Doctor of Divinity, honoris causa."

UNION CHURCH OF NORTH MIAMI, FLORIDA.

Since Dr. V. T. Crawford was formerly a pastor in the Southern Convention, I am glad to give the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN a brief account of his work in Union Church of North Miami. Dr. Crawford became pastor here on November 3, 1946. Since that time the active membership has doubled, and the attendance at both Sunday school and church services have increased five hundred per cent. A mid-week prayer meeting has been organized, and for the past sixteen months the church has had Sunday evening services.

The church building has been improved and beautified in various ways. A lovely set of chimes has been installed together with an efficient public address system. The old parsonage has been made over into Sunday school rooms. With new piano and new kitchen equipment, the old parsonage now fills a much-needed place for social meetings, young people's and women's work. A lovely new parsonage has been erected, and is now occupied by the pastor and his family. Truly a miracle has been wrought at North Miami!

NEW RELIGIOUS FILM.

An important milestone in religious cinematic history was made with the showing of "I Am With You," a religious motion picture, by a major New York theatre. A feature length film produced under the auspices of the Church of Sweden, "I Am With You" is the first church picture to be accorded this distinction.

Widespread distribution plans include the showing of the film in tens of thousands of churches throughout the country where it will be seen by millions of churchgoers. The Religious Film Association will distribute the picture.

Attempts to show religious films commercially heretofore have met with little acceptance. Even when the picture compared technically with the Hollywood product, exhibitors considered church films a poor boxoffice risk. But "I Am With You" broke the barrier. The general excellence of production values and the outstanding photography along with the dramatic story line convinced commercial management that people would want to see it.

THE CHRISTIAN SUN SITUATION.

As president of the Convention I feel it my duty to tell THE SUN family the serious situation which faces us in the matter of our church paper. It is costing more to publish it—much more than we are receiving from all sources. The Board of Publications, Rev. W. E. Wisseman, D. D., chairman, and his fellow members would like to know what our entire Southern Convention constituency wishes us to do in this matter. We cannot keep running up a deficit. As a matter of fact the Board of Publications at a former meeting of the Board of Directors called our attention to the situation and were just about ready to recommend that we discontinue publishing it. After much discussion pro and con it was decided to carry on until the April meeting of the Board. That meeting has been officially called for April 19 and 20 at Elon. This situation is brought about by increase in the price of paper, and other printing costs, and by a lack of subscriptions.

Something is about to happen to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. Something has to be done about it. Increasing the subscription price to $3.00 a year will be necessary unless we get new or additional sources of revenue, and even then we will need new subscriptions and prompt renewals at the new rate. At the present time subsidies to help finance THE CHRISTIAN SUN are being paid as follows: Mission Board, $1,000; Orphanage, $900; Elon College, $900; Convention Fund, $900, and the Board of Christian Education, $200—a total of $3,900. There are in the neighborhood of 1,800 paying subscribers, which at $2.00 a year amount to $3,600. This makes a total of about $7,400. At the present time costs are at the rate of $8,240 a year per 2,000 copies plus some miscellaneous expenses like cuts and stereotypes, etc. This gives us a mounting deficit of around $1,000 a year.

What shall we do? Do the members of our churches want THE SUN continued? Are they willing to have the price increased to $3.00 a year that we may cease going in the red? Even at that price we must maintain a list of at least 1,800 in order to have a margin. Send your replies immediately to Dr. W. E. Wisseman, 315 N. Edgeworth St., Greensboro, N. C., please!

LONG MISSIONARY CAREER ENDS.

Rev. J. Riggs Brewster for thirty-five years a Congregational Christian missionary in the Near East under the American Board died March 17 in the Baker Memorial Hospital, Boston. Mr. Brewster was flown to Boston from Greece following a serious operation.

A member of the famous missionary family of Riggs, distinguished for its languagistic abilities, Mr. Brewster spoke Greek like a native son. He was a Christian educator as well as a church worker and for a time was Mission treasurer with headquarters in Athens. A living example of ecumenicity, Mr. Brewster had a close acquaintance with the Greek Orthodox Churches and often shared in their services. His knowledge of the Zoe, or new life movement, in the Greek Orthodox Church resulted in an invitation from Bishop Gwynne to visit Cairo, Egypt and speak on this movement.

From 1915 to 1945 he was located in Greece, first at Thessaloniki and later at Athens. He was in America for a period of five years (1940-45) and during this time he taught at Thorsby Institute, Thorsby, Alabama, and worked in the Treasury Department of the American Board in Boston, Mass.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.

2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.

3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.

4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.

5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

A PROPHETIC HOUR.

The miracle of radio, technical proficiency, the kindled imagination, international and inter-faith co-operation, made "One Great Hour" a glorious reality. The full results have not yet been tabulated, but widespread and generous response is assured. Redemptive forces are being liberated. We are sharing the immeasurable opportunity of working for the Kingdom. We are not simply marking time. In the spirit of the Master we are helping to wash the dusty, weary feet of the world and feed the undernourished multitudes. We trust that the goal of ten million dollars will be reached.

President Truman's "bold new program for making the benefits of our scientific advances and industrial progress available for the improvement and growth of undeveloped areas" is but a reminder and an amplification of our established missionary program. It is thrilling to realize how much is being done with improved seeds, fertilizers, methods of cultivation, stock breeding; how much with new weapons against disease; how much with visual education and literacy programs; how much with evangelism and social service. We are writing a glorious chapter in the modern Acts of the Apostles. "One Great Hour" means countless good hours. Now begins One Great Effort after "One Great Hour."

WOMEN MINISTERS.

Both Congregational and Christian Churches have left the door open for women ministers. Whereas the Presbyterians refuse ordination to women and Methodists grant only local license, in 1947 there were 233 Congregational Christian women with ministerial standing. And the list continues to grow. It is gratifying to note the number and calibre of young women now entering our ministerial ranks. Here are a few examples, selected from wide reading:

Miss Miriam J. Higgins went to Lemington, Maine in 1946 as assistant minister of the Regional Parish. She had graduated from the Boston University School of Religious Education in 1927. She was ordained to the Christian ministry on May 30, 1948. Miss Higgins attended the Deering Pastors' School last summer. Frances Ross Kelly was ordained as minister and teacher of the Sixth Street Church of Auburn, Maine, on Sunday, November 28, 1948.

Miss Louise J. Brown received a call to serve the Olive Hill Church in Kansas immediately after her graduation from Union Theological Seminary. She began serving as a full-time minister. An ecclesiastical council was called by the Western Association last September to examine her for ordination. Finding Miss Brown a worthy candidate, the council proceeded with the ordination.

Miss Roberta Leslie, formerly an officer in Massachusetts Pilgrim Fellowship and also secretary to the State Secretary of Woman's Work in the state office, was ordained as a Congregational Christian minister at Valley City, North Dakota, on September 24. After leaving Massachusetts, Miss Leslie studied at Schauffler College and at Chicago Theological Seminary.

Religious groups have taken far more seriously Paul's dictum that "women should keep silence in church" than his courageous declaration that "in Christ there is neither male nor female." Sense is more important than sex in the ministry. Genius is more important than gender to the Galileean. It is a dangerous thing to place any arbitrary limit on the leadership of the Holy Spirit.

We are instructed to pray that God will send forth laborers into his vineyard. If God sends them forth, men or women, we need have no fear. To women as well as men the spirit saith, "I have set before thee an open door whom no man can shut." God speed to women ministers!

CONGREGATIONAL MINISTER MEMORIALIZED.

Anthony Mark Wallock made religious history at Lawton, Oklahoma. He served as the pastor of the Congregational Church which has a membership of 322, but he found a nationwide pulpit in the Wichita Mountain Pageant. Mr. Wallock, who had been told by his doctors that he would "not live a year" some 20 years ago, was the founder and motivating genius of a pageant which has now been filmed by Hallmark Productions. He nursed it during its infancy, wrote its annual theme for 24 years, and brought it into the national spotlight before dying last year on the day after Christmas. "The Lawton Story," the name of the film, might well have been "The Wallock Story." Here was a minister of a small church in a small town, but he had a vivid imagination and a great faith. Now Lawton, like Nazareth, has become known to thousands because of its association with Christ.

The new film, which took a year to produce and cost more than $2,500,000, has a cast of 3,000, most of whom are residents of Lawton and nearby communities. For example, Jesus is played by a bank teller, Mary Magdalene by a school teacher. The pageant has been held in Holy City, near Lawton, for 24 years. Its setting, in the rugged beauty of the Wichitas, is the only permanent replica of ancient Jerusalem ever built. Federal funds paid for the Holy City in 1935. This government grant was the only time in history that the United States has financed a religious service. Only because the pageant is entirely non-sectarian was the grant made at the time.

Each month more than 50,000 persons visit the Holy

City to see its buildings. They include the Garden of Gethsemane, the Rock of Ages, The Tomb, the Walls of Jericho, the walls and gateway of Jerusalem and other Biblical scenes.

Last year more than 350,000 persons sat on the hillside facing the Holy City to see the six-hour pageant of the life of the Saviour presented in 50 tableaux. At sunrise, the Ascension scene marks the end of the service.

The world premiere is being held this week simultaneously in the two theatres in Lawton. All proceeds from the sale of tickets will be donated to the Wichita Mountain Easter Sunrise Service Association, sponsor of the pageant. In this way the $50,000 expected to be raised will go toward perpetuation of the annual Easter service.

After its world premiere at Lawton, "The Lawton Story" will be shown in Atlanta, Oklahoma City, Dallas and Cincinnati. Later it will open in sixteen other cities of the nation. Plans call for eventual worldwide distribution.

"The Lawton Story" may be the first of a cycle of films with religious themes. However, it will be the first film in many years that has a Protestant minister as its principal character and the only color film ever distributed of the famed Wichita Mountain Pageant.

Healing By the Roadside

By ELSIE T. CULVER.

I'm writing this from the little town of Nangamangalam, a dozen miles or so from Vellore, South India. I am sitting on one of the side seats of the Vellore Christian Medical College road-ambulance, drawn up in the shade of a great banyan tree, with my typewriter on my lap.

The "ambulance" is really something of an oversized station wagon, transformed into a traveling hospital equipped for anything short of a major operation. The front door is open and from the front seat Dr. Solomon Ponniah, deputy medical superintendent of the Hospital, is interviewing and prescribing for the patients who crowd about the bus. A prescription is more than likely to be a pink "chit" to the two nurses who are giving injections for leprosy from the back of the vehicle. For leprosy is common in this part of India, and since there are no segregation laws, it is on the increase. One of Vellore's most urgent plans is for a leprosarium where active cases can have at least voluntary segregation to keep them from infecting whole families in the crowded one-room huts where most of these people live.

Sometimes the prescription is for some salve, which the dispenser hands out, wrapped in a sheet torn from Newsweek. Newsweek is distributed free to a large overseas list, including several of the hospital staff, and its slick surface is the best available substitute for a medically sterile ointment jar! At our first stop, one of those who got some ointment was a woman who four days ago was removing a pot of boiling meal from the fire when it broke in her hands, scalding her foot terribly. Her husband carried her here, two miles on his back, to have the foot dressed and to receive a little extra supply of ointment. I helped support her foot while the bandage was being applied, and felt the grip of her hand, tense with the pain of having the foot as much as touched.

"Surely she should be in the hospital," I said privately to Dr. Ponniah. He was patient with my newness in India. "The share of the hospital budget for my patients provides for fifty," he explained, "and each department of the hospital feels the same need for taking in one more and one more. This morning I had 56 patients, so the food and care that was scarcely adequate for 50 must already be stretched. And who knows what other serious cases we may find waiting for us at the next stop!"

Sure enough, at the very next halt, there was a man with a tumor on his left side the size of a man's fist, and the doctor arranged with him to come in immediately, to have it removed.

There is always a goodly percentage of children. Today most of them seem to have bad colds or infected ears. There have been a few with bad eyes. One feels sorriest, perhaps, for those with leprosy, many of their little faces already showing the leonine appearance that gives the disease its name. Actually, Dr. Ponniah tells me, leprosy in most of these children can be arrested with aid of the new drugs—once Vellore gets the new sanitarium where they can be isolated and receive their injections with the necessary regularity.

Many people believe this roadside service is one of the most important which Vellore offers, bringing as it does first-rate medical skill to those so isolated that they could not possibly walk the long distance to any hospital or reputable doctor, and so poor that they could not possibly pay for the treatments they receive. There is a box where those who are able to pay are supposed to deposit what they can afford, but few can spare much of anything.

Twice a week the ambulance takes to the road, covering two different circle routes, so that a great number of villages receive calls once a week. The car, with a minimum medical staff of a doctor, two nurses and a dispenser, leaves the hospital early in the morning, with a stock of simple medicines, ointments and hypos. Third and fourth year nurses take turns at this roadside service. The driver announces arrival of the ambulance at appointed spots by a loud honking of the horn, and from the shelter of trees and ditches and occasional houses, the patients come hurrying from every direction.

The first one to greet them is not the medical officer but the evangelist, who always travels with each team. They gather in a circle around him by the roadside, or sit in an attentive group on the hill, while he tells them the Gospel story, prays and distributes picture cards and Gospels, in the languages of the people, to those who can read. Then, while the medical staff works, he answers questions and talks with individuals. Sometimes he gets a group of the children together and tells them a favorite Bible story.

When we drew up to this place, a beautiful spot with rolling hills and abundant shade, Evangelist Walter, who is with us today, asked if I would like to visit a chapel on the top of the hill. From the road we could just see the three white crosses, spaced across the front of its roof, silhouetted against the sky. Following his talk to the people, one of the nurses was to give a short lesson in public hygiene, and while she did so, Evangelist Walter and I walked up the long flight of stone steps that led to the top of the mountain. We could not see the church at all from the steps, but presently we came out on a high, level plateau, in the center of which was set a charming little chapel. It was Buddhist in architecture, but in its rather elaborate decorative design appeared over and over again various Christian symbols, particularly the fish of the early Church (legend has it that the Christian Church in South India was founded by St. Thomas) and above all, the cross. Inside there were no furnishings, so the door could stand

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Two hundred and two delegates from twenty-one churches—young people I mean—attended the spring rally of the Eastern Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship at Liberty Spring Church this afternoon (March 27), and took part in one of the best planned programs their organization has had in a good while. Jack Byrd, of Cypress Chapel, presided with dignity, and a spirit of gentleness and consecration. The young people of the Southampton Church led a lovely worship service. George Poole of Portsmouth and Hon. Mills E. Godwin, Jr., both made excellent addresses. Margaret Taylor read the minutes of the former meeting, called the roll and checked in the 202 delegates from the twenty-one churches. John Truitt reported dues received from ten churches making a total in treasury of $103.00. The offering for the afternoon was $42.22. But what pleased everyone so much was the four excellent reports by the young people themselves on the work of the Pilgrim Fellowship. Anne Johnson, of Holland, spoke concerning the work being done both for foreign and home mission work; Hugh White, Jr., also of Holland, made an excellent talk on the work of the interdenominational committee; Harry Lee Weaver, of Holy Neck talked on Social Action and cited interesting examples wherein the spirit of brotherhood was set forth; and Audrey Mae Duling, of Newport News, told about the youth program in personal devotions and prayer. The beautiful auditorium of the Liberty Spring Church was practically filled with these young people, and the few elders present were enthusiastic over the spirit, the preparation, and the presentation of the program. God bless our young people.

I have made the above report all too brief but I was anxious to remark that one of Eastern Virginia's great and good laymen—John A. Williams, of our Franklin (Va.) Church—died last week. His was a loyalty unquestioned coupled with a sound wisdom and business judgment that made him a most valuable churchman. A former pastor, Supt. Wm. T. Scott, conducted the funeral in the Franklin Church, assisted by Dr. L. E. Smith, president of Elon, and the Rev. Randolph Gregory, of the Franklin Baptist Church. John A. Williams loved his home, his church, and his business—he was vice-president of Camp Manufacturing Company. He served for many years on the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, and was loyally back of the work of his church both local and Convention-wide. Stronger and finer will our church become when we develop more such laymen as leaders.

Those who attended the final rites more than filled the church, and the floral tributes were beautiful. May God comfort and bless his loved ones left behind, and may they be comforted in the triumphant life which he lived.

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

American Board Mission,
Shaowu, Fukien, China,
March 10, 1949.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Tomorrow I am off on a two-week visit to the churches of the Kienning Taining district, but before I go, let me drop a line to our friends.

During the past month I have done a good bit of traveling on foot and on my newly purchased motor bike. I was able to buy a vehicle from a sea captain last summer in Foochow and it surely makes traveling easier. Last Sunday I made a trip to Kuandze (20 miles northwest of Shaowu) in less than two hours. It requires one day on foot.

The Kuandze church, once a thriving institution, has now been reduced to a few faithful members. The church building was wrecked by the Communists and have rebuilt. The Roman Catholics have done extensive building there and are quite strong. Although several letters have come from former Christians requesting the Synod to send a minister to them, I suspected that the number of the faithful was few indeed.

The first Sunday in March, Mr. Chang Wen Wei (a lay worker) and I went to conduct a service of worship and to meet the Christians. He, not having a vehicle, walked the day before through a driving rain. Sunday was rainy, too, and the road was rough. Fukien Province does not have a rock crushing machine so it is all done by hand. As a result, the rocks used to make the road are often about the size of one's fist. It's extremely hard on tires and very rough.

I was quite surprised when over fifty people came to Mr. Kao's home for the worship service. There have been no regular services there for over five years. A number of were young people. I preached from the text "You are witnesses of these things" (Luke 24:48). I drew a parallel between this group and the early Christian disciples. The apostles, with all their faults and weaknesses, were selected by Jesus to be his witnesses. The group was small and the world was evil; but they were the only witnesses he had. If they had not witnessed, the church would never have been born. Even so, this group of Kuandze Christians are his witnesses and must not fail him. It is the responsibility of laymen to witness by their words and deeds to the end that this small group may grow and become a force in bringing His Kingdom to pass here in a divided and suffering China.

After the worship service, we held a business meeting. Several of the members made short talks pleading with us to send them a minister. We told them of the shortage of ministers and that it was impossible to meet with that request, but that in the future, on the first Sunday of every month, one of us from Shaowu would go to Kuandze to conduct a worship service and to visit people in the community. The church people promised to help with his travel and provide entertainment. A young man was picked out to organize a young people's society.

Following the service we were invited to dinner by the district magistrate, Mr. Fu, and we met the town notables. Both the magistrate and his wife are Christians, graduates of our Christian schools. They have promised to help the infant church.

Following the service, two attractive young women, teachers in the local public school, came up to say that they would like to attend theological seminary next fall if it is possible so they can help the church in the future. We hope to be able to send them to the Union Theological School in Foochow.

That evening, as I rode home and mused about the events of the day, I truly marvelled at the mysterious way God works in the hearts of men and I thanked Him for keeping alive the

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

PROGRAM AT ELON COLLEGE PROGRESSES.

Some months ago the Board of Trustees projected a plan of expansion and progress for the college. The program includes improved and additional equipment for the college. The first unit of expansion was the new power house which has been completed and paid for at a cost of $132,250.80. This provides equipment for generating sufficient power to run the college in the event of the disruption of Duke Power Company coming on the campus from any cause whatsoever. This provision required an additional expenditure of $2,500.00.

The next unit on our program to be undertaken is the gymnasium. The readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will recall that when the dining room was burned some years ago the girls' gymnasium, which was on the second floor of the dining room building, was likewise destroyed. Since then facilities for physical education at Elon College have been seriously curtailed. The new gymnasium will provide ample facilities for all kinds and types of physical education that may be conducted "inside." Naturally, the faculty, student body, alumni, and all who know Elon College are anxious for the erection of the proposed gymnasium.

Outside dimensions of the building are 137 feet wide, 186 feet long, with 24 feet clearance for the basketball court. In addition, there will be class rooms, broadcasting and press rooms, rest rooms, and a sufficient number of shower facilities. It will seat 4,200 for basketball games. The buildings will be of brick and slag construction—strictly fireproof. Estimated cost is $200,000.00. At present Jimmy Darden, Alumni Secretary, has received more than $45,000 in cash and an additional $40,000 in pledges. This is encouraging but leaves us a long way to go. We want our friends everywhere to be concerned for the success of this undertaking and if they will put their shoulders to the wheel and a part of their purses in the treasury, we shall have no difficulty.

The Board of Trustees directed that the college should serve as its own contractor, employ a foreman, sub let such work as the foreman, architect, and college authorities deemed wise and do the remainder under the direction of the foreman. Mr. N. Q. Hanner, Greensboro, N. C., an experienced engineer and builder, has been employed as foreman. He began Wednesday, March 23, at 8:00 A. M. and will remain on the job until the building is completed. He will serve under the direction of the architect, L. M. Kearns, Greensboro, N. C. The contract for laying the brick and slag block has been let to Mr. Worth Bryan, Burlington, N. C. Mr. Bryan is a mature man of long experience in the building business and will do us a good job.

This is the story. It is our hope and prayer that our friends, the friends of Elon College, will not forget us in this historical undertaking for our college. We hope to complete the building by early fall and with your generous gifts we shall be able to open the building with all bills paid. We know that you will be glad to give your cooperation and assistance.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Did you ever have a difficult task to perform and the more you thought of this task the more you were convinced that you could not do it? You knew that you simply could not do it alone but for your encouragement a great host of friends had urged you to undertake the task and assured you of their help and full support. Relying upon their pledges and encouraged by their assurances you launched out to do the job but alas, the day came when you felt the need of assistance from your friends more than ever. The day began without any assistance in sight and the day ended without one whisper of encouragement. Did you ever have such an experience?

The report this week is to say that of all the churches, Sunday schools, and friends in the Southern Convention not a single one seemed to remember to give any encouragement of any kind. Suppose you step over here, leave your stand, and take a stand for a moment on Elon College's campus and see what will be the result of the change of position. About the best way we can judge the other fellow's responsibilities is to somehow undertake to stand in his place for a few minutes, even if by imagination. I wish we had some report to give but we don't. We will, however, report the total amount announced for last week—$1,886.59.

Thank you for your indulgence and we are encouraged with the anticipation of your help and support.

HEALING BY THE ROADSIDE.

open for all who would climb to this mountaintop to enter and worship. Opposite the door, a lovely cross was hewn in relief from a great slab of stone. Before it the dirt floor was worn where worshippers had knelt in prayer. Someone had placed handfuls of bright wild flowers at its base.

Outside again, we stood as breathless as Job before the wonder of the Lord's world that stretched about us, the great outcropping rocks, the rolling hills, the gentle cattle grazing on the slope, the lines of distant palms, the irregular patchwork of rice paddies, the first streaks of color in the sunset.

And then trudging up the hillside, came a shepherd, with a smiling welcome to greet us. But he did not extend his hands in the customary gesture, and when I looked I saw that his fingers had been eaten away by leprosy.

He was, he told us, a Christian. His friends said that this evil which had come upon him proved that his God did not care for him or was powerless to help him. "But I tell you," he added, "that now is the time I need Christ more than ever, and I know He will find a way to help me."

Then Evangelist Walter told him about the roadside clinic, and, standing there on the hillside, with the sunset growing redder in the west, the three of us joined in prayer. The words of the prayer which Evangelist Walter offered were in the language of the shepherd, which I did not understand. But the prayer in my heart was that somehow I might find words to tell those in my country something of the healing spirit of Christ that I have seen this afternoon on this Indian hillside, and move their hearts to have compassion, even as our Lord had compassion. For if we will send the doctors and the nurses and the supplies and the money, it can be our privilege to multiply again and again by the thousand-fold the same miracle of healing for which Christ Himself never failed to heed a plea.

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

LEARN

This week we get just a glimpse of the remainder of our foreign mission work. Please look carefully from our mental airplane so you get a clear picture of what we pass.

In the Philippine Islands

While we in the State debated a merger with one denomination our people in the Philippines united (1948) with Presbyterians, United Brethren, Disciples, and other local groups. The united group is called The United Church of Christ. So many church leaders were killed during the war that now there is only one minister for four churches—one half the ratio in the Southern Convention where we feel a shortage of ministers. Emphasis is being placed on training leaders, rural work, resettlement and rebuilding of churches and homes, hospital and medical work, and evangelism. Missionaries include Rev. Frank J. Woodward, Rev. and Mrs. David L. Hamm (work among Moros), Rev. and Mrs. Elton Brown (mission hospital and evangelistic work), Rev. and Mrs. James F. McKinley (Dean of Theology, Silliman University), and Miss Frances Thompson (teacher in Silliman University). Twelve thousand members have been added to the churches in the past two years.

In Micronesia

Morning Star VI is furnishing transportation in the islands of the Pacific. Miss (Rev.) Eleanor Wilson and Rev. and Mrs. Harold F. Hanlin work in Kusaie and other Marshall and Caroline Islands. Miss Anna Dederer is teaching Bible on Truk, and Rev. and Mrs. Charles L. Heuser serve as minister-educator in the same area. Some islands are rebuilding churches and programs; others are very primitive, and are just being reached with Christianity.

"Time Would Fail Me"

Time and space fail me to tell of our work in Mexico, France, Spain, Greece, Turkey, Lebanon and Syria, and of our faithful co-workers in South America, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and other areas behind the iron curtain. Let us be reminded that they are worthy of our friendship and prayers.

WORK

Nineteen centuries have passed since St. Paul was called from his home in Tarsus to serve the church in Antioch in Syria from which he was sent as one of the first Christian missionaries. Today we have missionaries in the area where he established the Church. Six men and a woman are at work in Tarsus, five are in Thessaloniki, and ten are in Athens. Study their work, and the work of others in the same area, in comparison with the account in The Acts of where Paul went and what he did.

Prepare for Easter

It is the habit of most of our churches to make a special offering for missions at Easter. This year the needs are tremendous. Now is the time to prepare for the offering.

To do our work at home and abroad we will need this year $65,000.00. The Mission Board year is more than half gone. Last report indicated an income of $17,890.30, which is slightly more than one-fourth of the needed amount. If the needs are to be met, the members of our churches must work at getting the money. The asking is about two dollars per member; we have raised about fifty cents. Two dollars per year is four cents per week. That certainly should not hurt us, and it is doubtful if it will build the kingdom of God in a world like ours. Our goal is very low. It is hoped that every church will go beyond the goal so the work can go forward more rapidly.

Things to Do

Educate your church people concerning the needs. This can be done through Sunday school, church, mission societies, and the mails. Make posters that show where your money goes, the types of work being done, and the amount needed from your church. Send letters to every family telling what is being undertaken, and asking cooperation. Talk about the mission work, and the Easter Offering. Have special programs in Sunday school and church. Be sure that every person related to your church knows about this important and thrilling work. Give every person an envelope for the offering.

PRAY

In very truth I tell you that whatever you ask the Father for in my name He will give you. As yet you have not asked for anything in my name: ask, and you shall receive, that your hearts may be filled with gladness.

—JESUS (John 16:23-24).

Our Prayer List

Sunday—The Philippines

Pray for the leaders of government and church. Name the missionaries listed previously, and include Dr. F. C. Laubach. Pray for the Moros; the homeless; the churchless; the new members.

Monday—Micronesia

Call the missionaries by name (see first column) pray for Christians who waited 25 years for return of missionary; remember the tribes that know not Christ.

Tuesday—Mexico and South America

Give thanks for a friendly neighbor. Pray for Margarita Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence L. Stanton, and the latest recruits, Mr. and Mrs. Malcolm S. Hayes. Pray for the Congregationalists in South America, and for a growing friendship between the peoples of the Americas.

Wednesday—Europe

Pray for Rev. and Mrs. Howard L. Schomer who are doing educational and rehabilitation work in France. Remember our church people in Eastern Europe with whom contacts are almost impossible now, and pray for the Protestants in Spain.

Thursday—Greece and Turkey

Pray for the missionaries in the land where St. Paul worked. Pray for the peace and prosperity of these lands.

Friday—Lebanon

Thank God for the first missionaries from this area. Pray for the present church, and our missionaries there.

Saturday—Our Churches

Pray for our churches that they may find a way to support the world-wide mission of our church so the kingdom of God may come to earth.

St. Francis, reflecting on a story he heard of a mountaineer in the Alps, who had risked his life to save a sheep, says: "O God, if such was the earnestness of this shepherd in seeking for a mean animal, which had probably been frozen on the glazier, how is it that I am so indifferent in seeking my sheep."

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

EASTERN VIRGINIA MISSIONARY RALLIES.

Eastern Virginia Missionary Rallies will be held April 5, 6, 7 at Berea, Norfolk; Berea, Nansemond; and Wakefield.

Miss Elizabeth McGuffie of Chicago, Illinois, will be the speaker. Miss McGuffie is with the Missions Council and will speak in the morning on Bible Studies and in the afternoon will talk informally about helps for women's groups with special emphasis on visual aids.

There will be a report on the National Assembly of the United Council of Church Women which was held in Milwaukee.

Lunch will be served by the host churches. Mrs. W. B. Williams is superintendent of the Norfolk District, Mrs. A. C. Moore of the Suffolk District and Mrs. J. F. Brown of the Waverly District.

JACKSONS RECEIVE SCRAPBOOK.

Women of the Southern Convention have sent to the Jacksons in Shaowu a scrapbook containing Life Membership Certificates given in honor of The Jackson Family. Here is a letter from the Jacksons:

"Many, many thanks for the attractive scrapbook containing the Life Membership Certificates. We shall treasure this book always. No gift could be more appropriate than the Membership Certificates. They not only reveal the thoughtfulness of the churches, but serve to further the great work which means so much to all of us.

"I'm glad you have had a chance to meet Timothy. We appreciate all you women of the Southern Convention are doing to help him.

"Dorothy and Lewis join me in sending you our love and best wishes along with our thanks.

Cordially,
Dick."

* * * *

Mrs. William T. Harrell, Superintendent of Life Memberships and Memorials for the Southern Convention Women, writes also:

"There is another bit of good news you might like to print. It just did something to me when I received a fifty dollar check from Richard Jackson for a Life Membership in the Woman's Missionary Convention for Timothy Chang's mother, Mrs. Lee Chin Feng, given by The Jackson Family in recognition of her faithful services rendered to them and our Mission Station in Shaowu. This spontaneous gift of love appears ineffably beautiful and gives great delight to the innermost resources of my soul.

"For Dorothy and Dick out of their meager salary to want to share in the Timothy Chang Scholarship fund is a worthy example of Christian sharing many of us would do well to follow."

Now is the time for each society to check up and see if they can send in the money for Life Memberships or Memorials to be placed in the scholarship fund for Timothy Chang. This is a real and concrete way that we can invest in missions, preparing a young man to return to his own country and tell others about Christ. It is a very interesting way, too, as we have Timothy right here in our midst and can see and talk with him. The ten dollars should be sent to your state treasurer (Miss Susie Allen in North Carolina and Mrs. W. B. Williams in Eastern Virginia, Mrs. Noah F. Painter in the Valley) and designated for that purpose. If Dorothy and Dick Jackson could send $50, surely many of us could send $10.00.

MAY FELLOWSHIP DAY.

May Fellowship Day occurs this year on Friday, May 6. The theme is: "Freedom's Foundation—the Christian Home." Packets containing program leaflet, poster, a dramatic script, "This Citadel of Faith," Christian Family Week leaflet, the Declaration of Human Rights adopted by the United Nations may be ordered at 35 cents each per packet from the United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York 10, N. Y. Order your material right away and don't wait until too late. It is not too early to order now.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

LITTLE FOLK:

Do you like to have visitors or company in your home? We do. Just this week we had some unexpected guests. If we had known they were coming, we would have done a few extra things, but we didn't know; so we welcome them, enjoyed their visit and didn't worry because there were two fingerprints on the doorpane and a hole in the kitchen curtain. It isn't easy to feel at ease when things aren't perfect, but they rarely ever are—and the visitors have a home, too, and you can just imagine that they have at least one dirty spot or untidy place. I know one person who keeps a "perfect house" and it is so worn out keeping it that way that she sends her children to the movies so she can scrub the kitchen that she just scrubbed the day before. I'd rather have boys and girls plus a few finger marks! Our company was a minister and his wife and they are the parents of three children, too, so we felt that we had a lot to talk about and enjoy.

Grownups seem to have two sets of manners: those for each other, and the special ones for children! I heard a stout woman say to a chubby (but not fat) little girl, "My, what a big fat child you are!" The little girl looked her in the eye and answered, "You are fat, too." Then the fat woman asked the mother, "Why do you let her talk that way?" I didn't hear the mother's answer but older people don't talk like that to each other. Some grown folk act as if they couldn't make a mistake! Well, they can. If your mother hasn't good manners, you may have to teach her. I remember a teacher when I was in the fourth grade who spoke sharply to me when I had not done what she said I did, and when she found out I was right and she was wrong, she simply said, "Humph!" Then I had a music teacher, who was a wonderful little old gentleman from Denmark, and once he found himself in the wrong and he said, "I'm a silly old man and you are a young girl, excuse me." Can you wonder that we invited him to play at our wedding? Little folk don't know all the proper things to do and some correcting is necessary, but it can be done quietly and away from others. I like mothers and dads who say "Thank you" for good pieces of work and errands, too.

Being a guest calls for manners also. If you move half the toys in the house it is very nice to help put them back before leaving. Listen to what the person in charge has to say. If they say, "No running," then it is polite to walk and not run. Say "thank you" for refreshments and if you want a second helping and they offer it, do take it without being so modest! If given a choice, take it.

Do hope you will remember your Sunday school and church manners. Being polite is simply doing the kind thing. If you say "Mam" (like I do) keep on saying it—no matter what outsiders say, it is a very polite Southern custom. If you are a Southerner, be one! Mam and Sir do not in my mind show a sign of servitude, their use shows that we take time to be polite at home to those we love the best.

LADIES FIRST.

By MARY STARKEY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

The two aunts had arranged to meet in the Childrens Wear Department to pick out a suitable present for their latest niece.

Aunt Janet was there first. She was tired of standing around by the time Aunt Sarah appeared. "I was beginning to think you weren't coming, dear," she complained.

"I am sorry I'm late; the bus was held up. Isn't it warm up here? Oh, see those children at the water cooler."

"Yes. Come over here and look at the cute bonnets. It's easy to be a pretty baby when there are bonnets like these to wear. Now, which would you think—the pink or the white?"

"Let's take the pink," said Aunt Sarah. "I'm sure Mary will be pleased. It would be nice to get a pretty dress to go with it, wouldn't it? But before we look at dresses come on over and get a drink of water."

A small boy and girl with their mothers were walking towards the water cooler from either side, as the aunts approached. Each mother had a cup ready.

"Now, Joan," said the girl's mother, "let the little boy go first. He is younger than you, and you can easily wait."

"Oh no," said the other mother, "David knows that little girls always come first. Thank you very much."

David waited politely and quietly until Joan's mother had filled her cup.

"You go now, Boy," said Aunt Sarah, who had overheard.

"Another chance," whispered David's mother smiling at him.

"I don't mind waiting another minute—for both of you," said David quite sincerely.

Without more ado, Aunt Sarah reached for two paper cups, and as she and Aunt Janet sipped the cool, refreshing water both beamed kindly on the boy and his mother.

"David and I think that girls and ladies should always come first," the mother explained.

"Well, bless your hearts!" said Aunt Sarah Warmly.

And Aunt Janet, looking at the boy, added, "In a day when so many young people ignore old ladies, it is nice to meet a boy like you, David."

LETTER FROM THE JACKSONS.

tiny flame through these difficult years. After all this time, here was a group of still-loyal Christians and two young women ready to dedicate themselves in His service.

Conditions for us in Shaowu are about the same. Outside of a few local disturbances, several bandit raids on small villages and a threatened attack on Shaowu by a thousand members of a local political party which lost the elections, all is quiet and peaceful. Everyone is waiting and asking questions such as, "Will there really be peace? What will a Communist-dominated China be like?"

Lewis is growing rapidly and at times, certainly has a mind of his own. He is helping us to understand more fully than before the implications of Jesus' teaching about the Fatherhood of God.

Mail is still coming through and we welcome your letters. We send our warmest greeting for the Easter Season.

TIMBER RIDGE YOUNG PEOPLE.

The Pilgrim Fellowship of Timber Ridge Church has just purchased one of the best 16mm sound movie projectors, with a 70 x 70 Radiant screen. Their first showing will be "Simon Peter, Fisherman." The film opens with Peter, near the end of his life, writing his epistle in Antioch. He starts to read what he has written and the picture of his early life unfolds. It is a dramatic story of "what happens when Jesus enters a man's life."

The attendance for the Fellowship has been high for the winter months—only one Sunday evening without a program. Mrs. Coulter, organizer of the Fellowship, has sponsored a Hallowe'en Party, a Valentine Party, with around fifty per cent, and an Easter Egg Hunt is coming up in a few weeks. The Fellowship pays the light bill for the church, and supplies candles for the altar, as only two of its projects.

ALLIED YOUTH

A Quick Summary.

Allied Youth is a national education organization, operating from headquarters at 1709 "M" Street, N.W., Washington 6, D. C., and reaching high school students all over the country. Although its central interest is a program of alcohol education and alcohol-free recreation, much of its work is character and personality-building. It believes that sound character and integrated personality are among the most valuable assets a young person can have in avoiding the pitfalls of drinking.

Allied Youth is positive. It aims to help adolescents find satisfying substitutes for drinking, and ways of meeting the social pressure for drinking. It develops the inner discipline and personal resources necessary to meet the tensions and pressures of modern life without using the crutch of alcohol. It shows youth how to have fun and excitement through a wide variety of social and recreational activities that do not involve the use of alcohol.

Non-political, Allied Youth is not trying to pass laws or bring prohibition. Non-sectarian, it welcomes into its membership young people of every faith and of no faith. Scientific, it rejects whatever "facts" cannot be confirmed by the best modern authorities.

Allied Youth's Executive Secretary, W. Roy Breg, and its staff of field representatives are available to speak in high school assemblies anywhere in the nation, or at meetings of educators, churches, or women's clubs. When talking to high school students, these representatives discuss the alcohol problem as it affects teen agers and tell how young people from Texas to Canada and from Maine to Hawaii have found a solution to the drinking problem through Allied Youth.

Granted student interest and sympathetic support of the school administration, Allied Youth establishes a "post" or social club in the school through which to carry on its program. By establishing a fellowship of young people who do not believe it is necessary to drink to "be smart," and by promoting a recreational and social program for the school and community, this Allied Youth Post helps break down social pressure in favor of drinking. Undergirding it all is a program of education, carried on through group discussions, through trips to visit alcoholic clinics, courts, or meetings of Alcoholics Anonymous, and through a program of publications from national headquarters.

These include The Allied Youth, a monthly magazine featuring articles on alcohol as well as a broad range of subjects of interest to teen agers ($1 a year), and Alcoholfax, an educational service for schools, libraries and youth leaders offering digests of current material on the alcohol problem ($5 for the school year).

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

VII. MATTHEW.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

After Matthew had made up his mind to follow Jesus he seems not to have been at all pleased with his personal history for he called himself, "Matthew, the Publican." He had been a tax gatherer whose office was just outside the walls of the city of Capernaum on the Great West Road from Damascus to the Mediterranean and may have been quite a lucrative post. Therefore when he elected to become a disciple of the Master it meant a real personal sacrifice from a material point of view.

His name was not Matthew—rather this was the name by which the disciples knew him. The folks in his home town called him Levi, the son of Alphaeus.

Matthew had heard of Jesus and may even have seen Him but had no personal acquaintance with Him until one day as our Lord was passing his office He turned and said to Levi, "Follow Me," and on the impulse of the moment Matthew invited Him to dinner. It was while they were eating together that his heart was touched and he pledged his life and was emancipated from his old bonds. Following his public declaration of loyalty to Jesus he gave himself with keen joy to his new life.

Other than that the Gospel story in his native Hebrew has been attributed at least in part to him and that he preached in Judea for several years little or nothing more is known of him. His later history, as found in the few traditions about him, is completely unreliable.

BIBLE BROADCAST.

Dr. Francis C. Stifler, Secretary for Public Relations of the American Bible Society, will be heard twice each Friday over the facilities of the American Broadcasting Company and its affiliated independent stations, beginning April 1 and running through September 30. This is Dr. Stifler's eleventh annual series of talks about the Bible over this network.

Originating over Station WJZ in New York, the morning program will be heard on that station at 8:55 EST and on the rest of the network ten minutes earlier at 8:45 EST. The evening program will be heard on WJZ and the network at 11:30 p. m.

For radio listeners from Virginia to Maine, Dr. Stifler will be heard the four Sundays in April over WOR's program, Radio Chapel, from 9:30 to 10:00 a. m. EST. The titles for these four addresses are:

April 3—Consider the Bible.

April 10—Victory Through the Bible.

April 17—Easter Gave Us the Bible.

April 24—Giving the Word to the World.

JESUS' PEREAN MINISTRY.

LESSON II—APRIL 10, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: The Son of Man . . . came not to be served but to serve, and to give His life a ransom for many.—Mark 10:45.

LESSON: Mark 10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 9:33-37.

Mark devotes one chapter to the Perean Ministry of Jesus, while Luke uses five chapters to tell about it. It is a kind of dividing line in the ministry of Jesus. The first nine chapters outline the years of His public ministry. The last five chapters record the events of Passion Week and the Resurrection. The tenth chapter outlines His Perean ministry, some of the events which took place on the other side of the Jordan just before He started to Jerusalem for the last time.

The Sanctity of the Family.

Jesus deplored divorce. He said that Moses suffered a bill of divorce-ment but it was a concession to human weakness and an evidence of the hardness of the human heart. God had not intended it thus. In marriages a man and woman become one flesh, and what God joins together, men ought not to put asunder. In the light of His teachings much of modern practice is simply adultery. For according to Jesus, if these words are to be taken literally, when one puts his wife away for any cause except adultery, and marries another, he commits adultery. And the same principle applies to a wife who does the same.

The Dignity of Childhood.

The disciples thought that the Master was too important and too busy to be bothered with children. They spoke rather sharply to those who brought children to Jesus. But Jesus rebuked the disciples, indeed He was much displeased and even moved to indignation, and spoke the words that have been cherished through the generations and centuries "Suffer (or allow, or permit) the children to come unto me and forbid them not for of such is the kingdom of God." And taking the children up in His arms He blessed them. Jesus put the child at the center of society. He was the champion of childhood. He insisted that it was only as adults had the spirit of childhood that they could enter into the Kingdom of God. This principle of Jesus has gradually found expression in child-labor laws, playgrounds for children, clinics for underprivileged mothers, religious education, etc.

The Danger of Riches.

The story of the young man who came to Jesus asking what good thing he must do to inherit eternal life demands care in interpretation. It is not designed to condemn wealth as such, nor does it mean that every rich man must sell all that he has and give the proceeds to the poor. In this case the young ruler's gold had come before God. He was in danger of losing his soul because of his substance. The case demanded surgery, no mere aspirin tablet would get at the root of his trouble. Riches do constitute a real danger. They make men self-sufficient, proud, self-indulgent, materially minded. They tend to crowd out the things of the spirit. For where a man's treasure is, there is his heart also.

The Rewards of Righteousness.

"What shall we have?" asked Peter. The Big Fisherman wanted to know what they were to get out of discipleship. What was there in it for them anyway. The Master's reply indicated that righteousness does pay even in dollars and cents in general. But not always to be sure. There are rewards, however, that constitute true riches, both in this world and in the world to come.

The Shadow of the Cross.

The Master knew what awaited Him at Jerusalem. He knew what was involved in His redemptive ministry. He knew that His course led straight to the cross, that there could be no salvation without sacrifice. But the disciples did not know that, and He patiently and tenderly began to teach them. He predicted that He would be mocked and scourged and spat upon and be condemned and put to death. He also predicted that He would rise again the third day. He knew that the physical universe was so designed that personal values would be conserved. He knew that although His enemies might kill His body they could not do anything to His spirit.

So with a composure and a courage that amazed them, He went before them, going to Jerusalem. Not in a cold stoicism or unfeeling callousness, but in simple faith and quiet confidence.

The Direction of Ambition.

James and John had not yet got hold of the fact that the Kingdom was not of this world so they came to Jesus and asked for the main places in the new order. One wanted to sit on the right hand and the other on the left hand of the Master when He came into His kingdom. They thought they might as well get while the getting was good. Patiently and lovingly Jesus told them that the rewards of the Kingdom were not of favor but of worth. It was not His to give. Furthermore the more important question was whether they were able to drink the cup that He was to drink or to be baptized with the baptism that awaited Him. To the credit of the two ambitious disciples they said they thought they could pay the price.

The Measure of Greatness.

Who is the great man? The true measure of greatness is the spirit of service. Even the Son of Man came not to be served, but to serve and to give His life a ransom for many.

A Work of Mercy.

There he sat, a poor blind man, Bartimeus. He could not see the sky or the flowers or the faces of his friends or his loved ones. He was a pitiful figure shut up in a world of darkness. In desperation he called upon Jesus and as always the Master had mercy upon the needy. Focusing the man's attention upon his basic need, Jesus gave him his sight again. It was another instance of the power of faith in action. "Thy faith hath made thee whole," said Jesus. This is the victory, even our faith.

NORFOLK REPORTING . . .

A very successful Leadership Training School was held at the Rosemont Church, February 13-16. About 75 people registered on the opening day, with all of our churches in the Norfolk-Portsmouth Area represented. The average attendance for all sessions of the school was about 60.

Three courses were presented. "Planning for Children in the Sunday School" was taught by Miss Leila Anderson of Yankton, S. D. "Teaching Youth" was taught by the Rev. Bernard V. Munger, minister of the United Church, Chapel Hill, N. C. "How to Improve Our Sunday School" was taught by Professor W. W. Sloan, Professor of Bible and Religious Education at Elon College, N. C.

All three of our leaders were excellent teachers, therefore, all three classes were well attended. Two class periods were held each night, the first from 7:00 to 7:50, Intermission from 7:50 to 8:00, the Second Class period from 8:00 to 8:40, followed by Assembly and closing Devotions from 8:40 to 9:00. Iced cold drinks were served to everyone each night during the Intermission which made that short period one of real enjoyment and refreshment while the people talked and laughed with one another. The closing moments of each night's sessions were spent in quiet and reverent worship while a minister of one of our churches lifted us up unto the very Throne of God and gave us a new vision of our common task as workers in His Vineyard.

Participating churches included: Bay View, Berea (Great Bridge), Christian Temple, First Church (Norfolk), Little Creek, Rosemont, Second Church (Norfolk), South Norfolk, First Church (Portsmouth) and Shelton Memorial. The Committee consisted of Rev. Herbert G. Council, general chairman, Rev. Johnson L. Griffin, Rev. Peter Young, Rev. J. Everette Neese, Dr. Frank H. Lewis, Rev. John L. Gwin, Rev. Ellis Clark, Rev. M. E. Taylor, Rev. W. Stanley Carne, Dr. H. S. Harcastle and Rev. O. D. Poythress. Supt. Wm. T. Scott acted as Ex Officio member representing the Board of Christian Education. It is to our good Superintendent that most of the credit should go for the success of the school. He obtained the leaders and the materials, planned and publicized the program, giving us his generous support and wholehearted cooperation all along the line.

I cannot speak for the other churches of our fellowship but I can say that the Leadership Training School helped us here at Rosemont in many fine ways. Seeds were sown by Miss Anderson for bringing the home and the Sunday school into a better understanding of our common problems of training children. The Sallye Roane Bible Class, anxious to see these seeds bear much fruit, sponsored a "Covered-Dish" supper in the Sunday school auditorium last Wednesday night, March 9, at which time plans were made to have a meeting of this kind once each month. Parents were urged to attend in a family group, bringing their children with them. While the meeting was going on following the supper, the children were entertained up in the Nursery and Beginners Departments with pictures, a film strip entitled "Happy Times at Home." After the meeting downstairs, the parents came up and observed the children, singing their songs and enjoying themselves just as they do on Sunday morning at Sunday school. We plan to feature a different Department of the Sunday school each month.

Professor W. W. Sloan gave our people some new ideas on how to conduct a successful Worker's Conference. As a result we are planning to hold a Supper Conference at the church next month, April 18, and have a guest speaker, followed by a general discussion of our common problems.

Rev. Bernard V. Munger gave our people a deeper understanding of the current problems of youth, so much so that the leaders of our Youth Fellowship have set to work on a new program for that organization. As a result attendance has doubled during the past two Sundays.

We here at Rosemont feel that it was a rare privilege to have the Leadership Training School this year for the benefit not only of our own people but for the people of all our churches in this area. We were very happy to entertain the leaders while they were here, and to extend a cordial welcome to everyone who came from our neighboring churches each night.

In closing, I want to thank everyone who had a part in making the Leadership Training School the great success that it was, and express the hope that we will have another one equally as good for our "willing workers" next year.

THE CHURCH MUST TEACH.

By PAUL CALVIN PAYNE.

The explosion of Hiroshima, August 6, 1945, was the expression of the final exhaustion of the long patience of the moral universe with the age-old immorality of man, when it cried out to him: "Change or die!"

The atom bomb is saying to America: "You cannot hold me in your hands and go on living in your old sins; you try that on me and I will explode in your hands."

There is a curious state of mind among Christians today. During the war we kept saying that it would be harder to win the peace than the war; and the strange thing is that this is true.

We find we did not win the war; we won only a reprieve—one more chance. We defeated Hitler, but it is harder now fighting Hitler's ghost and Hitlerism.

The only remedy is to do away with the injustices and evils produced by Hitler. If we do not correct these wrongs we will have to deal with something even more sinister than Hitler.

That is the reason the church must teach. We cannot shoot "isms;" we must teach out of our hearts.

We must teach by our example, by sacrifice, by giving. We must teach in the home, teach faithfully in the Sunday school and reach outside the Sunday school to teach some of the 27 million children and young people now receiving no religious education in the nation. We must teach sincerely, and we must teach now!

You cannot find a Christian on the face of the earth who will not tell you that what he gave up for Christ was nothing in comparison with what he got.—R. T. Torrey.

Book Reviews

THE PARSON TAKES A WIFE. Maria Williams Sheerin. Macmillan Co. New York. $2.75.

The Parson Takes a Wife is a book written by the widow of an Episcopalian minister. Mrs. Sheerin is hardly a typical minister's wife as she belongs to Richmond's country club set or least that staid portion of Virginia society that so often puzzles outsiders. One is mystified by her becoming a parson's wife as her interest in the church was very limited.

The book is a short, 200-page affair and is good for light reading while traveling or at bedtime. It presents a view of one type of the cleric's family. That is, bored with parishoners, she wanted her own life free from botherations, etc. Mrs. Sheerin is not typical when she writes of paying fifteen pastoral visits during a ministry in Waco, Texas, nor is she typical when she boasts of her Paris frock and confesses. "I was preoccupied . . . but mostly with how Parisian I looked and with what a pity it was that more people weren't seeing me." The Paris frock happens to few ministers' wives!

Toward the end of her book, the author writes, "During the National Council days, I had four years' holiday from any responsibility in church work. . . ." From her previous writing, she had a perpetual holiday from church work as she used her children as a pleasant excuse to say or go as she desired.

Many will like this book for its spirit and will enjoy its fun but it is not a true picture of the average minister's family. There seems to be a great interest in this profession. Who will tell its story well?

NOTE: The Parson took his religion seriously!

THIS LIFE AND THE NEXT. P. T. Forsyth. Pilgrim Press. $2.

This is not a book of platitudes. It is a critical examination of the effect on this life of faith in the next. The Practice of Eternity, the Educational Value of Death, the Immortality of Present Judgment are some of the themes dealt with in a clarifying and helpful manner.

The author, an English Congregationalist, minister, theologian and teacher, died in 1921. One can worship or preach on Easter Sunday with renewed faith after reading this book.

A THREEFOLD CORD. Maude Royden. Macmillan Co. New York. $2.

This is one the most unusual love stories of all time. Maude Royden is England's well known, greatly beloved woman minister. She served the City Temple, London, and is thus well known in Congregational circles. Wherever she has been, women have gone to hear her words.

In A Threefold Cord she tells of the love that came to her, Effie Shaw and Hudson Shaw. She shared a life with them and came to know each in the highest sense of love. After Effie's death, she married Dr. Shaw and had only a brief time with him before his death.

Those who know her will be fascinated by her confession and the high plane on which love may be conducted. To glamour-baited Americans, it seems almost impossible. There are those who will find it unpleasant reading because of their very nature. It is a great testament and one rejoices in her private as well as public life.

THE CHURCH SCHOOL AND PARISH HOUSE BUILDING. Elbert M. Conover. International Council of Religious Education, 203 North Wabash Avenue, Chicago 1, Ill. $1.50.

Written by such a well known church building authority, this book is expected to have a far-reaching influence in the half billion dollar building program of Protestant churches of United States and Canada. The book was written in consultation with 100 Christian education leaders in the I.C.R.E. Some 45 photographs and drawings with comments on specific plans of many local churches illustrate the 21 chapters.

A wide variety of topics are covered, including the following: "The Educational Interest in Sanctuary & Chapel," "Art in the Service of Christian Education," "Providing for Audio-Visual Aids and Radio Work," "Remodeling the Buildings We Now Have," "Some Special Concerns of the Small Church," and "Educational Values in Promoting, Planning and Financing the Building Program."

The book is designed to help churches "consider and formulate their statements of the needs for buildings, improvements, rooms and equipment and will assist them in executing the building program so that the best possible ministries in Christian education and Christian fellowship may be conducted."

MISSIONS AT THE GRASS ROOTS. William P. Shriver. Friendship Press. 156 Fifth Ave., New York 10, N. Y. $1.

Here is an answer to local church groups who want to do something about social problems in their neighborhood and don't know how to go about it. Beginning with a historical summation of the outreach of home missions, the author shows clearly that, with the geographical frontiers of our continent now stabilized, home missions has returned to its base. It is no longer simply an activity of the local church, but has become an activity for the local church. The church working at home seeking to play a strong and decisive role in the solution of human problems is home missions.

The author is not a theorist who confronts the conscience of his reader with questions that have no apparent solution. He tells how problems have been solved and where, giving places, dates, and specific details of method. We learn how local churches have met the needs of children, youth, old people, migratory workers, and minority groups. The stories of these projects are told informally, with conversation and details that give the reader a warm feeling for the human beings whose lives have been touched. The significant thing is that every plan described deals with a problem so common that the ideas are suggestive for thousands of other churches.

There is a special section of this book that tells how groups can organize.

NEW RELIGIOUS FILM.

"I Am With You" is an important "first." Its success is dual. There can be no doubt that a really good film with a strong religious message can find a niche in the theatre, and it affords many religious leaders an opportunity to prove to Hollywood that churchgoers will support worthy films at the box office.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Good news, my friends, good news to tell this time. Do you remember Mrs. Beulah Wright? She was a very fine matron who left us several years ago to take a similar position at the Thompson Orphanage in Charlotte. Recently, she came home to be with a sick relative, and now she is definitely coming back to us. She will assume her duties as matron of the Baby Home on April 4. Mrs. Whitt then will become supervisor of the kitchen. There also is to be new china for the dining room, and there are lots of new pots and pans for the kitchen. Believe me, they were needed, too.

Kitchen equipment and china, the heavy hotel kind, are needed just as badly in the other two buildings also. If you are interested, ask for the price.

The children are getting "shoe-d" for Easter. Five girls went to Burlington last week to have their feet out-fitted. Their shopping expedition was very satisfactory. Imagine having almost a hundred children to buy shoes for!

Those in charge report that the farm is coming along fine. The land has been prepared for planting, and soon the seed will be put in.

Several people have responded with contributions toward the trip to Washington for our high school seniors. You know, we told you about them last week. It wouldn't surprise me one bit if all three of those girls take that trip!

IRIS McEWEN.

P. S.: We really do have a fine group of boys and girls in our orphanage. They are trying extra hard to cooperate these days.

DEDICATION PRAYER.

[This is a Dedication Prayer for new offering plates given by Edward J. Vorba, pastor of the historic First Congregational Church in Bradford, Vermont, during the morning worship service on March 27, 1949, just after the "One Great Hour" broadcast.]

Thou God of Lent—Thou God of all times and of all seasons touched by the Easter Victory—we now bring these offering plates to Thee. We are remembering in each of our hearts how much Thou didst give to us in the gift of Thy Son on Calvary—how much Thou art always giving us of Thyself. May these plates ever tell to Thee and to all men the devotion of our hearts and the stewardship of our lives and all we possess as a real trust from Thee.

We love Thy Church, O God, and we sense the responsibility we have in the fulfillment of Thy Kingdom here in this community. May we hear again Jesus' own words that is more blessed to give than to receive, and may our own experience of those words lead us to even deeper appreciations of Thy Church and its message of reconciliation and healing for mankind.

May that world-wide message entrusted to us by Thee lead us even further to the fact that the Christian life is one of giving—that the more we give of ourselves the more we find our lives, lives far richer and fuller than ever they were before. So may we acknowledge the embracing of the whole world there on Mount Calvary, God of all men, and the ever continuing presence of Thy Christ everywhere with all Thy children, leading us all on to Thy Kingdom.

In the spirit and pattern of Him who gave His all for Thee and for us, and in response to Thine own outpouring, we dedicate these offering plates. May they ever proclaim of our gratitude and obedience, of our kneeling at the Cross and giving Thee our all. For then will we live the life Thou wouldst have us live and do what Thou wouldst have us do.

Christians are supposed not merely to endure change, not even to profit by it, but to cause it.

—Harry Emerson Fosdick.

A Winter We Shall Always Remember

By REV. HAROLD W. CASE, Missionary,
Fort Berthold Indian Mission, Elbowoods, North Dakota

"Snowblock Perils N. D.," "Fresh Snow, High Winds Threaten Roads," "Storm Rages in Region," "Tie-up Becomes Worse," "Weather Throws Another Punch at Western Livestock," "Cold Turns Worse, New Snow and Wind," "Stock Toll May Hit Millions," "Plow Opens Roads Between Garrison and Elbowoods," "Working from Dawn Men and Machinery," and then "Air War Launched on Hunger and Cold," are some of the headlines on delayed newspapers.

Of all the winters Mrs. Case and I have had the privilege of witnessing, never have we seen a winter such as this. We had fine weather up to and through the holidays. We were able to make all of our appointments up to and through Christmas. Matter of fact, our own Lois Roberta came home from college for the holidays and we were able to get her to Minot to take the train on January 1, but after that winter really set in. Blizzard after blizzard, grocery stocks became low, coal piles dwindled, cattle became poor for lack of feed, and many froze to death standing up.

Temperatures began to lower until the thermometer dropped to 48 below zero, and there it has wavered all these weeks no higher than ten above. The wind has always been our companion here on the rolling hills of No Dak, and with some three feet of snow on the levels, the winds always delight in changing the drifts overnight. Usually snow here is light and fluffy, but this winter with the wind pounding day and night, the drifts were packed as hard as earth. The few snow plows available in this area became useless much of the time. Men in fifties and hundreds went out with shovels to chop the snow so that the plow could have a chance, and then after a few openings were made, the wind would pound them shut harder than ever.

Our road to the north became blocked first, then our road to the east over which comes our mail from Garrison, and then our road to Halliday over which we get our coal supply. Things became desperate, for even groceries became low. Finally we majored on the coal route, and whenever that was open every available truck was commandeered to haul coal. All the roads to the outstations remained closed, but telephone communications were kept open for which we were grateful.

The Mission being in the center of the reservation, has become sort of an oasis in time of stress. Now and then some man would come in either on foot or by saddle or team.

The first question would be, "Can I have a little hay to feed my horses?" and then, "May I stay overnight?" So much snow, the people cannot get to their haystacks, and the Mission hay dwindling fast. This was no time to refuse, for truly an emergency existed. Day after day someone was here and sometimes several. The Red Cross sent out an airplane to check on the more isolated homes. People were told by radio to make a plus sign on the snow with ashes if there was distress, so the airplane could drop in. Many of the people were flown into the nearby towns to buy groceries.

Dynamite was flown in for our boys to dig coal with. The airlift scattered hay to the marooned cattle which were starving.

How are we going to meet the additional expenses of the cost of coal hauling, feeding of stock, feeding of extra mouths who have come to us to eat while in town for food supplies, providing hay for the Indian teams and lodging for stranded families. More than that, with this amount of snow everyone is speaking of the floods which will result. The Mission must be prepared to carry on and not be handicapped for lack of funds. Mission personnel must be strengthened in this hour. Look for ways and means of helping us, please. We are in urgent need of supplies and of cash with which to pay for them.

Strategic Mission In Turkey

LUTHER RICHARDSON FOWLE

"The Turkish Republic today holds the central bastion which alone seems to prevent Soviet Russia from descending to the Mediterranean, outflanking Greece and Italy, controlling the Suez and the Arab lands and their essential oil. Turkey's task is immeasurably burdened by the stern necessity of protecting her frontiers against which Soviet Russia presses, both in the Caucasus and along the Bulgarian frontier of European Turkey. We in distant America cannot appreciate this pressure," says Luther Richardson Fowle, lay missionary of the American Board, recently sailed on the American freighter Ferngulf.

A son and grandson of Near East missionaries, born in Turkey, Mr. Fowle's ancestral home is in Thetford, Vermont. He was educated in the United States at Williams College, Class of 1908, and went back to Turkey as a career missionary under the American Board in 1912. He has lived in Turkey under three regimes, the Ottoman Empire with Sultan Abdul Hamid, the Young Turks, and the present Turkish Republic.

News Flashes

Rev. and Mrs. C. S. Morgan of Melbourne, Iowa, have announced the arrival of Colby Shannon, Jr., on March 29, 1949.

Dr. Leslie Weatherhead, noted Congregational minister and pastor of the City Temple in London, will give the Lyman Beecher Lectures on Preaching at the Yale Convocation, April 26-28.

Dr. Walter H. Judd was the speaker during Religious Emphasis Week held during March at the College of William and Mary. Dr. Judd has been announced as commencement speaker at Duke University in June.

By the will of the late Miss Flora LaFollette, dated March 8, 1949, Herbert S. Larrick, executor under $2,500 bond, the Timber Ridge Church trustees are to be paid $100 for the church cemetery, $100 for the church parsonage and $50 to the pastor, Rev. Roy D. Coulter.

Mr. Walter Graham spoke at a Laymen's Fellowship Banquet held in the fellowship hall of the Winchester parsonage on Wednesday evening of last week. Laymen from Christ Reformed Church at Martinsburg and the Centenary Reformed Church of Winchester were guests. Mr. Roy A. Larrick was program chairman.

Rev. J. Everette Neese, pastor of the Second Church, Norfolk, Va., is preaching a series of Lenten evangelistic services during the week beginning Sunday, April 3, and ending on Palm Sunday. Among the subjects announced are: "The Red Road to Redemption," "The Incomparable Christ," "Rejected Salvation" and "The Christ of Palm Sunday."

The Reverend Professor J. Howard Smith, head of the English Department, Arnold College, will attend summer session at Oxford University, Oxford, England, from July 7 to August 17. He will sail on the Queen Mary June 22, and will leave Cherbourg, France, on the Queen Mary, September 7, arriving in New York September 12. He will visit in Scotland and Ireland before summer school, and will travel in France, Italy, Switzerland, Holland, Luxembourg and Belgium after August 17.

WINCHESTER CHURCH LAUNCHES IMPROVEMENT PROGRAM.

An extensive spring cleaning and renovation program is in progress at the Winchester Church, according to an announcement by Pastor Robert A. Whitten.

Expected to cost about $4,000 in the long run, improvements include tearing down the old northwest corner, an alcove and rebuilding it to make more room for the choir.

All of the inside has been painted and varnished—the walls white and the woodwork a dark stain. This includes the worship hall, the board room and the primary room. Cut into the swinging doors that open into the worship hall have been two glass diamonds through which latecomers can note what stage the service has reached.

On the outside, the roof has been repaired and painted black. The tower has gotten several coats of dark green and all outside trim is being painted white. In several of the outside doors new panels have been installed which are also being painted.

The work which began about three weeks ago should be completed before Palm Sunday. So far no services have been interrupted.

D. P. BARRETT WRITES FROM PUERTO RICO.

San Juan,
Puerto Rico,
March 26, 1949.

DEAR FRIENDS:

I greet you from San Juan, Puerto Rico, where the celebration of the Fiftieth Anniversary of the Evangelicals in the Islands has come to a close. To everyone who had a part in making my trip a reality I extend my sincere thanks and most profound gratitude. The trip to the Island will never be forgotten and always appreciated—it satisfied all my expectations.

I went by plane since boat reservations were difficult to make. We left the Raleigh-Durham Airport at 8:15 p. m., March 2, and arrived at the Isla Grande Airport, San Juan, at noon the next day. From Durham to Miami we made two stops, ten minutes each, at Jacksonville and Orlando and landed at Miami at 1:00 a. m.

Just before leaving Miami I had the pleasure of meeting the Rev. & Mrs. Manly Morton of Wilson, N. C., former missionaries to Puerto Rico, and they were accompanied by the Rev. Mr. Jarman, pastor of the Disciples Church in Wilson. Our four-motored plane took off from Miami at 7:15 a. m., on the 3rd. We were soon over the ocean and flying about 7,500 feet. The weather was beautiful, flying comfortable, and all aboard the ship were very agreeable. I sat near an unobstructed porthole and have no words to describe the beautiful white clouds as they rushed up from the sea enveloping our plane and taking shapes that looked like valleys, peaks, lakes and seas. At eleven o'clock we were served a splendid lunch—all ate heartily, none being bothered by the flying. About noon the word came over the loudspeaker to fasten seat belts, and no smoking. Land was now visible and the tall, ruffled palms had the appearance of small plants scattered in the foothills of the Island.

We came to the runway so lightly we were scarcely able to discern the change. We saw cars arriving with friends to meet the passengers—among them my own son, D. P., Jr., who lives in San Juan. Soon the passengers were shaking hands and saying farewells and we separated. I began a few days of pleasure in this enchanting island of beauty. We spent three days sightseeing and visiting before the anniversary program began.

The head of the Program Committee was Mr. Hipolito Marcona, an attorney, who is also president of the Association of Protestant Churches in Puerto Rico. The program began March 6 and went through the 13th. Many representatives from the States and Latin America had already arrived as the first days of the program were given to denominational reunions throughout the Island. Large crowds were in attendance for these. There were prepared and extemporaneous speeches dealing with the delight and joy of being in the Island and of work done in fifty years of labor.

On Saturday, the 12th, there was a banquet in the Great Condado Hotel in honor of visitors. This occasion proved to be the greatest point of reunion with over four hundred guests and friends meeting. Mr. Marcona presented the Hon. Angel R. deJesus, president of the Supreme Court of Puerto Rico, who gave an enthusiastic welcome to all and expressed confidence in the work of the Evangelical churches and declared such work to be "truly admirable." Many others spoke during the dinner.

That night fifteen thousand people met in an evangelical service held in front of the Capitol building. The PAY YOUR SUBSCRIPTION TO THE CHRISTIAN SUN PROMPTLY.

It is awfully difficult for those of us in the Convention Office who are responsible for keeping THE CHRISTIAN SUN mailing list to "cut off" from the list of subscribers people who have become members of THE CHRISTIAN SUN family. The Board of Publications has instructed us to carry unpaid subscriptions one month and then remove that name from the list. We dislike to follow that instruction but we know that the only way THE SUN can continue publication is to have funds with which to pay the publisher. About 30 days prior to the expiration of a subscription a notice goes from the office, "Your subscription to THE CHRISTIAN SUN expires the first of next month—please renew promptly." If all our subscribers would heed this notice, it would make our work so much easier, and renewals paid will bring in needed funds with which to bring THE CHRISTIAN SUN to our homes regularly. But it is terribly discouraging to have to write another notice which says, "We have not received your renewal to THE CHRISTIAN SUN which was due last month." Then there are those who through neglect or who just forget to send their renewals to whom we have to write a third time, "We are sorry! The postal authorities will not permit us to carry unpaid subscriptions, and by order of the Board of Publications we regret to have to tell you that your name has been removed from the mailing list. We don't want you to miss an issue of THE SUN, won't you send us $2.00 for renewal of your subscription?" That may seem to be a simple matter, but failing to renew subscriptions promptly, the Convention Office has to spend money on postage of from two to six cents on each person who fails to renew, time is consumed which might be better spent at some more constructive work of the Convention and our churches. Then "the late renewers" send $2.00. We have to re-enter that name; send it to the printer, and all of this takes time. Please heed the first notice sent you and renew your subscription promptly. Thank you.

MISSIONARY LOSSES RECORDED.

Mrs. Katherine Van Akin Gates for nearly 20 years a missionary of the American Board in India, but more recently on the faculty of the Kennedy School of Missions, died suddenly Sunday, March 27, in Hartford, Connecticut. In India, Mrs. Gates specialized in social service and work for women. For a period she was head of a social center in the tenement district of Bombay, and served as a member of the Executive Committee of the Bombay Presidency Infant Welfare Society. Born in Mt. Vernon, Mrs. Gates was educated at Beloit College, Class of 1906, and Hartford Theological Seminary (BD).

A cable has just reached the American Board, announcing the death in Peiping, North China, of William Satterthwaite, son of Mr. and Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite of Yardley, Pa., 30-year-old lay Congregational Christian missionary who went out to China with his doctor-wife, Adaline P. Satterthwaite, M.D., in 1947. Mr. Satterthwaite had been seriously ill with pleurisy, but had been reported improving. His death in a mission hospital in Peiping was caused by pulmonary embolism.

Mr. Satterthwaite leaves his wife, Dr. Adaline P. Satterthwaite and a small son, David Row, two years old; his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Amos Satterthwaite of Yardley, Pa.; and a sister, Miss Mabel Satterthwaite of State College, Pa.

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

THE PLIGHT OF THE SUN

Dr. Truitt let the cat out of the bag! The Sun is in financial straits. There is a sizeable deficit. What is the solution? Now is the time for discussion.

The Editor is not surprised that there is a deficit. He is surprised that we have been able to weather the storm of inflation so long without a larger deficit. Few religious periodicals have been able to continue at pre-inflationary rates. Some who tried to resist inflation were plunged deeply into debt. It appears that we have gone through the peak of inflation and have accrued only a modest deficit. This is a testimony concerning the economy of our entire cost of publication.

The second thing to remember is that we have had a deficit before. In fact, we have seldom been without one! The writer has had the pleasure of serving as chairman of the Board of Publications during the familiar depression and has vivid memories of a $1,500 deficit. Somehow it was paid, publication was continued as usual, and our church paper was enabled to round out a full century of service.

We are now in the heart of the Lenten period, the central message of which is that victory may be wrested from the very jaws of defeat. But what, you say, is the practical solution?

Our paid up subscriptions are just about normal. There is some fluctuation, but we are now at our approximate level. It is doubtful that we should ask our institutions for additional subsidy. What are the possible sources of additional revenue? (1) Subscriptions. The great majority of subscribers will be reasonable, remember the increase in cost of other commodities, and will willingly pay $3.00 a year or $5.00 for two years. This will probably sustain our publication program, minus the deficit. (2) Advertisement. We have begun a modest schedule of advertising which with proper cultivation is capable of considerable amplification. Since this is a relatively new policy, we cannot swing into capacity advertising overnight. We hope to adhere strictly to a select clientele. (3) At least one layman has indicated an interest in his church paper which is not satisfied with the payment of a small subscription. He is willing to associate himself with other likeminded laymen in giving substantial financial lift to The Sun.

Our condition, in the opinion of the writer, is by no means hopeless. Few churches or households function without occasional deficits and debts. Our problem is not only one of money, but also one of faith. The possibility of discontinuing publication has been suggested. From one standpoint, perhaps that would be a good thing. It would enable our entire constituency to see how sorely our church paper, which we casually take for granted, would be missed. Publication would then be resumed with determination, vigor and gratitude.

WAYS OF HELPING YOUR CHURCH PAPER.

1. Send Fresh, concise, interesting news from your church or conference. If you are too modest to tell about yourself or your church, then report news about others, news which would otherwise not be reported. Disarm the critics who say there is never anything about their church in the paper.

2. Commend The Sun to your friends. After you have read your copy, pass it on to your friends. Subscriptions are secured in this way. You do not have to be an official to do this. You simply have to be interested. Of course, it is not out of order to give one or more subscriptions to those whom you love or in whom you have a special interest. If The Sun has been a blessing to you and your home, why not send your testimony to Dr. W. E. Wisseman, chairman of the Board of Publications?

3. Study Your Church Paper. The contents of no one issue can be assimilated and digested by a casual reading. Some of the articles deal with profound, momentous issues; some have grave ethical and spiritual implications for those who read. Read your Church Paper not for entertainment, but for edification. In this way a paper faith becomes a personal faith.

4. Ministers have a unique opportunity to promote The Sun by distributing it in pastoral work, displaying it on literature tables, quoting from it in sermons, and promoting its circulation from the pulpit as well as in the home. Naturally we must look to our pastors for major reports and contributions. Church members like to see sermons and articles by their pastor in the church paper. Unless the pastor takes the initiative in promotion, the circulation of the church paper will diminish in the average parish.

5. Remember The Sun in your prayers. When people begin praying God works in mysterious ways His wonders to perform. New and more effective answers to all our problems will arise from a great chorus of prayer. Let us seek His will and follow His judgment. We shall do well to remember that God has been in the publishing business for a long time, that He is not easily thwarted in his purpose.

6. Remember The Sun in your Gifts and in your Will. "Where your treasure is, there will your heart be also." The church paper which has announced the birth, marriage and death of our loved ones, brought the promises of God regularly to our homes, is of inestimable value to many among us. There may be those who would like to send a token of appreciation to the treasurer, Rev. Wm. J. Andes, 637 South Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C. Here and there may be a benevolent or missionary society with funds for just such an emergency as we are experiencing. Finally, why not perpetuate your faith in religious journalism by remembering THE SUN in your will or in a codicil to your present will? We have a modest endowment fund. A host of devoted friends can make it grow. Whoever you are, there is something you can do to help THE SUN. Do it quickly, and God will bless you in your doing!

they are taught? And how shall they read aright unless they are taught to trust the light than can shine into their hearts from its pages?

In the perspective of the setback to the cause of Christianity occasioned through the devastations of World War II, and in the face of the social and the economic, the moral and spiritual confusion, the poverty and the fears which follow in its train, what is our world responsibility for Christian teaching.

Protestantism is calculated to have had $600,000,000 in property losses on the mission fields as a consequence of war's devastation. Among these were many colleges and universities partially or completely gutted, scores of high schools and hundreds of grammar schools, and finally numberless churches in which Christian teaching was carried on in Sunday school class and on weekdays. In the face of all these losses, which we have only begun in part to replace, what is our world responsibility for Christian teaching? How shall we raise year after year the funds necessary to support this great enterprise of Christian teaching, how shall we put it into the hearts of our youth to be willing to go out in the cause of Christian teaching to the needs of the earth, how shall we instill the missionary concern and passion unless we who are Christian teachers, and teachers of teachers, put missions into our teaching!

All this is another way of saying that missions and Christian teaching are no more inseparable than are evangelism and Christian teaching. The one is the handmaiden of the other. If we always remembered this, how much more of missions there would be in our Christian teaching! And how much more effective our missionary efforts could be in any land if we were utilizing fully the methods and the resources of Christian education!

Because Christian education is a world task, how grateful we as Christian educators in this country ought to be that we are not alone concerned about Christian teaching. Does it not thrill you to know that missionary teachers and leaders in many lands are eagerly, wisely and prayerfully planting Sunday schools, Christian schools and Christian colleges. Thank God that we who are represented here today are not alone in espousing Christian teaching as a world task.

Because Christian education is a world task, it is too big for anyone of

Christian Teaching---A World Task

By DR. LUTHER WESLEY SMITH.*

Christian teaching is a world task because Christian teaching, as the handmaiden of Christian preaching, has been perhaps the most effective method of evangelism in the record of the Christian movement. Consider what Christian education has done for the nation which stands today as our world's finest and best hope. . . .

Think of the amazing progress morally and spiritually which this nation made in the course of a great century and a quarter, beginning about 1800.

When you consider that this nation of ours made more progress morally and spiritually, and came to a higher level of character than any other large nation had ever attained in all human history, all within a period of a century and a quarter, I ask how, and why? The answer is through taking seriously a vast nation-wide program of Christian teaching for folks of every age.

We began the 19th century with no Christian teaching program or movement among the Protestant churches of our land. Here the Sunday School Movement began and spread increasingly throughout the decades of the 19th century. Men and women came to have a conscience concerning the possibility and the necessity for reaching every boy and girl with Christian teaching.

As a result of this program and passion, the Christian teaching movement in our church schools grew in one form and in another until by the end of World War I, we were reaching in America approximately two-thirds of our youth with some kind of religious teaching — Catholic, Protestant or Jewish.

Not only did we have our Sunday schools. Our churches planted secondary schools, church colleges and seminaries. Practically all the people of our land who received a secondary or a college education in the 19th century did so under Christian auspices. No nation can bring the great majority of its youth into the experience of being taught "line upon line, and precept upon precept concerning the knowledge and truth of Christ, and the revelation of God's will in His Word," and no nation can have the great majority of its lay and professional leaders come through the experience of training in Christian schools and colleges which take seriously their Christian responsibility, without having something profound happen to the thinking, the attitudes, and the character of that nation. And that is exactly what happened to America!

No more striking corroboration can be found of the validity of Christ's Great Commission than in the history and experience of the nation which is today our world's finest hope. Christian education is a world task because in the life and experience of our own native land we have long since discovered that Christian teaching is perhaps the most effective method of evangelism; certainly an indispensable method. . . .

Christian Teaching is a world task because we have only begun to win the world to Him. . . .

When we consider the tremendous, tragic and world-circling advance of atheistic Communism in the past twenty-five years, we realize that we have only begun to win the world to Christ. Indeed, encouraging as were the gains made by Christianity during the 19th century and during the first quarter of the 20th century, it remains to be said that so far as we can calculate, more people have been won to an active enthusiastic espousal of atheistic Communism in the last twenty years than were won personally and individually to an espousal of Christianity in all its 1900 years of history.

Again, how shall we reach and win "the silent billion," that more than one half of the people on our earth who cannot read. Long ago John Wycliffe realized that if the Gospel was to live and move with power in the hearts of his countrymen, every plowman in England must have in his hands an open Bible. . . . How can the Word of God kindle in them what has been kindled in us, unless they can read? And how can they read unless

SUFFOLK LETTER.

The editor of THE CHRISTIAN SUN in a kindly letter this week asked me what I would propose as a solution to the problem of financing our church paper. Let me say in the outset I believe in THE SUN. I have read it from my earliest years until now, and I have learned to look eagerly forward to every issue of it. However, I feel that anything I say should be taken with the understanding that I do not wish to interfere with a task that has been specifically assigned to the Board of Publications as that Board may work in conjunction with the Convention's Committee on Finance. I am for cooperation and team-work from bottom to top or top to bottom as you choose. Since, however, I have worked on the Board of Publications in differing capacities for a number of years, and was eager at anytime for suggestions when a member of that Board, I am sure no harm can be done by giving my views, especially since Editor House says in his letter: "I believe many people would be glad to know what solution the President of the Convention proposes." If I may then here goes.

On the basis of THE SUN belonging to the people of the Convention I feel they themselves should be given a chance to show their desire to have it continue or discontinue as the case may be. Obviously we are satisfied with a certain amount of subsidy from Boards and Institutions helped by the paper, and they are willing to allocate the amounts they are now allocating. It is the difference between what they give, and what we get from the subscriptions, that needs to be taken up. I believe that a goodly majority of the loyal subscribers to THE SUN would be willing to pay $3.00 per year for it. I would be willing through our proper channels to raise the price to $3.00 per year. To be sure it would be a test of the desire of the people to have it come to them at that higher price, but under the present circumstances I do not see any other workable way out.

I realize that not everyone wants the church paper as much as I do. It is not as interesting to them, and to some it does not seem necessary. By every practical way we should try to make it more necessary, more desirable. If the people know about it and feel that it fills a need in their own life they will buy it. If they do not feel that it is something they want then I am afraid we are working under a considerable handicap—in fact I know we are. I believe all of us who have to do with presenting the paper to our people must be patient with the people's desires and do whatever we can to mend our ways to measure up to their needs. "The test of the pudding is in the eating." To me our church paper has much to offer, but I want to know what the people think, and so do the Board of Publications, the editor, the managing editor and publisher. It may not be possible—it is not possible—for us to please everybody, but it should be our aim to bring pleasure to around 3,000 homes by the kind of paper we offer them.

Now for my final "ifs." If we make the paper more attractive, and if we price it at a figure commensurate with the times, and if we increase the number of readers we shall be placing THE SUN on the plain of usefulness which it rightly deserves in our churches and our Convention. One cannot read the recent issues of it and not be more interested in the work of the church. Leaving aside the Suffolk Letter everyone has done a good job for their church in these issues.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

IT REALLY HAPPENED.

Once upon a time there was a minister whose responsibilities seemed multitudinous. There was never an end to the requests for his time, talent and tales. For a generation he had served his congregation, his church and his Christ like a Knight from the Round Table.

By and by December came and the Christian Missionary Association of his conference met in its annual session. This minister had looked forward with anticipated exorbitance to reporting a renewal of all the memberships in his church. But fate has a way of altering plans and this minister could not be there.

One after another of the churches reported a renewal of their dues and in many instances some new memberships. But nothing was heard from this minister nor his church then nor immediately thereafter.

Finally, one day a most startling discovery was made. You see, this minister had a pocketbook (an unusual thing for a minister) and he had put in and taken out so much money that it was showing severe usage. Accordingly, Santa Claus took pity on him and brought him a new one with a zipper and all the trimmings. So the old pocketbook took a rest on the shelf. Fate again stepped in and jammed the zipper on the new one, so the process was reversed and the old replaced the new. And what do you know, this minister discovered in the old pocketbook a check for $130 made out to the Christian Missionary Association. It was then promptly delivered to the retiring Secretary, thence forwarded to the Treasurer and now has found its rightful resting place in the bank with the other C. M. A. funds.

The moral of this story is to never throw away an old pocketbook, because it might contain a check for the Christian Missionary Association.

PYRAMID NONSENSE.

The presence of mushrooming Pyramid Clubs in our community is a token of the susceptibility of the American public to propaganda. If thousands of people can be bilked by the lure of possible easy wealth, is it any wonder Communism is spread with the same lingo and promise.

Logically and mathematically a member of the Pyramid Club has only a very remote chance of winning. He cannot argue that the parties and the fun are his inducements for entering the vicious whirlpool of chance-taking. The real fact is the new member is greedy for the fat bonus at the top of the pyramid.

I have seen nothing in recent years to alarm me more about the sanity and moral righteousness of people who are otherwise fine than this insidious device for personal profit at the expense of one's friends. It is an absolute negation of Christian ethics. Jesus could hardly be found among these curious and gullible profiteers on friendship. His emphasis upon friendly service has quite a different profit motive. The rewards of virtue are the gifts of God.

The idea of each member getting two others is old in the Christian community, but what a difference in the motivation!

Let us soon be done with this new fad which exhausts our time and our effort and choose during this Lent a

News of Elon College

CAMPAIGNS.

There are different ways of securing necessary funds for the support of institutions of higher learning. If the institution is owned and controlled by the state it may be supported by taxation. Such support, however, is not as easily secured as imagined. Individuals charged with the responsibility of securing funds for the support of our state institutions must come before the proper state authorities, outline their needs and present their claims. They usually ask for more than they get. That is to be expected.

If the institution be a private or a church institution outside sources of support other than students must be secured. Support for this type of institution does not come voluntarily. Contributions must be sought. Years ago large contributions were sought from a few individuals, the feeling being that the man in moderate circumstances was not interested in higher education sufficiently to justify gifts even though they were small. The consensus of opinion today is that the day of large gifts for the support of higher education is past. That if the college is to secure necessary funds for an aggressive and progressive program a large number of people must be interested to the extent of making contributions even though these contributions may be comparatively small. When an institution goes out to secure a million or two million dollars it is faced with the necessity of approaching a large number of people. This kind of a plan entails an enormous amount of work. To accomplish the task a compact and inclusive organization must be formed. No one individual or small group of individuals can interview the required number of prospective givers but with an organization sufficiently large to reduce the task of the individual within the organization to a reasonable figure will in a measure assure success. The extent of success in such an effort depends upon the individuals comprising the organization and enthusiasm with which the campaign is undertaken.

In regards to Elon College our constituency is divided on this question. We all realize that the college must have increased support but some of us don't like campaigns. We don't like to be a part of an organization where we will be expected to approach individuals for contributions nor do we like to be approached by others. We would like to see the college supported but so far as we are concerned we just don't want to be bothered. There are others, and I like to feel that we are in the majority, who are not only interested in seeing the college supported properly but we are willing and ready to give what we should and to assume our share of the obligations. We are not only not adverse to asking others to contribute but we are quite willing to contribute ourselves and say to all who are interested, "Come on, let's do the job and get it done as quickly as possible."

At Elon College we need two million dollars. We are asking for two million dollars but the fact that we need the money and that we are asking for it is no guarantee that we shall get it. To raise this kind of money for Elon College will require an efficient organization, one that is alert to its responsibilities and the willingness upon the part of everyone to contribute to the extent of his ability. If we can secure two million dollars for Elon College within the next few years the college will be able to remain in the front ranks of Christian higher education in this country. If not the college will lose confidence in itself and its constituency will question its ability to serve efficiently in the field of Christian higher education. This responsibility must rest squarely upon the hearts and shoulders of the church, the alumni, and friends of Christian higher education. Such a constituency must and will not fail! Don't be annoyed if you are appealed to for money for the college. Don't grow impatient if you are not approached as early as you would like to be. Voluntary contributions are greatly appreciated and mean the world to the college's program.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

There are three Sunday schools and four churches in our Convention who remembered the college this week with a contribution. Your remembrance is appreciated and the gifts are most helpful.

The other day I got in the car with a friend of mine. The motor was acting badly. He explained, "I don't know what is the matter with my car, the motor is missing." What he meant was that one cylinder was not functioning which meant that we were not riding very smoothly. What would happen in our Convention if every 195 of our churches would send in a contribution every month? We certainly would be running smoothly but when there are so many Sunday schools and churches that do not send in contributions the going is not so smooth. We are not hitting on all cylinders. We don't need a technician to tell us the trouble. We don't need a mechanic to make adjustments. All we need is a spirit of generosity and a willingness to lend a hand to a great institution undertaking a great task. If you could realize how badly we need your help you would not withhold your contributions. The college would like to express its appreciation for past support and for the support that will be forthcoming throughout the days of the present year.

Not long ago an English schoolmaster—a veteran in that high service, was asked:

"Where in your timetable do you teach religion?" He replied:

"We teach it in arithmetic by accuracy. We teach it in language by learning to say what we mean. We teach it in history by humanity. We teach it in geography by breadth of mind. We teach it on the playground by fair play. We teach it in kindness to animals, by courtesy to servants, by good manners to one another and by trustfulness in all things. We teach it by showing the children that we, their elders, are their friends and not their enemies."—J. P. Jacks in The Indiana Freeman.

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

WHERE THE MISSION DOLLAR GOES

Often we are asked where the mission dollar goes. Sometimes we are told by those who do not know. It is fair that all who give should know where the money goes, and what is done with it. Here is a frank answer:

The Mission Board of the Southern Convention has adopted a budget for 1949 of approximately $65,000.: It made appropriations on this basis. If the Board receives this amount, which it never has, the work can go forward, and the dollar will be divided as given here.

Overhead Expense

Board members are scattered over North Carolina and Virginia. Expenses are paid for them to hold meetings. There are other small items of postage, insurance on property, etc., which must be paid. This item for this year is expected to be one cent of the dollar.

The Christian Sun

The Convention authorizes the Board to pay $1,000 annually to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is because subscriptions do not pay for publishing the paper and because the paper is used for missionary education. This item is one and one-half cents of the mission dollar.

Convention Office

Since the Convention Office handles the funds and does most of the work for the Mission Board, the Convention requires the Board to pay for the support of the office. Once the Board had its own office and workers. Now we cooperate with other Boards through the Convention Office. This item uses six cents of the mission dollar.

The Home Boards

The Southern Convention does work directly only in its own area, but we want to have a share in the work of our church throughout America. This we do through the Home Boards with offices in New York. New churches are built in strategic areas, rural pastorates are undergirded, there is work among the Indians, Negroes, Mexicans and Migrants, and our hands of helpfulness reach to Puerto Rico, Hawaii and Alaska. We send to the Home Boards four cents of our missionary dollar.

Aid on Pastor's Salary

To begin a new church it is necessary to pay someone to start the work.

We have some churches that have not come to self-support. This is true in Bay View, Lynchburg and Winston-Salem. At Union (Southampton), near Franklin, Virginia, a new town has recently been built around our country church. We needed a minister there all the time, but the church was not able to pay an adequate salary. Our smaller rural churches can do best work by being grouped into pastorates, and to get this started they often need aid on pastor's salary. At Chapel Hill our small church is not able to keep a man at work with it and the numerous students from our churches who are in the University. When the president quit being the pastor at Elon College, it seemed to be necessary to aid the community church in getting started with a full-time minister. In Carroll County, Virginia, we do our one really missionary work. At present we do not have a man on the field, but there is money in the budget for this work. This aid on pastor's salary, according to this year's budget, will use twenty-two and one-half cents of the missionary dollar.

Building Aid

During the depression and recent war little improvement has been made to our church buildings. After twenty years of neglect, much building needs to be done. Here and there grants need to be made to long established churches so they can improve their property, build a parsonage, or add to their church buildings. The younger churches must be helped to build. Bay View in Norfolk built the best it could during the war period, but now it has outgrown its tiny, attractive church. More building is necessary. Asheboro has just completed a new building, something it could not have done without missionary aid. It is now a contributing church. Lynchburg needs a new building, and must soon call for assistance. In numerous places we could build new churches if we had the money and ministers. That is our one chance of real growth. To this building program we want to give twenty-five cents of your missionary dollar.

Foreign Work

When the above items are added, you will note that there is only forty cents left of your missionary dollar to spread the gospel around the world.

We have special interest in Shaowu, China. We cannot forget the Jacksons, the Riggs, and Miss Burr, and their comrades in Christian work. I thought we were supporting the Mission with our $10,000 annually until the report of the American Board treasurer showed me that the Mission used $18,000 last year. (Prices are high in China.) Perhaps fifteen cents of our dollar will go to Shaowu. The other twenty-five cents will seek to establish Christianity in the remainder of China, in Japan, India, Ceylon, Africa, the Philippines, the Caroline and Marshall Islands, Mexico, Greece, Turkey, Syria, and Lebanon. And we must not forget our fellow-churchmen in Spain, Bulgaria, Czechoslovakia, and South America. In France we have a "Mission of Fellowship to Europe. There are churches, hospitals, orphanages, schools from kindergarten to university, literacy programs, rural programs, radio, publications, Bible distribution, rehabilitation, and evangelism all to be carried forward in all these lands by our quarter of a dollar.

WE GIVE MORE

Yes, we give more than a dollar to missions annually. The budget for this year is based on two dollars for each church member. That will be eighty cents with which to build the Kingdom of God outside the United States. It will take a long time at that rate to combat Communism and establish Christianity in our world. But we have never given that much yet, and it is not the Apportionment for this year. To reach that goal it will be necessary to go far beyond the amount asked by the Conferences.

For this reason it is sincerely hoped that every man, woman, and child connected with all our churches will make an offering at Easter for Home and Foreign Missions, and that the offerings will be in keeping with the needs of the world.

Please see that the envelopes sent to pastors and Sunday school superintendents are properly distributed, and that all possible givers are instructed about the pressing needs for missionary endeavor in our time, if our world is to be saved.

This year we will spend for military purposes more than $100.00 for each person—men, women and children. In contrast we are asked to

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

TO THE PRESIDENTS OF WOMEN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION.

DEAR PRESIDENTS:

Our Convention President, Mrs. O. H. Paris, has asked me to fill the vacancy as chairman of the Family Life Superintendent, created by Mrs. Robert M. Kimball's moving from our Convention.

I want to call your attention to National Family Week which is May 1-8, and I hope that every society will see that worthwhile programs and activities are planned for the families of your church during this week.

These are some suggestions that your local society may sponsor:

1. A Family Festival—An evening of fun and recreation with participation by the whole family unit from the youngest to the oldest.

2. A Family Night—A supper and program. You may have a family basket supper.

3. Have families attend Morning Worship Hour together.

4. Help the minister in visiting new families, calling on absentees and parents of new babies.

You may order from the United Council of Church Women, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, at 10c per copy, a short but very good Family Life play entitled "This Citadel of Faith."

Homebuilders are World Builders. This would be a good theme for your Family Life programs. We must start with sound living and thinking in our homes in order to promote better family life for all people of every race, group and creed.

MRS. MARY J. STEPHENSON, Suffolk, Virginia.

SPRING RALLY IN GREENSBORO.

The morning session was called to order by the Superintendent of the Greensboro District, Mrs. Wm. G. Davis. Mrs. Mack Welch led the opening worship service, using as her theme, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go."

As the roll call of societies was held, one person from each church told of "something new" started this year. Many interesting ideas were told, including a prayer box each month, boosting attendance at inspirational meetings, organizing a circle for young women, having a popularity contest for the Cradle Roll, building a hut for the church, organizing a Young People's Society, and having mission study for children in a small rural church.

Reports were given by the District Superintendents, Mrs. Davis and Mrs. W. W. Snyder, suggesting places where improvements could be made.

Mrs. Kenneth Register, Cradle Roll Superintendent, gave suggestions and named books for use with the Cradle Roll; Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, as Superintendent of Children, did a similar job, as did Mrs. Mark Andes, Superintendent of Young People.

The main address was given by Miss Elizabeth McGuffie, and she spoke on "Some Whys, Some Whats, and Some Hows for Women." She was both inspiring and practical, in telling how to put the most into our work.

During the offertory, Miss Selma Rush of the Greensboro Church, sang, "I Know That My Redeemer Liveth." The offering was to be used for the Shaowu Mission.

After a delicious lunch served by the women of the church, the afternoon session was called to order by Mrs. W. W. Snyder, Superintendent of the Burlington District.

Mrs. F. C. Lester, State President, gave "Something Extra," including some announcements and other points not covered. During this period, honor was given to Mrs. J. R. Foster, who is the oldest president of a woman's group, at 80, and Mrs. Phillip Fawcette, who is the youngest president, at 27. Mrs. Foster is president at Elon College, while Mrs. Fawcette is president at Monticello. Honor was also given to Mrs. Artelia Poole, 71, of Haw River, who in sixteen years of being president, has missed only one meeting.

Mrs. W. W. Sloan of Elon College, who recently made a trip with her husband to Puerto Rico, described this experience in "Impressions of Puerto Rico."

Dr. F. C. Lester told us "Where Our Mission Dollar Goes," explaining with figures and graph what per cent goes to home and foreign missions, expenses, Convention Office, and others.

During the business session, new officers were elected: Greensboro District—Mrs. Mack Welch, Superintendent; Mrs. W. F. Worsham, Assistant Superintendent; Mrs. Ed Chilton, Secretary. Burlington District—Mrs. Harold Ingle, Superintendent; Mrs. A. L. Hook, Assistant; Mrs. Wm. P. Mahan, Secretary.

Mt. Zion Church was chosen as the meeting place for the Rally next spring.

Miss McGuffie gave a Bible Study, explaining the Book of Luke as a Series of Journeys, making it very interesting.

The benediction was given by Rev. Mack V. Welch.

(NOTE: The other three rallies in North Carolina had programs similar to the one held in Greensboro.)

WOMAN'S CONVENTION—SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

June 13-15, 1949.

Please note that instead of having four days, we will have only two full days, opening on Monday, June 13, at 2:00 p. m., and closing Wednesday, June 15, at noon. The total cost is only $6.00. Every society should at least send its President. As much as possible of the School of Missions program will be incorporated into the Convention Program.

Some Highlights of the Program.

1. Miss Helen Kenyon, Moderator of the General Council, will speak on Monday night, June 13. This is the first woman Moderator we have ever had. She is a wonderful speaker and dynamic person.

2. Dr. Mary Frances Thelen, Bible teacher at Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg, Va., will present the new Bible study and will speak on Tuesday night, having charge of Communion Service.

3. Mrs. E. R. Ould of Roanoke, Va., an authority on building Christian Family Life will speak and lead a discussion on that topic.

4. Pattie Lee Coghill will introduce and present the new mission studies.

5. Timothy Chang will greet you in person.

6. Mrs. Scott, Literature Chairman, will have the new packets and Plan Book ready for the fall work.

With the regular business of a two-year Convention going on, plus the wonderful speakers above listed, this should make a full and worthwhile program for anyone to attend.

"A God-forsaken man is a man who has forsaken God."

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

Easter is nearly here. It is the nicest time in the Church. There are lots of flowers and usually many sweet-smelling lilies. We wear new clothes because it is spring and our heavy ones are too warm. We wear them because the trees and flowers are putting on new clothes, too.

The bunny or rabbit gets a lot of our attention. There is an old legend that tells how he came to be associated with Easter. It happened in Germany that some mothers planned to color eggs and hide them in the woods. When the children found the eggs they asked, "Who brought these here?" The mothers said, "Perhaps it was a little rabbit." You can make up your own story as to how it happened.

Easter is the time when church people think about the newness of life about us, the springtime and God's wonderful promises of love. The ugly brown bulbs sprout green blades and have sweet flowers, the funny, old dried seeds sprout and turn green. We may put away our old habits for new ones.

If you want to make some Easter cards to send to your friends here are some ideas: Get some heavy construction paper and cut it to fit your envelopes. Get a plain bone or pearl button with two holes in it and sew it to your card. The button can be the face of a number of things—a boy, girl, flowers, pixie or bunny. If you make a bunny—add his ears, put black ink in the holes and you have his eyes. You may draw or paint on his clothing or you could cut a shirt, bow tie and pants from scraps of cloth and glue them on.

The very thin, colored, powder puffs that come from the dime store make nice bunnies, puppies or kittens. For a rabbit, you paste one round for the head, one for the body. Cut one in half for the ears and stick on a piece of cotton for the tail. The cat can be made the same way, but use a piece of twine for the long tail. For the puppy use the puffs across the paper instead of up and down, divide one puff in four parts for the legs. You can scallop these for flowers and sew them on the paper, using yellow thread for the centers and green for stem and leaves. Cut one part of the way from the top, part from the bottom and glue in the center that remains, it will make a floppy butterfly. Add his feelers and eyes.

Write your greeting and sign your name. You may say: "A Glad Easter," "Happy Easter Wishes," "Springtime Wishes."

I hope that you have beautiful cards.

A HAPPY DAY ENDING.

By ALICE WINGATE FRARY.

Issued by the National Kindergartners Association.

"I never feel so motherly," said a young woman, laughingly apologetic, "as when I have finally tucked Billy in his bed for the night."

Whatever stressful periods may have marred the day, most mothers covet for their children a happy bedtime. To get through the necessary preparations tranquilly, especially if both parent and child are tired, is not always easy. It may happen of itself several nights out of the week, but too often the hour that ought to be full of pleasure is a trying climax to a wearing day.

Not many children settle down to sleep directly after hilarious romping; more come to grief as a result of such a mistaken privilege and are found to be better off if they have their lively play earlier in the day.

One mother finds it worthwhile to begin bedtime preparations a full half-hour before it is strictly necessary. Then, with clothes neatly arranged, bath over, and toys in place, there is time for quiet play before the good nights are said. A special box of crayons and a pad of plain paper should always be within reach. The psychological effect of being ready for bed makes it simpler to keep the small boy or girl quiet than when the extra time is allowed downstairs. Of course, this is the ideal period for stories, but when the mother is without a maid her leisure hour usually comes earlier or later. Unquestionably, it is wiser for little ones under six to have a light, early supper than to sit at the family dinner table at night. Once accustomed to this arrangement, they will consider the quiet play period, in dressing gown and slippers, sufficiently compensating. And, after ten or fifteen minutes of such relaxation, they will usually be happy to sing a stanza of a hymn, repeat their prayers, nestle down contentedly, and go to sleep.

Just where rewards cease to be legitimate and begin to verge on bribery is not always easy to determine. I knew a high-strung little girl of four, however, who lay serenely waiting for sleep each night because of the Fairy Package which—if bedtime was quiet and happy—would be found under pillow in the morning. Previously she would toss, call repeatedly, and use an entirely unnecessary amount of her own and her mother's strength before settling down for the night, the package was purposely limited to something in itself insignificant—a few raisins in an envelope, a length of colored ribbon, or a piece of silver foil; occasionally it would be a penny. Yes, it sometimes taxed the mother's ingenuity, but it meant that after careful attention had been paid to the small daughter's needs, there was peace instead of insistent demands to satisfy wholly imaginary wants. In this case it meant, too, that when, after a few months, the mother declared the idea worn out, the little girl had acquired the habit of relaxing for sleep promptly.

Some "reggler wrigglers" snuggle down contentedly after a few minutes of the singing of favorite songs. And this is an opportunity above all others to imbue the little ones' thoughts, consciously and subconsciously, with many delightful hymns.

It is a particularly satisfactory experience for the child for Mother sometimes to give Father a clear field at bedtime. He may omit one or two customary rites, but he will have absorbing tales from his not-too-far-distant boyhood. Besides this, he has unhurried leisure to talk about the moon or the stars after he turns off the light.

OUR CHRISTIAN WORLD MISSION.

give two dollars per church member for world-wide evangelism. Which, do you think, will do more good for the peace and well-being of the world, the $100.00 you must pay for each member of the family, or the $2.00 which you are asked to contribute to missions? Is the military program of our nation worth fifty times as much as the missionary program of our Church? The real answer, as our people give it, will be expressed in the missionary offering.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

WHAT CAN YOUTH DO IN THIS DYNAMIC HOUR?

1. Youth Can Tackle Itself!

Youth must be right, or it can never right the world. Youth must be thoroughly Christian—or it is thoroughly dangerous. Its natural daring, readiness for adventure, impatience with dead tradition, love for forward-sweeping action are powerful drives. If God is at the control of those drives, there is no limit to the contribution youth can make in redeeming the world.

But let those drives be controlled by malignant ideas and cults, and youth hurries its world on to destruction. Look at the fascist states, past and present. They were primarily youth movements—and in them youth wound up with a shirt on it, marching off in a goose-step. The times are tragically ripe for the rise of other demagogues, other fanatics, other crack-pots.

Now is the time—and quickly—for Christian Youth to prepare itself, assess its powers, and harness those powers to God's will.

2. Youth Can Tackle Its Church.

Youth has the qualities the church must have. And the church has tasks challenging enough for every youth—as he is and as God will make him. To that challenge youth will respond, for in it youth will find a zest, a zing which no easy life can impart.

Too long the idea has been abroad that religion's main role is to stop something, when actually its foremost call is to start something. With its accent always on the positive, youth has no patience with the trivial, the insignificant, the purposeless. It is like the veteran actor who said recently, "'Tis better to have a small part in a Class A drama, than to have the starring role in a flop.'" When it is made to see that the building of the Kingdom of God on earth is a Class A drama, youth will undertake its role eagerly, heroically.

3. Youth Can Tackle Its World.

Walt Whitman called for "saner, life-giving" wars. Youth must fight those wars, and fight them with spiritual weapons. There is nothing about youth that is anti-life; it wants no truck with religion aimed at only getting people into heaven. It wants to bring heaven down to earth. Not content to pray, "Lead Thou me on amid the encircling gloom," youth prays instead, "O Light of the World, help me to help Thee break through the darkness and banish the gloom!"

"With a heart for any fate," youth faces the Atomic Age . . .

YOUTH NEED SPIRITUAL INSIGHTS.

By CHARLES S. JOHNSON,
President, Fisk University,
Nashville, Tennessee.

It is impossible to escape the daily reminders that our youth, despite our own impression of the constancy of traditional standards, are freshly exposed to a very new and very different social age. The forces impinging on them are more dramatically acute and disturbing than anything their elders knew. They need and want the strengthened spiritual insights, and guidance that can best come from an alert and socially-wise moral leadership, patterned to youth and its frustrations.

ATTEND SUNDAY SCHOOL.

With every passing year my conviction deepens that Christian truth is the only hope for this world. The greatest imperative of life is to get men and women to experience this truth and then under the guidance of the Holy Spirit to go out into the world to live and to teach it in all areas of life. Some day we will understand that our Sunday schools rank among the most important institutions of earth. They are organized to teach Christian truth to human beings.

The destiny of our nation depends more largely upon their success than our finite minds can grasp since they are our adopted means for implementing indispensable truth and for getting it into the hearts of men and women. They should have the full support and cooperation of all the people. It is literally true that there can be no freedom of the highest order until it comes as a result of truth.

The future of our great nation would be immersed in brilliant hope if the boys and girls of this nation could be enrolled in our Sunday schools and there taught the truth for successful living and service.

THE HUMAN RACE.

Trifles, it has been said, make up the sum of human things.

America's miserable traffic accident record is, in a sense, the sum of all our trifling human frailties. Most of us know how to drive and walk with safety, but it is so human to let our absurd little personal foibles botch our better judgment.

In their 1949 book of street and highway accident data The Travelers Insurance Companies have recognized this fact. The grim record of traffic deaths and injuries is all there, in tabular form, but the booklet is lightened by a pictorial presentation of the probable cause of many of the accidents. There is the fellow who breaks every ordinance in the book to get home in 28½ minutes flat, only to read a comic book during the minute and a half he saves. There is the teen-ager who knows every rule in the baseball book but none of the laws on the traffic books. And the woman who can spot a nylon stocking sale from four aisles away but can't see a red traffic light in front of her nose.

We're all there, mirrored in at least one of the cartoons!

Let us hope this sly satire will succeed in personalizing the lessons of safety where sterner warnings have failed.

GOOD, BUT BAD.

Motor vehicle fatalities dropped again in 1948. The decrease, even though it was less than one per cent, is all to the good.

Motor vehicle injuries, however, rose again in 1948. The increase, amounting to almost eight per cent, is a bad sign.

Such emphasis is placed on the death rate in accident prevention work. This is natural because death always makes the headlines. But it is dangerous, too, because it is so easy to become complacent.

THE FUTURE LIFE (EASTER).

LESSON III.—APRIL 17, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Christ has been raised from the dead, the first fruits of those who have fallen asleep.—I Corinthians 15:20.

LESSON: John 5:25-29, 14:1-4; I Corinthians 15:1-8, 20-26; II Corinthians 4:16-5:10.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Acts 2:22-32.

An Age-Long Question.

"If a man die, shall he live again?" is an old, old, indeed an age-old question. Job asked it centuries ago, and men asked it centuries before Job asked it. For from the beginning men have wondered what death meant. Was it the end of things, a dead-end street, or was there something after death? Was it a door instead of a dead-end? And if there was something after death, what was it like? What can we know about it anyway? Modern man still asks the old question. Indeed the question is a very modern and pertinent one. Today as always men are asking, "If a man die shall he live again?" Life, and death as well, derive so much of their meaning according to the answer that can be given to this question.

The question has pertinency for our family circle, for since last Easter another member of our steadily decreasing family circle has been taken away by death. Two weeks before Christmas, my brother apparently in good health, got up from the chair in which he had been sitting, walked into the bedroom and fell dead upon the bed. Was that the end of him? Did his spirit survive a failure of his heart or the accident of a blood clot in his brain? If his spirit is still alive, where is it? How fares it? What hopes have we for it? Is there any possibility that we will ever see him again? Will we know him, and will he know us? If Easter has any answer to these questions, we would like to have them. And so would thousands of other folks who have stood by the open grave and seen the casket that contained the earthly remains of their loved ones lowered into the grave to be seen no more. And so would thousands of other people who could not so stand by the grave of their loved ones but who had to forego even that last tribute of respect and devotion, because their loved ones had died in places far away, and in many cases did not even have a burial. "Come Easter, can you tell us anything that would sustain faith and quicken hope?" If a man die, shall he live again?

A Sufficient and Satisfactory Answer.

Thanks be unto God, there is a satisfactory and sufficient answer. Easter tells us that even though a man dies, he shall live again. It tells us that he that liveth and believeth in Christ shall never die. It comes with all the assurance and authority of a stubborn historical fact, as well attested to as any incident in history can be attested to, that our Lord Jesus Christ Who had been dead, came alive again from the Tomb. Even the enemies of Christ had to admit that He was alive again. And His friends bore glad and genuine witness to the fact that He was alive again. The strange and startling fact is that they could hardly believe the fact themselves and did so only after the evidence was so convincing and so consistent and constant. Luke says that our Risen Lord showed Himself alive for a space of forty days, and by many infallible proofs. And he could have added in many different ways and to many different groups. There are some so-called historical happenings that might be questioned, but there is no question about the fact of the Resurrection of Jesus. Easter tells us that Christ arose from the dead and became the first fruits of them that slept. It tells us that He is alive, and forevermore.

It tells us also that because Christ lives, we, too, shall live. There is no evidence that Jesus ever told an untruth or a half truth. He always vindicated His word. He always kept His promises, even a promise that He would meet His disciples after He rose from the dead, even being so specific as to state the place where He would appear to them. And Jesus said that because He lived, we too would live. He said that through faith in Him even though a man should die he would live again. He put it in another way when He said that whosoever believed in Him should never die. It is the word of God's Son. Heaven and earth may pass away but His word stands steadfast and true. It is a great word. It staggers the human mind as to how these things can be. But millions of men and women have taken them at their face value and they know that already they have passed from death unto life, and they know that they are true forevermore. You and I have Christ's word that if a man dies he shall live again.

Easter tells us also that our loved ones shall live too. They are not dead, they are just away. We shall all have one another again. The family circle broken here for the time being, shall be reunited again there in the Father's house of many mansions. Therefore because we know whom we have believed, we may be fully persuaded that God is able to keep that and those which we commit unto Him against that day. Wherefore we can thank God and take courage.

To be sure there are many things that Easter does not tell us, many things about the life after each death that we would like to know, but which we do not know. The blessed fact is that although Easter does not tell us about the how of the life after death, it does tell us about the fact of the life after death. We do not know anything about the Father's house of many mansions, but we may be sure that He who made the world for our bodies can make a place for our spirits. We do not know just what kind of body we will have there, but we can take His word for it that He will fashion our bodies like unto His own glorious body. We do not know just who will be there or what it is like there, but we can know that He will be there. Therefore we can look at the things which are not seen, for the things that are not seen are eternal. And we can thank God that when the earthly tabernacles of our bodies are dissolved here, we have a building of God, a house not made with hands, eternal in the heavens. Wherefore be of good courage. Wherefore be steadfast and unmoveable, always abounding in the work of the Lord, forasmuch as we know that our labor is not in vain in the Lord. For even though a man die he shall live again. And whosoever liveth and believeth in Him shall never die. This is the victory that overcometh the world. This is the fact that gives meaning to the life that now is and meaning to the life that is to come.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

COMMUNISM AND THE PRESENT CRISIS IN RELIGIOUS EDUCATION.

By REV. HALSEY R. CARSTENS,
Minister of Education, First Congregational Church, Mason City, Iowa.

If you knew that there were two passenger trains speeding toward a head-on collision you would want to do something about it, if you could. There are two trains rapidly speeding toward a head-on collision, and these two trains are Communism and Christianity, the former of which totally denies God and utterly repudiates the dignity of man, the latter of which believes in God and teaches respect for human personality. This constitutes for us today a crisis unparalleled in the history of the world.

This issue has now become an issue of survival, and therefore one which we must deal with, not in any fanatical way but in a thoughtful, realistic, purposeful way. In considering the issue there are two steps, first, what we are up against, and second, what we are to do about it.

The Soviet idea of education is but one example of what we are up against. Lenin said, "The school, apart from life, apart from politics, is a lie and a hypocrisy." (Colliers, January 1, 1949). Stalin defined education in one word: "weapon," and said "Its effect depends on who controls the weapon, and on whom it is intended it should strike."

Religious instruction in Russia is taboo. Teachers are instructed to tell their pupils that "God is a myth thought up by people a thousand years ago to explain things they did not then understand."

Religious education is faced today with a responsibility so enormous that what is being done is scarcely a drop in the proverbial bucket in comparison with what must be done. Religious educational agencies in the United States include all our churches in all denominations with their church schools, and all their projects for religious training, and many other agencies of a more general nature. But all these agencies put together are utterly inadequate to stem the tide of anti-religious sentiment rapidly developing in our own country today. Our religious educational effort now must take on the nature of legitimate propaganda, and follow a new approach. Passion for Christian discipleship comparable to the Russian devotion to the Communist cause must be aroused. This is a matter which every individual must take to heart. Such a passion as this on the part of individuals must then become the passion of the church. Every church in every place must commit itself to an all-inclusive plan of action centered around educational evangelism, an evangelism for survival.

To accomplish such a purpose as this requires: (1) Greater respect for, and stronger commitment to, the Christian way and to the Church in personal attitude and thinking; (2) Active contact with Church life through more regular attendance at church services and greater participation in church activities; (3) Willingness to read and pass on to others leaflets and literature promoting the Christian way and the church (within the last ten days the Communists have commanded their 2,200,000 members in Italy to read at least one article a day in some Red periodical); (4) Personal conversation with friends and acquaintances recommending the Christian way and the Church; (5) Writing letters to public officials, to opinion-forming agencies of various kinds, and to periodicals with the purpose of making known individual Christian sentiment and urging Christian procedures; (6) Volunteering for and being willing to undergo adequate training within the church, or elsewhere, to qualify the individual to speak and to teach intelligently about the Christian religion; (7) Considering carefully the causes of the home and foreign mission work of the church, even to a dedication of life to such a calling if the individual feels divinely led; (8) Considering for one's self, and/or encouraging the same for others, a career in the ministry, in religious education, church music, or some other major field of religious work; (9) Contributing financially to the church budget in such amount that these compelling educational objectives of the church can be realized; (10) Toward these objectives the establishment in every local church of every denomination a Bureau of Religious Intelligence whose vital and active business it shall be not only to defend the church constituency against subversive influences but also to increase religious literacy for young and old alike, according to the suggestions already mentioned, a Bureau of Religious Intelligence which would go further and do more than a local church Board of Religious Education.

If we are to stem the rising tide of atheism upon which ride the enemies of religion with their deliberately planned propaganda, every member of the church must be not only alerted but activated for this present struggle to retain our religious freedom, and deal effectively with the present crisis in religious education. To this Godly purpose of educational evangelism for survival, this is a clear call to all Christian-minded people to give their decisive and determined commitment. If the subject discussed today is a matter of conviction with you and you are interested in such a procedure as this we should like to hear from you. Thank you!

our denominations to undertake by itself. Can we not take satisfaction in the fact that 40 sister denominations of Protestantism in America, comprising over 90 per cent of American Protestantism, are giving themselves to the same task, out of love to the same Saviour? And they are doing their cooperation planning in the bonds of Christian love. Let every man and woman and youth thrill to this fact.

And is anything more needed on this earth than a rebirth of vision in our own hearts and its implications concerning our responsibility for Christian Teaching right here in our own land? It is well to point to the gains and to the victories of the ministries of Christian Teaching from 1800 to 1925; but what about the out-running tide of interest and concern for Christian Teaching in the last twenty-five years? What are we to think and do concerning the more than one-half of America's youth who are now unreached with any kind of

DEAR FRIENDS:

Spring is here, and the boys are beginning to look for bats and balls for the old baseball game. It seems that friends, who remember being boys themselves once, have sent money to buy this necessary equipment in years gone by. May we count on those friends again this year?

The Easter dresses are coming in rather slow, and Easter soon will be here. Every little girl must have a new dress. It must be great fun when the "Fitting Day" comes around.

When the Easter clothes for the orphanage were received in Burlington, there was one box among them that you should know about. It was brought by one of the daintiest little grandmothers in the church. And it contained a little gray coat trimmed with red plaid, a blue dress, a white one and a yellow one. All three dresses had socks and panties to match, along with a matching petticoat, too. There also was a pair of black patent leather sandals and a darling little barrette for a little girl's hair. These things all had been chosen as carefully as if they were going to one of the donor's own grandchildren. And then, too, from one good friend there was a beautiful new sweater for every boy and every girl. A wonderful gift!

Not many people can send a complete outfit or a hundred sweaters, but many can send one dress that would make one little girl very happy.

Last week, a nurse from the State Board of Health gave the school children a hearing test. Two of our children showed some deficiency. They will be carried to an ear specialist to see what should be done for them.

On the whole, our children seem to be doing very well in school. Some are making excellent grades. Others are average, and still others probably do better at fishing. They make up a pretty normal group of children.

Problems arise each day, but so far, they have been handled satisfactorily, and our Children's Home is running as smoothly as it could under the circumstances in the opinion of those in charge.

CHRISTIAN TEACHING—A WORLD TASK.

religious teaching? Are we to do nothing concerning the fact that never was there less of the truth and vital influences of religion in public education in American than now? Because of our denominational envies and shortsightedness, we have permitted and often abetted the almost complete divorce of religion and education in our land. We must find a way to reverse this process.

Do we not need the rekindling of the vision in our own hearts if we are to free ourselves as religious educators from the enervating rationalizations in which we indulge by which we justify ourselves that we are not reaching as many of America's children as our fathers did proportionately, because we are more anxious to do a better job with those whom we are reaching. Of course we must do a better job; but also we must reach more, or our America will become a pagan land.

MISSIONARY LOSSES.

The Satterthwaites went to Peiping shortly before the siege by the Communists of that city in December.

Born in Yardley, Pa., Mr. Satterthwaite studied industrial and mechanical education at Penn State College for a year and a half and mechanical engineering at Drexel Institute of Technology for a year.

In China Mr. Satterthwaite has been teaching industrial arts and using to great advantage his technical knowledge on the making of artificial limbs as well as that of electrical engineering and general business administration.

Mr. Satterthwaite and his doctor-wife, Adaline Satterthwaite, M.D., were commissioned as career missionaries of the American Board in the First Congregational Church of Palo Alto, California, Rev. G. A. Casaday, minister, on August 10, 1947.

* * * *

Dr. Jesse K. Marden (M.D. and D.Sc.) for thirty-two years a medical missionary of the American Board of Foreign Missions in Turkey and Greece, died Monday, March 21, at Pilgrim Place, Claremont, Calif., at the age of seventy-seven years. Dr. Marden was born in Aintab, Turkey, of missionary parents and educated at St. Johnsbury Academy, Dartmouth (Class of 1895) and the University of Michigan (M.D. 1898). In 1930 his alma mater, Dartmouth College, conferred on Dr. Marden the honorary degree of Doctor of Science. The citation accompanying the degree listed Dr. Marden's skill as a physician and surgeon among the racial groups of Asiatic Turkey and his "self-forgetful ministry which won support for the erection of an excellent hospital." It also commented on Dr. Marden's "accomplishments as Medical Director of Near East Relief" after World War I.

GOOD, BUT BAD.

In their 1949 booklet of street and highway accident data, just released, The Travelers Insurance Companies urge that states, cities and communities look to the injury rate as a true measure of success or failure in their safety campaigns. The hundreds of persons saved from death are living tributes to the safety job that has been done, it is pointed out, but the injured millions should be constant reminders that the job is far from completed.

D. P. BARRETT WRITES.

principal speaker was Dr. Alberto Rembao, editor of the New Democracia. He praised the work done by the Americans and Puerto Ricans. He spoke of their real sense of religious liberty and reminded us that there was no comparison between that phase of life in Puerto Rico and in his country, Mexico. Dr. Joaquin Gonzales Molina, an ex-priest of the Pontifical University of Granda, now the Bible Agent of the Greater Antibes, with headquarters in Cuba, delivered a great message. He pointed out that Cuba was six times larger, but that there were six times more Protestants in Puerto Rico. A choir of two hundred, trained and directed by Mrs. W. Williams of the Evangelical Union Seminary of Rio Piedros, led us all in song for the occasion. An electric cross twelve feet in height was erected on the front wall of the Capitol and it spoke in silent voice of God's love for all the world. This service lasted far into the night.

The culmination of the 50th anniversary came on Sunday. Every section of the Island made plans to attend. The celebration was observed in the Sixto Escobar Stadium. Broadcasting facilities, loudspeakers, information booths—all had been set up to add to the day. Buses and hundreds of cars arrived every few minutes. A special train came from Mayaguez with 300 passengers. By nine o'clock all seats were taken and nearly all standing room was occupied. As we entered the stadium, fifty thousand voices were raised in "Onward Christian Soldiers" and I believe that everyone felt that he was marching for the Great Commander. I shall never forget how my soul was filled with gratitude and praise for having lived to see the establishment and growth of the Christian faith. It was perfectly manifested in that audience.

From 9:00 o'clock until 3:00 p. m. every moment was filled with interesting events. Dr. Mareona spoke of the motive of the celebration and the concentration of evangelicals in the Island which centered upon four things: (1) Gratitude to God that through His providence the Evangelical churches had become a reality to his people; (2) It was an act of love for the faithful servants of the Cross who began this work in the Island; (3) It was an opportunity to review God's manifold blessing and to confer praise and thanks for fifty years of guidance and protection; (4) It was an act of faith and devotion to dedicate anew and to follow fifty more years with a greater, more devoted faith.

Dr. Angel Archilla Cabrena, Superintendent of the Presbyterian Mission, gave a history, beginning with the discovery of the Island by Columbus and going through 1898. He emphasized that church and state were one and that Roman Catholicism flourished, but in 1898 the door was open and that today evangelicals flourish. The progress of the Evangelical church is invincible.

Dr. William Stanley Rycroft, Secretary of the Committee on Cooperation in Latin America, gave an unforgettable description of the progress of Protestants and their work in these countries. He pointed out that Puerto Rico was advanced but that other countries were thriving under education, and continue to grow.

A great tribute was paid the 81 missionaries who had given 25 years or more service in the Island: 23 Baptists, 15 Presbyterians, 15 Disciples of Christ, 11 Methodist and 17 United Evangelicals (Brethren, Congregational Christians). After 50 years' service there are 300 churches, 250 ministers, 5 hospitals, 2 Theological Schools and several other institutions of learning.

There were many noted visitors present at the celebration whose names I have not mentioned but who had a great part in the observance. This was the greatest concentrated effort by Protestants ever held in Latin America.

WILLIAM E. MCCORMICK.

SYMBOL OF HUMAN COURAGE AND FORTITUDE.

There are monuments erected to the memory of Americans in nearly every country in the world, but possibly the most outstanding is the 60-foot shaft built in 1932 at Cape York, Greenland, to the memory of that dauntless American, Robert Edwin Peary. Ten degrees above the Arctic Circle and only 14 degrees from the North Pole, the column stands as a sign of human courage and fortitude never surpassed in the annals of great explorations. This brown-gray monument looking across the ice-laden tides of Baffin Bay is unique among the earth's memorials to great men.

The monument was erected in a land that Peary loved; a land that loved him in return and gave him, for his long devotion, the highest honor won by an explorer of his time. To the humble Eskimo folk of Cape York he is still a kindly good man who dwelt among them for a while, leaving them with legends of his greatness to be handed down for centuries. They helped in the erection of the monument as they helped in all of Peary's epic toils in the North. C. B. R.

We Visit In Angola

By JOHN A. RUELING

Chileso is the last American Board station that we visit in Angola. Tomorrow we leave for Chissamba, a station of the United Church of Canada, to have a short visit with the Welches and the Hendersons, our two new couples who are studying the Umbundu language there together with some new Canadian missionaries. Then we take train for Elizabethville in the Belgian Congo, from which we get another train south to Victoria Falls and then to our Mission in Southern Rhodesia.

DR. RUELING

We have a tape recorder with us and a portable gas generator to furnish current and have had an interesting time recording messages from the different missionaries and songs and native musical instruments by the Africans. So far we have recordings of a harp, flutes, drums, mirimba and the African thumb piano. I hope that some of you will have a chance to hear these when we get back home.

Everywhere we have gone, we have had meetings with the community leaders. I have been impressed by the universal desire for education which they have expressed, and particularly by the desire for higher education. At present in this country "higher" education means about junior high, or perhaps a little lower, but for these people it represents more in every way than our most advanced graduate schools. They are straining to get it, starting and running primary schools themselves and raising substantial amounts of money to send young men to the Portuguese "Liceu." In one community they have started to put money aside to send some young man, at present an unknown lad in one of the numerous bush schools, to Portugal to study medicine. They realize fully that it may be ten or even fifteen years before even one lad is prepared to go, but if that day ever comes they are going to be ready. At another place, called Conjayau, the people have erected a whole new school plant within three years' time and are running it entirely on their own. They have built their own dorms, putting ten to twelve boys on pitiful little reed bunks in a room in an adobe house 7 x 12 feet. These kids rustle their own firewood, cook their own food, eat it out of doors and provide their own food, partly by bringing corn from home and partly by working in the fields half of every day. In addition they pay heavy cash fees in order to partially pay the teachers. The local community provides the buildings, school materials, older men and women to supervise the conduct of the boys and girls, and part of the teachers. The quality of education that can be provided by such means is of course limited, but these people are pressing the limit and extending it. The graduates, if you can call them that, of such schools are clamoring at the doors of our four station schools and our Currie Institute for boys and our Means School for girls, and the selection of candidates for admission is getting harder every year, there are so many to choose from and so few places.

"MY EASTER CREED"

I believe that immortality is something to be lived, rather than something to be proved.
I believe in changing the mourning color from black to gray or white.
I believe in the humanity of the blessed dead and in the utter survival of personality.
I believe in the brevity of death and in the endlessness of life.
I believe that love is the life of all that lives, and that love reached its deathless bloom in the life of Jesus.
I believe that life everlasting flows from the Fatherhood of God, as the stream from the spring.
I believe that the blessed dead are nearer to us than we think, and are the most alive of all who live.
I believe that Christ turned a brilliant guess into a solid certainty and endowed the hope of eternal life with grace, reason and majesty.
I believe in "greeting the unseen" with a cheer, in holding daily life under the quiet light of eternity, and in listening to the voice of the Eternal above the roar of the transitory.

News Flashes

Give generously to the Missionary Offering in your church on Easter Sunday.

Allen Hurdle, pastor of Salem Chapel and Belews Creek, has been ill for the past several weeks and it is reported that he is a patient in the Duke Hospital.

The annual meeting of the Protestant Church Press will be held next week in Washington, D. C. The editors will have a press conference with President Truman.

The deepest sympathy goes from THE SUN to Mrs. R. L. House, wife of our editor and the editor of the Children's Page, in the death of her father last week. May the coming of Easter and its message make less sad the parting.—Mg. Ed.

Ernest D. Fry, now with the Armed Forces, would be glad to hear from his friends in the United States while he is serving somewhere in the Pacific. His address is: Rt. Ernest Fry, ASN 13305-812, First Cavalry Division Headquarters Detachment, A. P. O. 201, San Francisco, California.

Twenty-one College Alumni gathered in the Winston-Salem Church basement for supper and for an inspirational program on April 6. The young people of the church served the meal. New officers are: W. L. Anderson, president; W. J. Andes, vice-president; Miss Foy Mallock, secretary. Dean D. J. Bowden of Elon College was the guest speaker.

"Thanks for the editorial on 'Women Ministers.' The Christian Church first ordained women. I noted with interest on the same page your reference to Mr. Wallock. I spoke in Lawton Church Monday night. I knew Mr. Wallock well, spoke for him several times and visited with him the Easter Pageant location. I am conducting Stewardship Institutes for three weeks with Superintendent Lindeman in Oklahoma."—Warren H. Denison.

AN EXCELLENT SPIRIT ATTAINED.

March 27 through April 1, the Winston-Salem Church found heart-warming experience in revival services conducted by Dr. W. E. Wisseman of Greensboro. Speaking to the Men's Fellowship on Saturday night, March 26, at a Ham Supper (the ham was given by H. L. Brewer, one of the men), Dr. Wisseman spoke on, "If I Were a Layman." One cannot express in words the value of the stirring messages brought by Dr. Wisseman throughout the week.

In numbers we can only suggest the value received: average attendance was 49; new members received were four; many visitors came and found the warmth of the messages and the warmth of this small church.

WHAT DOES EASTER MEAN TO YOU?

What does Easter mean to you?
Stately church with cushioned pew,
Where, Lenten season gone at last
And days of self-denial past,
Richly-clad, devoted throngs
Of worshipers unite in songs
Of praise in lily-scented air?
Is this what makes your Easter fair?

Does it mean the end of winter's reign,
Bright skies and welcome warmth again,
Singing of birds, budding of trees,
Sweet spring ordors on the breeze
From daffodil and crocus bed
And balsam branches overhead?
Sad is the world and cold and gray
If this is all of Easter Day.

But if this blessed season brings,
A firmer faith in holy things;
Assurance of a living Lord;
A strengthening of the tender chord
Of love that binds us to the life to come
Where loved ones 'wait us in the heavenly home,
No pain or loss can e'er efface the bliss,
Dear friends of Easter, when it means all this.

—May Ricker Conrad

Special music was rendered by the church choir and its various members. A quartet from the First Reformed Church, the choir of the Memorial Reformed Church and the quartet of the Friends Church assisted with lovely music. Mrs. Raymond Binkley of the Salem Chapel Church assisted with the music for the children each night. We are grateful to all for their help.

A new choir director has been secured. Miss Betty Pfaff of the Salem College music department is directing each week. She presented a solo during the revival services and was well received by all. The music committee of the church, Mrs. C. J. Nelson, chairman, is the hardest working committee in the church and thus made possible the music during the revival.

WINSTON-SALEM BOY HONORED.

Our Winston-Salem Church is proud of the honor recently given to one of its young people, Roger Jackson. Roger was elected on April 2 to the National Honor Society of the Reynolds High School and, on April 4, he was elected president of the Student Body of the same high school. This high school is the largest school in Winston-Salem. Roger is a quiet young man and is a willing helper in anything that is for the betterment of humanity. We in Winston-Salem also mourn with Roger and his family the loss of his father, Millard Jackson, who died March 18. Mr. Jackson was a teacher in the Reynolds High School for 23 years.

I pity that man who wants a coat so cheap that the man or woman who produces the cloth shall starve in the process.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

MISSIONARY GIVING AND LIVING.

By long precedent we of the Southern Convention have given to missions at Easter. It is fitting that we should continue to do so. Just as Easter means new life for all children of God, even so missions means new life for all who are reached by its redemptive influence. We thank God for our great heritage and our continuing ministry, for worthy representatives in distant lands and for multiplied givers at home.

Many of you have been reading the comprehensive survey of our missionary responsibilities and opportunities presented each week on the Missions Page by Dr. Lester. A review of these pages for the past six weeks would be excellent preparation for our Easter missionary offering. Missionary study and missionary giving should go hand in hand. The two are complementary and supplementary.

When John languished and doubted in prison, Jesus sent this reassuring message: "Go your way and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised. To the poor the gospel is preached, And blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me." Our giving may be doubt-dispelling and life-transforming. Blessed are we if in the demands of Christ we find no cause for stumbling.

LIFE—DEATH—LIFE.

"Death," said P. T. Forsyth, "is like the leaf between the Old Testament and the New Testament." Our Savior said, "I have many things to say unto you now, but ye cannot bear them." Neither shall we be able day after tomorrow. Eternity is required to spell out the full meaning of His message for us. Dr. Forsyth goes on to say: "The souls that go into eternity know themselves as they never did before. The spirit is more to them than ever before. The spiritual acquirements while they were here open out upon their sight. Think of the grand leisure of eternity, the leisured receptivity of soul, its feeding in a wise passiveness. How things will break open on us, and be reconciled, and not only its poverty but also its wealth will be enriched. Lessons, facts, thoughts, sacrifices, verses, hymns, that were here overwhelmed with the life mean and cause, stand out, open out, fructify, take command there." What a thrilling prospect! No wonder Dr. Peter Marshall, on being informed that his death was only a matter of hours, exclaimed: "I can hardly wait!" Death is ever incidental to life.

Dr. Harris Franklin Rall gives a word in season when he insists: "Death has no magic power to transform us. Nor should we expect some irresistible act of God to make us over and bring the imperfect to perfection in a moment. But heaven will give all the means and all the inspiration we need for continued growth." All we do here, or leave undone, has relevance yonder.

Among the voluminous writings of that veteran churchman, John R. Mott, we have this telling paragraph:

"Why has God made the whole world known and accessible to our generation? Why has he provided us with such wonderful agencies? Not that the forces of evil might utilize them. Not that they be wasted or left unused. Such vast preparations must have been made to further some mighty and beneficent purpose. Every one of these wonderful facilities has been intended primarily to serve as a handmaid to the sublime enterprise of extending and building up the Kingdom of Jesus Christ. The hand of God in opening door after door among the nations is beckoning the church of our day to larger achievements."

God is the great door opener. The last great door in the realm of time is death. Beyond that door are spiritual treasures which eye hath not seen. Eager spirits, we are assured, await our entrance. Post graduate studies begin on the eternal level. Saints and seers are available as coaches and tutors for millenia unlimited. Purified friendships, compounded cooperation, rarified spiritual intercourse, and a host of celestial privileges find their eternal fruition.

PUBLICATION THREATENED.

Proposals to increase postal rates on second-class material would have a "crippling and disastrous" effect on religious, fraternal, and non-profit periodicals, the Rev. Dr. Samuel M. Cavert, general secretary of the Federal Council of Churches has predicted.

Testifying in Washington on March 30 against a house bill designed to up postal rates on religious and other non-profit publications, Dr. Cavert described the proposed measure (H.R. 2945) as "nothing less than a fatal blow" to Protestant, Catholic and Jewish spiritual influence.

Citing the lack of revenues religious publications derive from advertising coupled with increased production costs, he asked that if a postal increase is necessary a distinction be drawn between publications issued for profit and publications of a non-profit character devoted solely to religious, educational and cultural objectives.

In support of his position, Dr. Cavert drew attention to the following resolution unanimously adopted by the executive committee of the Federal Council.

Resolved: That the Executive Committee of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America views with grave concern the proposal now before Congress for a radical increase in second-class postal rates as they would affect the publications of churches and religious bodies. We believe that it has been sound policy which has established a preferential classification for publications issued by religious, fraternal and other non-profit organizations. We call attention to the fact that religious periodicals, in contrast with commercial publications, do not carry a large amount of advertising and therefore could not expect to meet additional postage costs through increased income from advertising. We urge that the present system of preferential rates for second-class mail be continued and that no change be made in the present pound-rate now applicable to religious periodicals.

All of the churches depend in large measure for their effectiveness upon the printed page, Dr. Cavert added. They maintain a great number of publications—some of them weekly, some of them monthly, some of them quarterly—in carrying out their educational program throughout their constituencies. Those publications are issued at a very low price, often at a loss, which is made up by subsidies from the churches themselves. In the main, the church publications carry a limited amount of advertising and are therefore unable to supplement their income from subscriptions by any substantial revenue from advertising. The increased costs of printing during the last few years have confronted most of the church publications with a grave problem, and there are cases in which the proposed increase in second-class postal rates would be nothing less than a fatal blow. If it is essential to maintain the moral and spiritual influence for which the churches of this country stand—Protestant, Catholic, and Jewish alike—it is important that they should not be burdened with postal rates which would be “seriously crippling and even disastrous.”

At a time when our American democracy is under constant attack by a materialistic, totalitarian philosophy, it is a matter of high strategy to encourage all the forces in our country which make for the strengthening of the cultural, moral and spiritual life of the people. In the struggle to reinforce the foundations of our free democratic way of life, the churches have a crucial role to play. For a great part of our people, the churches are the primary channels for sustaining faith and hope, for cultivating a sense of moral obligation to their fellow men, for stimulating concern for the social welfare and for undergirding our national life with the resources of the spirit.

I submit, therefore, that it is a sound policy for the Government of the United States, in dealing with the question of postal rates, to make a distinction between publications which are issued for profit and publications which are non-profit in character and are devoted solely to religious, educational and cultural objectives. It is necessary to increase the revenue of the Post Office from second-class mail, I urge that the increase shall not apply to publications of the churches and other non-profit bodies.

Cross and Sickle Strive for Japan

By LUCY H. CROCKETT.*

Shortly before I left Japan last summer I received special permission to go through General MacArthur's personal mail from the Japanese. I was amazed, first, by the number of letters written by Christian Japanese, then by the high note of courage and hope which ran through them.

In this land of disenchantment it's the Christian Japanese who are the fortunate ones today. For Christianity offers the spiritual means of rising above the all-pervading physical hardships and moral disintegration.

A people in distress look for something beyond themselves in which to believe. There may not be “one of the great spiritual reformations of all time” that General MacArthur evidently likes to think but a substantial number of Japanese are going through definite religious upheaval, with a tendency to show a fresh curiosity in Christianity.

Christianity was the topic quickly seized upon everywhere I moved among them. Countess Tomoko Otani, sister of the Empress, wife of a powerful Buddhist archbishop whose sect owns temples all over the Orient as well as nearly a dozen in the United States, is herself head of a women's religious organization numbering between four and five thousand women. She admitted to the current impact of Christianity upon the Buddhist world.

Buddhism, she said, clearly needed to be brought up to date. Buddhist teaching was a philosophy too heavy for the people to understand. “It lacks the emotional appeal of the Christian religion,” she said through the interpreter. “In music, for instance, the chanting of our sutras, quite without harmony, cannot compete with Christian hymns and carols.

*Lucy Herndon Crockett is the author of the new book on Japan, “Popcorn on the Ginza,” published in February by William Sloane Associates. She served four years with the Red Cross in the Pacific and Japan during World War II. This article was part of the original manuscript of the book, an informal picture of the occupation.

Today our people are upset and at a loss. Our religion should be able to offer the people the solace they look for in these desperate times.”

Mrs. Takaori, herself a Catholic, nevertheless wanted to know if in America priests were really as “human” as the one portrayed by Bing Crosby in “Going My Way.” Japan today, she said, was ripe for fresh spiritual inspiration. It had been the policy of MacArthur's headquarters to permit return to Japan of the old missionaries. “But what we need are younger men who are more flexible and vigorous and can meet the changes that are taking place today—spiritual leaders of vitality and vision.”

Mrs. Kiba, the daughter of a Shinto priest and wife of an ordained Buddhist, admitted to being drawn greatly to Christianity, the subtleties of whose different denominations she didn't understand but by whose principles of humanity and brotherly love she was deeply impressed. She was overwhelmingly grateful when I was able to present her with a Bible, the first she had ever seen.

There are an estimated 6,000,000 Christians in Japan, with an additional million eagerly learning Christian teachings. Efforts to answer the increasing demand for Christian enlightenment, are seriously hampered by an acute shortage of clergymen, churches, and Bibles, although when I left Japan 250,000 Bibles had been sent from America with another two million expected. Preparations for a “Christian University of Japan” are under way, made possible by active support from religious and educational circles in the United States. Already established are eight mission schools of college status.

Although MacArthur talks of a Christian renaissance as the hope of New Japan, officially the Allied occupation can not sponsor activities of any one religion. It has permitted Christian missionaries to enter Japan long before other private citizens.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

Isn't Easter wonderful! It is good-bye to winter and welcome to spring. It is a time filled with life and joy. It is a glorious time for all. I remember the Easters of long ago. Gee! how we used to rob the hen nests, and hide their eggs! It seems a funny custom now, but then it didn't just seem funny, it was fun! Two or three weeks before Easter a few eggs every day until by Easter there were dozens hid away. Our neighbor boys and girls did the same thing. We used to vie with one another to see who could have the largest cache of eggs. Then Easter morning by the time the sun streaked the eastern sky we were up bringing in eggs. How many eggs could seven children eat? All they could hold! And that is how many we had and then some more. Not all the eggs were hidden so there were some for our dear mother to make pretty, and she did. With all the work she had to do and all the additional work she could still find to do, she had time to think of pretty things and to add them as extras. I wish we knew how to give our children as much fun as our parents gave us.

We went to Sunday school and church, but somehow I cannot remember that old Mt. Bethel had so many more at church on Easter than on many of the other Sundays. Certainly there was not as much finery, and sometimes there was not even preaching in that particular rural church on Easter. In a circuit it could so happen that it was not our Sunday. By Easter for several Sundays since it was springtime the Sunday school was drawing a full quota, and as I remember it, in that neighborhood people went to church—Easter or not—and Easter didn't so greatly increase the congregation. And then there were the Easters of college days, and seminary days—all different, all beautiful. Easter is a joy—yesterday, today, and always! Here's my latest Easter verse:

On this Easter let me pray
In a broader sort of way;
Let me know the world is one
Through the heart of God's own Son;
And let me feel I have a share
In every other humble prayer.

On this Easter let my love
Reach from earth to heaven above,
Taking in my friends and foes
In every land and place He knows,

Blessing all for whom He died,
Jesus Christ, the crucified.

On this Easter let my song,
Join the glad angelic throng,
Far above all pain and strife,
Far beyond this earthly life;
And may Easter joy increase
The bonds of brotherhood and peace!

WE LOVE--WE GIVE.

Summer is rapidly approaching and with summer comes many opportunities to do good. Many of these opportunities arise in the local church such as improving the interior of our church and making wise use of our

OUR GIFTS TO GOD.

By C. Rexford Raymond.

Religion, pure and undefiled is love
That visits lonely hearts, adds deeds to prayers,
And sings on earth the songs of heaven above;
So James, the brother of our Lord, declares.
Today His brothers we would also be,
And bear our gifts to Him by works of grace
That help the lame to walk, the blind to see,
And banish sadness from our neighbor's face.
Thus love can send us faring forth to bless
Where faith is timid and hope's flag is furled,
To cheer the lonely and the motherless
And carry Christian joy around the world.
By bringing love to those whose hopes are dim, Frankincense, gold and myrrh we give to Him.

leisure time. In speaking of making use of our leisure time I am reminded of an incident which took place while I was in high school. Some times we would get to school early and sit around and talk before the bell would ring for class. One Friday before the last football game one of the boys remarked it would be two weeks before the first basketball practice and there would be ten afternoons of time to kill. Miss Byrd, our homeroom teacher, seriously reprimanded him for that statement. She told him never to make a statement such as that again. She told us one can always make good use of his leisure time. This I have always remembered.

We say we are Christians and desire to be a good steward. You have a good chance now of making a contribution to the Southern Convention

Pilgrim Fellowship who is sending to France or Germany this summer one young person to represent us abroad, in the International Work Camp. This work camp is concerned with reconstruction work of various kinds. But the cost for this scholarship is $600.00. It must be raised in the next two months. As yet, we do not know who will representing us but it will be announced in the near future.

I do not say this as a personal recommendation but I myself am a tither. I give a tenth of my worldly possessions to the church. I feel I have been well blessed in many ways for this. In a discussion with a friend of mine, who is a Director of Religious Education, we were talking about tithing. She remarked that no matter how little you had, if you tithed but were afraid of not meeting your pledge at the end of the year, you somehow met the pledge anyway without difficulty. And, too, you were blessed in the end. I would like for you to be a tither with me so that you may be blessed as I have been blessed.

Some one has listed eight good reasons, "Why I Pledge to the Church," and I would like to give them to you:

1. Because everything I have comes from God, and by giving a part of my income to Him, I thus acknowledge His ownership and my stewardship.

2. Because the Church is the best institution I know of through which my money can most profitably be used to extend Christ's Kingdom.

3. Because when I joined the Church I promised to support it, and I want to make that promise good.

4. Because making a pledge and paying it regularly reminds me constantly that I have a definite share in extending Christ's Kingdom.

5. Because I am not willing to accept the benefits of the Church without contributing to its work.

6. Because by giving my money to Christ and His Church I am laying up treasures in Heaven.

7. Because pledging to the Church helps me from growing selfish and indifferent.

8. Because when I pledge in faith to God's work, I know that I can count on Him to see to it that I am able to meet this pledge.*

It's not what I would do with a million dollars ere riches were my lot,
But what I will do at the present with a dollar and quarter I've got.

MONETARY GOALS.

In setting goals, in determining the amount of money to be raised for any kind of project or undertaking there are certain things to be considered. First of all, the amount of money needed to accomplish the purpose in view, the ability of those who are to be approached for the money needed and time the money is to be paid, whether in one payment or in a number of payments over a term of years. Failure to take these things into consideration may make it difficult to reach the goal set or may even result in absolute failure. There are other things to be considered, of course, in addition to the three mentioned. After the goal has been set, the ability of the ones to be approached determined, and the time allotted limited, the purpose and approach must be made. Experience has revealed that very little money is raised by mail unless the purpose be appealing and urgent. "Uncle Sam" may be used for effective information but for the average purpose personal approach and contact are the things that count. In order to make a personal approach in a given time an efficient and sufficiently inclusive organization must be formed and that organization must function and function within the appointed time. Too much emphasis cannot be placed on organization. When you have a comparatively large constituency and make an intelligent and convincing approach to each individual within that constituency success may reasonably be assured.

Following the completion of the campaign to clear Elon College of its debts the Board of Trustees discussed the matter of raising an additional $100,000 for endowment. George Colclough, then Field Secretary for the college, now Secretary of the Burlington Chamber of Commerce, discussing the needs of Elon College minimized the idea of campaigning for $100,000 but asserted that the campaign should be for one million dollars. At the next meeting of the Board of Trustees one million dollars for Elon College was the goal set. Later this goal was increased to two million dollars. There were those who objected to launching a campaign for $100,000. The objectors increased when the goal was set at one million, and still objections were voiced when the goal was set at two million dollars.

The facts in the case are that Elon College needs two million dollars very badly. In a half-hearted way the campaign has been underway for a little more than three years, but no organized effort has as yet been made. Yet more than $400,000 has been secured in cash and pledges. This money has been used to set up the Staley-Atkinson-Newman Memorial Foundation, to add an additional $40,000 to the Endowment Fund, to pay for the erection of the power house and installation of all necessary equipment, to build a coal bin, a workshop, and a warehouse. More than $85,000 has been secured in cash and pledges for the gymnasium. Considering the lack of organization and the efforts that have been put forth it would seem that we have done pretty well so far. We come now to the place where an organized effort is essential to success.

The Board of Trustees authorized the construction of the gymnasium provided it did not encumber present college assets. The Executive Committee and the Building Committee of the Alumni Association authorized construction to begin and construction has begun. We have put our hand to the task. We have joined our spirit to the undertaking and there is no turning back. We must go through with this undertaking. The gymnasium is not an ornament or something that we could do without but it is essential to a complete program of education on any campus today. With more than thirty thousand church members, more than 4,000 alumni whose addresses we have, and an un-numbered company of friends there is no reason why we should not carry the erection of the new gymnasium to completion without delay and pay the cost of construction week after week. This article is not only one of information but an earnest appeal to everyone who is interested in Elon College to make his maximum contribution as early as possible.

Teh tongue is like a race horse, which runs the faster the less weight it carries.—Samuel Butler.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

These are uncertain days. None seems to know whether to expect prosperity or recession in business. The words "gifts or contributions" are not used very frequently other than by those who represent causes that require money. People who usually do the giving or contributing are talking about scarcity, uncertainty, and even depression. We must, however, be realistic in these changing days. We are not broke and are not likely to be. Causes and institutions of the church must be carried on. None would vote to bring our missionaries home, to close up our church offices, or to dismiss our colleges. We may not have as much money to spend as we have had in years past but we do have enough money to keep these essential things going. It may be necessary to curtail our spending but may we find it possible to keep up our benevolences that causes and institutions essential to the progress of society may be continued. These are the days to think success, to think prosperity, to think abundance, and not to think depression. "As a man thinketh, so is he." Let us make sure that our thinking is right.

Elon College is grateful for the continued support that the church and its friends are giving.

HELP WANTED.

I am writing a biography of the late Doctor William Allen Harper and would appreciate any information friends of his might be able to render. I would especially appreciate the loan of The Genius of the Christian Church by W. A. Harper. This was a bulletin of Elon College (1929). It is not in the Elon College Library and would be a welcomed addition should you desire me to send it to the Library. My address is: Prof. J. Howard Smith, 409 Prospect Street, Yale University, New Haven 11, Connecticut.

Our Christian World Mission

Rev. F. C. LESTER, Writer

TRYING TO GROW.

Last night I talked with a group of people who want to become a new Congregational Christian Church. It was ten years ago this May that I talked with such a group in Asheboro. In those first conversations there was much uncertainty, but faith struggled to become a reality. In Asheboro the dream has come true. Within ten years it may be equally true with the group that met in Burlington last night. Faith and works combined plant churches where they are needed.

Last night I saw the foundation of another church building. There are not many members in this new church yet. But they are young people who are paying for their homes in a new community. They want a church. With their own hands they have laid the foundation and started the walls. To an outsider it appears that their contributions are liberal. But they will need another $1,000 to get the first unit of their church so they can use it—for a thousand dollars we can have a new church where such a church is wanted, and where it will be a beacon to point men to God for a century to come.

Our Church is trying to grow. All nature in our area is lending its warmth, moisture, and fertility to the life hidden in the earth, and the flowers are beginning to bloom. Let it be so with our churches!

PLEASE REMEMBER

From a letter that went from this Pastor's Study last week to the ministers and Sunday school superintendents in our area, I quote with the hope that all who read this page will remember the ideas.

"Fellowship in Christ is the golden cord that binds the world together, and makes peace possible. . . .

"When we meet for our happy Easter services we must remember our 400 missionaries and 8,000 native workers in Africa, India, China, Japan, Mexico, Greece, Lebanon, Syria, Turkey, the Philippines, and other islands of the Pacific. They will sing the same songs, read the same Scriptures, pray to the same God, and preach the same Christ that mean so much to us. They can stay there and work among the 107 million people for whom we are responsible, if we support them. Otherwise they must return to the richest country ever known, and let the world die in despair. . . .

"You won't fail, will you? . . . We now have a chance to make a Christian world. We had better do it while we can."

You won't fail to give a liberal offering at Easter for our missionary work, will you, dear reader?

SOME THINGS MONEY CAN DO

They say that money talks. It certainly can speak on the language of religion. And it works wonders. There are things that money can't do, but here are some that it can.

$1.00

In Japan it will buy a Bible or hymn-book for a church, furnish cakes for lunch in Gloria Kindergarten, or purchase ten bandages for a clinic in Okayama. In China it will buy enough sulphur drugs to treat two people for pneumonia, bubonic plague or poliomyelitis; or it will keep a child in any of our nine hospitals for a day.

$5.00

In India will make it possible to sell for a few pennies 20 New Testaments or 10 Bibles to people who otherwise cannot get them. In Africa it will buy gasoline for a day's trip to sell Bibles where the Bible is still rationed because there are not enough to supply the demand, or it will supply food for patients in Sara Hurd Scott Hospital. In Japan it will help a school to recognize a teacher's ten years' experience by an increase in salary. In this country it will buy enough blocks to build fifteen square feet of new church wall, or buy material for a Vacation Bible School, or send this paper to five people for six months.

$10.00

It Africa it will buy supplies like chalk, pencils and slates for a school class for a year, or pay for food for a year for a student at Means School for girls. In Japan it pays a teacher in Gloria Kindergarten for a month, or provides a year's housing for a teacher in Matsuyama Girls' School. In China it feeds a student in one of our schools for half a term.

$20.00

Will cure four average cases of Relapsing Fever in China, send a native pastor to a village in East Africa for a week of Bible teaching and evangelistic meetings, pay a Doshisha Theological student to work in country churches during summer vacation, or it will deliver a ton of coal to a school or hospital in China.

$50.00

In Shaowu it will pay for a week's Conference for Laymen, the salary of a Chinese pastor for three months, the salary of a teacher in the Junior High School for three months, or for a Christian doctor in our hospital for almost two months. It will train a student in Pasumalia Theological Seminary in India for a year. It provides salary of matron at Means Girls' School for a year.

$100.00

Will maintain a Bible woman in India for a year, the Moderator (like our Superintendent) in the Philippines for a month, pay the annual salary of a Medical Aid (doctor, nurse and dispenser) in Africa, buy coal for a year for a school in Japan, or buy a year's supply of books for the Neighborhood House in Osaka.

$65,000

This amount from the people in the Southern Convention will meet our budget for 1949 and will give us a fair share in building the Church around the world. It will give us new churches and will set us on the way to better churchmanship. It will tend to make the world believe that we really want to serve our fellow-men in the spirit of the Christ of Eastertide.

LET THE DOLLARS WORK FOR CHRIST

Flowers at Easter are beautiful, but money for missions is much more needful. Invest your money where it will work for the Master.

You can depend on the leadership of your Church to use the money where it will really help. Four hundred missionaries commissioned by the leaders we have elected are waiting for us to give them a lift. They can continue to sing and pray, and teach and preach among the multitudes who know not Christ if we will send our dollars to pay for food and clothes and shelter.

Know ye not that ye are workers together with God when you invest your money in the missionary program of your Church? Let your money work for Christ.

SCHOOL OF MISSIONS TO PRESENT MODERATOR.

Miss Helen Kenyon, Moderator of the General Council of the Congregational Christian Church, will speak on Monday evening of the School of Missions and Convention. Miss Kenyon was formerly Chairman of the Missions Council, and is now in her second year as Moderator of the General Council. She is an able executive and an impressive speaker, being able to put thoughts into exact words and phrases. Since she is the only woman Moderator in the history of our church, our women should welcome the opportunity to hear this woman head of the Congregational Christian Church.

Miss Kenyon is what might be called "short and dumpy" and past middle age. She has short grey hair, waved back from her face, and is very business-like in manner. She has no hesitation to correct men when they are wrong, even if they are "men." She is proof of the fact that women can be as strong personalities as men. She has efficiency, and at the same time is pleasing and attractive in her personality. It is quite a privilege for the women of the Southern Convention to have Miss Helen Kenyon speak at the School of Missions.

ARE OUR ACHIEVEMENT GOALS HELPING US TO GROW SPIRITUALLY?

One of the most amazing facts of history is the growth of the church within the last century-and-a-half. This being true, surely our women are interested and perhaps, to be emphatic, are enthusiastic!

The question I have been asked to discuss, and that you consider with me, is: Are our achievement goals helping us to grow spiritually? The dictionary says that the word achieve means to carry on to a final close. Yes, the women of the Congregational Christian Churches will make their work praiseworthy from the beginning to the end of each year.

Not for once could we do without the packet prepared by the superintendent of literature, the mission study books, missionary magazines and THE CHRISTIAN SUN. These are necessities to make the work interesting. It is a privilege to present missions in a public program, sponsor the various age groups throughout the Sunday school and observe the World Day of Prayer in cooperation with other denominations.

We can never be grateful enough to God for all His goodness to us, to pass up the Thank Offering Service. All these things just go in the making of a strong working organization. Technically, no treasurer would forget to send her report and money to the conference treasurer.

Usually people are guided by one or more things: by what others do, sometimes by conscience, and occasionally by God. God has direction of life. How does God guide? Obviously God must guide us in a way that will develop spontaneity in us. The development of character, rather than directions in this, that, and the other matter, must be the primary purpose of the Father. He will guide, but He won't override us.

Personally, I think we are so busy trying to fulfill each goal that we lose the true spiritual meaning behind it, especially in increasing our many gifts. Here, I refer you to the clause in our present achievement goals, which reads: "Increases its gifts of money to the Woman's Board over the previous year." As I see it this amount could be five cents or fifty dollars. Is this quite fair? Just one penny more this year than last year could rate "Superior." Is this the true spiritual attitude? I am not discrediting the idea from Hawaii, nor do we want to get in reverse gear. No, we want to go forward. To be a smooth-running organization, it is necessary to have rules as a guide for the year's work. Could we again call them "The Standard of Excellence"?

No society should be termed "Superior." We are God's children working together for His Kingdom, not one surpassing the other in rank or ability. "Our gift may be great or small. It may be an alabaster box of precious ointment or it may be three little fish brought up by the little woman in the Belgian Congo who denied herself food for two days in order to bring them as an offering for her Lord. Now there are varieties of gifts, but the same spirit: there are various forms of service and the same Lord."

DELEGATES TO SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AND CONVENTION.

Any woman in any church of our Southern Convention may attend the School of Missions and Convention. The cost is so small that many women should seize this opportunity to have an enjoyable yet profitable two days. It is certainly worth the $6.00 and short time it takes. Meet the notables as well as the ordinary folks and come to Elon College, June 13-15. It will be time well-spent. See how many your auxiliary can help send, and then get busy and find the people who can go.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR LITTLE FOLK:

As you go to church on Easter Sunday think of the glorious music and wonderful preaching that will be heard in your church and in others around the world. Every pulpit has heard good preaching at one time or another. In my lifetime I have heard some great preachers like S. Parkes Cadman, Harry Emerson Fosdick, Ralph Sockman, Peter Marshall and others. Do you know their names? Years ago the fame of ministers who stood in their pulpits and were great orators spread far and wide. Today we have too little of that, in the first place dramatic preaching seems unpopular. Then secondly, too few can preach without having notes or a written sermon. Some of the glory seems lost when a man reads such words as, "Christ is risen. He lives!" I'm all for good pulpit oratory without a typewritten manuscript!

Listen for the lovely music whether it be organ or piano. An organ is a wonderful instrument. Some of the best music I ever heard was in the church. I remember hearing Dr. Po-teat from North Carolina playing an organ in Portsmouth. I remember Dr. Clarence Dickinson of New York playing the great organ at the Duke Chapel. More recently I heard Dr. Edwouard Nies-Berger of France when he was an organist of Centenary Church in Richmond.

Last week I heard a young man play. His name is Virgil Fox and he is organist at Riverside Church in New York. He played mighty works for the organ, but three I think you would have liked. One was an "Elfin Dance"—the little sprites rushed along on a clarinet call and just as quickly were gone. Another was a clock song that struck its hour only after a little love song had been played for the China boy and girl on the mantel shelf below the clock. And finally, a trumpet fanfare for the organ which Purcell wrote. It was strong and loud and made the organ shout its majesty.

Easter is a time for good preaching and good music. I hope you hear both. I also hope that one Easter day some of you will be preaching and making music. God gave us both for his church.

PREVENTING DELINQUENCY.

By MARY STARCK KERR.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Did you see in the paper that hereafter judges are likely to hold parents, and even outsiders, responsible for contributing to the delinquency of minors?" asked Mr. Penman of his wife.

"Yes," she answered, "and I think it is a step that should have been taken long ago. Did you notice, also, that they are sending the parents of the delinquent boys and girls to a home-making school to learn how to help their children? That is a procedure

THE DAY OF RESURRECTION.

The day of resurrection,
Earth, tell it out abroad;
The passover of gladness,
The passover of God.
From death to life eternal,
From this world to the sky,
Our Christ hath brought us over
With hymns of victory.

Our hearts be pure from evil,
That we may see aright
The Lord in rays eternal
Of resurrection-light;
And, listening to His accents,
May hear, so calm and plain,
His own, "All Hail!" and, hearing,
May raise the victor-strain.

Now let the heavens be joyful,
Let earth her song begin;
Let the round world keep triumph,
And all that is therein;
Invisible and visible,
There notes let all things blend;
For Christ the Lord hath risen,
Our joy that hath no end. Amen.

—John of Damascus.

that our club has been advocating for some time."

"Here is another suggestion," continued Mr. Penman. "It is urged that child-guidance lessons be given to everyone."

"That's another provision we have often said should be made," answered his wife. "Very many of the mistakes parents make come from lack of knowledge, and some come from an undeveloped sense of responsibility. If all young people had the benefit of a wisely-conducted course in child study, much would be gained."

A few days later Mrs. Penman called her husband's attention to A Letter to the Editor in which a woman strongly recommended that spanking should be "frequently and powerfully" administered if juvenile delinquency was to be prevented.

"Now I know you will not agree to that," said Mr. Penman after reading it. "She says, 'Spank them till they are fifteen,' and she seems to think that as a result they will be free from any thought toward delinquency forever after."

"It has always seemed to me," answered Mrs. Penman, "that when spanking is resorted to there has been evident failure on the part of the parents. Very often all a child needs is to be told what is the right way to do a certain thing. This is true even when the child is so young that not all of the speaker's words are understood. Tiny children, I have found, will usually respond when they are told what is right, if the tone of voice is kind but firm."

"Can you give an example?" said her husband.

"You know how little ones, when beginning patting a person's face—softly—and then the pats get stronger, until they become slaps and are hard enough to hurt. If you just say to the child, 'Pat gently, darling—not too hard, dear,' and illustrate it by patting the child's face, it brings a quick response. But the lesson may have to be repeated several times before the child will have grasped it."

"In many instances children are punished because the parents do not understand them. Do you remember when my little nephew, Charlie, pulled my hair while I was holding him and telling his mother about a cute little boy I had seen?"

Yes, I remember you told me about it afterwards, and the reason for the hair-pulling was, we decided, that Charlie was jealous."

"That's right, and when I explained to him that Auntie could love another boy and still love her own little nephew the best of all, there was no more trouble. And he was only eighteen months old then. Watchfulness, love, and understanding are what a little child needs above all things."

"And when they are older, do you contend that they will still respond to that kind of treatment?" probed Mr. Penman.

"Yes, provided the parent grows up with the child. Through the years both will have needed heavenly guidance. If this has been realized, confidence will gradually have taken the place of close watchfulness, until, in adolescence, the confidence is complete."

WANTED—$600!

The Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship Council is asking the young people of the Southern Convention for six hundred dollars to help defray the expenses of Raymond Andes, who will be our representative at a work camp in France this summer.

It has long been felt by members of the Council that we of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship need a better link with our world church. Now we can have that link, provided you and we work toward raising the necessary expense money.

Raymond Andes, former president of the Southern Convention Pilgrim Fellowship, and now instructor in French at Bridgewater College, has volunteered to spend his summer doing reconstruction work of various kinds at a work camp in France. While he is there he will have ample opportunity to find out how young people are living in France—what they are thinking and what their problems are. He in turn will be able to give some of his experiences to us, through letters, articles and addresses. All in all, his summer will prove of utmost benefit to us, to the French people with whom he comes in contact, and needless to say—to Raymond himself.

We must have the $600 within the next two months. Save all you can from personal spending; give plays, bazaars, parties—anything that will net you some dollars. This is one venture in which every dollar counts. This is also one venture which can not be carried out unless you, each of you, help.

Send all contributions to William T. Scott, Jr., Elon College, N. C. You will get full credit on your Young People's Missionary budget, Pilgrim Fellowship budget, or Church budget. Please hurry!!!

NORTH CAROLINA - VIRGINIA PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP SPRING RALLY.

The Spring Rally for the North Carolina-Virginia Pilgrim Fellowship was a big success. It was held in Reidsville on April 3. The Burlington group had the opening worship. Dr. W. W. Sloan spoke briefly on Puerto Rico. He was introduced by Miss Lois Long, who is the Missionary Action Chairman for our Conference. Miss Bobby Jean Kimball, who is the Personal Action Chairman, had charge of a skit on her Commission. Miss Martha Beers, Social Action Chairman, introduced Miss Maxine Garner who spoke on Race Relations. Bill Tolley, Interdenominational Action Chairman, called on several people to report their group's activities for Youth Week. Miss Lois Brady spoke briefly on the importance of the Junior Hi groups. Supper was served by the Reidsville group, after which Bob Murray had charge of the fellowship hour. The Greensboro (First) group presented a play, "Dust of the Road," with Fleta Moffitt, Austin Lane, Oscar Paris, and Bob Murray taking part. Mrs. Mark Andes had the closing worship, ending with the Interfellowship Circle.

Our attendance for the Rally was very good. We were certainly glad to have Timothy Chang with us.

The groups received many ideas for programs and for activities for the next few months.

BETHEL YOUNG PEOPLE.

Elkton, Virginia.

At last, the young people of our church have reached a very important goal in the church's history. We have succeeded in organizing our own missionary society with a total of 42 members at the present time. The attendance for the society has been high.

Our society is receiving inspiration and direction from our minister, Rev. S. E. Madren and Mrs. Dewey Dofflemeyer, our sponsor. We hold our meetings once a month, either at the church or in a member's home.

The society raises its finances by dues received at our regular meetings. Plans are now well under way for a Mother's Day Banquet which is to be held in the recreational room of the church. Ninety persons are expected to be present. Rev. Madren will act as toastmaster for the occasion. Each member of the society will bring a mother as his guest.

The aim of this missionary society is to persuade those young persons who are members of our church who seldom, if ever, come to church, to believe in the church which they once were interested enough to unite with its fellowship.

YOUNG PEOPLE BACK UNIVERSITY.

The Youth Fellowship of the Evangelical and Reformed Church will concentrate on the proposed Christian University in Japan as its foreign project for 1949-50, according to a decision reached at the recent annual meeting of the denomination's Youth Cabinet.

In announcing the decision, Wilson Cheek, the denomination's director of youth work, said every local Evangelical and Reformed Youth Fellowship will not only study the problems of Christian education in Japan, but will also contribute financially to the new university.

These contributions, he explained, will be in addition to the $100,000 which the Board of International Missions of the Evangelical and Reformed Church has already pledged toward the institution.

"CHURCHES DOESN'T DIE DAT WAY."

A devout colored preacher, whose heart was aglow with missionary zeal, gave notice to his congregation that in the evening an offering would be taken for missions, and asked for liberal gifts. A selfish, well-to-do man in the congregation said to him before the service: "Yer gwine to kill dis church ef yer goes on sayin' 'give!' No church can stan' it. Yer gwine to kill it. After the sermon the colored minister said to the people: "Brother Jones told me I was gwine to kill this church if I kep a askin' yer to give; but, my brethren, churches doesn't die that way. Ef anybody knows of a church that died 'cause it's been giving too much to de Lord, I'll be very much obliged ef my brother will tell me whar dat church is for I'se gwine to visit it, and I'll climb on the walls of dat church, under de light of de moon and cry, 'Blessed am de dead dat die in de Lord.'"

All worthwhile men have good thoughts, good ideas and good intentions—but precious few of them ever translate those into action.

THE DISCIPLINES OF DISCIPLESHIP.

LESSON IV—APRIL 24, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Whoever does not bear his own cross and come after me cannot be my disciple.—Luke 14:27.

LESSON: Luke 12:16-21; 14:27-33.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 9:42-52.

Present in Body But Absent in Spirit.

Jesus was talking about about some of the deepest things in life. One of His listeners was thinking about getting his share of an inheritance. His body was in the place where Jesus was addressing the multitude. His mind was a long way off. He was characteristic of many people who are in a service of worship in the flesh but whose minds are on other things and many times the things of the world. One of the best sacrifices or offerings which one can bring to a service of worship is a reverent spirit and an alert and attentive mind. We should take heed how we hear.

The Measure of a Man's Life.

What is the measure of a man's life? Is it how much he has? How much he knows? What he can do? How much power he wields? Jesus said that a man's life does not consist in the abundance of the things which he possesses. It is what a man stands for, what he is, what he does for others. We say that a man is worth a million dollars. We think that a man's life does consist in the abundance of the things he possesses. Jesus says that it does not so consist. It consists in certain qualities of character, in certain ideals and idealism, in spiritual sensitiveness and responsiveness. According to the standards of Jesus a man may be worth a million dollars in money and not be much of a man at that. Or he may not have any money and still be quite a man. God looketh not at the outward appearance or at the pocketbook—but at the heart.

The Man Whom God Called a Fool.

Jesus told a story about a man whom God called a fool. From the viewpoint of men he was quite a successful man. Evidently a farmer or a large land-owner he administered his affairs in such a way that his lands produced bountifully, in fact too bountifully. He got such large crops that he had no place to store his goods. He set to thinking about what he would do, and he decided that he would pull down his old barns and build new ones, into which he would put all his grain and his goods. Then he would take things easy. That is not necessarily bad but it is often dangerous. The tragic mistake of this man lay in the fact that he thought that his soul would be satisfied with things. Hear him as he says to himself or to his soul, "Soul thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink, be merry." No thought of others, thought only of settling down and enjoying his wealth, eating sumptuously, drinking freely, and trying to be merry. But God called him a fool. The idea of a man's soul being satisfied with things! The idea of a man having no sense of social responsibility! The idea of thinking that because he could make his wealth secure he could make his life secure. It evidently never occurred to the man that sometime he might have to leave it all—of course a man never carries anything out of this world, no matter how much he has in this world. He just thought of life in terms of what he had. He had disciplined his life but he had left out the highest form of discipline, the discipline of his spirit. That very night he lay down and died. Alas for him who lives only for things and for time.

Jesus never misrepresented His cause. He frankly and even bluntly told men that it cost something to be His disciples. Only as one was willing to deny himself was he worthy to be a disciple of the Master. Only as he would discipline himself could he be a true disciple. Only as one brought all his powers under the sovereignty of Christ could he find the joy and learn the victory of discipleship.

There will be many men and women, many young people and even boys and girls joining the church at this season. It should not be made too easy. Emphasis should be placed upon the fact of discipline in discipleship. It were better for folks not to join the church at all than to join it and make no honest effort to discipline themselves in the name and for the sake of Christ.

Counting the Cost.

Jesus said that men consider the cost in other areas of life. The wise man figures how much it will cost to build a house or a building, lest after he has started it he is not able to finish it. That is not only embarrassing but expensive. Or again a man will hardly start out to fight a war until he has estimated his resources and knows where he stands in such a vital matter. (As a matter of fact there is no such thing as winning a war any more, for both sides lose.) Well, said Jesus a man ought to think about what it is going to cost if he becomes a disciple of Jesus. He ought to have his eyes open when he does go in.

The Disciplines of Life.

Modern man asks too much of life. He wants to throw off all restraint. He wants freedom to express himself, liberty in the sense of license, freedom from law and authority. He often chafes under any discipline. He overlooks the fact that if a man makes a practice of doing only what he likes the time will soon come when he will not like the things he does. He overlooks the fact that true freedom is found not in defiance to law, but only to be found in obedience to law or under law. Our modern world needs not less but more discipline, self-discipline, in individual and social life. Jesus knew that he was dealing with human happiness and health when He emphasized discipline.

TAKE YOUR FAMILY TO SUNDAY SCHOOL.

It is a treat to take your family to Sunday School. Yes, a treat that will be the cause of rejoicing in your household. And, with this joy will come the moral strength and the soul-satisfying experience that only religious worship can give.

The spiritual guidance of Sunday School is more important than ever before in world history, for "righteousness exalteth a nation; but sin is a reproach to any people."

Peace throughout the world can only be founded on the firm rock of religion. Religion is the very heart of our being—our most precious asset. It is our strongest bulwark for peace. If it touches us in childhood, it will remain the rod and staff of our adult life.

By placing high value upon church and Sunday school attendance, regardless of creed, we deepen the faith

PLAN NOW FOR VACATION BIBLE SCHOOLS.

Plan now for Vacation Bible Schools. Young people are beginning to make their plans for the summer. Summer conferences are being set up, and vacations are being planned. Therefore, pastors should make immediate plans for Vacation Bible Schools in their churches. If young people are to be used, they should be notified as soon as possible, so they may make their summer plans. Other teachers should be notified soon and supplied with textbooks so they may have ample time for preparation. It is not fair to hand a textbook to a teacher on Sunday before the school begins on Monday.

If your pastor asks you to assist in a Vacation Bible School in your church, don't say, "No." This is your opportunity to contribute to the life of the church. It is your chance to help children have a better understanding of God, Jesus Christ, and the Church. It is your chance to grow spiritually and mentally. You may also be able to add to your knowledge and understanding—something which we can all afford to do.

If you are a parent, try to make your summer plans to fit into the church plans so that your children may attend Vacation Bible School in your church or neighborhood. The short session the children have on Sunday morning at Sunday school is far too insufficient for the religious training of your children. They need a longer concentrated session. The value of Vacation Bible Schools is priceless. Many a pastor or missionary or full-time Christian worker received his inspiration in Vacation Bible School or Summer Conference. Help your children to know as much as possible about God and the Church.

SPECIAL ISSUE OF THE SUN.

The April 28 issue of THE CHRISTIAN SUN will be devoted to the work of the Board of Christian Education of the Convention. In this issue, the plans of each Division of the Board will be discussed and set forth. The Divisional Chairmen of the Board are: Children—Mrs. W. J. Andes; Young People—Rev. K. D. Register; Adults—Rev. John Gwin; Higher Education—Mrs. W. E. Wisseman; Christian Education—Rev. R. L. House.

NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

The National Conference on Christian Education, sponsored jointly by the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed Churches, will be held in Lakeside, Ohio, June 28-July 1.

The Divisional Chairmen of the Board of Christian Education, above named, are planning to go, along with some others. Any person interested in attending should contact Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Elon College, N. C. Registrations are limited, but it may be possible to get in if you would like to attend this important conference.

IMPORTANT DATES TO REMEMBER.

June 13-15—Woman's Convention and School of Missions, Elon College.

June 20-25—Young People's Summer Conference at Elon College, Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Dean.

July 10-16—Junior High Camp at Crabtree Creek, Rev. W. J. Andes, Dean.

August 21-26—Valley of Virginia Camp at Powell's Fort, Rev. S. E. Madren, Dean.

CROSS AND SICKLE STRIVE.

MacArthur's headquarters probably does as much for the missionaries as it can without laying itself open to the kickback charge of replacing state-supported Shinto with SCAP-supported Christianity.

This is Christianity's big moment in Japan. Rarely have missionaries found a people so gratifyingly receptive to their efforts. For, ironically, both Christianity and Communism, both coming from the western world, are now accepted by some Japanese as "democratic" and therefore in style.

The principles of Christian belief not only serve to counteract many of those viciously introverted Japanese traits which we so deplore; they also fortify believers against acceptance of other imported ideologies which run counter to the democratic concepts we are hoping will take root. This clash between Christianity and Communism, the two newly popular faiths, is becoming increasingly evident in the news of the day: "Some fifty members of the Kyoto Prefectural Office Employee Union are attending every Saturday a Bible class. Marxist elements of the union are bitterly opposed to such an attempt to 'infuse opium,' but were overridden by the majority." And from an issue of the Religious Review: "Especially noteworthy is the brisk activity among the student youth, whose earnestness of spirit rivals even that of the Communist youth. They are seeking to spread the concept of a world ruled by morality. . . ."

Whether or not the enthusiasm for Christianity is sincere, this nationwide flare-up of interest indicates a desperate hunger in the Japanese people for a belief in ideals apart from their physical surroundings. In Japan at present exists a vacuum. New gods are needed to replace the old. Probably never in history has there been a people so ready to grasp at the first shining hope offered them. The new faith which they seek may very likely be found in Christianity or in Communism, depending largely upon the efficiency of the current promotional job behind each.

One thing at least is certain: the principles of democracy we are introducing to Japan promise best to take root where Christian missionaries have prepared the ground.

TAKE YOUR FAMILY.

of our children and making a lasting spiritual contribution to their growth.

We fathers and mothers of America must take not send our boys and girls to Sunday School, for religion is likewise the strongest link in the chain of family unity. And united families, with firm spiritual faith, not only spell happy, wholesome childhood, but furnish one of the surest and best ways for the preservation of democracy.

Sunday School attendance makes for the well-balanced life!

So, fellow Americans, let's take the family to Sunday School, and give them a heavenly endowed fellowship in the greatest educational institution on earth.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Everything seems to emphasize the fact that spring is here. If you had visited the Orphanage this past week you would have seen many evidences of it. Spring cleaning has started. New screen doors are going up and window screens are being repaired. The kitchen storage room is being over-hauled. New shelves are being put up, etc.; not to mention windows being washed and curtains, too.

Yes, indeed, the three girls went to Washington! Those who sponsored their trip for them will be interested in knowing that cards and a long letter state that they are having a wonderful time.

Not to be outdone, the eighth grade is going to Raleigh next week. Seven of our children will go with this group. They will no doubt report a big trip, also.

The Alamance Saddle Club has been putting on a Horse Show this past week next door to the Orphanage. All the children were invited to come.

You will be glad to know that the Easter dresses have been coming thick and fast recently. Everybody, it seems, has been taken care of and I know the children are going to look nice Easter Sunday as they start off in their new outfits.

Invitations for Easter parties are coming in, also. All of the children under ten have been invited to an Easter party and egg hunt down at Chapel Hill. The Phi Delta Theta Fraternity has issued the invitation. There are rumors of other parties, too, and they all sound very interesting.

Those in charge wish to thank all of you for the many evidences of your interest in the Orphanage for your response to every suggestion that has been made. It is your institution and those you have made responsible appreciate your desire to be of service.

A WORD FROM CHINA.

"Dynasties may come and dynasties may go but Christ's work must go on forever.

"The uncertainty in my country does not change the responsibilities of our Congregational Christian churches. There is an urgent call for our Christian World Mission. In China we have to carry on our church work in the communist areas. The heroic endurance of the missionaries and the Chinese Christian leaders makes one recall the Acts of the Apostles in the early churches. In facing this great challenge we have the privilege of witnessing to the truth in a dark, chaotic world.

"If the goal of Our World Christian Mission is reached here in America it will strengthen the morale of the missionaries and Chinese Christian leaders. It will put more men and women in the front lines.

"Indeed it is a great joy to be a worker in this world-wide enterprise. The Christian Church has suffered persecutions in the past, yet she survives. God is not dethroned. Our duty is to do his will."—Rev. Ping-heng Wang, delegate to the World Council of Churches at Amsterdam.

HINES CHAPEL.

Under the leadership of Mrs. E. W. Kellam, the Hines Chapel Missionary Society is experiencing another profitable year.

We were fortunate in having Mrs. M. T. Garrison as speaker for our Thank Offering service. Her timely remarks were received by an appreciative congregation. Offering received was $87.52.

We are looking forward to having the Monticello Church women meet with our group to hear Mrs. Russell Powell review the book on China—Twilight or Dawn.

Our project for this year is sponsoring the erection of a church hut. The hut, which is to be located near the church, is to furnish extra classrooms, assembly hall, and kitchen facilities. Methods of increasing the building fund consist of: free-will offerings, an auction sale, and penny-a-meal gifts from the members.

The society is also sponsoring an Easter program, which is to be presented Easter Sunday evening at 8:00 in the church auditorium.

We were fortunate in having representatives at the Spring Rally in Greensboro. Our pastor, Rev. Mack V. Welch, and Mrs. Welch were there. Mrs. Welch was elected District Superintendent.

We are happy to report that we have increased our financial goal for the ensuing year, and are striving to meet all requirements for a Superior Society.

MRS. J. W. SMITH.

NEWS FROM LOCAL SOCIETIES.

A Cradle Roll program will be given the first Sunday in May at the Burlington Church, during the morning service hour.

Timothy Chang reports that his second brother will be coming to America this spring to enter Michigan State College and work on another degree.

The Glad Message of Easter

By ROY C. HELFENSTEIN

The glad message of Easter is the promise of immortality—the promise of life beyond the grave.

Belief in a future existence is as natural as is the belief in nature's promise that we shall awaken when we lie down to sleep. Belief in immortality is the heritage of the human race. Every tribe and race of man has had this instinctive belief. The American Indian had his idea of the Happy Hunting Ground. Different races have believed that the future life was a continuance of the present. The early Christians thought of the next life as the perfection of the present. Cities, instead of drab cobble stones for pavement, would be paved with pure gold. The idea of immortality has been instinctive in human life from the beginning of time. Who placed that instinct in the heart of man? It was the same God who gave the bird the instinct to sing and to fly. God never gives an instinct to any animal without a purpose. Every new born animal, every new born babe instinctively seeks nourishment that it may live. Every normal person instinctively seeks knowledge, and that quality of life which makes for a future life. Instinctively every animal seeks a safety from danger. In answer to instinct, the song birds leave the Northland to fly South in the autumn—and return again through trackless space in the spring. Would God be so thoughtful of a bird without deceiving it, and put the instinct of immortality within the souls of man made in His own image, and deceive him?

Faith in the love and power of God confirms the witness of instinct which tells man that the grave is not the end of life, but the beginning of a life that never ends. Faith defies mystery to silence its hope of life beyond. Immortality is shrouded with mystery—but so is the present life.

Science says that matter is indestructible—that it cannot be destroyed, but that we can simply change its form. Religion says that human personality is immortal—that love, honor and goodness of life cannot be destroyed—that death does not destroy motion, so neither does death destroy emotion. Faith says that for the soul of a man to depart from the body to make its abode in the realm of the spiritual world is no more mysterious than is the birth of a babe into the physical world.

The power of the temporal life to resist death argues for the power of eternal life to break the chains of death. Your mother walked through the valley of the shadow of death to bring you into the world. Your life was the victory of the struggle between death and life, and your birth was the signal that life had won in the struggle. From the moment you breathed your first breath until now, your life which God gave you has been holding death at bay. Your presence in the world now witnesses the power of life to prevail over death. If temporal life has had the power to resist death, which all along has sought to take you as prisoner, is it anything strange for one to believe that eternal life will have the power to break the bonds of death and set the prisoner free?

The resurrection of Jesus announced to the world the glad Easter message that as temporal life resists death for a time, so eternal life conquers over death for all time—for eternity. The resurrection of Jesus declares that physical death is no more able to destroy personality, individuality, and spiritual reality than sleep destroys the power of memory, or the power of consciousness.

NUMBER 16.

Ye Are My Friends

By REV. JAMES R. CLINTON

That wizard Mem'ry conjures in the mind,
The scenes and joys which must be left behind.
The Master meets His disenchanted men;
When He is gone, life will be sad again.

In that deep shadowed room the Master said
With earnest wish I sought to break this bread
For when I leave you—to the very end
I want you to be sure you had a friend.

Strange is it—passing strange to me and mine.
In darkest hour the brightest light will shine.
And broken hearted men will always turn,
For consolation to the souls that mourn.

Shallow it is, to say that time will heal
The poignant sorrows His disciples feel.
Pretence and pretty platitudes are vain:
As vacant as the chaff well meant for grain.

No man can heal another's troubled heart
Who has not had, in his own life a part.
Who sees the last star fading from the sky—
The sun's eclipse—the final agony.

He sees our grief—He will not brush aside
The loss, the weariness—nor will He chide!
He sees it with our eyes, before His own
Can make its depth and measure fully known.

Now turn again to that last Table set
For lovers, in their desolation met.
What will He say in such a lonely place?
Some saw the meaning in His love-lit face.

He saw the struggle in its whole extent.
And with the mystery He was content.
He girded them with strong upholding hand,
And challenged them, "Believe in God" and stand!

"Believe in Me" for to the bitter end,
I know the Father will my cause defend.
His very words are full of music sweet—
"Your sorrow will be turned to joy complete."

And so it was—so will it ever be—
Transmuting purpose of love's agony.
Oh! let us all arise and follow Christ,
Through life and death—to Heaven's Eternal tryst.

News Flashes

Rev. W. Millard Stevens received 20 members into the Burlington Church during Lent.

Dr. H. S. Hardcastle received 30 members into the Newport News Church during the Easter Season.

A sermon, "Whither Bound," by Roy D. Coulter, will appear in the May issue of Church Management.

Mrs. John G. Truitt has been elected to the Mission Board, filling the vacancy left by the transfer of Rev. J. A. French.

The Executive Board of the Southern Convention met at Elon College, North Carolina, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week.

The editor is attending the National Religious Press Conference being held in Washington on Thursday and Friday of this week.

Mr. A. A. Dofflemyer, vocational adviser at McGuire Veterans Hospital at Richmond, will address the Eastern Virginia Ministers at Suffolk on Monday.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens will represent the Southern Convention at the International Congregational Council to be held at Wellesly, Mass., June 17-24.

Dr. W. E. Wisseman announces that Dr. Rockwell Harmon Potter of Hartford, Conn., will be the speaker at First Church, Greensboro, during the week of September 25.

Mrs. Hayes Holland of Franklin has been appointed Literature Superintendent of the Eastern Virginia Woman's Conference to fill the unexpired term of Mrs. Robert Kimball.

North Carolina and Virginia have been among the leading states in gifts of clothing through Church World Service for overseas relief. Here is the record for the Middle Atlantic States for the first quarter of 1949: Pennsylvania—179,422; Virginia—32,257; Maryland—22,987; North Carolina—20,051.

CHURCH IS GIVEN A PIPE ORGAN.

The pastor, Rev. Robert A. Whitten, announced at a recent Official Board meeting of the Winchester Church, that Mr. and Mrs. Harry F. Nelson had offered to present to the church a pipe organ. The offer was accepted and a letter of thanks ordered sent to Mr. and Mrs. Nelson.

On Tuesday, April 12, the M. P. Moller Co., Inc., Pipe Organ Builders, Hagerstown, Md., placed the pipe organ in the church and their factory men, after a very busy week making installation of the instrument, had it ready to be used in the Easter services. A musician, representing the Moller Company, played the organ during the worship service Easter Sunday morning.

Members and friends of the church are most grateful for this much needed aid to worship and feel that the Nelsons have made an invaluable gift which will be for years to come a monument to the generosity of their hearts, an example of Christian service and a testimony of their faith in Kingdom building.

JOHN A. WILLIAMS
1876—1949

Mr. Williams was a member of the Congregational Christian Church of Franklin, Virginia, where he had been a deacon since 1916. He was a member of the Mission Board of The Southern Convention and of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

The Annual of the Southern Convention is off the press. It shows an increase in payments for Conference and Convention purposes of approximately eleven thousand dollars, and increase in giving for missions and benevolences of over six thousand dollars, also an increase of total raised for all purposes from $684,000 to $817,000. Church property values increased from $3,208,000 to $3,590,000.

LONG'S CHAPEL.

Route 5, Burlington, N. C.

Holy Week services were well attended at Long's Chapel. There was a different speaker each evening. The following ministers brought very inspiring messages: Dr. D. J. Bowden, Rev. W. J. Andes, Rev. J. A. Hailey, Rev. L. T. Edgerton of the Presbyterian Church, Rev. W. W. Snyder and Dr. J. H. Dollar.

Services Easter Sunday morning were attended by a larger crowd than usual. The pastor brought the message. Three members were received into the church. Two by transfer and one on confession of faith. Others are expected to unite with the church in the near future.

The church is making progress at this time. We have recently installed a large bell on top of the tower which was given by two of the members. We are planning a Daily Vacation Bible School in June and the Annual Revival about the first of July.

Fundamental Principles

The Bible is, in a very special and important sense, a book of fundamental principles containing general laws and regulations governing the conduct of Christians in all the affairs of life. These laws are illustrated and enforced by a great variety of authoritative examples touching every relationship of man. This does not mean that an effort has been made to provide specific legislation applicable to every possible act of man; to have attempted it would have encumbered the world with books. The Scriptures do not affect to offer specific rules and precepts for every conceivable aberration of mankind. They do offer general principles which, when properly applied, establish our duty and responsibility in every conceivable case.

Many people, having failed to take cognizance of this fact, not infrequently ask: "Where do the Scriptures say it is sinful to do thus and so?" Their assumption is that because an act is not specifically forbidden, it is therefore permissible. Such a view betrays gross misconception of the nature and purpose of the Sacred Writings, and is clearly erroneous. Had the Lord attempted to anticipate every possible act the depraved ingenuity of a fallen race could invent through more than fifty centuries of sinful conduct, truly "the world would not contain the books" necessary to set forth in detail all the laws and specific regulations essential thereto. The statutes—civil and criminal—of the state of Texas, a commonwealth only slightly older than one hundred fifty years, are exceedingly heavy and cumbersome tomes, and their scope is limited and restricted. Imagine how vast would be the scope and how utterly impossible the effort to read through legislation touching every activity of man over a period of six thousand years!

It should be obvious, therefore, that the Scriptures do not always descend to particulars in setting forth the rules regulating man's conduct on this life. They do, however, offer principles governing his conduct in every possible circumstance; and it is highly important, therefore, that Christians familiarize themselves with such and obtain an intelligent understanding thereof.

We shall endeavor, as far as our space will allow, to set forth the principles governing Christian conduct for the benefit of those who have never had occasion to collect them into one brief statement. A careful analysis of the Scriptures will, we believe, reveal the following principles touching the conduct of Christians in general:

1. A Christian must not engage in that which is specifically forbidden in the word of God. Bearing in mind the distinction above set forth, it is nevertheless true that many things are specifically prohibited in the Bible. These, of course, must always be avoided. It is surely unnecessary to argue this point. Obviously those things which are expressly forbidden in the Scriptures must be abstained from by all who seek the approbation of the Lord in this life and who wish to enjoy his abiding presence in the next.

2. A Christian must likewise abstain from that which is regarded as doubtful in its nature. This principle is derived from Paul's admonition to the brethren of Thessalonica: "Abstain from all appearance of evil." (I Thes. 5:22.) Those practices which bear upon their face a suspicion of evil must be shunned and avoided as religiously as that which is inherently evil. This is true for the following reasons: (1) If it bears the appearance of evil, it may, in reality, be so; its innocent nature may, to us, be a deception. (2) To indulge in that which to others appears to be evil reflects on our profession of faith and sets an unworthy example before others. It is safest, therefore, to shun that which is regarded as doubtful in its nature.

3. Christians are not at liberty to do that which in the experience of others has been found to be harmful to

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

EASTER, CONTINUED.

Two important things happened in many of our churches on Easter Sunday—members were received and an offering was made for missions. Redemptive forces are operating. The church triumphant has new recruits and new resources, new stewards and new talents. "The word of God is not bound." New hearts have become receptive, and new heralds have been enlisted. Our mission program is resuscitated. The manifold ministry of the living Christ will be gloriously extended. We thank God and take courage.

CULT OF THE OCCULT

For many people Easter is a celebration, and now the celebration is over. For more of us Easter should be an exploration and an appropriation. Easter draws attention to that which transcends time and space. Easter is a call to explore the inner dimensions of life and realize the profundity of the truth that the things which are seen are temporal, but the things which are unseen are eternal.

We are bombarded by a veritable hail of visible stimuli which solicit our continual response. Discipline and detachment are necessary. Many of us could be far more systematically introspective without being morbid. Those who frequent the green pastures and linger beside the still waters will carry some new and beautiful flower from the garden of meditation.

Resist the cult of the occult. Easter attests the permanence of the things of the spirit. Practice the communion of the saints, for that is an art which must not be discarded at death. Forget the Easter bunny; remember the Easter bliss. Forget the Easter parade; remember the Easter promise. The plaintive soliloquy of Harry Kemp should give pause for our meditation:

The Spring blew trumpets of color;
Her green sang in my brain—
I heard a blind man groping
"Tap—tap" with his cane.

I pitied him in his blindness;
But can I boast, "I see"?
Perhaps there walks a spirit
Close by, who pities me—

A spirit who hears me tapping
The five-sensed cane of mind
Amid such unguessed glories—
That I am worse than blind.

RELIGION AND ECONOMIC LIFE.

The Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America has been given a $100,000 grant by the Rockefeller Foundation for a three-year study of the application of Christian principles to economic life. This announcement was made recently by Mr. Arthur S. Flemming, president of Ohio Wesleyan University at the two-day meeting in Cleveland of the Federal Council's Department of the Church and Economic Life which will conduct the study.

The general area of the study, Mr. Flemming said, will be the disturbing questions of conscience raised for individuals by their relationships to the practices of economic groups, whether business, labor, farm or professional organizations and by the relation of their own group and its practices and program to other groups and to the community as a whole. For this purpose, he said, the Committee will enlist leaders of the churches and of economic life who combine ethical concern and understanding with technical competence derived from experience and training.

"Putting insights and understandings that come out of this study into writing will require intellectual competence of a high order," he said. "A further necessity is that ministers and church members read, study and apply these statements. Ways and means will be sought by which they more intelligently and responsibly participate in economic life."

Mr. Charles P. Taft, who will have charge of the three-year study, states that one of the important questions is how the individual, endowed with moral freedom and responsibility may function in an economic system more and more determined by group, rather than individual decisions and actions.

"Moral concepts will seem irrelevant unless the individual, in this highly organized and complex form of economic life, is capable of significant moral action. Society must find effective measures to control large economic groups, in the public interest," Mr. Taft commented. He cited business and financial groups, labor, farm organizations and the extension of government into economic life.

CONCERNING ENJOYABLE SERMONS

In the opinion of "The Christian Advocate," Rev. Frederick Myers Morris, dean of the Episcopal Cathedral Church of St. Mark in Minneapolis, Minn., said something not long ago which every Protestant ought to hear.

Speaking to the audience which greeted him upon his arrival as the minister to the congregation, he warned them that they must not expect to enjoy his preaching. In complete frankness he said: "Preaching is meant to instruct, inspire, move and stir the will and often to accuse. It is not to be enjoyed!"

It frequently happens that a congregation asks for a change of preachers for the very reason that their pastor is preaching exactly the kind of sermons to which they should be listening.

A certain pastor who had served for a term of years on the mission field was later assigned to a congregation with a provincial mind. The people had little interest in any Christian enterprise outside the city limits of their own town. Not long after his arrival the new preacher gave them a missionary sermon which was accepted but not enjoyed. In various ways he attempted, in the course of the year, to open the minds of his flock to the world task of the church, but at the time of the Annual Conference the pulpit committee asked the bishop for another minister, saying, "The man we have is too much of an internationalist."

From the pulpit of another church a young pastor preached a series of sermons in which he set forth some of the most approved findings of modern biblical scholarship. Almost immediately he found himself under fire, one of his most violent accusers saying, "I do not want any preacher to try to change my mind. I want strengthening in the faith." By the latter statement he evidently meant "to be confirmed in the opinions I hold."

Dean Morris is exactly right. Good preaching is not something to be enjoyed; it is something aimed at producing Christian conscience and character. There are times, of course, when the sermon should be comforting, but rare is the occasion when it should be comfortable.

A fair test of good preaching might be: (1) Does it pry open any minds? (2) Will it produce Christian conduct? (3) Is it aimed at enlarging the sympathies of the congregation? (4) Do the people who listen have to think in order to follow the preacher? (5) Is any sinner made restless about his sinning?

A truly Christian sermon makes as heavy a demand upon the hearers as upon the preacher.—Editorial in The Christian Advocate.

They Have Not Died*

By DANIEL A. POLING, Editor, Christian Herald.

One year ago at the Easter dawn I voiced the Resurrection message as the sun rose in awesome splendor above the Grand Canyon in Arizona. Now half a world away in the Imperial Plaza in Tokyo, I voice that same deathless, immortal message. A few moments ago there was darkness and silence. Now there is light. And above the effulgent glory which presently floods the world, in the miracle of Easter there is the greater light, "that lighteth every man coming into the world." Here, in another sunrise, in the heart of the timeless East we face the world's old, ageless question: "What is Life?" Life is physical existence, but infinitely more. Life is the beginning of death. Life is the sum of all things; and the cynic adds, the end of all things. To that last we do not consent. Life is a gift—we receive it. Life is an achievement—we make it. Life is the supreme paradox of time and space and this Life is the childhood of our immortality.

These are the answers—or some of them—to man's question, "What is Life?" But the real question, with all its poignant implications, remains unanswered: What is my life?

Perhaps never in human history before, never since records were written on the walls of caves, has this ageless question of the ages been so far from its answer. But there is an answer. It is the answer that transcends time and space, that measures doubt and denial and that makes a bridge across the grave. It is the answer of Easter. It is the dawn most sublime. It is the sunrise of the soul. It is the answer of the Resurrection Christ himself: "He is thy life!"

Once beside an open grave Robert Ingersoll stood and heard its whisper; then "Life is a narrow veil," he said, "between the cold and barren peaks of two eternities. . . . We cry aloud, 'Tis pain!' The only answer is the wailing echo of our cry. But in the night of death hope sees a star and, listening, love can hear the rustle of a wing." And at this Easter dawn we hear above the rustle of a wing the voice of One who said that Life was Holy, and who lifted the humblest child into a distinction higher than the greatest city. He made human personality, yours and mine, without respect to race or color, the object of His love, the reason for His coming, the cause of Calvary and the triumph of the Resurrection. "I am come," He said, "that they might have life and that they might have it more abundantly." He spoke the words first to the starved of Judea and Galilee, to those who had but a bare existence. The proud Roman with his conquering spear prodded them from

His path. They were too hopeless to dream and too weak to pray. But it is written that "they heard Him gladly." Their joy was in what He said and because they could understand what He said, since He spoke not in the unknown tongue of the Temple, but in the vernacular of the street. In their diseased bodies and broken spirits He planted the seed of hope, and the flower took root and grew. In all the years that lie between that far-off divine event which we here again commemorate, the common man, the little people, in spite of pogroms and wars, have cherished the prospect of the more abundant life because Jesus gave the promise and, though crucified, dead and buried, is the Risen Lord of its ultimate fulfillment. "I will not leave you comfortless," He said, "I will come to you." And, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest." And today each of us may answer: "I know in whom I have believed and am persuaded that He is able to keep that which I have committed unto Him against that day."

Against this belief which for unnumbered millions through the ages has been an experience, Godless ideologies and anti-God systems beat in vain. Little men in haughty pride have sought to lift statism or racism or classicism above human personality. For a little time they have prevailed against their brothers. But always truth crushed to earth rises again and freedom born of God is eternal. Human personality! The priceless worth of the individual! The inviolable human soul—for these God made the world and created all things. And for these He sent His only Son to live and serve, to die and rise again. A little child, your child and mine, and the humblest offspring of the most underprivileged family in the most remote place of the earth is more precious than a city or an empire, for cities and empires disappear, civilizations and cultures decay; but the child lives forever. And Life itself is the offspring of faith, while Death is the child of doubt.

"I believe; help Thou mine unbelief," is the prayer God answers first. I believe in myself not as I am, but as I may become and as I purpose to achieve. I believe in my fellows, in spite of those who may have wronged me. I believe in the essential worth of humankind, the genius of friendship, the simplicity of little children and the infinite values that repose in the FULLER'S CHAPEL.

During the fourteen years of my ministry at Fuller's Chapel I have watched the constant and faithful efforts of Brother Joe Fuller Coghill. He is gone now, having passed away February 25, 1949. But there is left behind an influence that will live on.

Some time last fall he became interested in the thought of a larger school. At that time we were having the average attendance of about forty. At Christmas the attendance had picked up to one hundred. No one was happier than Brother Joe. Now the school attendance is about double that of a year ago.

Brother Joe was quiet. He did not make much ado, but all could feel the interest he had and rallied to his support. I feel there is a better day for the church. It is said, you know, "And their works do follow them," and we are happy in the thought of the work that began in him.

And I will add this, too—at our meeting last June and in connection with it, we had a Vacation Bible School. The interest was wonderful. The results very gratifying. Now we have an organization of the young people that meets every Sunday evening. Naturally we are interested in this move and are praying that much good will be the results. Maybe some leader, of whom the church will be proud, will come out of the organization. Let us hope so.

PROTESTANT D. P.'S.

"It's tough to be a Protestant. . . . In many D. P. camps in Europe this correctly describes the plight of Protestant and Orthodox D. P.'s. If you are a Jewish D. P. you can expect to be resettled by the end of 1949. If you are a Catholic D. P. your chance of resettlement over that of your Protestant neighbor is just about 10 to 1 on the basis of numbers of assurances actually overseas at the present time. It is tough to be a Protestant."

With these words Holand Elliott, director of the Department for Displaced Persons of Church World Service issues the challenge to the American Protestant churches. While other groups have pushed ahead in finding the job-home assurances necessary to bring their Displaced Persons to the United States, most of the Protestant groups have lagged behind. This may be because many were unaware both of the need and of the opportunity, or because many have not found out where to get information.

During March, Governor Kerr Scott appointed the North Carolina Commission on Displaced Persons. The Commission hopes to help all groups working on the resettlement of D. P.'s in the state, to be coordinate activities, to act as a channel for information available through state agencies and to discover and answer questions which may arise in the work of resettlement.

The four initial steps in resettling a displaced person are: a specific job, safe and sanitary housing, transportation from port of debarkation and assurance that the D. P. will not become a public charge. This last assurance does not mean that a D. P. may not be discharged for adequate reason or that he is ineligible for various public services.

The process of getting a D. P. family is slow and the prospective sponsor should anticipate a delay of from three to five months between the filling of his application and the arrival of his D. P. family.

Forms for application and materials giving information may be had by writing Miss Ruth Elliott, Box 6637, College Station, Durham, N. C.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

IX. James the Son of Alphaeus or James the Lesser.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

We meet with considerable confusion when we try to identify James the son of Alphaeus. Carl A. Glover refers to James and Jude most appropriately as "Dim figures in the mist."

It is thought by some that this man was the brother of Matthew and that their mother was "the other Mary" who was one of the women at the foot of the cross.

James was probably with the other disciples in the upper room at time of the Pentecost and was one of those which the Acts speaks of as having been imprisoned and beaten by the Sanhedrin.

From the Anaphora Pilati, an ancient manuscript found on Mt. Sinai, we learn that in Jerusalem on a certain ninth of October James was preaching before a company of Jews. His hearers were angered by what he said and seizing him brought him before the officials of the Emperor Claudius and by false witness asserted "This man is a seducer. He goes round about . . . and hinders them from obeying the Emperor." He was arrested and killed by stoning. This story says quite definitely "the brother of Matthew . . . was buried beside the Temple in Jerusalem."

A "CHRISTIAN NATION" !

We popularly think of our nation as being a "Christian nation." This is a very careless and inaccurate use of the term "Christian." There are about one hundred million people in this country who have no religious affiliation whatever. . . .

The following statistics, given by the Federal Bureau of Investigation, should open the eyes of all to the alarming social and moral conditions which prevail in our land:

"1. Fifteen million sex magazines read monthly by one-third of our nation.

"2. The nation has more girls serving liquor than attending college.

"3. Three times as many criminals as college students.

"4. One million girls infected with social disease.

"5. One hundred thousand girls enter white slavery each year.

"6. One million illegitimate children born annually.

"7. One out of every four marriages ends in divorce.

"8. Sixty suicides every day, and one murder every forty minutes.

"9. One major crime every twenty-two seconds.

"10. One hundred thousand unapprehended murderers are walking the streets.

"11. Seventeen-year-olds represent the largest criminal group.

"Remember, these facts were not compiled by some old-fashioned preacher, but by an agency of the Federal Government. These figures are furnished us that we can do all we can to help remedy this shocking condition. J. Edgar Hoover, head of this agency, states: 'The Bible School, church attendance and Christian influence and environment are the only real cure for all this.'"—Exchange.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

SUMMER SCHOOL.

Since 1933, it has been the custom of Elon College to conduct a twelve-month school, the two regular sessions (semester system) beginning in September and closing in May and a summer session beginning in June and closing in August. With the enactment of the GI Bills of Rights providing for generous allotments for the veterans who wish to complete their education the twelve-month school receives added emphasis. The average veteran is advanced in years, has certain personal obligations and responsibilities which make it necessary for him to get out of college as early as possible. The veteran is greatly in favor of the additional quarter to nine months, which greatly accelerates his preparation for life.

The advantages of the twelve-month school for college students are obvious. Should the student take advantage of this extended term he may graduate in three years instead of four. There is an advantage accruing to the college. The average institution of higher learning has an investment in grounds, buildings, and equipment of a million dollars or more. This is quite an investment for nine months' operation. Should the summer school only pay expenses it would seem advisable to use the equipment rather than leave it idle. Salaries for college professors are based on a nine-month period. The average professor prefers to earn during the summer months. The majority wish to teach only six weeks but will teach the additional six weeks if necessary.

There are some disadvantages, of course. The maintenance force needs some time for cleaning and repairs. These can be done more satisfactorily with the buildings and grounds not in use. Considering the program as a whole it would seem advisable to offer college advantages to college students for the entire twelve-month period.

Elon College bulletin for the summer of 1949 off the press and in circulation. The opening date is June 6 for first term and closes July 15. The second term opens July 18 and closes August 26. Attendance at summer school is always problematical. Very few if any advanced registrations made. There is no certainty what the enrollment will be until school opens. Prior to the war at the beginning of our summer school session and for some time thereafter attendance in summer school was small—ranging from 100 to 125. Since the war attendance for summer school has ranged from 250 to 360 for both six-week sessions. It has been our custom to offer practically the same curriculum for summer school as we offer for the regular sessions. The student body, its desires and selections, determine the curriculum to be taught. The faculty for our summer session, as a rule, is made up almost entirely from the members of the Elon College regular faculty. This offers and guarantees to those who attend summer school a high quality of instruction and guidance. Requirements are the same and the same high standard of scholarship is maintained. We invite and shall be glad to enroll high school graduates in our summer session. Inquiries should be addressed to Leon Edgar Smith, President.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

With the beginning of the church in America it was realized that if the church was to be a permanent and efficient organization education for its leaders must be included in its program. With the building of the church began the building of the school and college. Obviously, a trained leadership is essential in this advanced age. Leadership for business and professions of all types must be trained and trained in the theory and practice of its kind. No institution or organization is more essential to the progress of the whole of society than is the church itself. If the church is to take lead in the advancing forces of civilization its leaders must be versed in the theory, the practice and the needs of its organization and must acquire an acquaintance with the theory, practice and needs of every other type of organization and profession within its field of service.

Of necessity, there must be informing and training institutions for the church constituency, not only for its ministers and missionaries but for its officials and instructors in the local organization. A program of education for the college has always entailed economic responsibilities. The state has not and should not assume responsibility for the support of church institutions. The church should consider it an opportunity and count it a privilege to support its own program and should determine that that program should be as inclusive and efficient as any. Our church has always realized its responsibilities in these matters even though it has been a bit meager in its support. It is to be hoped that the day is here when the church itself shall be more advanced in the financial support of its own program.

HOW TO BE A WINNER.

Those fellows who break training rules—by drinking and smoking—are the fellows we tend to dismiss from our minds when we think of what is going to happen at the end of the race.

For one simple reason: they usually aren't in the thick of the running at the finish.

In the years that the Lord has permitted me to run on the track, I have come to find out that the athletes who insist on having a "little drink" before or after a race, or who pulled out a cigarette not long after a race, were the ones we could dismiss from our thinking. They may have been good—very good, in fact—but alcohol and tobacco do not mix well with the well-trained body of an athlete, and as a result the athletes who use them are not at their peak when the starter calls them.

Some people have asked me if a little drink wouldn't help me to relax after a race. My answer is, "Definitely, no!" Our bodies—the handiwork of God—are in no need of alcoholic beverages.

Alcohol hurts, it does not help, the body. That has been proved in hundreds of thousands of cases. I see it very often these days as I travel. Ever since I was a little lad, I have wondered why people would ever think of drinking when the results are always injurious and harmful. I still wonder today.

There should be little difference in the care I take of my body from the care you take of yours. Being in tip-top physical shape will enable you to do a better job in whatever you are interested in, just as it helps me

VISUAL AIDS AND CHRISTIANITY IN CHINA.

By DR. ARTHUR RINDEN.

Still, there are no dull moments in our lives, for now we are living in Shanghai. Here is what has happened:

In November, when the political situation was so tense that the Shanghai American School closed, our government supplied evacuation ships with pointed suggestions that they be used. Then, Gertrude came down here with Edaik, to the Shanghai American School. Soon Ediak had resumed her studies, and Gertrude had begun to teach, taking the place of two teachers who returned to the U. S.

I stayed on in Nanking with the intention of remaining. But later developments caused me to change my mind. When it appeared that the communists were almost to take Nanking, nearly all of the students left the city. One of my classes at the Nanking Theological Seminary was reduced to a single student. In another class only a handful remained. It was decided to declare a long winter vacation, and to reopen the Seminary in mid-February. Then, to escape the likelihood of looting during the time of the "turnover," I brought most of our equipment, films and other supplies down to the greater security of Shanghai. After living alone in the house at Nanking, it was mighty nice to again have our family together, and in such a pleasant place as S. A. S.

Since then, I have been working at the central offices of the National Christian Council. Each morning, at a little before eight o'clock, I take a bus which brings 25 of us missionaries for the six miles down here to the center of Shanghai. No longer do I teach, but because of the greater resources here in materials and personnel, I am making faster progress with my production work than at any time since we returned to China this term. Although the Post Office can no longer give us the usual service, there are so many persons passing through Shanghai that we are able to get our materials sent to nearly all parts of the country.

An interesting new project which has grown out of the present political situation is the preparation of a Christian Family Handbook. Already there is a god deal of difficulty in conducting public meetings of worship in some parts of the country. To meet this situation, this handbook is being prepared for the use of lay people, so that they will be able to conduct services in homes, much as was done in the early days of the church, and as is done in parts of Europe today. I am providing the pictures to be used in handbook, and the supplementary ones to be used on the walls. They are colorful, to add a bit of cheer to drab rooms, and concrete material for Christian witnessing and teaching.

Audio aids are also being provided to help meet this particular need. Phonograph records with short sermons, with chanted portions of the gospels, and with sacred music, have been provided. In places where there is no longer a regular pastor, these aids are proving to be of great value. And if we are allowed to do so, we will develop the possibilities of this medium much farther.

There is another intriguing possibility which has recently appeared. Three periodicals have requested that we prepare weekly strips of cartoon pictures setting forth Christian teaching. It is the sort of approach which has such great effectiveness in a country where there are so many people with greatly limited ability to read. One of the requests comes from a widely read labor newspaper. Such invitations make me wish that there were 36 hours in my day!

Events taking place in Tsinan, Shantung, are now of unusual interest to all Christians in China. It is a kind of proving ground for communist policies. Not much information has gotten out since the descent of the bamboo curtain, but some. At first it was encouraging. Then, not so good. Now, it appears that Christian Middle Schools, for instance, are allowed to continue. However, tuition fees, and board fees are to be set by the student council—not by the people who must pay the bills. And if recent reports are reliable, a teacher must be hired to teach communist principles in the school. Civics, you might call it. And taxes must be paid—which is reasonable, but it is well nigh impossible to get the needed funds. One mission, to secure urgently needed funds, sold the trees from in front of the residences. But the police would not allow them to be cut down, for now, they said, the mission owns only the buildings; the land and the trees belong to the state. Unless some means is soon found to get funds into communist areas, parts of work will soon be forced to close.

Few homes in Shanghai can afford heating. On cold nights, the average number of deaths is well over 100. Already several thousand persons have died "on the street" this winter. Last week as I was on the way to church I saw a bundle on the curbing, left to be taken by the refuse gatherers. In it was a little child. If you are able to visualize a place where such things occur, and without attracting hardly any notice, you will know how great is the need for Christian witness, and service. And you can take satisfaction in knowing that your gifts are making possible an effective attack on such conditions. The situation is now far better than formerly.

Each Monday morning there is a worship service for the NCC staff. This week a Chinese friend of mine was the leader—on the theme, "Now Is God's Time, and Our's." He made it clear that in half of the country, many doors of opportunity are wide open and that we are being invited to enter them. We are glad that we are here now, so that we can make a contribution towards the strengthening of the church, and its work. How long we will be permitted to continue, we just do not know, but we hope that it will be for a long time.

THE BASIS OF HOPE IN WORLD MISSIONS.

The basis of hope in what we are doing at home and abroad is the creative and redemptive activity of God who will not quit and who will not fail. The despairs of any threatening international outlook or any unresponsive situation can be the conditioning factors in which our hope is rekindled, for "our hope is in God who made heaven and earth."

On this great foundation, in all our work today, is a superstructure of hope which should not only keep us from despair but should fill our hearts with thanksgiving and praise. Some of the parts of this superstructure are:

1. An awareness of need, a yearning for more than human help, and therefore an openness of heart and

NEWS FROM ELON COLLEGE.

The Elon College Missionary Society has been quite active throughout the year with regular meetings and interesting programs.

Some of the highlights center around our Thanksgiving Offering and World Community Day joint service on Sunday, followed during the week by a "covered dish supper," at which time gifts were received for the youth of Europe. Mrs. F. C. Lester reviewed in her usual interesting manner, our home mission study book, America's Geographical Frontiers. When she had finished, we felt a closer relationship to our American neighbors.

This year we voted an increase in our apportionment and instead of being a burden, this has proved a real joy.

At one of our quarterly meetings, we had the honor and pleasure of listening to Dr. Reynolds as he reviewed his own The Gospel Unlimited.

Our women have taken on a new home project—that of furnishing the kitchen equipment for our new Parish House, of which we are very proud. A formal opening of this wonderful addition to our Community Church activities was held April 8, with quite a number seeing for the first time what had been a vision for many years.

A few nights before this formal opening, all circles met in the parsonage for another "fellowship supper." About fifty women participated in bringing a tempting array of most delicious food, and tables were set with the beautiful new china and silver recently purchased for permanent kitchen equipment. This will be used at the now completed Parish House for similar occasions in the future.

After supper, Dr. Dollar in a very interesting review, gave our foreign mission study book, China—Twilight or Dawn. We thoroughly appreciated his taking "time out" for this message, as we realize what a busy man he has been, working day and night, to get the Parish House in order for the opening.

After a short business meeting of the circles, the evening of hospitality on the part of our pastor and his wife, and good fellowship with every one present closed.

We have held two quarterly meetings of the general society. Circles One and Two were responsible and gave most enjoyable programs. Another will be held in June, with the night Circle taking charge.

In September, the president is responsible. Thus, the year is advancing, and we are working hard before the hot summer months to get lined up for good reports.

MRS. J. L. FOSTER,
President.

MAKING OUR PROGRAMS MORE HELPFUL.

What is Rally Day? To me, it's an inspirational meeting, at which time local problems are presented and discussed. The program should not be conducted on the same order as the Fall Conference, since the two meetings are of an entirely different nature. The purpose of the Rally is to improve and inspire the work of the local group. In other words, it's a time set apart for the exchange of ideas and experiences to help us to grow spiritually.

I, therefore, should like to recommend having Departmental Meetings with the conference superintendent of each department speaking and leading the discussion, having notified the local presidents in advance of these divisions so that representatives can be previously assigned to each group, thus saving confusion on the morning of the Rally.

I do not propose that we have Departmental Meetings at every Rally. We might have a Question Box placed in a convenient place so all who might have a question could drop it in the box, and at a specified time have a qualified person try to answer them.

A skit, based on some problems predominating in the local groups during the year might prove helpful; the district superintendents getting this information from the annual reports received from the local presidents.

Round Table discussions, prepared in advance, would provide another variation which might prove both interesting and helpful.

The suggestion of having more varied programs should be carried over to our Fall Conference. Is it necessary that we have statistical reports read after printed copies have been handed to us? Why take the time to have them read in detail, when we will probably get much more from them when we read them at home? It would also be very helpful in keeping the program moving and leave time for a more constructive program, if all reports might be compiled into a booklet and presented to the delegates at the door.

These suggestions are offered as an aid in helping to improve the work of the local group through inspiration and exchange of ideas.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR LITTLE FOLK:

Are you a reader of comic books, a movie goer? It seems to be disgraceful not to know all the comic characters. I must admit that I am not a comic fan, but I don't blame you if you are. I don't think you will be ruined or cause a lot of trouble. I read the Bible to my children and they like to hear about David and the Giant. It has blood in it, yes, it's an unpleasant story, but we haven't had anyone killed, not even a slingshot in our home yet.

I would say to you: Read them if you like, but read other things, too. I wouldn't like to eat pancakes every day all the year, would you? I like variety, even in reading! You can begin with Mother Goose and keep on.

There are fairy tales. Try Hans Christian Anderson, the tales of the Greeks and Romans. If you are older you must read Huck Finn, and the books of Charles Dickens, Robert Louis Stevenson. Flash Gordon can't be nearly as exciting as David Copperfield. Flash isn't real, but David is! Good books cost more than comics and aren't swapped as easily, but you know where to borrow them—at school, at the town library and probably your church has a library. It is nice to read aloud to the whole family. It improves one's reading and speaking ability. And the little tots like having books read to them. Some of the comic books about science, nature and Biblical characters are very good. Keep reading them but try some of the others.

If you go to the movies, I hope your mother knows which one and what it is about. In our city, there is an epidemic of scalp ringworm and the health department is telling mothers to keep their boys at home or make them wear their hats! You will probably have more fun outdoors anyway. The people who make movies are interested in making money not in pleasing us! So they make what I heard a twelve-year-old describe as "hugging and grunting" pictures, cowboy ones, mysteries and so-called comedies. Have you really seen a good one lately?

Parent-Teacher Associations carry a list of acceptable films, so does Parent's Magazine and Christian Century. To see a movie is a wonderful event, but don't spoil it by seeing a lot of them that aren't good.

If you have an opportunity to see a play or a puppet show at school or in your town, please go. It will be such fun! Or try giving a play yourself!

One of the best places to see movies is in your church. Many of them show the life of Christ, tell about missionaries and people in far places. Then there are the little, still pictures called film strips. We use them in our Sunday school as well as the movie equipment and we have enjoyed Palestine, hymn stories, the Christmas story and many others.

Through the thoughtfulness of a church family we have become acquainted with the View Master. Do you have one? It's an inexpensive picture viewer for which you buy slides. It shows the scenes clearly and in beautiful colors. For what you might spend on a bunch of soon forgotten movies you may buy a View Master and start a collection of reels. There are all kinds: fairy tales, travel, animals, flowers. I know you would like them.

If you still want to see pictures—buy a kaledioscope at the dime store. They cost about a quarter and you can see hundreds of lovely scenes. There are so many good things to read and see. Enjoy them while you are young and have the time.

WE'LL MAKE IT UP TO YOU.

By LUCIA MALLORY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Don't you want to take out any books today, Sharon?" I asked the little girl who was turning away after checking in several books at my desk in the children's library.

"I'll come back for them after a while, Miss Mallory," the child replied. "Now, I'm taking some toys to the children's ward at the hospital." Sharon lifted a good-sized shopping bag that had been standing at her feet. "Have you time to look at them?" she inquired.

"Yes, Sharon," I answered. "It's very nice that you can share your playthings with boys and girls who need them."

"Mother says I have more toys than one girl can ever play with," Sharon explained. "This is the second time I have sorted them over and divided them. I took a bagful to the hospital a month ago. The children liked the toys so much that they wrote letters to me to say thank you. That made me happy, too."

While she had been speaking Sharon had taken out a well-dressed doll, a box of paper dolls, colored crayons and coloring books, a pair of blunt-pointed scissors, some lifelike small animals, and two attractive scrapbooks.

"The scraps are for the children who can't move around and do things for themselves," she told me. "Mother helped me to make them. We used old Christmas cards and pictures from magazines. Do you think the children will like them?"

"Yes, Sharon," I assured her, "those scrapbooks will give a great deal of pleasure."

As the little girl left the room, I felt pleased to think she was learning the joy of giving, but I wondered how one child could have had so many toys to spare. Her mother explained the situation to me one day when she happened to bring back some books while Sharon was at school.

"Sharon's father was killed in an accident," she told me. "After that, relatives and friends tried to make up for the loss of her father by giving her things he might have provided had he lived. I'll confess I had the same idea—Sharon and I live with my mother, and I do part-time work downtown—I was carrying a gift home to my daughter every day.

"At first," she went on, "I was too nearly blinded by grief to notice what was happening. Meanwhile, Sharon was becoming restless and irritable. About the time I discovered she was being so seriously smothered with toys that she had little interest in any of them. I heard that the children at the hospital were in need of playthings.

"When my mother and I talked to Sharon about those boys and girls in the hospital, her interest was immediately aroused. She has been a much more contented little girl since she has been sharing her toys with them. Besides this, she has taken more enjoyment in playing with the ones she has kept for herself now that she has fewer of them. I am glad we found out in time what a grave mistake it is to surfeit a child with toys that all joy in the land, also, in the everyday things of life is lost."

"HERE IS ANOTHER LETTER."

By FRANCIS C. STIFLER, D. D., Sec'y,
Public Relations, American Bible Society.

The most important historical document ever written was written by a physician. It isn't very long. You can read it in less than two hours. And I suggest you do so some evening. Although it was written almost 1,900 years ago you will find no difficulty in getting hold of a copy of this little document. You don't even have to go to a book store for it. You can find it in any chain store and it will not cost you much.

If you don't read English, no matter, for you can get this little history book in other languages. No book of history has ever been translated into so many tongues. The American Bible Society lists 426 languages in which the whole New Testament has been translated, including all the tongues used by most of the people of the world.

When Dr. Luke wrote his historical treatise he dedicated it to a friend whom he addresses as Theophilus which, appropriately enough, means "Lover of God."

Luke begins by reminding Theophilus of a former letter, also, and we call this devoted doctor's first letter the Gospel of Luke.

I have found that many people do not know that Luke, who apparently was the Apostle Paul's travelling companion, is also the author of the Book of Acts, which just follows the four Gospels in our New Testament.

The Book of Acts is the most important historical work because it is the only record of the most important period in human history. We are just getting used to writing a new number on our date lines. It is now 1949—and why?—because the dating of most of the documents of today's world are figured from the birth of Jesus Christ. His coming proved to be the turning point in history and the record of those first days when the world was turning its most important corner is to be found only in this second letter of Dr. Luke's to his esteemed friend Theophilus.

The story related in the Book of Acts begins with eleven men huddled in a secluded room waiting for something to happen. Then suddenly something does happen. Luke tries to describe what happened—but who can describe acts of God? From the standpoint of history what interests us is that on that day the Christian movement was born—the movement which has been and is today the most vital social and spiritual force in the world's life.

Peter, the natural leader of the little band of disciples, stood up that day and preached his first Christian sermon. He minced no words. He accused his audience of rejecting their Savior and when they asked what they should do to make amends Peter gave in about ten seconds time the formula which has measured the progress of the Christian movement in the world. In English this is what Peter said:

"Repent and be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of your sins and ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Spirit."

Luke says that 3,000 accepted the offer and a little later he says the company of believers had become 5,000.

Read those first eight chapters of the Book of Acts. They are, just as you would expect, crammed with drama and excitement. One leader, named Stephen, spoke out so boldly that the rough element in the crowd stoned him to death. Stephen was Christian martyr number one. Luke handles with consummate literary and historical skill his story of the stoning of Stephen. He points out one seemingly insignificant detail—that a man named Saul was standing by, who, though not throwing stones, was guarding the coats of those who were.

This is our introduction to the foremost leader of that first century and probably of all Christian history. Luke devotes most of the remaining twenty chapters to the story of this Saul who was later called Paul. He was a man with some sort of physical handicap, which may have made Luke's presence with him as an attending physician necessary.

Now Paul was of a different stripe altogether from the twelve apostles. He was what we would call a University graduate. He had been a lawyer and a theologian—they always went together among the Jews. He was a Roman citizen—a man of travel and culture, who, after the custom of well-educated young men of that day, also had learned a trade. Paul was a tent-maker.

Read Luke's 9th Chapter of Acts—about how Paul became a Christian. When this big change comes, Paul loses none of his aggressive zeal—only it is now for Jesus rather than against him.

The Book of Acts is now in full swing with the Apostle Paul in the center of the stage.

It is a book that almost shouts its story. In scene after scene Luke condenses, many times into a few sentences, the thrilling scenes in which a new world was being carved out of the dreary dying Roman Empire. I wonder if the march of history has ever been so vividly and powerfully recorded. Paul carried the Gospel over into Europe. The book ends with Paul, though a prisoner, living in his own houses in Rome, and with freedom enough to keep on with his work.

One wonders when he comes to the end of the Book of Acts why it stops where it does. Why doesn't Dr. Luke go on and tell us how Paul's trial came out or what happened when Paul died. Maybe Luke died first—or maybe the end of the book has been lost—we can think of a hundred things we might like to have at the ending of the book.

But I think the Book of Acts ends just as it ought to. It tells of the beginnings of the most wonderful movement in human history—the coming, just as Jesus had promised it, of the Holy Spirit into men's lives—a coming which would never end until "the Kingdoms of this world are become the Kingdoms of Our Lord and His Christ and He shall reign forever and ever."

THE GOVERNMENT SETS THE STANDARD.

One of the great magazine groups, some time ago, called its executives together to consider whether or not they would sacrifice a truly enormous revenue from liquor advertising. The reasons for doing so were considered seriously. If harm is done by the liquor traffic, should the magazines accept money for increasing the sale of liquors? The more liquor sold, the more harm done; the more liquor advertised, the more sold. Unquestionably, the use of liquor causes a great deal of death, disaster and human woe. These results of drinking have become so formidable that many millions of Americans are becoming exceedingly restive and are only deterred by the political difficulties involved from using drastic measures of dealing with the problem. These people would no doubt appreciate a change in the policy of the magazines, and the other advertising carried would possibly have a greater appeal because of such a change of policy.

After prolonged consideration, decision was made to continue the sale of space to the liquor advertiser and the decision was made at this point: It is legal. By putting the stamp of

JESUS DECLARES HIS AUTHORITY.

LESSON V—MAY 1, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Blessed be he who comes in the name of the Lord.
Mark 11:1.

LESSON: Mark 11:1-11, 15-18; Luke 19:29-48.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 11:25-30.

Whence Comes His Authority?

In what sense is Jesus an authority in our modern world? He lived long ago in a land far away, and under much different circumstances than those under which modern men and women live. Life was so simple then, so complex now. We have learned so much since His day. We have come so far since He lived. How can an humble Galilean peasant, even though He were an unusually wise man, speak with any authority to modern men in our modern world? That is a fair question and it demands an honest answer.

Well there are those, of course, who say that Jesus cannot speak with authority now, even though He may have spoken with some note of authority when He was alive. At best, they say, He was an impractical dreamer and idealist, and it should be foolish to look to Him or to listen to Him for guidance.

But there is something to be said for the authority of Jesus even in our modern world. There was, for instance, the authority that came from a sinless life. No man ever convicted Him of sin and a man of that moral calibre speaks with a note of authority that cannot be lightly laughed off. Then He spoke the truth and the truth always has an authoritative note. Even though crushed to earth, truth rises again. Again, Jesus stood in a unique relation to God. On more than one occasion God said, "This is my beloved Son; hear ye Him." Out of an intimate and unbroken relationship with God, He spake God's thoughts and God's words. Those who heard Him detected quite easily the difference between what He said and what the scribes and Pharisees said. He spake with authority. And finally the fact that He rose again from the dead gave Jesus an unchallenged authority that is timeless and universal. That was the crowning seal of God's approval and the continuing stamp of God's approval. All authority has been given unto Him. He is and always will be the supreme authority on matters moral and spiritual. His words are the final touchstones of truth and the final note of authority.

Today's Lesson and the Authority of Jesus.

Some years ago the writer of these Notes read an exposition by Dean Brown of this or a closely related Scripture in which the Dean in his inimitable way showed how Jesus asserted His authority or sovereignty in four ways or areas of life. The outline is his, the words mine.

a. He laid His hands on a piece of property. He told His disciples to get a colt which they would find at a certain place, and to say in defense of their action, "The Lord hath need of him." In this symbolic way Jesus was asserting His lordship over material possessions. They are simply held in trust or in stewardship by men. Men hold them only by suffering. They are God's to give or to withhold. He could have arranged it some other way, but He chose to have men lend their material things to Him to be used by Him in fulfilling His purpose.

b. He went to the political capital of His country. Jerusalem was the capital of the Jewish nation. Here were made the laws of the nation and here was the seat of such government as the nation enjoyed under Rome. He would assert His sovereignty at the heart of the nation's life. He would have government subject to His ideals and His spirit. He would have men to hold political power as a sacred trust. He would have a part in framing laws and in executing policies and in dispensing justice. What a difference it would make if Jesus were recognized as King in the political capitals of the world.

c. He went also to the religious capital of His country. Jerusalem was, of course, both the political and the religious capital of the Jewish nation. And to a remarkable degree the religious life of the Jews centered in Jerusalem. The Temple was the focal point, and to the Temple Jesus went. Indeed He went there immediately upon His arrival in the Holy City. And what He saw there displeased Him very much. In fact it was the occasion of one of the few times in which Jesus showed righteous indignation. Here were men, religious leaders, or at least under the protection and for the profit of religious leaders, trafficking even within the sacred precincts of the temple area. It was too much—He drove them out and upset their tables. Whether He used force or simply moral suasion, is beside the point. It was all a caricature of religion and He would have none of it. One suspects that if Jesus were taken seriously in even church life today there would be a great many changes. Politics, commercialism, formalism, and religious exclusiveness would all stand condemned before Him. If Jesus were really King of the religious life of the world, there would be a good house-cleaning in many areas."

d. And finally He went into a home. From the city and the Temple He went out to Bethany where he entered into a home. It, too, was a symbolic act. Of all the places where Jesus wants to be and needs to be enthroned, is the home. This is the unit of our social life. This is the determinative place in human life. This is a potential democracy of God. Here are parents and children living together intimately and bound together by tender and strong ties, all bound up in the bundle of life. Here is the training ground for character—seedbed of democracy. What a difference it would make if Jesus was King of the homes of our world, not by force but by permission. No other agency or institution can make up for failure of the home to make the spirit and ideals of Jesus the law of the home.

The Kingdom of God was a word often on the lips of Jesus. Its central and ruling idea was the "rule of God." Jesus never doubted that it would not come. But it had both a present and a future meaning or sense. God already rules, but not fully. But God shall rule. And the time will come when the kingdoms of this world are become the kingdoms of our Lord and of His Christ and He shall rule forever and ever. Amen.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

LAKESIDE YOUNG PEOPLE'S CONFERENCE.

In conjunction with the National Conference on Christian Education to be held at Lakeside, Ohio, June 28-July 1, 1949, there has been developed a Conference for young people also.

This National Conference will have representatives from the Congregational Christian and Evangelical and Reformed Church pooling their leadership resources and having a registered attendance of more than 1,500. Seven hundred and fifty delegates from each denomination have been provided for. The quota for the Southern Convention is twelve. There are a few vacancies at this moment which can be assigned to pastors, directors of religious education, key workers in local churches, and those who have special qualities of leadership. The registration fee is $7.50 and the local expenses will be approximately $25.00. Those going as registered delegates from the Convention may share in the mileage pool. Part of the registration fee is earmarked for that fund.

For young people in the youth conference, there are to be seminars on special youth interests, assemblies, workshops, instruction on worship, craft training, recreation, etc. We should be very happy to hear from interested pastors or others in local churches. The time for registration is indeed short and should be made at the earliest possible date. Registration cards are available either from the Southern Convention Office or from the office of the Board of Christian Education. Those who are interested in broader contacts and in the latest material and methods of Christian Education should avail themselves of this opportunity.

AN ENTERTAINING SPEAKER— MRS. OULD.

Upon examining the advance publicity about the School of Missions, I have discovered that Mrs. E. H. Ould of Roanoke, Va., is to be one of the guest speakers.

Mrs. Ould needs no introduction to people who live in Winston-Salem, as she is a favorite speaker of young and old alike. Her popularity as a speaker for all ages is hardly surpassed anywhere. I have taken her course on "Understanding Young People" at the Centenary Methodist Church here during a Leadership Training School, hearing her for two hours five nights straight. Not a minute of that time was dull. She made us understand ourselves, as well as young people.

Mrs. Ould has a wonderful sense of humor, is highly intelligent, and well-acquainted with her subject. She makes her audience laugh continually and at the same time she drives home some very sensible facts and observations.

Upon other occasions I have heard Mrs. Ould speak on "Family Life," and "Understanding Children." The Parent-Teachers Association here sponsored her one year, and she was excellent. She always has a crowd. When she teaches the young people a course in a Training School, they can't find a room large enough for her class. Every night they keep adding chairs, until they are finally sitting out in the hall. When Mrs. Ould is around, the young people flock to hear her talk and to ask her questions. They like her, and they trust her.

Mrs. Ould is a grandmotherly looking person, tall and attractive looking. The more you see her, the more you like her, and pretty soon you just want to watch her and see what happens next, or what she will say next. She is a grand actress, and I have heard people in her classes say maybe she would have made a good one.

She is a Methodist, but she goes everywhere and is in many different churches and denominations. Whenever she can be useful in her field, she is glad to go. When she speaks on "Building Family Life" at the School of Missions, don't fail to hear her. She is really good.

THEY HAVE NOT DIED.

humblest man. I believe in my country and that patriotism is more than a passing sentiment; more, too, than a national passion. I believe that freedom can no longer be isolated and that peace must be for all if presently it is to be at all. I believe in God and in Jesus Christ the Risen Lord.

But there is one word above all others that articulates the Easter dawn: "He is thy Life;" and in Him this life is the childhood of our immortality, life that shall never die. Here is the unique and infinite value of the Christian's faith. "Whosoever liveth in me," He said, "shall never die."

The dawn that met us here moves now from these unfathomed mysteries of the East across the vast expanses of the world. And as He rose from Joseph's tomb, hope springs eternal in our breasts. We will not consent to failure. We will not accept the conclusions of despair. We will not surrender our beloved dead! In Him we claim the Peace that passeth knowledge, Peace beyond the barricades of fear, the Peace of Christ. Call Him a mere man if you will, but as the Easter Sabbath stillness opens out upon the fields and market places, you will find Him in a throne of adoration, high and lifted up above all the sons of men. You will hear the singing of the waters that flow down from a spring that was opened for the healing of the nations by a skull-shaped hill long ago.

As for me, I believe the Resurrection message, the miracle of Easter. I take my stand beside the Galilean fisherman whose bugle blows over the ages: "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the Living God."

BASIS OF HOPE IN MISSIONS.

mind almost universal and almost without precedent.

2. The Church of Jesus Christ planted in almost every land even though it may not be as strong as it should be.

3. A missionary leadership on all fields, trained and sensitive and filled with the compassion of Christ.

4. A leadership from among the peoples whom we serve which is similarly understanding and is growing in power and effectiveness.

5. A wealth of good will in the hearts and minds of even non-Christians because by works of mercy and relief we have commended ourselves and our Gospel to them.

6. And above all, in this superstructure of hope that rests upon God Himself, is the sure and adequate Gospel, a word of hope and forgiveness, of tendencies and love that centers in Jesus Christ. —Jesse R. Wilson.

FUNDAMENTAL PRINCIPLES.

their spiritual life. This rule is founded on one of the most fundamental laws of nature—i. e., that what is harmful to one member of the race will, under the same circumstances, be harmful to all other members of the race. It has been found, for example, in hundreds of cases, that poison, when taken into the body in sufficient quantity, will produce death. It would be folly, in the face of this common experience, to conclude that I might do so without danger. Common sense dictates that I should profit by the example of others, and turn away from that which has been harmful to others of my kind. This is a rule of the highest importance. Often sincere people express as their opinion the view that worldly practices are harmless. Lack of experience, the inability to recognize the far-reaching consequences of an act, oftentimes renders even the most sincere unable properly to apprehend the dangers such a course entails, and all such should, therefore, rest in the judgment of others who have gone along the way before us. "But strong meat belongeth to them that are of full age, even those who by reason of use have their senses exercised to discern both good and evil," is the Hebrew writer's way of saying what we seek here to convey. (Heb. 5:14.)

4. Children of God are forbidden to do that which, though harmless to them, yet harms others. This principle is elicited from Paul's answer to the brethren in Corinth when they enquired of him regarding the propriety of eating meat offered to idols. An idol is nothing, and meat offered in such sacrifices differs not from other meat. But Paul, in deference to those whose consciences would not allow such eating and who stumbled when others ate it, said: "Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." (I Cor. 8:13.)

5. Proscribed are all of that class of acts which wipes out the line of distinction between the church and the world. This is apparent from the Greek word ecclesia, translated "church," which signifies "a called-out body." Those who are members of the church have been called out from the world; worldly practices have been renounced; they are no longer of the world, and between it and them a line of demarcation has been drawn. Any act which is essentially of the world in the sense in which the term occurs in such passages as I John 2:15 is forbidden to a Christian. Wrote Paul to the Corinthians: "Wherefore come out from among them, and be ye separate, saith the Lord, and touch not the unclean thing; and I will receive you, and will be a Father unto you and ye shall be my sons and daughters, saith the Lord Almighty. Having therefore these promises, dearly beloved, let us cleanse ourselves from all filthiness of the flesh and spirit, perfecting holiness in the fear of God." (II Cor. 6:17, 18; 7:1.)

6. Finally, Christians must not indulge in that which the world regards as inconsistent with their profession of faith. The world is quick to take notice of practices on the part of professed Christians which note insincerity, and all those who engage in such are regarded as hypocritical. Our conduct must at all times be above reproach, not only before God, but also in the eyes of the world.

These principles are enforced in Scripture by an abundance of references and a variety of statements. They are comprehensive and exhaustive in their nature. Every conceivable problem is anticipated and provided for in these rules. Properly applied, they will enable one to determine the legitimacy of his course in life.—Guy N. Woods, in Gospel Advocate.

THE GOVERNMENT SETS THE STANDARD..

legality upon the traffic, "the Government has settled the question; there is no obligation on the part of the publishers to go back of that."

What a responsibility the Government has accepted in giving its approval and permission to the liquor traffic to exploit the American people by all of the devices of trade promotion!

Because of this decision, many thousands of men have died who would otherwise be living. Because of this decision, homes have been broken up, character destroyed, happiness lost. This is true because legalizing the sale of liquor has greatly increased liquor consumption, for the use of whiskey, wine and beer is much greater now than it was in the first year of Repeal. One may contend with some semblance of honesty, that the immediate consumption of liquor after Repeal was no greater than consumption before repeal, although it is not a contention that will stand examination; but no one can honestly contend that the consumption is not greater today—vastly greater—than it was before the Government put its stamp of approval upon the "business."

By its action, the Government assumed a terrible responsibility—a bloody responsibility—and the responsibility is ours because we, the people, in the last analysis, are the Government.—Exchange.

In Memoriam

WILLIAMS.

Deacon J. A. Williams of the Franklin Church, Franklin, Va., passed to his eternal reward on Monday, March 21, after an extended period of illness. Funeral services were conducted at the Franklin Church on Wednesday, March 23, by the writer, assisted by Dr. L. E. Smith and Rev. Randolph Gregory.

The Franklin Church and our Entire fellowship has sustained a great loss in the passing of Brother Williams. He was a Christian gentleman, a loyal churchman, a devoted husband and father, and a noble citizen. He was a man of sound judgment and his counsel was sought by his church. He served for many years as a member of The Mission Board of the Convention and was an honorary member at the time of his death. He had served as a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College for several years. Brother Williams loved his church and gave himself unsparingly to its causes. He will be greatly missed.

He is survived by Mrs. Williams and two daughters, Miss Dolly Williams and Mrs. Everette R. Bryant, Jr., of Franklin, Va.

May God richly comfort and bless the bereaved and may the labors of this great and good man cause other laymen to arise and take their places in the church which Brother Williams loved.

PARKS.

John W. Parks, 78, of Route 2, Ramseur, North Carolina, died in the Asheboro Hospital, Wednesday, April 6. Funeral services were held at the Parks Cross Roads Christian Church, Saturday, April 9, by the writer. Mr. Parks was a member of the Parks Cross Roads Christian Church for many years. Surviving him are his wife, Mrs. Bertha Grimes Parks; one daughter, Mrs. David M. Kennedy of Norfolk, Va.; three sons, John W. Parks, Jr., of Fort Worth, Texas, Dwight of Spartansburg, S. C., and Edward of Ramseur; one sister, Mrs. W. M. Dorsett, Ramseur; three brothers, H. Colon of Greensboro, Thomas B. of Milwaukee, Wis., and George H. of Ramseur.

God richly bless the bereaved in their loss.

COBB.

The members of the Missionary Society of the First Christian Church, Portsmouth, Va., desire to express our sense of loss in the passing of Mrs. Patsy J. Cobb on January 10, 1949.

Her membership in the Christian Church began at a young age while living in Franklin, Va., and after moving to Portsmouth twelve years ago, she continued a faithful member.

Although a shut-in over a long period of time she always retained her loyalty and prayerful interest in the different activities of the church, being a member of the Missionary Society, the Ladies' Aid and the Ellen Grimes Bible Class.

She possessed a strong Christian character and we shall always cherish the memory of her friendship. We bow in humble submission to our Father's will and pray that God's promises may give the bereaved family comfort and consolation in their sorrow.

We recommend that a copy of the foregoing be sent to the family, to The Christian Sun and be spread upon the records of the Missionary Society.

HASLETT.

On Monday morning, February 14, our Heavenly Father, who doeth all things well, called from our midst Mrs. Julia Morgan Haslett after an illness of several months.

In her death the Woman's Home and Foreign Missionary Society of the Suffolk Christian Church has lost a faithful member.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to our Father's will.

2. That we are grateful for such a true friend and member, one who possessed a strong Christian character and lovable personality.

3. That we extend to her bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and commend them to God whose grace is sufficient for every need.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family, a copy sent to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be entered on the records of our society.

Mrs. GEORGE E. ROGERS,
Mrs. HARRY P. TAYLOR,
Mrs. W. H. YATES,
Committee.

MORGAN.

On March 7, 1949, Our Heavenly Father in His infinite wisdom called from her labors, Mrs. Lavenia Morgan, a member of Liberty Spring Church. In her life we saw a good expression of true Christian character. She was quiet, unassuming, humble, yet firm and steadfast in her devotion to Christian principles and practices.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful member. Her life and devotion will be a sacred memory.

2. That we realize God doeth all things well and we bow in humble submission to His will.

3. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her devoted family who ministered to her so faithfully during her last years, and commend them to our Heavenly Father for comfort and peace, realizing that His grace is sufficient for all our needs.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the bereaved family, a copy to The Christian Sun for publication, and a copy be entered on the church records.

Mrs. L. F. BRADSHAW,
Mrs. R. E. PARKER,
Mrs. R. W. HARRELL, Committee.

CARRAWAN.

Mr. Connie Carrawan of Fentress, Va., died suddenly on September 28, 1948. He is survived by his widow, Mrs. Marie Carrawan; two daughters, Mrs. Jacquelin Matthews; and Carol Carrawan; two sons, Mr. Rolfe Carrawan and Jimmie Carrawan.

His funeral was conducted in Berea Christian Church at Great Bridge on October 1, 1948, by the pastor, Rev. Ellis N. Clark.

It was just a short time before he was to return to his earthly home and family that an accident occurred and he was suddenly called to his heavenly home.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to his Master's will.

2. That in his going Berea Church has lost one who was a consecrated member and was always present to worship his master. One who was faithful to his home and a devoted Christian father.

3. That we express our sympathy to his loved ones and we commend them to our Heavenly Father's love and comfort.

4. That a copy of these resolutions be placed on our church records, a copy be sent to the family and one sent to The Christian Sun, for publication.

HOW TO BE A WINNER.

to do my best job in running. If you are in shape physically, you have a much higher possibility of being in shape mentally. Alcohol snipes at you in several ways—physically and mentally, not to mention the most important, spiritually—and, no matter how much you drink, or how little, you won't be at your best in whatever you're doing.

Old fashioned? No, I wouldn't say so. Just using what little sense God seems to have put into my head. If you're a Christian, your body belongs to Christ, and I for one do not care to defile the instrument through which He can reach out to a world deep in sin and degradation.

When you call it "quits" on that stuff, you'll really be a winner.—Gill Dodds.

"UPPER ROOM" OFFERS FAMILY WEEK SERIES.

Harry L. Williams, radio director of The Upper Room, announces the release of a free radio transcription series for National Family Week, May 1-8. The series, entitled "All Good Things Begin At Home," was produced and written by Carlton E. Morse, producer of "One Man's Family." The series of six transcriptions will be loaned free to religious or civic sponsors, or radio stations. Each program allows for a local spot announcement of local sponsorship.

Series previously offered were "So You Want To Stay Married," and "Families Needs Parents."

Action of the Africa Commission of the Foreign Missions Conference

[The following resolution was forwarded on April 15 to Mr. Trygve Lie, General Secretary of the United Nations, by the Rev. Dr. Emory Ross, Executive Secretary of the Africa Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference, which represents forty-three Protestant denominations.]

Within recent weeks alarming news has come from the Union of South Africa—news which affects the whole world Christian community.

The news reports indicate that the recent election of Dr. D. F. Malan to the premiership on the platform of apartheid implies the curtailment of the meager rights and privileges of the large non-European population of South Africa, such curtailment applying to the African, Indian and colored sections of the community in varying degrees but on a common principle of racial and color discrimination.

There appears to be a great pressure upon the present Nationalist-dominated Parliament of the Union of South Africa to commit itself to the imposition and maintenance of complete and unshared white rule; the elimination of all non-European representation in Parliament even by white representatives; the denial of the franchise to all non-white citizens, and the extension of strict segregation even into spheres where it does not already exist.

It seems to the Africa Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America to be the clear duty of Christian people everywhere to express in the strongest terms the conviction that such policies, anywhere and under all circumstances, are definitely unchristian.

We are also strongly of the opinion that the situation developing in South Africa, contributing as it does to the growing feeling of frustration in the Africans and intensifying race tensions, is a matter of international concern.

THEREFORE, BE IT RESOLVED:

1. That the Africa Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference of North America views with alarm and disapproval the current racial policies which the present administration is pressing upon the Parliament of the Union of South Africa;

2. That this Committee denounces the efforts of those of whatever race who would create or stimulate friction between the Indian and Native sections of the South African population;

3. That the Committee considers that the policies under consideration are in violation of the spirit of the International Covenant and Declaration of Human Rights of the United Nations, and asks the United Nations to deal appropriately with the matter.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIANS IN DUKE DIVINITY SCHOOL

The accompanying picture shows eight of the Congregational Christians now attending Duke Divinity School. One, Malchus Victor Welch, was not present when the group was taken. Since the picture was made, it has been discovered that there is enrolled one from the Evangelical and Reformed Church—Ernest C. Klein. Including Mr. Klein, ten men of our connection are currently pursuing work for their B. D. degrees. This is the largest number of Congregational Christians in attendance at one time since the founding of the Divinity School. The Church at large will be interested in their background, education and experience, and thus a brief sketch of each, written by Dr. H. Shelton Smith, Director of Graduate Studies at Duke, is given elsewhere in this issue.

News Flashes

Revs. H. G. Councill, Jr., and John L. Gwin of Norfolk are attending the Yale Convocation this week.

Rev. D. D. Nash announces that the Sunday morning services will be broadcast from our Hopewell Church over station WHAP during May.

MILITARY CHAPLAINS TO MEET.

Using the theme "The Global Mission of the American Military Chaplain," the eighteenth Annual Training Conference of the Military Chaplain's Association of the United States meets in Chicago's Morrison Hotel, May 10-13. Principal speakers at the Training Conference include the newly appointed Secretary of Defense Louis W. Johnson, J. Edgar Hoover, Rear Admiral Oswald Colclough, Chaplain Luther D. Miller, Chief of Army Chaplains, Chaplain William N. Thomas, Chief of Navy Chaplains, Chaplain Charles I. Carpenter, Chief of Air Force Chaplains. U. S. Chaplains from six major occupation areas will attend the conference to offer a report on current conditions in their respective zones. In addition, the chiefs of chaplains of the British army, navy and air force will attend the sessions.

MR. MORGAN WILL TAKE REST.

On March 31 Mr. Morgan and I closed our ministry with the Windsor, Antioch, Mt. Carmel and Isle of Wight Churches, because of his serious illness. Our stay in this field, although short, has been very pleasant. The relationship with these fine people has been mutually happy and agreeable and our lives shall be enriched because of our work here. We had dreams and plans for even a larger future for these churches, but God does not permit us always to realize our dreams or carry out our plans. May our successor be able to do in a better way what we had desired to do.

On the last day of July, Mr. Morgan and I would have celebrated thirty years working together in the ministry. Because we both loved this work so devotedly it is with a deep sense of regret that we leave it. We are planning a year's rest. We are grateful to friends not only in our field but throughout our convention for cards and words of sympathy and encouragement during Mr. Morgan's illness. He is much better, and able to get up and around the house.

The Road of Life sometimes takes a sharp turn and we cannot see beyond the bend but as our faith in God deepens and our trust in Him becomes more complete greater beauties than ever before are revealed to us.

MRS. J. F. MORGAN.

CAPITALIZE ON IT.

May is just about here and its a good time for the planning of some real activity in your church. Undoubtedly many of you have done just this and you are looking forward with anticipation to seeing it through. It's a good month for capitalization, so use it advantageously to increase your church attendance and interest.

At Second Church, Norfolk, it will be a month in which we anticipate a continuation of the Lenten interest. Our primary plans are as follows:

Sunday, May 1, 11:00 a. m., will be Family Sunday. Invitations have already gone out to the church families and friends of the church to come and sit as a family group at the morning service.

Monday night, May 2, the Official Board will meet to lay plans for the month of June.

Thursday night, May 5, will be Church Family Night. At 6:30 there will be a buffet supper followed by a period of fun and fellowship.

Sunday, May 8, Mother's Day, of course, always has its special emphasis. An added note of interest can be gained by giving roses or a Bible to the oldest and the youngest mother present. If not a gift, certainly a recognition.

On Sundays, May 15 and 22, our eleven o'clock worship service will be broadcast over radio station WGH.

The Fifth Sunday, May 29, will be Memorial and Roll Call Sunday. A special tribute will be given to those who have served their country in the hour of its need and a "Memorial Service Candle" will be lighted to burn continuously for one week. Also, on this Sunday there will be a "Roll Call" of the church membership. A special announcement will be sent out to each member urging them to be present at "Roll Call."

At each of these services an appropriate message will be given; and when the month is passed we believe that our efforts will have paid dividends.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

One of the finest things about being a minister is the fellowship with other ministers. "I call you no longer servants but I have called you friends," said Jesus when he was part of such a fellowship. It is true that the disciples were not yet preachers, but Jesus had been preparing them for the ministry. And to him their fellowship, even with all its faults, was so sweet that he uttered that beautiful word "not longer servants but friends." As I write these lines I am thinking of many ministers. To some of them I have been guilty of speaking sharp quick words. Life has hewn me down to size on some of that. But there is not a minister in all my knowledge that I do not honor and those whom I know personally I have a deep feeling of goodwill for. There is something about them that fits me like a glove.

Many of them know the loneliness of being a minister. Their attempt to keep from being accused of having "pets" in their parish, and showing partiality to the fellow who would otherwise make warmest of friends keeps them in a strait and narrow way that spells loneliness. True they have many friends in their pastorate, very, very good friends, indeed; but I have noticed that ministers never seem to get too chummy with any one of them. Ministers are looked upon as being different, and there is something in that which is very good, but sort of sets them apart. Therefore when ministers themselves get together there is real understanding and friendship. They are good medicine for one another. They laugh together, they are checked upon by one another, and they like it.

I felt that emphasized the other day when two of my good minister friends said, "Truitt, bring your sandwiches, and let's eat together at the ministers meeting." By that they meant for those ministers of us who thought to do so—all of us who would—just to sit together and enjoy the fellowship as we ate. The meeting itself is good with its loosely put together program and its thinking together on the things that need to be done by us; but the aftertime that is great.

The other day a man about eighty, who had been greatly blessed in his ministry, had served for a long time in the same pulpit, had been a college professor and a college pastor—hey! why shouldn't I just say plainly it was Dr. N. G. Newman—came into

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION RENDERS SERVICE.

The Board of Christian Education, under the leadership of Dr. Jesse H. Dollar, Chairman, is endeavoring to give maximum service to the churches of the Southern Convention. The Board is organized on a functional basis with divisions of Leadership Training and Administration, Children's Work, Young People's Work, Young Adults and Higher Education. Competent members of each division are making every endeavor to promote the total interest of Christian Education. This strong program merits the cooperation of churches, Sunday schools, Sunday school officials and pastors. The summer program includes the Sunday School Convention, Vacation Bible Schools and Summer Conferences. The Convention Office is doing its utmost to cooperate with the Board of Christian Education in field work and it is hoped that in the near future that we may be able to obtain a full time worker. On behalf of the Convention Office we appeal to pastors and other leaders in our churches and Sunday schools to give the Board of Christian Education every possible assistance and immediate help can be given by prompt attention to young people and summer conferences and by replying promptly to the Board and its divisions with information and assistance.

Your Sunday school and young people's work needs to be strengthened. We have approximately 34,000 members in our churches but have only about 21,000 members in our Sunday schools. Here is a field of labor in which each local church can participate most effectively. Young people's groups need to be encouraged in our churches and by no means should any church miss the opportunity of strengthening its work in Christian Education by holding a successful Vacation Bible School this summer. In the field of Higher Christian Education we have Elon College which is doing a significant work. Our own young people should be encouraged to attend Elon College next fall. Your prayer and support for the Board of Christian Education is solicited.

NEW WORK IN BURLINGTON.

Through the interest and labors of Rev. Weldon T. Madren, Route 4, Burlington, N. C., one of our good pastors, an interested group of Congregational Christian people of the Brookwood section of Burlington met on Friday, April 8, at the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Moffitt, on West Davis Street. Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of the Burlington Church, Superintendent Scott, and Dr. F. C. Lester, Chairman of the Mission Board, were invited to be present.

The group was enthusiastic about the prospect and arranged to have Sunday evening services in the various homes of the people in that community beginning on April 24. The first service was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Paul King, 1613 West Davis Street, Burlington. It is expected that plans will go forward immediately for the organization of a church. Information will be given concerning the progress of this development.

MINISTERIAL EDUCATION.

An important and indispensable phase of Christian Education is ministerial education. The basic training of ministers constitutes an invaluable service in the life of the Church. No educational system rises higher than its source—Protestantism cannot rise above its seminaries.

American Protestantism has a wealth of Christian colleges and theological institutions. No longer need ministerial students go abroad for adequate training. America has the cream of theological scholarship. Great foundations have been established and able faculties assembled. No one denomination has a monopoly on theological education. In fact, denominational lines are freely crossed in ministerial training. The great seminaries open their doors to representatives of all denominations.

Christian people owe a great debt of gratitude to theologians and theological institutions. Yonder in some seminary your pastor was trained, disciplined and inspired. Devoted teachers patiently labored with him and gave him a firm theological foundation upon which to build. Even now your future pastor may be a student at Elon, Duke, Yale or elsewhere.

Dean Bosley of Duke once remarked that there are some things which cannot be taught in a seminary, but there are many things which can be and are taught. There is a body of truth to be communicated; there are sources of knowledge with which students may become acquainted, recognizable errors and heresies may be identified, workable methods may be introduced, psychological and theological guideposts may be erected. Under such stimulating instruction, the churches may be assured of competent leadership for some years to come. Never has theological training been on a higher level than it is today. Some people do not yet realize that the minister is professionally trained.

God richly bless our colleges and seminary presidents, faculties and students! We reap where they have so zealously and faithfully sown. If discouragement overtakes them at this time, may they yet see the travail of their souls and be satisfied. Blessings upon all ministerial students! They become the prophets and pastors of tomorrow.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND RELIGIOUS JOURNALISM.

The Church paper plays an indispensable role in our total program of Christian Education. Churches are fortunate if they have a leadership training school once each year. Some churches have preaching services only once a month. The majority of people listen to the same teacher and preacher regularly.

Now the Church paper comes into the home weekly with a wealth of varied material. Here our leaders speak their minds on countless topics. Denominational and interdenominational spokesmen are given space. The smallest church and the most humble family are given the full blessings of religious journalism. Through the simple and economical medium of a subscription, a member of our remotest church may sit regularly at the feet of our best teachers. This is the miracle of religious journalism.

The Christian Sun is far more than a propaganda sheet. It is our most readily available and most widely used medium of Christian Education. It endeavors to set forth and illustrate both the content and the method of Christian Education. Its value is beyond compute. Its indispensable services should be appreciated and utilized by all.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AND CHURCH UNION.

The General Synod of the Evangelical and Reformed Church, meeting in Cleveland last week, approved by vote of 247 to 41 the Interpretations of the Basis of Union. Before the General Synod's action is final, 75 per cent of the 34 local synods must concur. This is anticipated.

The testimony of Dr. John R. Scotford, who witnessed the Cleveland action, was: "These people are Christians!" Indeed, they are, for their trumpet of Christian union has given no uncertain sound.

The General Synod also unanimously passed a resolution paving a way for further mergers. It stated: "We believe that it is the mind of the Evangelical and Reformed Church to hold itself open and ready to explore the possibilities of union with any and all Christian bodies which are inclined to subordinate secondary and temporary matters to the supreme purpose of the Church as we find it in the mind and spirit of the Lord Jesus Christ."

Church union gives new impetus to Christian Education, opens new doors of educational opportunity, exposes the entire Church to new educational stimuli. In summer conferences, church school literature, as well as seminaries, we find a healthy sharing of educational leadership. And this is only the beginning.

WOMEN AND CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

Preliminary reports have been released on what Mr. Charles P. Taft, former head of the Federal Council of the Churches, has called "the most comprehensive study ever undertaken" of the Life and Work of Women in the Church.

American and the world-wide reports stress the fact that the churches are not using the abilities of their women to the fullest advantage. Many women, the world report notes, "who have (Please turn to page 15.)

Board of Christian Education at Work

By JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman

Perhaps there are those who wonder why all this "fuss" about the Board of Christian Education. We should like for everyone to know what the duties of the Board are. Understanding usually breeds cooperation. May it be so here.

The duties of the Board of Christian Education have, by vote of the Convention, been greatly increased in the past few years. So much so, in fact, that those of us who have to carry out the wishes of the Convention are wondering just when our responsibilities will stop growing. At the present time they are exacting.

At present time it is the duty of the Board to develop the children's work of the Southern Convention, to give guidance in the field of literature, promotion and leadership. This service is meant for all our 197 churches. By requesting help it will be forthcoming to any of them.

Another division of the Board is the Youth Division charged with the promotion of Daily Vacation Bible Schools, Leadership Institutes, Summer Camps and Conferences. Here again is a big job. Certain individuals are charged with definite responsibilities for these various functions and the other members of the Young People's Division help with the planning and promotion. Then, there is the work of the Division of Higher Education. Their work has to do with older young people and young adults who are in the midst of making life decisions and pursuing such preparation as may be needed. They work through promoting "Eton College Day" in our churches, offering guidance through reading lists and personal conferences to those who wish advice. Planning student conferences, Life Decision Day, and keeping in touch with young people who go away from home to pursue college training.

The Adult Division of the Board is charged with promoting programs of work and inspiration in and through the Adult Departments of our Sunday schools, classes, group discussions and general meetings. To promote Temperance, encourage attendance of adults at Sunday school and church services, distribute good literature beyond the regular supply of the local church, encourage recreation in adult groups, cooperate with the Laymen's Fellowship, the Women's Convention and the church's missionary program. You see how busy they must be.

The most general division is that of Leadership Training. Whatever that means, and wherever it is needed, this Division has a responsibility and seeks to serve.

The general work of the Board has to do with securing leadership and helping to direct the program of Student Summer Service. It pays the salary and travel expenses of a Field Worker, in cooperation with the Convention Office. It helps to plan for Daily Vacation Bible Schools, and furnishes S. S. S. workers wherever possible.

The most recent responsibilities of this Board will have to do with the Student Loan and Scholarship funds of the Convention. We must receive applications for scholarships, make investigations of the candidate, execute proper papers and contracts, receive payments and make records of the progress of each person assisted, and see that conditions of such help have been met.

This is a picture of the general work of the Board of Christian Education. It goes without requesting it that the cooperation of churches, pastors, Sunday schools, and all other organizations in the local church having to do with similar responsibilities and charged with such possibilities shall give the utmost cooperation to the desire and purposes of this agency of the church. I can assure you that the Divisions of the Board are taking their work seriously. They are anxious that the total program of Christian Education of all our churches and agencies shall be executed with efficiency.

The chairman of each Division of the Board plans to attend the Lakeside Conference on Christian Education. You, in the churches, stand to profit greatly by their going. We are anxious to serve you. Will you serve with us?

The Lakeside Conference.

The Conference on Christian Education, meeting at Lakeside, Ohio, from June 28 to July 1, will bring together 1,500 leaders and delegates from the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Congregational Christian Churches, to share equally in representation and participation. The purpose of the program is to outline the policies and programs of The United Church of Christ, of which we shall be a part by the time of the meeting. Leaders in the field of Christian Education from both denominations will acquaint us with the present situation and will seek to point out, through literature, study and discussion how we are to build a total program for The United Church.

Daily Vacation Bible Schools.

The summer is fast approaching. We want to ask each pastor in the Convention, together with his Sunday school staff and other officers, to endeavor to have a Daily Vacation Bible School in each of our 197 churches. We want to help you.

We want to help you in every way possible. If you will send in your requests for needed materials, advice and plans to the Convention Office, we will be able to assist you immediately. Do you have ample materials? Have you ordered your kits? Have you set the date for your school?

Will you need Student Summer Service help? We will have, to serve our churches, several picked young people who will go from church to church and conduct your schools. It is obvious that we cannot furnish a leader for every church. We, for that reason, request that if you can hold a successful school without our help, and can do it without an outside worker, please consider the many churches which, if we cannot give them leadership, will be unable to have a D. V. B. School at all. At any rate, if you will decide upon several dates at which you can have your schools, and will send them in, giving us the advantage of more than one date, we shall do our utmost to serve you.

Last year we had requests for seventeen schools in one week, and each wanted us to furnish leadership. We

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

ADULT EDUCATION IN OUR TOTAL CHURCH PROGRAM.

By REV. JOHN L. GWIN.

From the inception of Christianity, there has been felt a distinct and imperative need for adult Christian education. World civilizations are constantly and continually in the process of change, and with these changes come movements which are forever challenging our already none too secure Christian foundations. And today, with the advent of the atomic age, all our constructive forces must be mustered together if even a semblance of order and freedom is to be preserved. Never in mankind's long history has there been a need for adult Christian education as there is in this present day.

It is the adults who make the policies, plans and programs of all countries, and for the sake of future generations and the preservation of civilization, these same adults must be trained and educated in the principles of Christianity. The church through its various organizations, must seek to meet this challenge, and meet it quickly. And must today feel a greater urgency toward its program of adult education.

Men and women are making startling discoveries in the fields of science and medicine. But we, as ministers and educators, are failing to lead our people in the same startling discoveries in the areas of spiritual and religious knowledge. Just as in the areas of pure science, the spiritual power and working principles are there, but they remain dormant. And consequently, because of our neglect and all too often inherent resistance to change, the church is not the force for good in the world at a time when it is most needed.

What can we do to meet the great challenge confronting us today in the adult Christian education movement? Like most church problems, we must begin with the individual. We must so construct such an adequate program in our individual churches that we can meet the adult's particular needs. Planning must be made for his continued growth and development in the Christian way of life. The church must see to it that its program in the field of religion not only equals but also excels that which is going on in every other field of learning. In this we have failed, and failed miserably.

In an age when the world places great emphasis on material and physical things, men look to the church for the same strong emphasis on things of the spirit. Adults are looking to the church for guidance and leadership. And while there is yet time, the church must not fail.

There are several broad areas with which we must concern ourselves in adult education. Some are rarely touched in our churches; while some are over-emphasized. Too many of our adults participate in only one activity, public worship; therefore they can never grow into any degree of maturity as far as their Christian life is concerned. In our adult program we must lead our people not only into a satisfying worship experience, but also in the experiences of a common fellowship together, of social and recreational life, of discovering new spiritual and religious knowledge, and in using this newly discovered knowledge in social action and reconstruction. We must never forget the fact in the adult field; we are dealing with people who are still growing. And with adults, as with children, we seek to guide and direct that development and growth.

In developing our areas of learning, we need continually to remind ourselves that our adults are at different stages of spiritual development and take into account their individual differences. Often we can deal only with small groups, and in some instances, only with individuals.

In this brief article we have tried to point out only the broad outlines of our work in the adult division. To accomplish these objectives we hope to have articles written by the various members of the committee on the duties which were set for us by the Board of Education. For this year we will be concerned mainly with the following:

1. To promote programs of work and inspiration for the Adult Department of our Sunday Schools, in Conventions, Classes, Group Meetings, etc.
2. To promote temperance.
3. Encourage attendance in Sunday School and Church Services.
4. Encourage Adult Education outside the Sunday School and church channels.
 - a. Encourage religious reading for self-improvement.
 - b. Distribute copies of good magazines.
5. Recreational programs for adults.
6. Cooperate with Laymen's Fellowship and the Woman's Convention.
7. Promote Missionary Education on the adult level among both men and women.
8. Methods and programs of promoting Christian Family Life and Parent Education.

It is the sincere hope of your committee in this adult division that through an interchange of ideas and programs we can do a more constructive piece of work in our churches in this all too neglected field of adult education.

Parents who wish to train up their children in the way they should go, must go in the way in which they would have their children go.

THE BOARD PLANS FOR HIGHER EDUCATION.

By MRS. W. E. WISSEMAN.

As we work with the various age groups in our churches, each of us is prone to feel that our particular age group is more important than the others. All of us will agree however that students present one of the most challenging groups. Away from home for the first time perhaps, away from parental observation, away from familiar surroundings, students—thrown on their own—are in constant need of kindly interest and guidance.

We, the members of the Division of Higher Education, would suggest that churches manifest this interest even before the students go to their respective colleges. Early in September, before colleges open, each local congregation should have a public service of recognition for students, with appropriate sermon, prayers, etc. We suggest to pastors that they keep in touch with their students during the year by writing letters, sending church bulletins and devotional booklets. During the Christmas holidays we suggest a special church service led by college students home for the holidays.

We are, of course, interested in having our young people go to our own college. We have the following plans to encourage our young people to attend Elon College:

1. Publicity.—Through the pages of THE SUN we intend to publicize the many worthwhile things going on at Elon.

2. Hospitality Week-End.—In early fall our committee will write a letter to all ministers asking for a list of Juniors and Seniors in high school. Soon after Christmas a letter will go to these high school students from Dr. Smith inviting them to Elon for "Hospitality Week-End." We are hoping that as these high school students see our college in action they will want to become a part of it.

3. College Day.—February 12, 1950, has been set as Elon College Day in our churches. On this Sunday (or a nearby date) each church in our Convention is asked to have a member of the faculty, a student, or an alumnus of the college to take part in the service.

Our Division is interested, too, in students in colleges other than Elon. In Raleigh, Durham, Chapel Hill, Winston-Salem, Lynchburg and Greensboro we will encourage our ministers to care for our students in the various colleges. In cooperation with the Commission on the Ministry we will promote "Life Decision Day."

We covet the cooperation of local churches and pastors to help us serve our students in the best possible way.

THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION EMPHASIZES WORK WITH CHILDREN.

By MRS. W. J. ANDES.

The Children's Division is composed of four other people besides myself—Mrs. Kenneth Register, Superintendent of Cradle Roll for North Carolina Woman's Board; Mrs. Orva Brown, Superintendent of Cradle Roll for Southern Convention Woman's Board; Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Superintendent of Children for Southern Convention Woman's Board; and Miss Dorothy Foltz, Director of Religious Education at Elon College Community Church.

In the absence of a field worker for the Convention, this Division has tried to undertake some of the duties of that office. Some of these duties are:

1. To work with the Division of Higher Education in regard to Summer Service workers.

2. To sponsor Vacation Bible School Institutes and Teacher Training Institutes in different areas of the Convention.

3. To promote the holding of Vacation Bible Schools in each church of the Convention.

4. Cooperate with other chairmen in promotion of good family life.

Already work has been done in promoting Vacation Bible Schools in the churches. Articles are appearing in THE SUN as often as possible. Letters concerning Bible Schools and a list of books and materials suggested have been sent to pastors, Sunday school superintendents, and women's presidents.

The Division is planning to have a four-year cycle of subjects for Vacation Bible Schools, beginning this year with Jesus. The three following years will concern God, The Bible and The Church, but not necessarily in that order. Each year one of these subjects will be suggested, along with a Mission Study to use as alternate.

On April 22, the member of the Children's Division are to meet in Lexington with Miss Bernice Buehler, Director of Children's Work for the Evangelical and Reformed Church and some other members of their committee.

From June 28-July 1, along with other members of the Board, I plan to be in Lakeside, Ohio, attending the national Conference of Christian Education. At this Conference, I plan to learn everything I can about children's work, and I am looking forward to a great conference.

Following this conference, key workers of both denominations will begin to carry out resulting plans and ideas. We in the Southern Convention will be having area meetings to suggest new emphases for children's work and home life, and we will be busy trying to spread the information to all churches.

I ask for the cooperatoin of all pastors and churches in the promotion of children's work. No department of our whole church is more important and more interesting. There is

With Emphasis on Missions

WHY I WANT TO ATTEND THE SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AT ELON.

By MRS. W. E. WISSEMAN.

One of the main reasons I want to be at Elon in June for the Woman's Convention and School of Missions is for fellowship with the other women who will be there. I have much in common with these women. We are working for the same goals; we support the same work; we are bound by ties of loyalty to the same church.

I am looking forward, too, to the outstanding leaders who will be at Elon. Miss Helen Kenyon, our first woman moderator, will be there. Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, recognized as one of the finest of our national secretaries, will present our study books. Dr. Mary Frances Thelen, teacher and ordained minister, will lead our communion service and teach our Bible study. Mrs. E. R. Ould will challenge us to better family relations. I don't know where I could spend two days this summer with more outstanding religious leaders.

I am going to Elon, too, because I am interested in the Woman's Convention. I want to hear the reports of the past biennium and I want to have a voice in planning the work of the coming biennium. I am proud of our Woman's Convention, and I am glad to feel myself a part of it.

Finally, I am going to Elon because I am interested in my own local woman's society. I want my society to grow, to become more valid to the life of our church. I believe that one way I can help my own society is by attending the Convention and School of Missions at Elon. I am expecting to learn many things to bring back to my church. I am going to Elon for information and for inspiration, and I believe I will not be disappointed.

FRANKLIN WOMEN REPORT NEWS.

By MRS. T. HAYES HOLLAND.

It is almost impossible to realize half of the year is gone. Time marches on and so must we. These have been busy months, bringing various duties and tasks that make us eager to work.

Our Bible Study, The Gospel Unlimited, prepared by Dr. Reynolds, was taught each Sunday night during October by Rev. R. M. Kimball.

In November, we celebrated our annual birthday party, with a buffet supper. Sixty-five women were present to enjoy the fellowship. This was just a beginning of all the events to take place during the month.

World Community Day was observed with Mrs. Felton Johnson, Chairman of Interdenominational Cooperation, in charge. The film strip, Displaced Pilgrims, was used. Twenty-one towels for the Pack-A-Towel project were brought, and the offering amounted to $8.25.

Our annual Thank Offering service was observed Sunday night, November 14. The service was sponsored by the Auxiliary and special music was given by the choir. This is a program the women look forward to, in order that they may share their gifts with others at such an appropriate season of the year. Our offering was $90.20.

At Christmas we remembered Miss Angie Crew. CARE packages were sent to her. Mrs. R. M. Kimball gave the program, "Christmas in Japan." We also remembered Timothy Chang with a gift.

The blizzards in the west made us over anxious to help in some small way with the responsibility of our Home Mission project in the North Dakota Indian Reservation. A large box of used clothing was sent to Rev. Harold Case and acknowledgment of same has been received.

In February, we enjoyed our Mission Study, China—Twilight or Dawn, reviewed for the circles by Miss Dorothy Williams and Mrs. Vaughan Beale.

In March the Auxiliary meeting was one we will remember a long time. On Our Own Doorstep was presented to us by chapters. These were done by Mrs. Emmerson Jones, Miss Peggy Beale, Mrs. Felton Johnson, Mrs. Allen Doughty, Mrs. James I. Beale, and Mrs. E. P. Jones.

The World Day of Prayer was observed March 4, 1949. We enjoyed observing this with the church people in this town. The service was held in the Episcopal church.

At this time, we are in the Lenten Season, a time to renew our faith and strengthen us spiritually. Union services were held each night during Holy Week—Monday through Friday in our church. We are without a regular pastor since Mr. Kimball resigned to accept a call to Ashtabula, Ohio. We welcomed Dr. W. T. Scott as our host pastor for the week.

Thirteen of our women attended the rally at Berea (Nansemond). This was a day filled with inspiration.

We ask God's blessings on us as we continue with enthusiasm to accomplish our future achievements for the year.

DELEGATES TO WOMAN'S CONVENTION.

According to our Constitution, each society is entitled to one delegate to the Woman's Convention, meeting June 13-15, with the School of Missions. Societies with more than twenty-five members may have an additional delegate for each additional twenty-five members, or major fraction thereof, provided that no society has more than four delegates.

Each society should elect its delegates immediately. Send the name, address and local society of each delegate to the state President, so they may be elected by their State Conference. Alternates may also be elected. Do not select officers of the Woman's Convention, or of the State Conference or holders of Life Membership certificates, for they are entitled to vote at the Convention anyhow. Try to select persons who can attend the sessions of the Convention and vote. Conference Presidents are: Valley of Virginia—Miss Verdie Showalter, Route 4, Harrisonburg, Va.; Eastern Virginia—Mrs. R. L. House, 3206 Grove Avenue, Richmond, Va.; North Carolina—Mrs. F. C. Lester, 840 Sunset Avenue, Asheboro, N. C.

nothing in the world more interesting than people, and there are no people more interesting and wonderful than children. We are their leaders—their examples—their lights to follow. Let us try to be lights that really shine in the darkness—let us help the children to be followers of our Lord Jesus Christ, because in the heart of a child is the promise of God for a better world—for the Kingdom of God.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

The fifty-ninth annual commencement of Elon College will be held May 28, 29 and 30. The usual commencement exercises will be conducted for the entire period. Saturday will be Alumni Day. The program for the day will begin with Class Day Exercises by the senior class in Whitely Auditorium at 10:30 a. m. The corner stone for the new gymnasium will be laid at high noon, 12 o'clock. The Grand Lodge of North Carolina, A. F. and A. M. has been invited to lay the corner stone using the beautiful masonic ceremonies. This is fitting since the corner stone for the five buildings erected in 1923 were laid by Masonic Order and bear the proper emblems. Following the laying of the corner stone exercises a picnic lunch will be served on the campus for faculty, students and visitors. These are enjoyable annual occasions and are looked forward to by many alumni and friends. There will be a business meeting of the Alumni Association at 3:00 p. m. At 6 o'clock President and Mrs. L. E. Smith will hold a reception on the campus, weather permitting, with the graduating class and the reunion classes serving as honor guests. The alumni banquet will be held at 7 o'clock. J. Hinton Rountree, the retiring president, will preside. Dr. David W. Shepherd of Atlanta, Georgia, will be the orator for the occasion. The outstanding alumnus for the year will receive an award on this occasion. This should be a very interesting and a profitable day for all who are interested in Elon College.

Sunday will be baccalaureate day. The senior class numbers 120—111 of whom are supposed to complete requirements for graduation in May. The remainder will complete requirements in Summer School and will receive their diplomas at Commencement 1950. This is by far the largest graduating class in the history of the institution, which indicates the growth of the college. Dr. Harold A. Bosley, Dean of Divinity School, Duke University, will preach the sermon. The service will be held in the Auditorium at 11:30 a. m. The lateness of the hour will permit friends from surrounding churches and communities to attend their service and come for this hour of worship. Students of the Music Department will give recitals in the afternoon at 4 o'clock. The Elon College Singers will present the Faure Requiem at 8 o'clock in the evening. This is always a most enjoyable occasion and

THE BOARD PROVIDES LEADERSHIP TRAINING.

By REV. R. L. HOUSE.

The Division of Leadership Training has a representative personnel and is endeavoring to promote a Conventionwide program of leadership training. Efforts are being made to ascertain the churches and areas in which no provision for leadership training is made. Wherever schools are needed and desired, assistance will be given in their setting-up, and especially in the selection and provision of the faculty. We have hardly scratched the surface in this great field. The number of qualified teachers should be multiplied in every conference. A premium is placed on area schools, such as those held recently in Eastern Virginia, although there is nothing to prohibit a local church from having its own training school. An interdenominational school was held recently in Lynchburg and one is being held currently in Richmond. In all possible ways let us strengthen and advance the cause of Christ through leadership training. This should be a banner year!

many friends will want to take advantage of it.

Monday will be graduation day. Lt. Governor of North Carolina, the Honorable Pat Taylor, will deliver the baccalaureate address. He will be presented by Honorable Thad Eure, Secretary of State. Governor Kerr Scott of North Carolina will be present and receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. The Rev. Clyde Foushee will receive the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity and will present the Bibles to the members of the graduating class.

The Board of Trustees will meet at 9:30 in the morning and will attend the exercises in the chapel which begin at 10:30 a. m. The Board will reassemble at 2 o'clock for the transaction of business.

The Board of Trustees, faculty and students jointly issue a cordial invitation to all to attend the exercises of the 59th commencement of the college.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Individual members of the church and friends of the college contribute to the college directly for the purpose of buildings and endowment. The college no longer looks to these sources for contributions to help meet current expenses. It does however look directly to our Sunday schools and churches for support of its current program. Students' tuitions and fees go a long way toward meeting the financial obligations of the college, however, they do not fully or completely meet these obligations. The church of the Southern Convention is the college's only recourse in securing money to prevent a deficit in current obligations. When you look at the reports of last week and this week, one for $40.00 and the other for $61.00, you realize how inadequate this support is. No reflection on the Sunday schools and churches that contributed but the appeal is made to the ones that did not contribute. Your contributions would help your college and make it possible for it to operate in balance. The college is most appreciative of every assistance given.

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR LITTLE FOLK:

I wonder if some of you are sick in bed or have met with an accident lately? The little boy in our family had a fall on Good Friday which broke the bones in his ankle and we have been spending time in bed and learning to manipulate crutches. I haven't thought too much about entertaining sick folks but now I am learning! Here are some ideas you might like for a day in bed. I hope it won't be for more than a day or two:

Fish.—Cut several fish from cardboard. Any shape will do. Mark the eyes on both sides with crayon, and their fins, too. Then punch a hole where the mouth should be. Get a small stick and tie on a string and at the end tie a bent pin. Now, lay your fish on the floor by the bed and see how many you can hook with your pin. It's fun.

A puzzle.—Find a pretty colored picture in a magazine or from a calendar. Paste it on a piece of cardboard and when it is dry—do take care to get it smoothed well—cut it in zig-zag pieces and you will have a puzzle.

If your mother is the "messy" kind and will let you have finger paints in bed you will really like this recipe. If you aren't sick you can enjoy it, too.

- ½ cup starch.
- ¼ cup cold water.
- 1½ cups boiling water.
- ½ cup soap flakes (not grains).
- 1 tablespoon glycerin.

Mix into a paste and cook until glossy. Then add vegetable dye or dry water colors for coloring. Then you dip your fingers in and smear or paint on paper all the designs you like.

Another interesting recipe is for rolling and cutting. This is an uncooked dough and may be used as clay.

- 4 cups flour.
- 1 cup salt.
- Water to make dough.
- Color if desire.

This will keep if wrapped in a moist cloth and makes a sticky affair for pounding and pulling into shapes. Use cookie cutters on it, too.

Recently I went to see an exhibit of art work done by students of grammar and high schools in the Southern States. I saw several from High Point and Greensboro in North Carolina. One was a piece of printed material made from a flour sack. The pattern was made on an Irish potato and printed on the cloth. It was lovely. The most unusual piece was a wall hanging made by a boy in Warwick County, Va. He sewed jeans, shirt, buttons on a piece of cloth to make his picture. It was a crabbing scene, with his boy in jeans holding a crab net. It was clever and very original. There were finger paintings, water colors and crayon designs. I wish I could see some of the things you draw and make.

P. S.: Please wear an apron and spread newspapers when you finger paint and work cold water dough. It is necessary!

CHILDREN NEED UNDERSTANDING.

By HELEN GREGG LOUDON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"I believe children are frequently given an inferiority complex because pressures and demands are imposed on them that are too heavy. Everything in life moves in its own time. If you allow maturity and personality to develop naturally, youngsters will not feel the necessity for 'showing off,' " a mother, whose husband is a child psychologist, recently philosophized in the presence of a small group of parents and educators.

"I think you're right," Ailsa, the mother of an exuberant young daughter, answered as she continued her knitting. "Last night we had callers and I kept insisting that Betty should be more quiet as she played with her chum. I later suggested, 'Dear, I wish you could cultivate more poise. Please be a little lady.' Now I'm beginning to see your point of view. Happy is the child whose family accepts him as he is."

"We must accept the evolutionary processes—the growing principle," pretty Stacie Ketring, who is working for her Master's degree in euthenics, spoke up. "A lovely lily grows slowly from a small bulb; it doesn't come out of the ground full-blown. We wouldn't stand over the green shoot with a magnifying glass expecting to see the blossoms, for we know the little plant must bloom in its own way and time. It's the same with children. They ought not to be made to feel self-conscious, as a result of being critically watched. Should not many faults be overlooked or weeded out with a light touch?"

"How interesting!" the youngest mother present spoke up. "There is danger of making children into small robots. 'Let me see—Mother wants me to do it this way,' they may say to themselves. This shows a growing feeling of personal inadequacy. Do you believe in encouraging youngsters to mature as their own hearts, brains and personalities dictate?" she asked Stacie, knowing of her valuable teaching experience.

"To a certain degree," Stacie answered, her blue eyes showing her interest in the subject. "One of the most gracious women I know charms everybody by never being anyone but herself. I believe children, too, should be allowed to be natural and spontaneous. Many parents teach the fundamentals of behavior principally by example."

Then a mother, who is also a grandmother and is now bringing up a second generation of children, gave us the steady thought that we needed. "I'm glad," she began, "that Stacie said, 'To a certain degree.' As all of you know, Froebel tells us to 'live with our children,' and to be successful in child-raising there is no other way. Children are as lovely and refreshing as flowers, but unlike flowers their evolutionary processes are affected by the actions of their neighbors. If Mary, child who has lacked a close understanding companionship with her parents, meets and becomes deeply interested in—to the extent of copying—another girl, Laura, who has formed most undesirable behavior patterns, it will not be for Mary's good for her parents to accept her in her new role. Yet it will not do much good to say, 'Please be a little lady.' The unfortunate influence must be counteracted by affectionate understanding and true friendship on the part of Mother and Father. Even when there is no definite disturbing element, like Laura, there are too many casual faults in the best of environments to expect that children's reactions will always be acceptable."

"We have much food for thought," the youngest mother said reflectively. "We parents must be capable of adjustment, constantly learning with our children."

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

THE BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION WORKS WITH YOUTH.

By REV. KENNETH D. REGISTER.

Apparently today is the most difficult time in the Christian era to offer the youth of our church an adequate program that will catch their interest and stir up within them a passion for the things of the Kingdom. This does not mean, of course, that the youth programs in our churches today are not as well planned and prayerfully prepared as they were in the past, but it means rather that the best planned programs of the past are not good enough for today. I mean by this that the church has failed to keep up with the times in many respects and outside interests have just about won the day. This is not the case with all our churches, but it will hold true in the majority of them.

At the last meeting of the Board of Christian Education the work of the Board was divided into five divisions. Young People's Work to which I was named chairman, is one of these divisions.

Plans for this division are now under way to select several of our key young people's workers to work with the chairman in trying to work out a system whereby we may be of some help to the young people of our Convention. It is our hope that we will be able to work with and through every young people's group in the Convention whether it be through the Pilgrim Fellowship, a Sunday School class or what have you. We want to stay in frequent contact with our young people trying to help them and in so doing hoping they will help us.

I would like to have the names and addresses of all the District, Conference and Convention young people's leaders that we may be able to contact you by mail and confer with you personally. I would like to hear about what you are doing in your group now and what you plan to do in the future. Why not send in a news item from your group to THE SUN that it may be published for all to see? You may think that others don't care what you are doing or going to do, but you are mistaken. Others are keenly interested in what you are doing and they would like to know about it.

Some of the aims of this division are: to examine available literature that may be usable in your work; to try to put within your reach the best materials that can be had for your young people's work; to work with the Field Director in planning young people's packets for Pilgrim Fellowship groups; to try to revive the idea of an active group offering their services to churches which have no active group this helping them to get going themselves; to work closely with the REV. KENNETH D. REGISTER.

E. & R. groups that we may be better acquainted; to work with the summer camp and conference committees; to help in placing Student Summer Service Workers and to be of any other service we possibly can.

This will not be a dictatorial committee—not in the least. Our most sincere desire is that we may be fellow planners and workers together. The success of this division will depend to a great extent on your co-operation and helpfulness.

We are not prepared at present to offer any concrete suggestions for your consideration, but we hope to be able to do just that in the near future. Watch THE SUN and the mail for further word from us. Contact us through your conference presidents when possible for we hope to be in touch with them more frequently than with the local leaders. However, any helpful hints, suggestions or worthwhile projects that you would like to share with others, pass them on to us.

We still have faith in the church and in her young people who give her the necessary spark of adventure that keeps her on the go. We believe that the church can cope with anything the world has to offer. In fact, we believe that we can carry the inside outside so thoroughly and convincingly that there will be no outside for the inside will have swallowed it up. Thus the Kingdom of God will be brought to pass. And you young people are the ones we are counting on to do it. Sure, the world has thousands of attractions to offer which tempt us to lean their way, but if we really want to and will get in there and try, we can have a youth program in our churches that you would not want to miss for anything.

Our youth have not lost the zeal for Christian living. They are simply demanding a big order from the church which, if the church does not deliver, outside interests will. Youth doesn't want a hand-out. They want a chance to invest their lives in something that will pay the highest interest possible.

Yes, we must wake up to the fact that the age-long battle between good and evil is still raging and the good will still have to do evil one better or evil will rule the day. Victory for the cause of Christ will come as the youth of our church win it, and we believe that they will not fail us now!

EASTERN CAROLINA.

The Eastern North Carolina Young People's Conference, held at the Amelia Church near Clayton on Sunday afternoon and night, March 13, was a great success. The churches of the area were well represented (double the number at their first rally held last October), with a fine group of ministers present, a good program and fine fellowship. Rev. Bernard V. Munger of Chapel Hill gave the address in the evening. Fuller's Chapel, with 29 delegates, was the largest visiting delegation. Marvin Dickens of Wake Chapel presided over the sessions.

The young people at Amelia bought a bus this fall to bring children to Sunday school. Hilda Gray Johnson, Secretary of the Conference, is a member of this group.

Fine reports were made by the Commission Chairmen, Doris Grissom, Ann Rothgeb, J. Lee Lassiter, Jr. and Joan Powell.

Timothy Chang was a special guest at the meeting.

THE CLASH WITH RELIGIOUS AUTHORITY.

LESSON VI—MAY 8, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: He taught them as one who had authority; and not as their scribes.—Matthew 7:29.

LESSON: Mary 11:27-12:44.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 12:1-12.

As One Who Had Authority.

When Jesus had finished what we call the Sermon on the Mount, the people were astonished at His doctrine, for He taught them as one who had authority, and not as the scribes. Even the common people recognized a note of authority in His voice and message. This does not mean that He blared forth His message—it was probably spoken quietly. But His words carried conviction and authority. People detected it and stood in amazement before it. The scribes spoke at second hand; Jesus spoke directly from God.

Whence Cometh This Authority?

Yes, the common people recognized the authority of Jesus. But the learned scribes and the chief priests did not recognize it. Or rather they recognized it, but questioned it. They came to Him and asked, "By what authority doest thou these things? or who gave thee this authority to do these things?" Here was an itinerant Galilee carpenter going about teaching and preaching and He had never been ordained, He had never gone to the seminary, He had never been sanctioned by them. What right had He to teach and to preach? But worse still, He had invaded the sacred precincts of the Temple in which they held vested interests and special privileges, and through which they were waxing rich and powerful, and He had had the audacity to overturn the tables of the money-changers and to drive out the animals. "Come on, young fellow, and show us your credentials. Show us your badge of authority." It should be said in passing that these religious leaders never would have paid any attention to Jesus if He had not threatened their vested interests and their special privileges. But when His words and His works threatened to invade their area they rose up in wrath and finally did Him to death. Thus, it was, is now, and evermore shall be. Talk about the ideals and principles of Jesus in a general way and nobody will become much excited or concerned. But when they are applied to specific areas of life, when they cut across special privilege or when they interfere with the ringing of the cash register, then something happens.

One Guess As To His Authority.

Jesus was a spiritual genius. In reply to the question of the scribes and the chief priests, Jesus asked them a question. "The baptism of John, was it from heaven or from men?" These guys had stuck their necks out a long way. Suppose they said "from heaven" then looking them directly in the eyes the Master would have said, "Well why didn't you believe him, and obey him?" But suppose they said "of men"? That had them just the same, for the people knew that John the Baptist had divine credentials; that he was a man sent from God, and they would have stirred up a hornet's nest sure enough. So they meekly said they did not know. "Well," said Jesus, "I am not going to tell you by what authority I do these things."

Putting the Master on the Spot.

Religious prejudice like politics, makes strange bed-fellows. Here were the Pharisees and the Herodians ganging up on Jesus in an effort to get Him in trouble with Rome. They had nothing in common except a hatred and fear of Jesus. They asked Him whether it was lawful to give tribute to Rome or not. That question packed dynamite or atomic energy. Suppose Jesus had said "No." They would immediately have reported the matter to Rome, for He was revolting against Rome and Rome brooked no disobedience. Suppose He said "Yes." The Jewish people, bitter against Roman rule, would have vented their wrath upon Him. His opponents knew all this and they thought they had Jesus in a trap. But again the Master showed His spiritual genius by asking for a coin and calling attention to the image and the superscription. Then He said, "Render unto Caesar the things that are Caesar's, and unto God the things that are God's." Man has a dual obligation. If he lives under government and enjoys the privileges and protection of government he ought to support the government. But man also has obligations to God. No man has discharged his obligations in life if he is simply a good citizen. He is to render unto God the things that are God's. And loyalty to God comes before loyalty to one's country.

The Sixty-Four Dollar Question.

These fellows did not seem to know when they were licked. So a scribe came to Jesus asking Him which was the first or the greatest of the commandments. That was the sixty-four dollar question. There were hundreds of laws and commandments in the books of the law. How could one be singled out as the first or the greatest law! But without a moment's hesitation Jesus answered, "The first commandment or law is, love God with all one's soul and mind and strength and heart." This law had been lost in the shuffle through the years and probably did not rate as high with the scribes as some laws about sacrifice or petty rules of keeping the Sabbath. Jesus brings it out, brushes it off and sets it at the very top of the long list of laws. Love God first and keep Him first—that is the first and the greatest commandment.

The second is like unto it—love your neighbor as yourself. There are no greater commandments than these, said Jesus. And the scribe recognized it and readily admitted it. He saw that these laws were far more important than burnt offerings and sacrifices, and forthwith said so. He had gone a long way, but he had not gone far enough. Jesus himself said that He was not far from the kingdom of God. Close, very close, but not in. That miss was as good as a mile. It is not enough to give mental assent to the teachings of Jesus; one must receive them into his heart and obey them. It is not enough to know about Jesus; one must yield oneself to Him.

No More Questions.

"And no man after that durst ask him any question." Reverently it might be said that Jesus knew all the answers. So far as His critics and enemies were concerned, He had adroitly turned their questions upon them and had thoroughly routed them in these battles of wit. The unfortunate thing about the whole thing is that for the most part these people were not sincere. Like many people today their real problem was not an intellectual difficulty but a moral weakness. They knew better than they were willing to do.

CONGREGATIONAL CHRISTIANS IN DUKE DIVINITY SCHOOL.*TIMOTHY CHANG.

Born May 30, 1925, Timothy is the son of Cheng Yao Chang of Shaowu (Fukien), China. He attended Fukiensien Christian University, from which he graduated with the B. Sc. degree in Agricultural Economics in 1946. For the highest academic record in his class, he received the Shr De Tang Scholarship. For two years thereafter (1946-48) he taught chemistry in Shaowu High School. Meanwhile he led Bible classes and engaged in other forms of Christian service. In 1947 he was president of the Young Adult Fellowship at Shaowu. In the fall of 1948 he began work in Duke Divinity School. After graduation he hopes to join his sponsor, Richard Jackson, in full-time Christian service in Shaowu. Timothy has many warm friends at Duke. He gives promise of being an excellent religious leader.

EARL THOMPSON FARRELL.

Earl, the son of Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Farrell, was born in Pittsboro on October 11, 1921, and in due season became a member of Hank's Chapel. After graduating from Pittsboro High School, he attended Elon College, from which he received the A. B. degree in 1944. Earl entered Duke Divinity School in the fall of 1944, and also, at the same time, assumed the pastorate at Haw River, where he and Mrs. Farrell make their residence. He has now accepted a pastorate in the Eastern Virginia Conference. Like others with a major pastorate, he can carry only a partial course in the Divinity School.

JOHNSON LINWOOD GRIFFIN.

A native of Virginia, Johnson was born in Nansemond County on May 16, 1919. He became active in the membership of the Oakland Church. After finishing at Chuckatuck High School, he entered Elon College, from which he received the A. B. degree in 1943. In connection with his study there he served as pastor of Berea Church, Altamahaw. In September, 1943, he entered Duke Divinity School and accepted a call to Chapel Hill, but within a few months became an Army chaplain and saw active service in the Philippines (Luzon) with the 43rd Infantry Division. Upon the close of the War he joined the Occupation Forces at Sendai, Japan. Discharged in 1946, he re-entered Duke Divinity School in February 1947. He expects to receive the B. D. degree from Duke in June 1949. Since February of this year he has been pastor at Bay View Church in Norfolk, Va.

WALSTEIN WELCH SNYDER.

A native of Virginia, Walstein was born at Elkton, April 30, 1923. He received the A. B. degree from Elon College in May, 1945. Since March 1942 he has acted as pastor of various churches in North Carolina. In 1943 he was ordained an elder in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

MALCHUS VICTOR WELCH.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. D. S. Welch, Malchus was born at Graham, North Carolina, February 14, 1916. In 1947 he received the A. B. degree from Elon College. His present residence is at Elon and he serves churches in that general area while engaged in study at Duke. In June 1947 he was ordained an Elder in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

ALLEN LAFAYETTE HURDLE.

The son of Mr. and Mrs. John Hurdle, Allen was born September 25, 1920, in Alamance County, North Carolina. From August 1942 until his medical discharge in October 1943, he served as a private in the 182nd Infantry in the Pacific. Later he received the A. B. degree from Elon College in 1947. In June 1947 he was ordained an Elder in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. After some study in Yale Divinity School, he transferred to Duke Divinity School. At the present time he is living in Burlington and serving a pastorate in that area.

FRED PAGE REGISTER.

Fred is the son of Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Register of Sanford, North Carolina. He was born in Lee County, North Carolina, September 24, 1925. In 1947 he received the A. B. degree from Elon College. During his college career he held many extra-curricular positions, including captain of the varsity basketball team and president of the Student Body. He was ordained an Elder in June 1947 in the Western North Carolina Conference. Currently he is serving as pastor of two Carolina churches.

ROBERT THOMSON WOODRUFF, JR.

Robert, a native of New England, was born at Swampscott, Massachusetts, December 5, 1912. Between 1933 and 1935 he attended the University of North Carolina, and then entered Carson-Newman College, from which he received the A. B. degree in 1948. Previous to entering the North Carolina and Virginia Conference he served as pastor in several churches in Tennessee.

WILLIAM POOLE SMITH.

William, a native of North Carolina, was born in Burlington, N. C., on May 29, 1926. He was educated at Wake Forest College, from which he graduated with the A. B. degree in 1946. Mr. Smith made a distinguished record at Wake Forest, in recognition of which he was awarded Phi Beta Kappa. Although reared a Baptist, Mr. Smith recently transferred his membership to the Congregational Christian Church and is now a licentiate in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference.

ERNEST CHARLES KLEIN.

(Not in picture.)

Charles, a native of Alabama, was born at Cullman, June 8, 1924. Following his attendance at St. Bernard Junior College, Cullman, he entered Franklin and Marshall College (Pa.), from which he is scheduled to receive the A. B. degree next June. His graduation there was delayed by the fact that he became a member of the Armed Forces July 15, 1944, and served overseas until July 27, 1945. When discharged from the Army, he was a staff sergeant.

* * * *

Taken as a whole, these men are making acceptable records in their Divinity School work, and there is evidence that they will all make worthy Christian ministers.

Congregational Christians are greatly indebted to Duke Divinity School, without which it is likely that a considerable number of our young ministers would not be able to complete their graduate professional education. Since our ministerial students, like those of other denominations, must in most cases finance them-

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Easter, the great harbinger of new life, hope and happiness, has come and gone, leaving signs of joy and happiness all around. This letter is to thank all of you personally and collectively, for making it such a happy season for the children.

First of all, the women from the various societies, Sunday school classes, and individually, really outdid themselves in dressing up our big family. There were men involved in this procedure, too. They cannot be unthanked either. All the clothes, coats, suits, dresses, etc., for the girls and the coats, sweaters, and suits for the boys were really wonderful. There were checks to take care of extras, like shoes. Then there were classes and individuals who bought complete outfits for various children. All of your responses to the cry for need were so generous that excitement and happiness were to be seen everywhere.

To those of you who provided parties and egg hunts we are most grateful. Easter wouldn't have been Easter without the sharing of fun.

You will be interested in knowing that twenty of the children were entertained in homes during the Easter Season. Some of them visited relatives while others went to see friends.

Since there is only one letter a week it seems that one wish just must be slipped in with all of our appreciation for what you have already done. While nosing around the three buildings, I failed to see a single daily newspaper. In this day and time the smart boy or girl just must know what is happening in the world about them. How can they know if they never see a newspaper? This just must be corrected somehow!

Next time there is going to be an article on "The Baby Home." It isn't going to be a "thank you" article either. But be sure to read it.

selves, it is fortunate that Duke is located in the heart of the churches of the Southern Convention. Almost all of those attending Duke are also in charge of pastorates in this region. The new curriculum that will be introduced next fall will make it easier for men holding churches since it will give them a longer week-end away from the Divinity School.

As in the case of other denominations, Congregational Christians attending the Divinity School have their full tuition remitted. Because of this indirect financial aid, and owing to the fact that the churches of this immediate region are in need of pastors, any reasonably capable young minister of our Church in the South should be able to get a full theological education. Superintendent Scott is generously assisting those who wish to serve churches in this area while attending Duke Divinity School.

knocked at the doors of their churches seeking vocation, have found the doors not opened except in a rather niggardly fashion."

Yet both reports acknowledge the vast amount of work which women pour into church life. Without the aid of women, the American report declares, "the great far-flung missionary work of the American churches would have been impossible." A pastorless congregation from far western U. S. reports that "the women even hauled the stones used in building the basement of the church and do all the janitor work except making fires."

The two-year study was undertaken by the World Council of Churches under the direction of Mrs. S. M. Cavert of the United States and includes reports from ecumenical women's committees in 58 countries throughout the world. Among those contributing to the report was Miss C. M. van Wijk, former president of the World's YWCA and Mrs. Geoffrey Fisher, wife of the Archbishop of Canterbury.

The report of American women on their participation in church life has been separately published under the auspices of the Federal Council of Churches by the Friendship Press.

An international women's conference held in Baarn, Holland, last year has strongly urged that churches "must make women feel that their services are really wanted and that when offered they will be fully and adequately used." The world report asserts that "the crying need in all quarters is for more and better training." Those who have studied the problem are reported by the American research group, under the leadership of Miss Inez Cavert of the Federal Council, to feel that the church should take responsibility for training women and that seminaries should encourage more women students.

The American report also revealed a wide disparity of views among the 110 denominational bodies questioned. The so-called "free church" group of denominations, including Friends, the Congregationalists, the Baptists, the Evangelical and Reformed Church and the Methodists, felt, in large majority, that women should be given a place of leadership in all church activities. A few church bodies, including the Lutheran Augustana Synod, the Protestant Episcopal Church, the Southern Presbyterian and the Reformed Church in America, contained sizeable minorities of opinion which claimed that running the church was a "man's job."

Scoring the "superstitions and taboos . . . fogs and miasmas" which obscure the relations of women to society as a whole, the world report declares that "sex is not a deplorable monopoly of women." The American report points out that Christ, in his ministry on earth, "practiced the principle of equality of the sexes in spiritual matters." The report considers that Paul's attitude of women may have been due to the special situation in Corinth. Readers are also reminded of Paul's statement that "there can be no male and female" in Christ.

The question of the ordination of women for the ministry drew its full share of attention in both reports. Martin Luther is quoted as saying that, "If it should come to pass that there is no man, a woman might get up and well preach to the others if she has the ability to do so." The sentiment is echoed by a modern theologian. "If a woman has something worth saying, she has as much right to speak as a man."

The American report cites many instances where "there is no man," and a woman minister took over the leadership of a congregation with outstanding results. One of these women, Mrs. Josephine Huffer, a widow with three children, took the pastorate of a church of 75 members in 1924 in Indiana. The congregation now numbers over 500 and has a church plant valued at $90,000, free of debt.

The world report considered the question of women ministry "so burning" that they suggested that the World Council of Churches conduct a "full ecumenical inquiry into the spiritual, biblical, theological and practical questions involved." To carry forward the international study of the place of women in church life, the World Council of Churches is now setting up a department to issue a more extensive report on the survey, and to plan further action.

BOARD OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION AT WORK.

only had six people working. How could we do it? The month of June is already very crowded. We cannot furnish Student Summer Service workers before June 19. We want to try, in every case, for the worker to be at your church the Sunday before the school begins on Monday so that he can meet the other workers, get acquainted with the church building and meet with those who are to help run the school. That will give you a much better school. Many churches, if they are to have help in leadership, must have their schools in July and in August. Each church must do its own promotion of interest—well in advance. Please send us your needs at the earliest possible moment and we shall do our best to meet them.

Personnel of the Board.

The Board of Christian Education of the Southern Convention consists of ten members: Drs. L. E. Smith, H. Shelton Smith, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Mrs. J. D. Strader, Mrs. W. J. Andes, Reverends Bernard V. Munger, Robert L. House, Kenneth D. Register, John L. Gwin and Jesse H. Dollar.

In planning for the development of the work of the Board, a great number of members have been co-opted in setting up the divisions of work, which are as follows:

Children's Division—Mrs. W. J. Andes, Chairman; Miss Dorothy Foltz, Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Mrs. Orva Brown, Mrs. E. H. Setvenson.

Young People's Division—Rev. Kenneth Register, Chairman; Rev. W. J. Andes, Mrs. Katherine Andes, Rev. S. E. Madren, Drs. H. S. Harcastle and F. C. Lester.

Higher Education Division—Mrs. W. E. Wisseman, Chairman; Drs. L. E. Smith (ex officio), Ferris Reynolds, Stanley C. Harrell, F. C. Lester, Mrs. J. D. Strader. (The young people's representative elected could not serve.)

Adult Division—Rev. John L. Gwin, Chairman; Charles E. Heath, Jr., Mrs. W. B. Williams, Mrs. Parke Brinkley, Rev. Herbert G. Council and Hon. Mills E. Godwin.

Leadership Training Division—Rev. Robert Lee House, Chairman; Revs. C. Carl Dollar, Ferris Reynolds, W. Walter Hall and Mr. Roy Larrick.

All these divisions have had one or more meetings and are doing a splendid job. We believe that the most effective work we have ever experienced is well on its way. But remember, you must do your part in the total program. Study their reports which appear in this issue.

Resolutions Concerning The Christian Sun*

1. That we reaffirm our appreciation of the long and useful service of The Christian Sun among our church constituency; that we express our confidence in the indispensable service it can and will render in the coming years for the promotion of the enterprises of our church and for the welfare of our constituency; that we believe confidently in the ability and willingness of our church constituency to support The Christian Sun adequately.
2. That we commend the Editor, Managing Editor and others responsible for the publication of The Christian Sun for their untiring efforts in the discharge of their duties.
3. That the Board of Publications, with the Editor, Managing Editor and Convention Office, study and put into effect at their discretion the constructive suggestions contained in the report of the special committee on ways and means of improving the quality of The Christian Sun.
4. That The Christian Sun be continued as a 16-page weekly publication.
5. That the subscription price remain at $2.00 per year for single subscriptions; that present discount to organizations of 10% for renewals and 20% for new subscriptions be continued.
6. That the Board of Publications and a special committee appointed by the Executive Board be charged with the responsibility of obtaining One Hundred Christian Sun Sustaining Memberships of $10.00 per year to help give perpetuity to The Christian Sun.
7. That the subscription goal for The Christian Sun be set at 5,000, and the Convention Office, with the cooperation of the convention and conference officials, pastors, churches, laymen's groups, and women's societies, promote a subscription campaign in keeping with the resolution from the Valley Central Conference: "That a list of at least 2,500 laymen of our churches, who do not subscribe to The Christian Sun, be obtained, and that these laymen be appealed to by letter and in person to subscribe for The Christian Sun at the present subscription price of two dollars. That this conference go on record as approving this plan and pledge its full cooperation."
8. That the Board of Publications, with the Editor, the Managing Editor and the Convention Superintendent constitute a committee to seek to supplement the income of The Christian Sun by obtaining suitable paid advertisements.

FAITH is a Family Affair . . .

"I pray the Lord my soul to keep"

Whatever our creed or language, we have all felt the impulse to pray. We may worship in various forms . . . we may call our God by various names . . . but, somehow, most of us express our faith in a Higher Power. When our loved ones are spared, we give thanks. At times of confusion or danger we call for guidance. When confronted by a mighty mountain, or the perfection of a tiny snowflake, we are awed by the wonder of life. We teach our children our faith, so that they will not be alone as they face the world.

Faith is not just for holy days. Faith is for every day . . . at work, at play, in the quiet times the family has together.

We need faith—and never so desperately as today. The world is filled with voices of confusion. It is easy to feel helpless and alone. But faith in a Power outside ourselves can be a bedrock of family unity—a shield for family happiness.

A return to faith can give men and women a broader view of life—a sense of perspective. Then they are better prepared for the give-and-take of family living. . . . The family united in faith has a lasting bond.

The home atmosphere is far different when a family stops trying to walk alone, when it sees its place in the bigger scheme of things. It works together for the things it can control—and trusts its God for guidance in problems beyond its control. Such a family can't help feeling closer together, more sure of itself, happier!

Rev. Kenneth D. Register reports: "Union (N. C.) received eleven new members during the Lenten Season this year. Nine of these came by confession of faith, and two by letter of transfer. Holy Communion was observed on Thursday evening before Easter and a Good Friday service was held on Friday evening of Holy Week. The Spirit of Christ was vividly evident at both these services and we were richly blessed by them."

The initial meeting of the recently formed Southeastern Convention of Congregational Christian Churches will be held in Central Church of Atlanta on Saturday and Sunday, May 14 and 15. Delegates will attend from our churches in Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama and Georgia. Dinner for the delegates will be served at the church on Saturday evening and Sunday noon. Rooms in Central Church homes for Saturday night will be available. Dr. Stanley U. North, Dr. William F. Frazier and Dr. Fred S. Buschmeyer of New York, and other leaders of our fellowship will be in attendance and give addresses.

PROGRAMS CITED FOR FAMILY WEEK.

The International Council of Religious Education has released conclusions of its third annual poll among Protestants regarding favorite family listening. Top favorites include: "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriet" (CBS); "The Aldrich Family" (NBC); "The Greatest Story Ever Told" (ABC); "One Man's Family" (NBC); and Pepper Young's Family" (NBC).

These programs will receive citations the week of May 1-8, celebrated as National Family Week. Miss Pearl Rosser, radio education director of the ICRE, announced that the awards will be made from the International Committee on Christian Life. The citations will be signed by Harold E. Stassen, ICRE president; Bishop John S. Stamm, president of the Federal Council of Churches; and Mrs. M. Murdoch MacLeod, executive secretary, United Council of Church Women.

This marks the second year of citation for "The Adventures of Ozzie and Harriett." The others have won the awards for the third straight year.

"We must emphasize spiritual values in family life. It is difficult to think of a stable home which is not undergirded with a deep religious faith—an implicit trust in the wisdom of Divine Providence and the guidance which alone comes from On High."—President Harry Truman.

"The resources of religion are indispensable in meeting the deepest needs of every member in the family. Wise are the parents who recognize that religious faith is a 'family affair' as well as a 'private affair.'"—Helen Reid Kearns and Raymond V. Kearns, Jr., Philadelphia, Pennsylvania.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

"Is It True What They Say About Dixie?"

The editor gets a drubbing now and then, here and there, for publishing material which does not originate in the Southern Convention. Some of this material is branded as being "foreign," or "extraneous." It is alleged that the people are not interested in this kind of material and will not read it.

Now these allegations and "allegators" cannot be dismissed as having no foundation in fact. The editor stands convicted. He has imported material. Cold print bears mute testimony. The culprit cannot plead innocent. Contraband material has been used. Proof-positive is not lacking. And yet, before the final verdict is rendered and sentence passed, perhaps the defendant might be allowed to make a statement.

Admittedly, The Sun is the organ of the Southern Convention. A battery of associate, contributing and departmental editors are set up to bring the essential news to and from every nook and cranny of the Convention. They deliver the goods, delineate the southern pattern, or stand default.

The editor is rather well anchored—by his own lethargy, parish responsibilities, family duties and editorial tedium. This makes it impossible for him to be a roving editor throughout the Convention. Our unalterable situation does not permit that luxury.

The editorial temptation to speak ex cathedra on all phases of our Convention program is throttled if not stifled. A modest effort is made to accentuate the primary emphases of our ongoing program, life significant appeals, needs or achievements into prominence, and make helpful comments on timely or devotional topics. In addition, the editor conceives it to be a part of his responsibility to bring to his readers some glimpse of the denominational and interdenominational world beyond the bounds of the Convention. It is his prerogative to allow the winds of the north and the west as well as the east and the south to bear their Tidings. As a servant of the most high God, he has an allegiance to and responsibility for not only church local, but for the church universal. Faithfully, therefore, he must go regularly through a raft of releases and sift out the material which in his judgment has greatest relevance for his readers. The $2.00 subscription entitles each reader to this type of editorial service. Few people realize how much material is deleted or eliminated. Less than one half of this type of available matter actually appears in print. And by careful screening, only a negligible percentage of material is used which is likely to appear in other periodicals. There are a few exceptions, to be sure, such as articles which may be of churchwide importance. We risk this duplication in the realization that The Sun is the only religious publication which many of our people receive.

Local material receives priority in publication. Thereafter, all available space is utilized in the publication of denomination-wide, interdenominational and ecumenical news. This policy is pursued assiduously in the conviction that the great majority of our people are not willing to bury their heads, ostrich-like, in the sands of the Southern Convention; in the conviction that whatever is of vital interest to the Kingdom of God is of vital interest to us; in the conviction that southern people are concerned with the larger interests and activities of Christendom. We dare not delimit or defy Dixie. None of us are full-fledged southerners. Our ancestral roots reach back beyond the sea. Moreover, we are strangers, wayfarers, pilgrims here, as St. Paul emphasized. Furthermore, Dixie has been visited by the Dayspring from on high. Our rootage and our fruitage demand full-orbed horizons in all our study and concern, and no agency has greater opportunity and responsibility to reflect that universal concern than has our church paper. Dixie happens to be our present base for far-flung operations (such as China). In such a grand strategy, all areas of communication must be kept open.

Suffolk Sets the Pace

Dr. John G. Truitt is leading the way in Suffolk in a determined effort to help secure 2,500 new subscribers for The Christian Sun. Mrs. J. W. Underwood has been appointed official Sun representative for the church. Dr. Truitt makes no apology for his column, but offers this testimony in his Church Bulletin: "The Suffolk Church has many good reasons for reading The Sun; it is our church paper, two of its main features are done by your pastor and a former pastor. The president of the Convention, your pastor, is trying to help greatly increase subscriptions to The Sun. The life of the paper demands it. Our goal for the Convention is 2,500 new subscribers. If we could get these how much more good The Sun could do! Please help Suffolk do her part."

We believe that gratifying results will follow if every pastor in the Convention will take the initiative without provocation or procrastination just as Dr. Truitt has. Let us know what is being done in your church. Blessings on The Sun agents who have been appointed in 36 churches, and upon those who had the concern to appoint them!

Facing Realities

By MRS. A. C. MOORE, Superintendent

Suffolk District, Eastern Virginia Missionary Society.

We shape our destiny by the reality of the difference Christ makes in our lives. As Home Missionaries, we face a tremendous task! A greater challenge and a higher calling have never existed. No situation exists in our complex world that does not offer a challenge to Christians. Christ's realm should encompass all horizons! Physically, they are easily accessible, but what of our spiritual perspective? Is our vision dimmed by barriers gradually reared around us in our American security?

When we attempt to diagnose the ills of the world, we are confronted with the reality that men and women everywhere are starving for understanding and love; yes, even in our own communities. This is an age of anxiety and Christians must rise above the falsity of the world. We see materialism spreading as a great plague over the earth. The common man feels that the societal order in which he lives does not value him. The theologian sees crisis. He sees cafeteria-line Christianity where we, who "profess to call ourselves Christians" select only the whipped cream dessert and leave the meat of vital religion by the side. He sees God and men as the sons of God relegated to a "take it or leave it" position.

The need in our day is for the church to rise above self satisfaction. The east is bound into this worldwide materialism and the Western World is in disintegration as it now stands. Is it communism? Yes, and communism is a cult of self-worship. Its great threat is that it denies God. A new gospel is being preached to man through highly organized and effective agencies of propaganda. The State, it affirms, is not made for man but man for the State; the individual is nothing, the State is all. Freedom is an illusion leading to slavery for the masses. Christianity is designed to hold slaves in subjection by giving them the promise of compensation in the next world. That which we thought could never happen here, is actually happening before our very eyes. Men are propagating a gospel which will surely destroy freedom.

The answer lies in the universal church guiding men into the fellowship of Christ, who is the only hope for the world. We must do more than think and talk about this crisis which is, as the Chinese say, both danger and opportunity. We must turn to God in vital communion and we must recognize the great need for Christian fellowship. We must be a fellowship of the concerned striving toward the unity of Christians.

Another counter-agent to the spread of this poison is Christian liberal education. "Light and truth for Christ and His Church" has been, until recent years, the motto dominating the spirit of the institutions of learning in the western world. It is the education of free men and the education which police states first suppress.

There was a time when all universities were proud to proclaim that all truth is God's truth and that all we do and learn and know is to the

"HAPPY THE HOME WHEN GOD IS THERE."

By Henry Ware, Jr.

Happy the home when God is there,
And love fills every breast;
When one their wish, and one their prayer,
And one their heavenly rest.

Happy the home where Jesus' Name
Is sweet to every ear;
Where children early lisp His fame,
And parents hold Him dear.

Happy the home where prayer is heard,
And praise is wont to rise;
Where parents love the sacred Word
And all its wisdom prize.

greater glory of God. Today, in too many universities, it is not regarded as intellectually respectable to profess and call onself Christian. The total result of secular education is a destructive cynicism. If this country persists in showing itself faithless to ideals which have made it what it is today, we deserve to lose in the struggle that lies before us.

Applied Christianity is the working answer. Christian action springs from faith and must keep faith alive, since it is the very texture of all life. Men's minds at best are little minds. Without faith in God all would be futile. Christian action has the responsibility of keeping informed. We, of the church, cannot afford to be either timid or ignorant of the realities which it faces today.

Every war leaves vast physical destruction and untold moral destruction. The world has felt the impact of two wars in recent years and America has not escaped the demoralizing influence. Missionaries, upon their return to America, have been appalled at the indifference of so-called Christians toward God's law, seeking rather to follow man-made patterns, and have warned us that America is fast becoming pagan. Americans have become a nation of spectators and it is no part of vital religion to be a spectator only. Moral and spiritual starvation are a common sight in our country today. Are we alert to the factors contributing to American delinquency? Many of our movies should never have passed the censors! The theory, which Hollywood producers would have us believe, that Americans desire first of all sensationally demoralizing pictures with frequent drinking scenes, is not only untrue but subversive to the efforts of right-thinking people. Much of the literature today is detrimental to Christian character. Our Sundays have so gradually become commercialized holidays that we are no longer shocked at the desecration. The sale of alcoholic beverages has reached an all time high and the youth of our land is the chief victim. Any nation that traffics in liquor will slowly but surely undermine itself.

There is no denying that the home has been failing and the Christian family dropping to pieces. There are many reasons but most of these failures stem deeply from a failure of religious faith. Violent revolutionists and wanton killers are largely the children of resentment. Children fed on the bitter bread of selfishness and dissension, naturally grow up to take out their revenge on society through crime.

Out of the disorder in the world today there is coming a renewed conviction of the importance of the home. The home is the greatest teacher in the world and the church has the greatest teaching. Church and home are like Siamese twins—if you cut them apart, you sever an artery. The teaching of Religious Education in the schools reached many of the children of our land with God's word for a time, and revealed the fact that an appalling number had never been reached by the church. Today, the challenge lies at the door of the church, where it rightfully belongs, and we must face it!

Men and women have not learned to love God with the whole mind. Thus many are plagued day and night about worldly cares. When the whole mind is given to God, there is

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

There are many people who cannot give ten cent per day to the Lord, or seventy cents a week. They do not have that much to spare in that way. It seems like an awfully little to give—seventy cents a week for one's church and Sunday school, for one's Christian nurture and training. God is so good to us in this land it would seem like we ought to be able to give more than ten cents a day, or seventy cents a week.

But you see that runs into a sizeable figure when you count it up for a whole year—three hundred sixty-five days at ten cents per day would be thirty-six dollars and fifty cents, or around three dollars for every month. Now you see that is real money. I wonder how much a good many people pay in a week for some simple little luxury, or some innocent little recreation, or some little indulgence or another. It must be something every week for such things for many of us. It would be real interesting for one to sit down and set down the little things like that, or just one or two of them up for a week—being perfectly honest, and then multiply it by the fifty-two weeks in the year. A five-cent drink in the morning and another between then and bedtime would be seventy cents a week, or the ten cents a day, or the thirty-six dollars and fifty cents a year.

In my experience I have found that some people who seek assistance through charity regularly take out a little for some of the luxuries, and it is but natural. We live in a land of plenty, and for even the beggar there is a certain kind of abundance. Every now and then you see where some beggar has left a small fortune.

The trouble with so many of us is we just do not put God first when we come to daily nickles and dimes. God is a great God and He should have great gifts, therefore we keep the nickles and dimes. We give dollars and checks worth several dollars to God, but in that process we rob God. If we gave God a nickle every time we took one for some little extra ourself, we could keep the dollars and still the Kingdom of God would come out ahead.

Figure it out, ten cents a day or seventy cents a week. Does your church need redecorating? Does your apportionment need paying? Is there some special need in your church, like new equipment, or additional rooms, or a debt that needs paying? Say, for instance, your church has a membership of three hundred seventy-eight, and its members paid seventy cents per week, it would raise a total of thirteen thousand seven hundred fifty-nine dollars and twenty cents ($13,759.20). Some churches do better than that. Some much better, but I turned to the new Annual to a church with over four hundred members, which received a grand total of less than five thousand, a good bit less. Try this ten cents a day on the total members of your church. Look in the Annual for your church and see how it figures up.

Seventy cents a week would bring into the Southern Convention considerably more than a million dollars a year, since we have thirty-four thousand members.

Jesus is the Bread of Life in mercy broken. The Church must be His today. There are so many who do put God first, but occasionally we find those who give their lives for him "in mercy broken" and they find that after all they have not lost a thing.

HOME BUILDERS ARE WORLD BUILDERS.

An Interpretation of Family Week

By LELAND FOSTER WOOD.

The theme for Family Week, May 1-8, is "Home Builders are World Builders." This statement recognizes families as vital factors in building understanding and good will which are the foundations of peace. Homes blessed by love and cooperation have incalculable power for good, while homes of bitterness and prejudice create conflict and insecurity. Removing war from the family is a step toward removing it from the world.

Happy family relationships give a foundation for emotional health, create harmony in the home and send out a good influence into the community. Children trained in good homes have a high average of success when they in turn marry and set up homes of their own. Unhappy families on the other hand create a vicious circle. They hurt their members and from them in turn go forth maladjusted persons who are likely to set up other unhappy families. It is well known that personal maladjustments and nervous ailments as well as delinquency and crime often stem back to such homes.

Each Christian family should be a center from which a network of good influence radiates out into life. Christians must think in a world context and practice good neighborliness not only locally but across national and racial lines. Homes in which world problems are discussed and in which prayer is offered for people in all lands build understanding and help to bind humanity together.

In a new age when man's techniques are being revolutionized his values are being tested anew. In such a time it is possible to build a type of family life fitting the needs of the age in which we live and as fine as the world has ever known. Character development will provide firm foundations. Effective educational measures will teach us to make better use of available resources for enriching family life. And religion will help us to treat one another as children of God.

The following six suggestions should help many families:

1. That members by God's Grace make their own homes places of happiness and healthy cells in the body of humanity.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

ELON COLLEGE ALUMNI ASSOCIATION.

The alumni of Elon College have been organized into an association practically all of the history of the college. Alumni activities consisted largely of annual meetings in connection with commencement occasions, officers were elected, and dues of one dollar each collected. Dues totalled from $200 to $350 annually. The Field Secretary of the College, as a rule, served as secretary. We did not undertake very much and accomplished but little. Out of the funds collected, a tuition scholarship for a worthy student in the college was provided. As the college grew, the alumni multiplied and opportunities for services to Alma Mater increased.

There was considerable agitation for a full-time Alumni Secretary and an all out program for the college on the part of the alumni. On March 10, 1946, Jimmy Darden of Suffolk, Virginia, and a member of the Class of 1943, became a full time secretary for the Alumni Association. Under his influence the association was completely reorganized and an aggressive program launched. Publications of the association were improved and put on a regular schedule. Old organizations were revived and new organizations were formed. We now have fourteen active alumni associations in the states of New York, Virginia, North Carolina and Georgia. There are opportunities to organize as many more associations, and they should and will be as quickly as time will afford.

About two years ago the association voted to undertake the erection of the gymnasium for the college to be known as the Alumni Memorial Building. The committee working on the proposition recommended L. M. Kearns, Greensboro, N. C., an alumnus of the college, as architect. Mr. Kearns was employed, plans submitted and approved, and building operations have begun. Concrete is now being poured for the footings. We are planning to lay the cornerstone on Alumni Day, May 28, at high noon, 12 o'clock. The Grand Lodge of North Carolina, A. F. & A. M., has been invited to participate in the ceremonies.

The building will cost between $175,000 and $200,000. The Alumni Association has secured in cash and pledges to date between $80,000 and $90,000. Plans are now being laid to make a personal appeal to as many alumni as can be located, members of the church, and friends of Christian and Physical education. The gymnasium is a must if we are to have a recognized college today and are to conduct a progressive program of education for the young people who come to our campus. We are confident that our friends will express their interest in substantial gifts that this undertaking may succeed—it must succeed!

Our secretary reports that to date 602 alumni of Elon College have paid their dues this year—total amount of dues collected exceeds $3,000.00. Our secretary is working and hoping that a total of $4,000 in dues will be reached by commencement.

An urgent invitation is extended to all alumni, members of the church, and friends of the college to attend the approaching commencement and to be present for the laying of the corner-stone for the new gymnasium which will mark another step forward for our college.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Years ago our local churches thought of paying conference apportionments only at the end of the year. Congregational meetings would be called, the amount needed would be stated, and those present would give and continue to give until the amount was reached. This plan has given way to a more progressive and satisfactory plan. The total apportionment is put in the hands of the church at the beginning of the conference year with the hope that weekly, monthly, and quarterly contributions will be made and as funds are received to forward the same to the causes and institutions to be supported. This plan has proven far more satisfactory and more convenient to the local church. All institutions and causes supported by our local churches need funds regularly all throughout the year. Frequent contributions are more acceptable and mean more than when given in a lump sum at the end of the year. In making an appeal for support, Elon College wishes to express its appreciation to all who have expressed their interest by giving support.

MASSANETTA.

In announcing the speakers for the Bible Conference at Massanetta Springs, August 15-28, inclusive, Dr. W. E. Hudson states that the program will be the most outstanding of the 29 years of Massanetta's history.

Not only does the roster include famous religious leaders of the United States, but five speakers from England and Scotland have been engaged for the two-week conference.

Among those who have been engaged for the period are: Dr. John Sutherland Bonnell, Dr. Henry Hitt Crane, Dr. and Mrs. Wm. R. Forrester (Dr. Forrester is Professor of Theology at St. Andrews University, Scotland, and Mrs. Forrester is a noted lecturer on world missions), Dr. Raymond I. Lindquist, Dr. Charles Ray Goff, Dr. Jesse H. Baird, Miss Muriel Lester, Dr. E. Stanley Jones, Dr. Roy L. Smith, Dr. Elton Trueblood, Bishop Edwin Holt Hughes, Dr. George Docherty (North Church, Aberdeen, Scotland), Dr. Oscar Blackwelder, Dr. Wilbur M. Smith, Dr. Ross Stover, Dr. Sidlow Baxter (Bible teacher, Edinburg, Scotland), Dr. Norman Vincent Peale, Dr. Geo. Buttrick, Bishop Arthur J. Moore, Dr. P. D. Miller and Dr. Wm. V. Gardner.

A large booklet giving information concerning all of the twelve conferences on the 1949 schedule of Massanetta Springs will be released in a few weeks. A copy may be secured by writing to the Massanetta Springs Conference, Box 684, Staunton, Va.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

MRS. J. A. MAY.

Mrs. J. A. May, president of the Woman's Auxiliary of First Church, Greensboro, N. C., passed away at her home on April 12, 1949, after several months' illness. Although we had known for many weeks that the end was near, the church, the Auxiliary, and her hosts of friends were unprepared for the sad news.

Mrs. May and her lovely family have been members of First Church since coming to Greensboro from Winston-Salem twelve years ago. During those seemingly short years, she has made a place in her church, in her community, and in our hearts that will be hard to fill. She loved her church as perhaps few people have loved it. She gave unreservedly of her time, talents, and means, using all the facilities at her disposal for the advancement of her church's work. Now that she is gone, we sometimes wonder if too much of her failing strength was not spent to promote the work that she loved.

One of the last services that she rendered was presiding over the Christmas Auxiliary program, at which time she presented to the church and Sunday school from the Auxiliary, the Rowland Memorial Library. This project and program had been uppermost in her mind for months, so two days before the service she literally rose from her hospital bed in Charlottesville, Va., and came home to carry on her part of the program. She inspired and challenged everyone present that night to a greater loyalty to the church and its mission. Only two days later she was severely stricken and in spite of all that loving hands and medical science could do, she was never able to stage a comeback.

The final service for Mrs. May was held in the Greensboro Church conducted by the pastor, Dr. W. E. Wiseman. The great hosts of friends that overflowed the church and the lovely flowers that literally lined the sanctuary walls were a fitting tribute to a beautiful life well spent.

We grieve over our mutual loss with her family—Mr. May, whose helpmate she was; the two daughters, Virginia and Betty; the granddaughter; the son-in-law who in his own right filled a place in her heart and who, she often said, helped bridge the gap made in her life by the death of her own son, Jack, killed while in service.

We also accept with her loved ones the challenge and rich heritage Mrs. May has left for us. Life has been made richer and sweeter by having known and worked with her. And, somehow, I feel that Heaven is a happier place and that the Easter dawn was more glorious because the spirit of Estelle May had found its way home.

THE ELON SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

A veritable treat is in store for the Woman's Convention this June 13-15 at Elon College. A combined session, well planned in advanced, for the Woman's Convention and School of Missions is to be held.

In my opinion, nothing has done more to develop the interest in the local Woman's Societies than our School of Missions. A few women from every church who have attended one or more of these meetings create a wealth of leadership and devotion in those societies. Plan to have your women present.

The School of Missions is so accessible to us all. A few hours in your car or on the bus, and anyone of us from the farthest points may be there. For many, it is right at our door. For us all, it's near—therefore, transportation is no barrier.

Its program brings together choice leaders from top rank teachers, missionaries, and other church workers. They present our mission study books, and program materials in ways that cause us to envision our local societies setting forth with wonderful programs for the coming year.

And more—we catch the meaning of our total program, the spirit of what the women are seeking to do, and of what the Church as a whole is trying to accomplish at home and abroad. We learn how it is being planned, and, indeed, we have a share in making the plans.

Today, this week, or soon is the time to get up at least one automobile load from each local society. The cost is only $6.00. Yes, you spend $6.00 for four days of fellowship, inspiration, instruction, and the opportunity to visit your church college. Put that date down now as vacation and information and get your society busy rounding up a good delegation. Every church, whether it now has a society or not, should have a representative present. Let us inspire our entire Southern Convention with the number we have attending this School of Missions.

MAY FELLOWSHIP DAY.

May 6, 1949.

"Freedom's Foundation—the Christian Home" is the theme for May Fellowship Day this year. According to our Achievement Goals (interpretation), we must observe World Day of Prayer on the proper date, but May Fellowship Day and World Community Day may be observed on another nearby date, if more convenient.

May Fellowship Day in Winston-Salem is being observed on May 20, sponsored by the Council of Church Women. The group will enjoy a picnic lunch at Reynolds Park, followed by a talk by a local woman on "Family Life" and the annual business session and election of officers. The Greensboro women are holding a luncheon at one of the churches and having Mrs. Ernest Grove of Chapel Hill to speak on the theme of the day, in addition to the business session and election of officers.

BETHLEHEM LADIES AID HONORS MRS. T. U. SAVAGE.

The Ladies Aid Society Circle No. 1 of Bethlehem Congregational Christian Church held their regular monthly meeting at the church on Wednesday afternoon, April 13, with the president, Mrs. Harry Schadel, presiding.

The regular routine of business was transacted with the secretary calling the roll and reading the minutes of the previous meeting. Collection of dues and other donations were collected. After the business session a devotional service was conducted and dedicated to Mrs. T. U. Savage, the eldest member and the first president of the Ladies Aid, who celebrated her 76th birthday April 12. A poem, "I Would Rather Have A Rose," was read by Mrs. Harry Schadel. A duet, "Sweeter As the Years Go By," was sung by Mrs. R. O. Luter and Mrs. B. T. Benton. A poem, "The Happy Way," was read by Mrs. R. O. Luter.

A large basket of gifts from the Ladies' Aid was presented by the president to Mrs. Savage who has been a life-long and faithful member and whose life has been an inspiration to all wherever she goes. Mrs. Savage expressed her thanks and appreciation for everything and later enjoyed opening her gifts and showing them to all in the social room. Mrs. Savage was also surprised with a lighted birthday cake and fruit punch and mints arranged on a table decorated with ivy and spirea in the social room by the serving committee. Mrs. E. P. Tadlock, Mrs. A. C. Moore and Mrs. Harry Schadel. Spring flowers and candles were used for decorations. The meeting was dismissed with all repeating the Mizpah benediction together.

FOR THE CHILDREN

Mrs. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

BOYS AND GIRLS:

Have you been having May Day celebrations? Last year I saw a lovely one with clowns and animals—elephants, lions, monkeys and tiger cats—all of whom came to entertain the Queen of May.

The first week in May has a number of celebrations: National Family Week, National Music Week and National Restaurant Week.

Family Week will be celebrated in schools and churches. Friday is May Fellowship Day and church women all over our nation will be thinking about the Family and Freedom's Foundation. Sunday is Mother's Day and I do hope you will remember your mother in a very fine way.

National Music Week will be observed in schools and with special concerts. I imagine that some of you play musical instruments. In our schools the boys and girls learn to play tonettes and that prepares the way for reading music. Music is one of the nicest parts of life. If you can't play, you can sing, if you can't sing you can hum.

Almost everyone likes to eat "out" sometime. We like to in our family. The restaurant associations are urging their members to serve better food and have cleaner places to cook and serve.

Don't forget your mother!

SILENCE.

By HILDA RICHMOND.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Billy was a well-bred little boy who often received invitations to dinner or lunch from a friend of his mother's, even when Billy's mother was not invited. The old-fashioned housekeeper, whose table was always loaded with good things excellently cooked and served in a generous way, was under bond to tell, privately, how Billy behaved. Occasionally Billy made some slip natural to children, but generally he devoted himself to keeping his plate with a vacant place for the next helping and spoke only when he was spoken to.

But alas! One day Billy took it into his head to attract some attention to himself. He drummed on the table to get a response from his hostess and then asked to be excused to go and look after his dog, Buttons, that had sneaked after him because he had not securely fastened the snap on his leash. When he again came to the table he hummed a little tune, broke into the conversation while someone else was speaking, and otherwise spoiled his fine record.

"Well, did you have a good time?" asked Billy's mother when he returned.

"Why, yes, a pretty good time," said the little boy, who was beginning to feel the pangs of a guilty conscience as well as the result of his overindulgence in dessert, of which he had asked for three helpings. "Buttons followed me, Mother, and I had to go out and tie him to the apple tree."

"Was Buttons barking loudly or making any fuss, Billy?"

"No, but he was lonesome and I thought he needed some dinner. I took him the piece of meat that was left on my plate, Mother."

"And so you interrupted the dinner to take a piece of meat in your fingers to your dog that should have been safe at home?"

"Well, I guess nobody missed me, and Mrs. Blake said I could be excused, Mother." Billy was mentally and physically squirming by this time. "I guess I'll go out and see where Buttons is." And as guests were arriving, he was able to make his escape.

During the days that followed, nothing was said about Billy's behavior at Mrs. Blake's. His mother made no mention of it and Mrs. Blake was as cordial as ever, but the invitations suddenly ceased. At first it was a real relief to Billy not to be asked, as he feared that his mother might remember what he had told her, but as time wore on the memory of the delicious chicken pie smothered in gravy, the good candied sweet potatoes, his favorite peach pudding, the ice cream that Mrs. Blake could make to perfection, the dish of bonbons always passed when the meal was over, and all the rest of the things that small boys love rose up to distress him with the thought that probably he would never again be invited because of his bad behavior.

Finally the burden became too great, and he chose an afternoon when his mother was not at home to wash himself, comb his hair, put on a brand new suit, and to see that Buttons was securely tied to the doghouse. Then, very slowly he wended his way to the hospitable house across the street.

"Mrs. Blake, I've come to tell you that I'm sorry I didn't act right that day a long time ago when you asked me to dinner," he said. "Mother didn't send me to say this, but I'm sorry and I'll never do it again. And," now it took quite an effort to speak what was in his mind, "don't you think I've repented long enough?"

When Billy was safely away on an errand, his mother and Mrs. Blake discussed the incident with amused satisfaction but they said nothing to him. The very next week, however, an extremely polite little boy partook of chicken, candied sweet potatoes, and homemade ice cream at the Blake home, and the other guests remarked in his hearing that he was surely a well-bred child with a good mother.

The treatment had accomplished its purpose.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

IX. Thaddeus or Judas Brother of James.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
*Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.*

Who was this man? We are not quite sure. He has often been confused with the author of the Epistle of Jude, but this Jude most surely was not one of the Twelve. He has been called the brother of James and the son of James. More than likely, however, he was the brother of Matthew and James the lesser.

This Judas was the man who after Judas Iscariot had left the Last Supper and Jesus was telling His disciples that He was going away said, "Lord, how will you do this thing? How can you show yourself to us and yet be hidden from the world?" (John 14:22.)

The Bible doesn't give many biographies in detail and so with Judas. He was probably quite an ordinary man, except that he must have had more than customary spiritual aptitudes. If the name Thaddeus was given him by his associates he must have been a happy, considerate sort of fellow for the word means lively, vivacious. Some men today earn the nickname "Happy" or "Hap"—such may have been the case with Judas.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

YOUTH WEEK AT BETHLEHEM.

The young people at Bethlehem (Nansemond) were recognized during Youth Week by three services in their honor.

The first service, on Pilgrim Fellowship Sunday, was observed by the pastor preaching a special sermon dedicated to youth. The youth choir furnished the music for this occasion.

On Tuesday night a program was arranged at which time Mrs. J. E. Harris, a teacher of one of the young people's classes, gave an inspirational talk, using as her topic letters forming the words Y-o-u-t-h W-e-e-k. The young people were very much impressed and seemed to thoroughly enjoy Mrs. Harris' talk.

The week was climaxed on Thursday night by a family life supper, with special honors going to the young people. A covered dish supper was served at the Coca-Cola plant. Following the supper the young people conducted an impressive worship program. The highlight of the evening was not the feast but the humorous and inspiring talk made by Dr. J. Frank Lewis. As usual, Dr. Lewis was at his best; clever, comical, witty and wise. Interwoven in the humor was enough serious thought to give the minds of the adult as well as the youth, plenty of food for consideration.

MRS. R. E. BRITTLE.

Y-O-U-T-H W-E-E-K.

In Genesis 1:1 we read, "In the beginning God . . ." Every masterpiece bears the artist's signature. The universe bears the signature of God. All of our understandings should have their beginning in the will and plan of God.

A great Christian shoe manufacturer had for his motto, "God first, others second, shoes third."

When your leader asked me to speak to you, she paid me a very fine compliment. She said, "I know you love young people." My answer to her and to you is, I do love youth. May I never grow too old to love young people and to have faith in you. You are our tomorrow. What would this church and community be without youth? I am thankful a week has been set aside for us to honor our young people; grateful for youth week.

Tonight I have the letters forming the words youth week, and I shall tell you some of the things you can do:

Y—youth—Jesus came as a baby. It was God's purpose, God's plan. Then we remember Jesus as a youth in the Temple. We remember also His saying, "Suffer the little children to come unto me, and forbid them not: for of such is the kingdom of God."

O—opportunity—all around you are opportunities for youth to live and work for God—in church, in school and in your homes.

U—upright—to be upright is to live straight forward and honest; to play fair with your fellowmen. Be honest with yourself. Be honest with those with whom you deal.

T—true—a simple word of only four letters. If we live a true life we have filled the whole life and we can be—

H—happy in church work.

W—working—working for whom? God first and always. So often we say there is nothing for youth to do. How wrong. Your pastor and superintendent need you in so many ways.

E—everywhere God calls—therefore you can work and answer the letter Everywhere God calls.

E—eternally—if you have used all the other ways, you will enjoy working eternally for Christian service and you will be prepared to receive your reward in—

K—kingdom—God's Kingdom.

In closing, let me leave with you the lines from Matthew 6:33, "But seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

MRS. J. E. HARRIS.

INDIAN EDITOR HAILS YOUTH GATHERING.

(Summary of an interview with Ark Sunder Rao, co-editor of The Guardian, the leading Christian weekly of Madras, India.)

Asked what, in his opinion, was the most outstanding factor at the present time for the future of Christianity in India, Mr. Rao replied that the All-India Christian Youth Conference recently held in Allahabad "cannot be rated high enough as regards its significance for future developments." At it were gathered for the first time 200 representatives of all the Christian youth organizations of India—Y.M.C.A., Y.W.C.A., S.C.M., Christian Endeavor and the church youth groups—and such noteworthy work was done there that "the Youth Committee of the Christian Council of India, Pakistan and Ceylon, which has been working for five years for a coordination of Christian youth associations, can reckon it as a real success."

The motto of the conference was "the call of the hour," which proved an inspiration to prayer, labor and intellectual effort. To respond to this call was felt by the young delegates to be a "privilege" and thus "a responsibility." To what extent this is true is clear from the work of the sub-committees which during the conference examined the problem of liberty, the Christian mission in the world, Communism and so forth. The Commission on Youth Work put forward as chief among the findings resulting from their outspoken deliberations the demand that "the Christian youth work of India should be more stringently organized so as to avoid overlapping programs by individual groups, and then extended as a whole to take in the rural areas so far wholly untouched." It will thus be desirable that Christian youth organizations should meet every three years for a conference on the Allahabad model. In the meantime, regional meetings could be held under the guidance of Provincial Committees. "In this connection, considerable attention should certainly be devoted to the training of Christian youth leaders, as a first priority." The Allahabad Conference concluded by expressing the hope that "the churches of India may come closer together, following the example of the church union of South India."

Allahabad was, Mr. Rao said, a proof of the interest of Christian youth in India in Ecumenism. They regarded divisions between the churches as an obstacle to the fellowship of youth, and appealed to the churches to cooperate to the full with all organizations endeavoring to coordinate Christian youth work, for the future of the church depended on its young people, and the work among young people need a new basis.

Sunday School Lesson

By REV. H. S. HARDCASTLE, D. D.

JESUS' TEACHINGS ON JUDGMENT.

LESSON VII.—MAY 15, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Take heed; watch and pray; for ye do not know when the time will come.—Mark 13:33.

LESSON: Mark 13, 14:3-9.

DEVOTIONAL READING: I Thess. 5:1-11.

Some Hard Sayings.

This is a difficult lesson to understand and to teach. To be sure there are those who profess to "know all the answers" and the meaning of every one of the strange and symbolic words which Jesus used in this thirteenth chapter of Mark concerning the destruction of Jerusalem. But the writer of these Notes is not one of them. There are certain truths, however, which are not dependent upon a literal interpretation of the signs and symbols in this chapter, and an attempt will be made to give these.

The Occasion of These Sayings.

Jesus and His disciples were leaving the Temple for the last time. One of the disciples struck by the size and the magnificence of the Temple, called attention to it. To their amazement Jesus bluntly told them that ere long there would not be left one stone upon another of what was once the Temple. A little later, when the group was sitting on the Mount of Olives looking at the glory of the Temple against the sun, the disciples asked Jesus when these things should be. It would appear that his answer concerned not only the matter of the Temple, but also the signs of His coming and the Coming itself. And the matter is more complex because the two seem to be somewhat interwoven with each other. I am indebted to Dr. Charles R. Erdman for helpful suggestions concerning an interpretation of this strange and even weird word of Jesus. It should be kept in mind that Jesus was using forms of thought and expression that were native and familiar to His age and land, but which are strange to us. Here as elsewhere Jesus thought and spoke in the language of His time.

The Meaning of His Sayings.

His prediction concerning the destruction of the Temple found literal and terrible fulfillment within a few years after He uttered it. The Roman armies, under Titus conquered Jerusalem in 70 A. D. and not only sacked it and laid it waste, but absolutely destroyed the Temple, so that a few years later the site was plowed up. Jesus knew that the stubborn and the sinful policy of the religious leaders of the Jewish nation was bringing an inevitable judgment and doom upon the nation. He was also saying that no material strength or magnificence in itself can assure permanence. No institution, no government, not even religion itself, can give security unless it is true to the purpose for which the living God ordained it. Moral character and worth and not material or military might are the only guarantees of security.

The second element or tonic of this strange discourse of Jesus has to do with the persecution which they would undergo and the confusion they would have to face. He told them to keep their heads, not to forget that He was the true Messiah, never to lose touch with Him. He warned them against spending their time in anxious calculations as to the exact date of the judgment, or in an effort to fix the signs by which this evil day's approach could be fixed. Whether "This Great Tribulation" found its fulfillment in the destruction of Jerusalem, or is in the future is difficult to say. The exhortation to steadfastness and courage is still binding.

In strange figures of speech, the signs which are immediately to follow The Great Tribulation, and directly to precede the personal return of Christ are then described. "The sun shall be darkened, the moon shall not give her light, and the stars shall be falling from heaven, and the powers of heaven shall be shaken." . . . Then shall they see the Son of Man coming in clouds with great power and glory. Whatever else this may mean, it means the certainly of judgment. But one is mistaken if he thinks of Judgment simply in terms of a future event, or a final decision. Judgment is here and now. As Ruskin wrote: "Think you that judgment waits till the doors of the grave are opened. It waits at the doors of your houses—it waits at the corners of your streets; we are in the midst of judgment—the moments we fret away are our judges—the elements that feed upon us as they minister—and the pleasures that deceive us, judge as they indulge." To be sure there is a final judgment. We must all stand before the judgment seat of Christ. It is appointed unto all men once to die and after that the judgment. This is a moral universe. There is a day of reckoning. We must, every one of us, give an account of himself to God.

One of the striking emphases in these words of Jesus is the unknown factor as to the time when these things shall be. There seems to be a contradiction in one sense, for Jesus says "this generation shall not pass away until all these things be accomplished." He evidently is referring to the destruction of Jerusalem and the Temple, or else His words have to be reinterpreted. But in the next breath He frankly says that no man, not even the angels in heaven, and what is more surprising still, not even the Son himself knows. It is unknown but it is certain—that is the point.

The deduction is plain—men are to be ready. "Take heed, watch, and pray, for ye know not when the time is." And what I say unto you I say unto all, Watch." Watchfulness is the keynote to all that He said. But watchfulness does not mean idle speculation as to the time of the advent, not in presumptuous setting of dates which God has never revealed, not in neglect of duty. It is expressed rather in absolute fidelity to our daily tasks. Dr. Dodds puts it simply and aptly when he draws the distinction between a fisherman's wife who spends all her time at the pier watching and waiting for her husband to return from the sea, and the fisherman's wife who is busy about the house doing the appointed chores and getting ready for the return of her loved one, and occasionally glancing toward the sea from which he will return. Says he, "It is impossible for us always to be looking out for His coming, but it is quite possible to be always prepared for His coming."

"International tension should not divert attention from the crisis in family life. Crumbling marriages and broken families do not provide a sound foundation for anything. Let us make National Family Week, May 1-8, a time of renewed effort to help men and women share in building a better world by building better homes."—Dr. and Mrs. Roy E. Dickerson, Cincinnati, Ohio.

A POST-LENTEN MEDITATION.

By REV. BERNARD V. MUNGER,
Chapel Hill, North Carolina.

The stone which the builders rejected has become the head stone of the corner. This is the Lord's doing; it is marvelous in our eyes.

What else, I would ask you, have the Christian churches been doing in these past days, but telling the story of Jesus' life and work, and of His rejection by the people of His day? And what else was the Easter proclamation but that God by His power raised up Christ to become the Name above all names, the greatest among all Masters; the Way, the Truth and the Life. That is what the Church of Christ does every late winter and early spring: tell the story of Jesus' rejection by men, and His exaltation by God!

Now that we've heard the story again, let us put into words the basic truth this story reveals. This story the Church has been telling says: "God lays as the basis of His building that which man rejects. God uses for the fulfillment of His purpose, that which the wisdom of man despises and tosses aside." That's the truth which the Church has been proclaiming. And, all of this is not because God delights in confounding man, but because man's estimate of fitness is false, this world's admiration is given to qualities which are not in keeping with God's design. The qualities God requires, and the fitness God demands, are altogether other than men naturally choose. That is the continuing truth about life which the text enshrines. God lays as the basis of His building that which the wisdom of man despises and tosses aside.

This means, in part, that there are two groups of people: on the one hand there are those who reject God's design and follow the dictates of their own wisdom; on the other hand, there are those who acknowledge God's judgments to be true, and in reverent adoration say, "This is marvelous."

There are those who just toss God's designs aside as so much interference with life as they want to live it. And, there are those whose lives, by their obedience to God's will as it is revealed in Christ, witness to their acknowledgement of God's wisdom as the only wisdom, His purposes the only purposes, and His plans as the only satisfactory plans! Their whole attitude toward God's purposes is one of reverent adoration, saying with lips and with behavior: "What God has done is marvelous in our eyes!"

These two groups of men make up our society. Once they were called "the Church," and "the world." Once, I say, when there was a real difference between the Church and the world. Once, when just living the life of a respectable citizen of the world was not confused with living the life of Christian discipleship. Once—but, today the tragedy is that those in our churches too often have not really understood that their calling is to be "different." Too many in our congregations don't understand that it is for them to be disciples of One whom men, in their own wisdom, still reject! . . . Thus, the people in many of our congregations live pretty much like those outside our churches, and justify such behaviour with the foolishness that "the world has become more Christian!"

Let us get right down to cases with regard to some of the qualities exemplified and taught by Christ, yet rejected by the world about us. What are some of the worldly judgments, according to which God's purposes are despised and rejected? What are some of the things which were expressed in the life and work of Jesus Christ, but which ordinary men and women think won't tie into the lives they are building?

In the first place, Jesus insisted that "He who would be greatest amongst you, let Him be your servant." The world you and I move in considers greatness to lie in possessions, power and authority. Look at those considered "great" amongst us, in our everyday relations. Aren't they considered great because they possess something: they possess ability, power, land, money, or things. They possess authority—and are considered great. So, the judgment of the world is simple: "If you would be great—get going!" Over against this stands Jesus, insisting, "He who would be great amongst you—let him be something, let him be your servant!" Greatness, say Jesus, lies in what you are! And, with the resurrection, God put His stamp of approval on the One who taught that wisdom. Does that seem "wonderful" to you? Does it appear so "marvelous" in your eyes that you want to commit yourself to that kind of greatness?

Another example of that which is part of Christ-likeness, but which is rejected by men, is to be found in Christ's insistent emphasis upon disciplined obedience. How quickly is that rejected! Freedom has become the key-word in behavior. Freedom to express ourselves! Isn't that what the people we live with want, and want very much. Isn't our day's emphasis upon "rights?" "It's my right to do this! I guess I have my rights! It's a free country, isn't it?" So the wise amongst us say. Wise, that is, according to this world's judgments. Yet, Christ says, "Disciplined obedience is the only way." Disciplined obedience is the way He lived, and died. And God raised up this obedient Christ to be the Lord of life! Does that seem wonderful to you—that disciplined obedience should be God's way, for you? Does it appear so "marvelous" in your eyes, that you want to commit yourself to that kind of living?

By His teachings, and by His behaviour, Jesus Christ suggested that persons get their meaning from their relationship to God, from God's attitude toward them. Worldly wisdom, however, rejects that bit of divine wisdom. Our world estimates persons according to their condition! Persons, in our common day-to-day experiences, get their meaning from their position, their possessions, their attainments, their family, their class, their nation, their race! Isn't that how it is where you live? How much of our behaviour towards others is conditioned by their attainments, their possessions, their class, their family, their position, or their race? And how wise is such behavior considered? So wise that only the foolish think otherwise! But, among the foolish, is Christ Who suggests by His teachings and His behavior, that persons get their meaning from their relationship to God. Whatever soul there is along the way in need of His help—that soul, Jesus calls "neighbor." Whosoever there is who is doing the will of God, that soul, Jesus calls "brother." He calls "friend" all those who need friendship. He extends love to all those who need to know God's love. He has fellowship with all who need to know the

The Orphanage

In 1920, the second building of the Christian Orphanage was erected. At that time, it seemed wise to have a building for the very young children. It was thought then that even a few babies could be cared for if there were a special home for them. Very soon, however, this plan was deemed impractical.

Older girls were needed to help with the little ones, and so soon this building became a second home with girls and boys of different ages living in it. The name, "Baby Home," stuck somehow, perhaps for want of a better one. What would you suggest for a name?

Anyway, this Baby Home could be called the orphanage's "stepchild," judging from general appearances. Take a look for yourself.

Walk all the way through. It is the least liveable of all the three homes, from the front steps to the back, from the basement to the top. The plaster is falling overhead on the porch. And if you wanted to sit on the porch, there is no chair there, nor one anywhere to pull out. Metal furniture is what is needed on the porch, after repairs.

Open the front door and look into the living room. Looks terrible! Oh, it's clean all right—but bleak and empty looking. A few, very few, pieces of old, inappropriate furniture are there, but one certainly has no desire to tarry. Yet when the bedrooms are reached, they don't seem much better. So there you are—and there is the problem.

Why is this building less attractive than the other type, you might ask. The answer seems to lie in the fact that there has been a constant coming and going of matrons, with no one ever there long enough to give it the touch that comes with love for a place. Mr. Johnston, Mrs. Perry and Mrs. Black were all at Johnston Hall, and Miss Hattie Brakefield has been at Old Building (what a name!) all these years. There was no one at the Baby Home always to be saying, "We must have . . ." as there was in the other buildings. But now Mrs. Wright is back, and Mrs. Whitt, her able assistant, is backing her up in quite a few "we must have's."

There are 27 children in this building—17 girls, 10 of them under 11 years of age, and 10 boys.

What is needed? Well, here goes:

First of all, some paint and repairs. Soap and water have helped, but this place wasn't taken care of after its repairs at the end of the war. And then there should be furniture for the living room, even a rug, and all should match. The bedrooms need built-in closets. Can you imagine teaching 27 children to pick up their clothes with no closet to put them in? Curtains are needed everywhere. And when Mrs. Wright arrived a short time ago, there wasn't a sewing machine that would work, a pair of scissors, a spool of thread or a needle to be found. Fortunately, she had brought her own along—no, not a sewing machine, that is still missing.

There is a wonderful room down in the basement that would make a real laundry. Need you ask—most certainly, it is a real must. Sheets and the like are being sent each week to nearby laundries. The space is there. All that's needed is the equipment. And in the long run, it would be a real saving.

Take a trip down to the orphanage, talk to Mrs. Wright and do something. These people do not love money for its sake alone, but they certainly would love to have some money with which to fix up the Baby Home. It's your orphanage—think it over!

redeeming power of fellowship. Then God comes along and exalts this Christ with His wide and inclusive friendships to the position of Lord, thereby putting His stamp of approval upon that kind of inclusive living! Does that seem wonderful to you? Does it appear so marvelous in your eyes that you want to commit yourself to personal relations of that kind—come what rejection your more "wise" neighbors might heap upon you?

Further, I would remind you that if Christ taught anything, and if His life speaks out one truth concerning those who trust in God, it is the truth that God-pleasing living always involves self-sacrifice. Yet, as we look out upon the world of personal behavior, social custom, and international relations, we are met by the insistence that self-preservation, self-exaltation, self-interest, and self-justification are the basic laws of "wise" behavior! Aren't appeals made on the basis that "it's to your own best good to do this?" Isn't taking care of "number one" the general pattern of behavior? In the proud remarks of a girl seeking to justify her popularity-seeking behavior, in the remarks of a Senator seeking to justify the status-quo in race relations, and in the American foreign policy papers seeking to justify every thing we do or have done, there is this common thread—"the course of wisdom is self-justification, self-protection, and self-enrichment!" Yet, there stands Christ talking about self-sacrifice. And there on the Cross hangs Christ giving complete expression to His own teachings about self-denial. Remember, then, it was this Christ who was exalted by God. Does such action on God's part seem marvelous to you? Is it so wonderful that you want to commit yourself to the way of self-sacrifice, for the sake of the God who would bid you lose yourself, in loyalty to Him?

The stone which the builders rejected, has become the chief stone of the corner. This is the Lord's doing.

Is this marvelous in our eyes? Does it call forth our wonder, and allegiance?

THE CHURCH-SCHOOL TEACHER'S JOB.
Mildred Moody and Frank Eakin.
Macmillan. $2.75.

Teachers who need a "shot-in-the-arm" should read this book. It is stimulating and progressive in its treatment without being iconoclastic in its recommendations. It will open the door to more zestful teaching for many. The author states the thesis: "This book seconds the view that the main Sunday school job now is translating the Bible into life, the thrilling, dangerous life of our century." Every school should have this book in its library. Here is material for a number of exciting and helpful teacher's meetings.

DOUBLE MUSCADINE. Frances Gaither. New York. Macmillan Co. $3.50.

This book is of interest to Southerners. It is the third novel written by the Southerner, Frances Gaither. Her other works are Follow the Drinking Gourd and The Red Cock Crows.

Double Muscadine takes its name from the pattern of woven bed coverlet. It is truly symbolic. The book deals with the hush-hush subject of white men's unfaithfulness with women of color. Aimee, a slave, is accused of murder and attempted murder. Her role in the life of Kirk McLean and his family is delicately but firmly told.

Full of suspense, impressive in its searching of master-slave, rich-poor relationships, Double Muscadine is a book of revelation for all Americans as well as Southerners.

Its outpourings are most realistic and its characters are true in a manner seldom seen in contemporary fiction. The book will survive; so will the name of its author.

2. That parents accept responsibility for the religious foundations which their children receive, setting a good example and sharing with them a rich Christian life of work, play, thought, love and worship.

3. That members take a vital place in the life of the church, which supplements the home in religious education and provides a sustaining fellowship in God.

4. That families recognize the rights and needs of other families, as truly as they recognize their own.

5. That each family take its part in helping those in distress and also in seeking to remedy injustices and inequities which often underlie social need.

6. That families by practicing their vocation as units "in the Family of God" extend the spirit of justice and good will into the community, the nation and the world.

FACING REALITIES.

no room for any doubt or fear. How much higher are God's thoughts for us than those thoughts of man for grasp and desire. God has thoughts of peace for man; of love and compassion. Man has thoughts of war. God has not given us the spirit of fear, but of peace and faith and love. Loneliness is the complaint of many today because they are separate from God. God has been gracious to us beyond our least deserving. Too often we have accepted His bounty and used it for our own desires. Too often we have been silent when we should have witnessed to His love. We profess the Christian faith and we are active in the church, but for all that, we keep Christ at arm's length. As Christians, it is imperative that we have deep abiding convictions. There is no halfway place on the road to Christian faith.

The numerous church spires piercing America's skyline do not guarantee immunity against the ills which have crept into American life. Religion has not escaped the temper of indecision that pervades the thinking of our day. The fact so often ignored by those who would cure the ills of mankind is the fact that the moral crisis is essentially a religious crisis. The fruits are becoming apparent to many who once thought that religion was outmoded. They have discovered that by severing the religious roots of world culture, men have condemned it to death. A branch from a cherry tree may be cut off in the spring and placed in a vase. It will blossom for a time without any connection with the tree, but you will pick no cherries from that branch. Even so, a culture grown from Christian roots will in time, if cut loose from them, wither in barrenness and death.

"The love of Christ constraineth us." Religion is essentially a personal thing, and personal evangelism is the need of the hour. The task is nowhere done. People are looking to you and to me for evidence of the joy of Christian living. It is good for us to take stock of ourselves each day that we may have the assurance that God speaks through us. Like the farmer who has to do his work all over again each spring, prepare and sow the seed year after year, we must start all over again with each generation and strive to bring men and women to accept Christ as Lord. Nothing less than a world movement toward Christ can heal the wounds of humanity and bring moral and spiritual order out of chaos.

The God who has opened for us the door of world opportunity is knocking at the door of our hearts that He may send us forth better qualified to do His work. Is our love for Christ so great that every life we touch is lighted with the glow? We need something more than vows to follow Christ to the end. The principle of the universe is not reason, but love. Only love "never faileth." Christian love causes a miraculous change that widens our area of affection and concern to include people whom we formerly would have regarded with distaste, fear, contempt or even hatred.

There is a glory within each person which can evidence itself by relationship with God. Men and women today need to tarry in the Upper Room until God has revealed Himself to them. Where there is no outward peace, there can be an inward peace that passeth understanding. Paul possessed this peace. His mind was filled with the faith that God was never outside of any situation. Perhaps we have been having too much to say about the atomic bomb and not enough to say about the saving power of the gospel. Long ago, Jesus said, "And fear not them which kill the body, but are not able to kill the soul: but rather fear him which is able to destroy both soul and body." Men's souls are in peril. Their eternal destinies will be determined by their relation toward Christ.

HOME AND FAMILY LIFE

By MARY E. SWEENEY

The home is the institution which preserves the social and human heritage of the race. Therefore it is the concern of the Christian Church. In it the character of each succeeding generation is molded and the pattern given for living. Whatever affects the family life of a nation influences the individuals who compose Christian communities and brotherhoods.

Science has contributed much to our knowledge and understanding of the factors that influence the growth and development of human beings mentally, emotionally, physically and spiritually. This knowledge is acquired through study and observation under the guidance of life and its problems is one of the challenges of the Church today.

Home and Family Life in every nation is held in the crucible of change—social, economic and political. To meet these changes those responsible for homes need all that is available to help them to understand the forces with which they are dealing in order to direct their own lives and those of their children. There is a large accumulation of knowledge from psychological, biological, economic and social sciences available that should be offered in organized courses to those persons seeking guidance in the making of homes and building of family life. This can and is being offered in high schools and colleges as courses in Home and Family Life in some countries.

Such programs call for trained personnel, just as medicine, law, or the ministry demand certain backgrounds of knowledge, training and experience. Christian colleges have the opportunity and the responsibility for providing this training among the courses offered in their curriculums. If they expect those leaving their institutions to be equipped to meet the present-day impact of forces on family life, the students will have to have the knowledge and training with which to do it.

This means the establishment of departments in colleges and teacher-training institutions, in theological seminaries, and training centers for lay workers dealing with courses concerned with the maintenance of homes and wholesome family life. Family health, family finance, family relationship, democracy as a basis for family management, development of wholesome personalities within the family, the responsibility of the family to the community—all are of vital concern to village people, high-school-age students, to college men and women, and to parents. A study of the home as a social institution, of changes which modern industry, transportation, and economic conditions have made in the customs and traditions of various nations, an interpretation to the students of these changes and their impact on the present-day life of people are challenges to any academic group.

In the establishment of the departments for the study of Home and Family Life, divisions of psychology, biology and physiology, sociology and education can be called upon to make a contribution and to coordinate their courses so that these courses become an integrated part of the college training of all students. It is important that the Christian philosophy and ethics and development of the spiritual life be the basis for the creating of homes and for guidance of children in the formation of their characters.

NUMBER 19.

Elon College Library X

Superintendent-Elect of Christian Orphanage

DR. JOHN G. TRUITT

After a distinguished ministry in the Suffolk Christian Church for the past sixteen years, Dr. Truitt presented his resignation to the congregation last Sunday morning. He was unanimously elected as Superintendent of the Christian Orphanage by its Board of Trustees on May 5. Dr. Truitt came to Suffolk from Dayton, Ohio, and previous to the Dayton pastorate served First Church, Norfolk, from 1923 to 1928. Every church which he has served has grown and prospered under his ministry. Since Dr. Truitt's home is in North Carolina, near Elon College, a host of friends will welcome "the Return of the Native."

He will succeed the late Mr. Charles D. Johnston.

News Flashes

Mrs. I. W. Underwood is the official SUN representative in the Suffolk Church.

Rev. W. J. Andes received twelve members at Winston-Salem during the Easter season.

The young people of Forsyth County will meet at Pfafftown Church on Sunday, May 15 at 4:30 P. M.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill is scheduled to speak on Thursday evening of this week to the women of the St. John's E. & R. Church in Richmond.

The recognition service for Rev. Tucker G. Humphries, new minister of the church at Reidsville, N. C., will be held on Sunday night, May 15, at 8:00.

Rev. W. A. Grissom, Warrenton, N. C., is supplying the pulpit of our Franklin (Va.) Church during the interim when they do not have a pastor.

The annual homecoming and memorial services were held at Long's Chapel Congregational Christian Church on Sunday, May 1. Dr. W. M. Brown of the Elon College faculty was the guest speaker.

The United Church of Chapel Hill, Rev. B. V. Munger, minister, reports that $1,620 has been raised and expended in connection with changing from a coal furnace to an oil heater with new boiler and radiators.

Dean D. J. Bowden of Elon College was guest speaker at the Church of Wide Fellowship, Southern Pines, N. C., on Sunday, May 1. Superintendent Scott was the speaker at the Southern Pines Church on Sunday, April 24.

News has been received from Rev. and Mrs. Robert C. H. Mueller, Ahmednagar, West India, missionary representatives of the Reidsville church that a son was born to them on March 30. The new son's name is Eric Lawrence. Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Mueller.

Rev. Ira D. Black conducted a visitation evangelism program in our church at Lynchburg, Virginia, May 1-4. Reports indicate a most successful campaign and Rev. James B. Allan, the minister, will give a detailed report in THE CHRISTIAN SUN at a later date.

At the Christian Temple in Norfolk Rev. Peter Young, the minister, gave emphasis to the "Festival of the Christian Home," using for his sermon subject on May 1, "Home and the Church." The observance of this special week culminated in Mother's Day on May 8.

The ministers of the Eastern Virginia Ministerial Association and their wives will assemble Monday morning at the Holland Christian Church for business, luncheon and a testimonial for Dr. John G. Truitt, Dr. Will B. O'Neill will be the host pastor and serve as program chairman for the occasion.

Our Shallow Well Church in the Eastern North Carolina Conference near Sanford is about to complete the new addition to the church and the repairs on the church sanctuary. Approximately $20,000 has been spent on building and grounds in the improvement of this church. Rev. R. T. Grissom is the minister of the Shallow Well Church.

A caravan of Elon College young people visited the Southern Pines Church young people on Sunday, May 8. Mr. E. J. Austin is the sponsor of the young people's group at the Southern Pines Church, and we congratulate him on the splendid work which is being done among the young people there. The Southern Pines Church also maintains a group meeting for Juniors called "Twilight Hour."

Superintendent Wm. T. Scott was the guest speaker at the homecoming and memorial day at Pleasant Cross Christian Church, near Asheboro, on Sunday, May 1. A large crowd was present for the services. The Pleasant Cross Church is experiencing a substantial increase in Sunday school and church attendance. It is one of our grand old churches and despite the difficulties which it has endured during the past few years, we are confident that it will continue to grow and to serve that splendid area.

The Henderson Church under the leadership of Rev. J. Frank Apple, minister, continues to make progress. The Sunday school and church attendance has increased very much recently. Five new members were received into the church on Palm Sunday and five on Easter Sunday. The total number received to date for this conference year is fifteen—ten of these being heads of families. Recently, the church launched a campaign for a new heating system and plans are now being made to install this new system this summer. Revival services will be held the first week in June with Rev. Tucker G. Humphries of Reidsville as guest minister. The Henderson Church is working enthusiastically on the subscription campaign for THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Our Asheboro Church held a unique service on Sunday evening, May 1, in what they called, "Get Acquainted With Your Neighbor Service." Invitations were distributed to more than 400 homes and a large number were present for this service in charge of the young people and the fellowship hour which followed. We hope Dr. Lester will give us a report in THE CHRISTIAN SUN of the full results of this service. The Asheboro Church presented a play, "Cloth of Sendony," at the Pleasant Ridge Christian Church on Sunday night, May 8. Dr. and Mrs. John Davis are new residents of Asheboro and are finding their place in our church. Mrs. Davis is the daughter of Dr. John P. Jockinsen, formerly minister of our St. Petersburg (Fla.) Church, but now of Quincy, Illinois.

GERMAN LAITY TRAINED FOR HOME MISSIONS.

A missionary institute for lay people—the Evangelical Social College—has been founded at Friedewald, near Siegen, Germany, and will begin course work on June 1, 1949. The College is designed for members of the Evangelical Church who wish to be home missionaries while continuing their secular professions.

With the aid of funds provided by the Lutheran World Federation, the Social College is being organized by the Innere Mission (Home Missions), the Evangelisches Hilfswerk and the Evangelical Church's work among laymen in Germany.

The studies at Friedewald are under the direction of Dr. C. G. Schweitzer, director of the Central Committee for the Home Missions of the German Evangelical Church. During the war, Dr. Schweitzer was head of the Wistow Training Center, near Leicester, England.

Southern Convention Office

REV. WM. T. SCOTT, Superintendent

We hope each church of the Southern Convention will plan to have a vacation Bible School for its children during this summer. The Board of Christian Education and the Convention Office at Elon College, N. C., are anxious to be of assistance to the churches where possible in planning for the vacation Bible school and in supplying materials.

Work is progressing on the construction of the new building for Zion Christian Church near Glen Raven, N. C. Rev. G. C. Crutchfield is the pastor of this church which was organized a year ago. Plans are under way for organizing a new church in the Brookwood section of Burlington. We have many Congregational Christian Church people living in that developing residential section of Burlington.

Has your church sent its Easter Offering to the Convention Office? The Mission Board is endeavoring to help build new churches, to aid in pastors' salaries in churches where without this aid the church could not maintain a full time program, and to share the Gospel of Jesus Christ with the peoples of many countries of the world. The Mission Board is absolutely dependent upon you for the financial support of this important work. Please send your Easter Offering and other missions offerings promptly to Southern Convention Office, Elon College, N. C.

Please renew your CHRISTIAN SUN subscription promptly. The Convention Office is charge with the responsibility of keeping THE CHRISTIAN SUN list. Notices are sent a month in advance of the date due. If our subscribers would renew their subscriptions promptly, it would save an unlimited amount of work to the Convention in connection with THE CHRISTIAN SUN. The Board of Publications has found that it is absolutely necessary to discontinue unpaid subscriptions which are past due more than one month. We do not wish to cancel any subscription. We need all of THE CHRISTIAN SUN subscribers to continue. We hope our members will not only renew their subscriptions promptly but will encourage other people to subscribe to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. We have approximately 11,000 families in our Southern Convention churches. We have a great church paper. It can be improved and will be improved if our people will support it adequately. We ought to have a minimum of 5,000 subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN. This is not an impossibility but it will mean that we shall have to double our present subscription list. It can be done if our pastors and churches will get behind the project.

A LETTER FROM ONE WHO APPRECIATES THE CHRISTIAN SUN.

Burlington, N. C.
April 21, 1949.

I was distressed to read in THE CHRISTIAN SUN concerning the publication's financial difficulties. It made me one of many, I am sure who wish to do something. I am sending my small gift for its aid.

To lose our church paper would be one of the greatest blows which could happen to our membership. Only through the medium of our church paper can we help keep informed about the work of our denomination. It enables us to carry on a unified program among our churches, which is so much needed.

I want to take this opportunity to thank each department head for their fine contribution. We do appreciate them giving their time and thought without any financial remuneration in helping to edit our church paper.

With kindest regards and best wishes for THE SUN's continued growth. Sincerely yours, (Miss) SADIE V. FONVILLE.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

"LET THERE BE LIGHT"

Electric lights at Hebron! This announcement by Rev. Mark Andes reminds us of the novelty, the excitement, and gratitude for a service which so many take for granted. The advent of electricity in a church is an event of community-wide significance; it marks a transition from one era to another; it throws new light on many age old problems. A new power has been released. Throughout the church, from the sanctuary to the kitchen, power appliances may be used, visual education may be inaugurated. Power for heating, cooling, cleaning, cooking and numerous other services is available. God, in his marvelous wisdom and power, continues to give light!

A plan to distribute hydroelectric power from dams being constructed in the Roanoke River basin to about 40,000 rural homes in Virginia is announced by the Old Dominion Electric Co-operative. The largest of these dams, at Buggs Island, is now being built and is expected to be completed in 1952. Plans call for construction and operation of a system of transmission lines in order to satisfy the needs of consumers, which far exceed the supply of power now available. It is reported that in many areas hundreds of farm homes have been wired and lines have been run to them, but service cannot be given because of power shortage. The Old Dominion, formed by eleven distribution co-operatives, promises lower wholesale power rates, improved and more adequate service and freedom from restricted clauses in present contracts which limit areas and customers the co-operative can serve.

During this amazing and creative era the miracle of electricity is reaching its powerful and dexterous fingers into community after community in swift succession. This fact brings new life, freedom, prosperity to countless homes, communities and churches. The "Back to the Farm" movement should gather momentum. There is a new day ascending for the rural people. We have scriptural authority to "rejoice with them that do rejoice."

NEW DAY ASCENDING.

The editor rarely has the time, money, or the inclination to see a moving picture. There must be some special feature or attraction. His farm background, plus an abiding interest in rural progress, prompted attendance at a showing of "Green Promise."

The plot revolves around an old farmer who obstinately clings to obsolete methods. The Protestant minister, county agent, the 4-H Club and eager young people pave the way for progress. Farm life is portrayed as being shot through with simple joys and sorrow, hard work and opportunities for creative living. The elements of suspense and heroism are carefully blended. The old man, who rules his family under the guise of a democratic spirit, finally wreaks havoc to his new farm and comes to his senses when a terrific rainstorm brings about the damage predicted by the expert.

Progress has many obstacles: ignorance, prejudice, custom, human obtuseness. The film can serve as an effective instrument in teaching psychological and sociological truth. As the minister in the film suggested, we have today not one Moses, but many. There are competent guides to lead us across every barrier into the land of promise. Educational and mechanical aids in abundance are available.

Farm life should be a grand adventure. There is unavoidable difficulty and hardship, but there is also excitement, teamwork and the joy of achievement. Ingenuity and diligence pay dividends. Young people find happiness on the farm, provided they are given reasonable opportunities for recreation and creative activities, provided they are not shackled to an antiquated way of living, provided they are accorded full rights in the democracy of the family. For all who have open minds, eager spirits, and industrious habits there is a new day ascending on the American farm.

PROGRESS IN UNION

The next to the final step in the uniting of the over-head organizations of the Evangelical and Reformed and Congregational Christian Churches was taken in Cleveland on April 21 when the General Synod of the E. & R. Church voted 249 to 41 to approve the Interpretations of the Basis of Union and to refer them to the 34 synods of the church for final action. When two-thirds of these synods have voted favorably the last hurdle prior to Union will have been taken. All but two or three synods will have voted by the time these words appear in print.

The spirit of the General Synod was even more significant than its action.

Devotion to the cause of Christ was the dominant note in this meeting of the General Synod and is characteristic of the churches which it represents. This is a personal commitment rather than a theological position. Neither creeds nor forms of church organization have been allowed to obscure this fundamental relationship. Polity has never been a major issue in the E. & R. Church or in the bodies which united to form it. This is a fortunate fact of church history.

The E. & R. Church believes deeply that church union is in accord with the will of Christ both now and in the years to come. To further that end it is prepared to make real sacrifices.

The Merger with the Congregational Christian Churches is accepted by the E. & R. Church as the one step toward the larger church of Christ which is immediately feasible. Although puzzled and troubled by the behaviour of some of our people, which seems rather less than Christian, the E. & R.'s have the friendliest feelings toward us; yet, their underlying motivation is the desire to further church union. The present Merger is not an end in itself but a step toward the more inclusive church of tomorrow.

The new name does not represent a compromise but a prophecy. The term "church" is modified both by "United" and "of Christ." Its success will depend upon the balance between these two elements. Our union will be meaningful only as we are united in our devotion to Christ. This will be its true test.—John R. Scotford, Editor of Advance.

Military Aid to China?

The following communication from the Foreign Missions Conference of North America was sent on May 5 to the chairmen of the Foreign Relations Committee of the Senate and the Foreign Affairs Committee of the House. It was signed by Frank T. Cartwright, Chairman of the China Committee, and Rowland M. Cross Executive Secretary of the China Committee.

* * * *

In view of the pressure being brought on Congress to extend military aid to China, the undersigned have been requested by representative members of the China Committee of the Foreign Missions Conference to write you to interpret the attitude of the large majority of mission board executives concerned with China, based upon correspondence with American missionaries in China and their Chinese colleagues, conversation with those who have recently returned, and frequent exchange of views.

We endorse the present non-intervention policy of the State Department with reference to China, particularly in withholding any further military supplies to either side, and of avoiding interference by United States armed forces in the hostilities. These views are in line with the action taken by the Cleveland Conference of the Department of International Justice and Goodwill of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

The twenty-six denominations represented in the China Committee, with a membership in the U.S.A. of 29,000,000, carry on an extensive and varied Christian program in all parts of China.

We are convinced that in the present stage of China's developments, no effective basis for peaceful change of government has been established and that a valid civil election recognized by all parties, is a practical impossibility. It is evident that the people of China in general have lost confidence in the Kuomintang government and desire a change, although many of them would prefer another choice than either of the two alternatives presented.

We are convinced that effective intervention on behalf of the Kuomintang government would require immense supplies of military equipment; the active participation of American armed forces and the direction of the entire military administration from top to bottom by American personnel.

This would turn all classes of Chinese people against America. It would make necessary either the armed policing of China by American troops for a period of unpredictable duration, or complete withdrawal and return to the non-intervention policy.

We believe that the form of government should be decided by the forces now at work within China. In the meantime, we approve the policy of the Department of State in maintaining its diplomatic and consular officers at their posts in all parts of China and allowing private Americans with compelling reasons to proceed to China for business or mission work.

We believe that the welfare of the people of China should be the motivating objective of the extension of E.C.A. aid to China. To that end our government should continue such aid through the present Kuomintang government or any other recognized government under such conditions as will safeguard the freedom of the people and promote genuine and adequate economic development.

This letter indicates the concern which we feel for the people of China and our desire that the long-standing friendship between the United States and China may be maintained and strengthened.

EAST CAROLINA DISTRICT LAYMEN MEET.

The Liberty (Vance) Congregational Christian Church was host to the laymen from several Christian Churches in the East Carolina District at a meeting Sunday afternoon, April 24, at 4:30 o'clock. The churches represented were Liberty (Vance), Henderson, Fuller's Chapel and Bethlehem (Warren County).

The chairman of the district group, Mr. I. H. Vickery of the Henderson Christian Church, stressed the responsibility that rests upon the laymen of the church. Among the various responsibilities, he mentioned particularly the case of the church property and grounds, erecting of exterior bulletin boards, increasing subscribers to THE CHRISTIAN SUN and making whatever improvements that are necessary to the functioning of the church. At the conclusion of Mr. Vickery's address, the chairman introduced the guest speaker, Dr. William Mosely Brown of the History Department of Elon College.

Dr. Brown pointed out a striking similarity between a minister and a layman, the chief difference of the latter being his lack of theological training which makes him less capable of occupying the pulpit. However, he pictured vividly the potential energy that lies within a group of Christian laymen. Like Archimedes who said that from a certain position, he could move the world, so Christian laymen, with the energy of giants and the proper willpower, can accomplish wonders in our churches today.

Before the meeting adjourned, a visitor, Mr. J. C. Fox, who coaches at Lynchburg College, explained some of the accomplishments of the Laymen's Organization in the church of which he is a member.

After the regular meeting, a fellowship supper was served by the Young Ladies Class of Liberty Church. During the supper hour, the fellowship was greatly enhanced by amusing anecdotes from Dr. Brown, Mr. Fox and Frank Hinnant, Secretary of the Chamber of Commerce in Henderson.

The ability to form friendships, to make people believe in you and trust you is one of the few absolutely fun-smoother and easier when the parties buying, negotiating are so much smoother and earies when the parties enjoy each other's confidence. The young man who can make friends quickly will find that he will glide instead of stumble through life.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

By the time this comes to our readers it will be perhaps already known that I have accepted the position of superintendent of the Christian Orphanage. It is very hard to turn from so noble a people as I have found here in the Suffolk Church. They have been most patient, cooperative and generous toward me and my family. I have had sixteen good years here. Now I feel that the hand of the Lord is in the urgency with which the call has come from the Christian Orphanage. I want to do God's will. And therefore after much anxious prayer and thought I have made the important decision.

Suffolk is very, very dear to me and to my family. Here we have worked together, borne serious sickness and sorrow together, and here we have rejoiced together. Sixteen of the best years of my life have been laid on the altar of service in Suffolk. They have been years of joy and loving service with a great and good people. I pray God's richest blessings upon them everyone. The full text of my resignation follows:

"To the Suffolk Christian Church:

"I wish to announce a called meeting of the church this coming Wednesday night, May 11, at 8:00 o'clock to consider the following:

"You will be no more surprised than I was eighteen days ago when representatives of the Executive Committee of the Board of Trustees of the Christian Orphanage urged me to consider becoming its next superintendent. At a special meeting of the Board of Trustees, May 5, I was unanimously elected to that position. I have decided to accept it. Therefore, I offer my resignation to become effective June 30, or at the discretion of the church within the ninety-day agreement.

"I covet earnestly your affection and goodwill for myself and my family. This decision has not been easily made. My love for this church and my devotion to Suffolk, along with that of my family's love and devotion for the place which has been home in the finest sense of the word for sixteen years; and my consecration to the active ministry in the regular pastorate made this a difficult decision to make. Unstintedly you have accorded us the love and devotion of the largest church in the Southern Convention. We have worked faithfully together for the growth of the church, and for the advancement of the Kingdom of God. You are a truly great church and you have achieved well. I pray God that He may ever more richly bless you in the years ahead.

JOHN G. TRUITT,
Pastor."

NEWS FROM THE VIRGINIA PASTORATE.

Rev. W. Millard Stevens was the guest minister at Lebanon Christian Church, Semora, North Carolina, for a week's series of revival services, beginning on Easter Sunday. The interest increased all during the week, and, with the exception of the frosty Tuesday night, the attendance was greater each evening. Seven members were added to the church, four by profession of faith and three by letters of transfer.

Lebanon has authorized the appointment of a committee to study and present plans for the renovation of the interior of the church building.

Union Christian Church, Virgilina, Virginia, has purchased a new rug to cover the aisles and pulpit platform. As worshippers come to the house of God, they do indeed "tread softly." Plans are nearly completed for the parsonage to be built on the lot adjoining the church.

Liberty Christian Church, Nathalie, Virginia, has had its interior made more worshipful by a thorough cleansing and waxing of the floors.

Hebron Christian Church, Nelson, Virginia, is the grateful recipient of electricity. For a long period of time the committee has been constantly at work to get the electric power line to the church. Last fourth Sunday morning (April 24), electric lights burned for the first time at a morning worship hour. The light fixtures were donated by several members. The church raised enough money to cover the other costs. Also new runners on the floor and venetian blinds were added to make the sanctuary more beautiful and worshipful.

A LETTER FROM REV. D. P. BARRETT.

MY DEAR BRO. SCOTT:

I had a wonderful trip to Puerto Rico and back home. I shall count it as an oasis in my life not to be forgotten. I am unable to tell you how much I appreciated the good will and wishes of my friends in the Southern Convention. How the people and the churches responded to the call for help in sending me down to the anniversary was more than I could have wished for. I did not need all the funds they gave, so I am returning the portion unused to the Mission Board. My Puerto Rico friends at Ponce handed me a purse of $50.00 which took part of the responsibility. I did not have to spend a night at a hotel while on the trip. My son, Palmer, took me in at his apartment in San Juan and the pastor and his wife in Ponce gave me a pleasant room while with the Ponce folks. My expenses in the island were transportation and eating, largely at restaurants in San Juan since the apartment did not have facilities for preparing meals.

The details of my visit in Ponce were numerous and very emotional at times. There were occasions when I found it hard to struggle against memories of the past. Of course, you can understand that. The church organ was silent most of the time.

I went to see Victor Rivera (Victor graduated at Elon College in 1923). He and his family are well. The daughter is married and teaches in the high school at Ponce. His son is a mechanic and works at the Eastern Air Lines at San Juan. Victor teaches in the high school in Ponce and is a successful teacher and enjoys his work.

Thank you very much for all your help.

Sincerely yours,
D. P. BARRETT,

Dr. Dixon says the parable of the shepherd is rendered like this in the conduct of many a church: "A certain man, when he found that some of his sheep were lost, built a handsome shelter on the edge of the wilderness and over the door wrote, 'Any lost sheep straying near this wilderness hard by, if he will present his credentials and give good references to the committee in charge, will be admitted to shelter after due deliberation.'"

STUDENT GOVERNMENT AT ELON COLLEGE.

In September 1919 Student Government was inaugurated at Elon College. The students assumed major responsibilities in regulation and conduct of students in College. The idea of students governing themselves has been a process of development through the years. A complete legal form for the students was adopted. Originally, officers consisted of president, vice-president, secretary and treasurer of the student body. Also, a Girls' Council and a Boys' Senate. These organizations with sub-committees constituted the official body.

Annually there has been some expressed dissatisfaction with the limited authority granted the students. A year ago, this opposition was pronounced. The students wrote a new constitution which in addition to the usual officers provided for a Student Congress that would handle offenses and determine penalties. This form of government failed to function properly. Dissatisfaction with Student Government as was determined a year ago and had functioned or failed to function through the year became more pronounced. About three weeks ago, the students voted to declare the present form of Student Government discontinued. This was not a unanimous vote on the part of the student body but the majority were in favor. There were rather serious contentions which lasted for three or more weeks. Finally, the students reached an agreement and authorized the drafting of a new constitution. Under this constitution the students received major authority in the administration of their own affairs on the campus and accepted major responsibilities. The form of Student Government approved extended to all phases of student life including the "honor system" and was extended to include academic work. The plan was presented to the faculty and received a unanimous vote of confidence. The administration will present the new form of Student Government to the Board of Trustees on May 30 for a final decision.

The present Student Body of Elon College is much more mature than were the students prior to the war.

They are more capable of receiving responsibility and of bearing the same. The faculty is glad to cooperate with the students and will lend its support to make sure of success.

Wide publicity was given to the contentions among the students and the vote to discontinue Student Government at Elon College. The administration did not enter into the contentions and made no effort to refute statements made on the campus and appearing in the press but did express itself when the students reached a decision.

I am happy to report that student attitude is agreeable and cooperative. Indications are that we will have far more favorable conditions on the campus when school opens in September than we have had heretofore. I am happy to be able to make this report to the church and to those who are interested.

ALAMANCE COUNTY CENTENNIAL.

The one hundredth anniversary of the formation of Alamance County is being celebrated this week beginning on Monday with a mammoth parade in which Elon College will participate. The college will have a float in the parade. The float will be decorated in college colors. Prominent alumni of the county and children of alumni will be on the float. Also the college will be in the parade in which college officials and others will be riding.

The college will have a booth in the Carolina Warehouse along with other interests in the county. The booth will be decorated in college colors with photographic and pictorial displays of the college and college activity. Books and manuscripts from the college library and other items of interest will indicate the progress of Elon College since its founding in 1889. This booth is made possible by the generous cooperation of Mr. R. A. Maynard of Burlington, a prominent citizen and industrialist of the city and county and a member of the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

County officials arranging for this century of progress exposition have been very considerate of Elon College and the contributions it has made to the county.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

As you read these reports from week to week, you doubtless feel that these contributions are a mere trickle in the support of a great institution such as Elon College. However, when these contributions, even though small, come regularly week in and week out through a period of twelve months, the total is gratifying. These constant contributions go a long way in helping to meet continually appearing bills and financial obligations. Of course, it would be of a great deal more assistance if a large percentage of our churches rather than a small percentage would cooperate in these contributions for the support of our college. As we are happy to express our appreciation for those continued contributions, we are equally solicitous of those who do not pay that they may join with their support so that the college may continue its program of service to the church and to society.

God loves naturally and to exhibit that love to us is kind, generous, forgiving, merciful. By the same token it is your nature to be kind, generous, forgiving, merciful, to the degree that you have the mind of Christ. That explains why stewardship is so hard for some people—they are not Christ-minded. That explains why some people are better stewards than others—some have sought and found the mind of Christ to a fuller degree.

PROBLEM-SOLVING IN CHINA.

By LOUISE MEEBOLD, Fenyang, Shansi, China.

Our large staff of teachers and workers have not suffered either for food or clothes or places to live, although all these were problems at one time or another, and still are. These trying days have given our Chinese friends an opportunity to turn the tables, to give us food and clothes and even money and I have sometimes offered help to people who really needed it and they refused to take, knowing my own supply was short. So in spite of disturbance, it has been a time of real fellowship for many of us, and that is very precious.

Our leaders have gone into huddles again and again, sometimes for many hours at a time, trying to make wise decisions, often feeling very weak and ignorant. Sometimes our plans were of no good and we had to begin again. Our Pastor Kao and family arrived here from Peiping unexpectedly yesterday—he still had a few months of vacation if he wished, but he decided to cut his furlough short and come back and help, and are we glad to see him! He is calm and experienced, and it is a comfort just to see him around.

Our immediate problems are concerned with the schools (which the government is gradually taking over), with salaries for the staff that is kept on, since we have run into deficits in many departments because of the adverse exchange, and with the manner of keeping on religious work. We expect to hold our Annual Church Meeting next Monday and Tuesday and hope Secretary Wei from Peiping can be in to help us make plans, so at the moment things look brighter than they have for some time, "the fellowship of Christian minds is like to that above," goes round my head and it is certainly a wonderful thing.

Meanwhile I am teaching a few hours a week in the Nurses Training School, and have begun tutoring some high school students in English; they hang around the house and I might as well keep my English in practice. There are five or six hundred high school students now on our campus, many of them for the first time on a

MISSIONARIES VISIT SOUTHERN CONVENTION.

"This is truly a great day for the Church of Christ in China. The Chinese church leaders want the help of

REV. ROBERT E. CHANDLER

American missionaries more than ever before and speak repeatedly of the ecumenical character of the church. They plead for at least a

MRS. CHANDLER.

"task force" of missionaries to stay in each area no matter what comes," says Rev. Robert E. Chandler, Congregational Christian missionary under the American Board, back from China. Mr. and Mrs. Chandler will speak in Winchester on May 17, and in Richmond on May 19. Other engagements will follow.

Mr. Chandler sees the possibility of suffering, hard living conditions and difficult situations for a good many years to come. He also feels that the Chinese church, in spite of its failings, has been gaining in strength and that if all the missionaries from abroad were driven out the essential living church would come through strong in spirit. "These are heroic times in China and in all the darkness we have seen heroic living," he declares.

Robert Chandler has served in China for over 32 years. He has an unusual international background. Born of missionary parents in India his genealogy runs back through 117 years of missionary service. His wife also was born of missionary parents in Japan, and he has two sisters who are missionaries.

For the past two years Mr. Chandler has been on a special assignment in Fukien Province with headquarters in Foochow. He has been acting as senior adviser and counselor to Chinese ministers and churches in the Foochow-Shaowu Synods of the Church of Christ in China as well as to his fellow American missionaries many of whom were new young workers whom he had himself recruited while Candidate Secretary of the American Board from 1942-45. During this period Mr. Chandler secured over 40 new workers for the American Board.

After graduation from Yale University "Bob" Chandler sailed to China in 1910. He went first to Tientsin where he worked not only in the city but in the surrounding villages, teaching and encouraging Chinese staffs in school and church. He developed schools for Chinese lay Christian workers and sent them out better equipped to be local Christian leaders.

For five years Mr. Chandler was General Secretary of the North China Kung Li Hui, the Chinese Congregational Church, and also acted as a member of the National Christian Council of China for four years.

In his term of service after the beginning of the Sino-Japanese War, Mr. Chandler lived and worked amidst anti-British and anti-Chinese barricades by the Japanese Military, in a condition of persistent sporadic guerrilla warfare, and through the highest flood in 50 years. He saw his Chinese friends living with steady dignity under "enemy occupation."

Asked about the treatment of the Christian Church by the Communists, Mr. Chandler states that different WOMAN'S CONVENTION AND ELON SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

JUNE 13-15.

Something To Be Proud Of.

We should be proud of our women and what they can do.

Especially are we proud of two who are on the program for the Convention and School of Missions this summer at Elon.

Miss Mary Frances Thelen will give our Bible study for next year and will address the Convention. Miss Thelen is a teacher of Bible at Randolph-Macon College, Lynchburg, Va. She was ordained as a minister of our church at the last session of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference meeting at Lynchburg. She is a young person, attractive and full of vitality. It is a privilege to have such a person in our midst and to feel that she is one of us. We shall look forward to knowing her better while we are at Elon in June.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill has always been "one of us," since her home is in Henderson, N. C. She has held many important positions in the church work and has been to many different parts of our nation and other countries, but she is still one of our own girls. We are very happy that the Missions Council of our church assigned her to work in the Southeast this year and therefore she has been of great assistance to us.

Pattie Lee (as she is known to us) will teach our mission study for next year at the Convention and School of Missions, and, of course, will be around for other things, too. She would be an excellent person to talk to if you have special problems to discuss and solve.

Have you elected your delegate or delegates and sent the names to your State President? Do it immediately!

Remember—Officers of Conference or Convention don't count. Be sure to send your President.

HALIFAX DISTRICT MEETS.

The Halifax District meeting of the Woman's Missionary Conference met March 29 at Union Church, Virgilina, Virginia. Mrs. H. B. Satterfield is superintendent and Mrs. Floyd H. Dunn, secretary. The following churches were represented: Virgilina, Ingram, Liberty, Lebanon, Hebron, Danville, Pleasant Grove and Lynchburg. Features of the day were talks by Mrs. W. W. Sloan on "Impressions of Puerto Rico" and the Bible Studies done by Miss Elizabeth McGuffie. Mrs. Paul Farthing was elected assistant superintendent. The meeting next year will be with the women of Pleasant Grove Church.

SOCIETY NEWS.

SHALLOW WELL.

We have been carrying out our programs each month according to the Plan Book. About every three months we have an extra at the end of our programs in the form of an auction sale, trying to swell our treasury to fix up a kitchen in the basement of our new Educational Building, which we have added to our present church.

In November we had our Thank Offering as our public service.

We enjoyed Miss Pattie Lee Coghill's book review on China—Twilight or Dawn the fifth Sunday night in January at the Sanford Christian Church.

We chose as our Friendly Service project this year the North Dakota Indian Reservation. We mailed to Mr. Case two large boxes of clothing and material for making quilts, including one finished quilt top. When Mr. Case acknowledged our gifts, he mentioned how useful the quilt would be.

The World Day of Prayer was observed March 4 with the church people in Sanford.

We had representatives at our Spring Rally and they gave us a wonderful review of the program at our Missionary Meeting in April.

On Thursday night, April 28, we had a fellowship supper in the basement of our church for the Sunday school and church folks. The ladies of the church carried a covered dish and the men furnished the drinks. Around 180 enjoyed the supper together. After supper our pastor, Mr. R. T. Grissom entertained the children with comic moving pictures.

We ask God's blessing on us as we continue with enthusiasm to accomplish our future achievements for the year.

MRS. CHLOIE L. SLOAN,
Secretary.

ANTIOCH, WINDSOR, VA.

The Ladies' Missionary Society of Antioch Christian Church has had a most successful year, holding all regular meetings and having a very good program each month. On April 10, they presented a very inspiring candlelight service in honor of our missionaries at church. We hope to continue sharing in their support.

"Christian" campus, and they do ask questions—and give me opportunities to say a word on religion.

If we don't get a call to some other place, or get thrown out by the new regime, we shall probably stay put. As to our country churches, which are always on my mind, reports are not very encouraging. It seems wise not to send them written letters, so, as we have opportunity, we send a word-of-mouth message, telling them to pray and hold on to God for the future. Most of the country churches are being used for schools, or have been left to go to ruin since the Japanese were here. When we really begin again, I feel sure it must be on an independent, self-supporting basis and that is going to mean real sacrifice for the leaders as well as the church members, but I am sure it must be done.

TO BROADCAST SACRED CONCERT

A radio program of unusual interest to the church has been announced by W. E. Park, president of The Northfield Schools. The program is to be broadcast Sunday afternoon, May 15, from 3:30 P. M. to 4:00 P. M. (Easter Daylight Saving Time).

This broadcast is a portion of the Fifty-Fifth Annual Concert of Sacred Music given by the students of The Northfield Schools—Northfield School for Girls and Mount Hermon School for Boys. The program itself combines the best in choral music with traditional hymns and is presented in a thoroughly competent and reverent manner.

A STORY FOR THE WEE FOLK:

Tim and Ted were twins. They were going to church school with their big sister, and mother. Their father was away from home. As they skipped along the sidewalk they saw a big greenish-brown bug on the curbstone.

Tim got there first. "Oh, what is this thing?" Ted was looking at it now. Their mother and big sister stopped.

Mother said, "That is a praying mantis."

"See, how he looks as if he were praying?" asked big sister. The twins nodded their heads.

Very carefully Tim picked the insect up and carried it to his classroom in the church school.

Ted was nearly bursting with excitement. He rushed into the room, "Miss Williams, Miss Williams, see our big bug."

Already they had forgotten the name of their bug. Miss Williams told them again and they put the mantis in a box with some leaves and sand left from an exhibit their class had held.

All the children who came were pleased to see their new insect friend. Miss Williams told them how God has made many kinds of animals and insects for our world. Each has a place.

Next Sunday all of the children looked to see what of God's creature they could find.

WAR IN THE NURSERY.

By LAURA GRAY.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

"Give it to me!"

"I won't; it's mine!"

"It isn't; I had it first!"

Five-year-old Mary snatched the toy from her younger brother. At once he began to pommel her with powerful little fists, and she returned the blows with equal vigor. Two-and-a-half-year-old Nancy played her part by delivering none-too-gentle taps on each of their heads, alternately, with a long wooden spoon, and Baby Jim, from his cot, accentuated the rumpus by contributing repeated shrieks.

What can mothers do to prevent these distressing quarrels that many of us know so well? Let us look for causes. A well-fed, rested and happy child can seldom be persuaded to fight. He is merry—contented with the world—but children, like adults, are not always in this happy state; it is then that quarrels arise so easily. Jealousy is another cause of friction.

I don't know what to do with Joan!" my friend complained. "I can't leave Baby in the room alone with her for a minute—she seems to dislike her brother; I'm afraid she will hurt him."

"It may be she feels that you are giving more attention to him than you are to her; she must have been a great pet before he arrived," I said.

"Of course, she was, but I must give the baby more time and attention—he needs more."

"But does Joan understand? Perhaps, if you took her into 'partnership' in bringing up the helpless newcomer she would feel better."

"Why, I never thought of that. I'll try it."

In this true case the little sister soon came to understand the baby brother's need, and then she felt proud and important in helping to care for him. In another family, where no such effort was made, the brother and sister passed a stormy childhood—continually scrapping. Long after the boy had grown sturdy enough to look out for himself, his part was always taken by the mother, because he was "the younger." Naturally, the sister resented this unfairness.

Children's quarrels often arise on account of their possessions. Each member of the family should have a spot—shelf or drawer—where treasures can be kept free from interference. Respect for another's property is not born but must be taught. With their innate sense of justice, very young children can soon learn this lesson—a lesson large in its significance in every later undertaking.

In many a group there is a bully who grabs all he can—keeps the swing, the wagon, or the car longer than his turn, knowing others are not able to take anything from him. One good way to deal with this fellow is to give him responsibility, such as seeing that little ones have their share of opportunities and plaything. This appeals to his self-importance.

Youngsters have a wonderful sense of rightness, of fairness, and, when evenly matched in age and size, can usually settle differences without help. So, when cries set nerves tingling, resist the urge to rush in and deal out punishment; first, investigate fully. This truly requires the wisdom of Solomon.

Children generally outshine adults once sympathy and understanding have been aroused. A boy in a boarding school broke his arm. The headmaster feelingly explained to the school their chum's handicap and called for "volunteers to help Jim." From that day forward pupils vied with one another in helping the injured boy to dress, undress, brush his hair, put away his clothes, or cut up his dinner. Without the explanation the boys might have behaved very differently.

Nursery quarrels cannot be wholly swept away—human nature being what it is. But, after seeing that our charges are physically well, let us discover and remove any reason for a feeling of unfairness, teach the boys and girls respect for another's property, and always allow time for them to settle their differences themselves. Above all, let us—their parents—show them a continuous example of harmonious living.

EDUCATION DAY.

Defiance College presents the following facts to the churches on the occasion of Education Day, May 1:

1. Serves 400 students with a faculty of 35, and plant with a physical valuation of $1,500,000.
2. Continuous affiliation with the Christian and Congregational Christian Churches since 1901.
3. Operates to provide this service at reasonable rates carrying a student subsidy of $104 per month. Community - Alumni - Special Friends-Church—all share in providing this subsidy which operates as a Living Endowment.
4. Has 21 students on its campus taking initial training for the Christian Ministry.
5. Is developing a program which will permit a fifth year of college for those preparing for the ministry.
6. Is developing an area extension service to send trained workers into small churches within a 40-mile circle of Defiance.
7. Employs a staff of eminently qualified leaders in Religion, Ethics and Social Service.

We present these facts for your consideration.

Youth at Work in the Church

ANN TRUITT, Editor; HELEN JACKSON, C. B. TWIDDY, Associates.

AMERICAN METHODIST YOUTH WINS INTERNATIONAL ESSAY CONTEST.

Christian youth "must proclaim and practice complete faith in peaceful means of settling controversy among nations . . . and press for the creation of an international mind and heart," according to Jameson Jones, a nineteen-year-old Methodist, whose essay won an international prize in a contest sponsored by the World Council of Churches.

Condemning "all programs for military preparedness" as a false road to peace, Mr. Jones urged support of the United Nations and programs of economic and racial justice. He also urged an exchange of ideas between youth in various parts of the world. "The simple act of letter writing goes a long way toward building . . . the international mind and heart."

A native of Lexington, Ky., and the managing editor of Concern, a Methodist youth paper, Mr. Jones wrote on the topic, "The Concrete Action A Young Christian Should Take for World Peace Today." Now a student at Vanderbilt University, Nashville, he expects to become a religious journalist.

The prize for the best essay among the 493 entries from 29 countries is a thousand Swiss francs (about $250) to be used for travel. Mr. Jones hopes to use the prize money this summer for travel in Europe. The award was given out of the Zelah Van Loan World Friendship Fund, established by Mrs. Anna Van Loan of the United States in memory of her husband.

Submitted in sixteen languages, including Serbo-Croatian, Esperanto, and Urdu, the entries were judged by an international board of 25 church leaders on the basis of understanding, conviction and originality. Prize-winning essay among the Junior entries was sent in by Kiss Istvan of Hungary, and dealt with "What the Bible Has to Say About World Friendship."

A MATTER OF OBLIGATIONS.

Dr. William Hiram Foulkes, a great champion of Christian Endeavor for many years, has written an excellent treatise, "A Matter of Obligations," in which he lists seven ways the church is indebted to Christian Endeavor, and seven aspects of Christian Endeavor's debt to the church. We present a brief outline of Dr. Foulkes' article:

I. What the Church Owes Christian Endeavor.

Christian Endeavor is a child of the church. That relationship involves mutual obligations. Neither one nor the other must bear all the burdens or monopolize all the benefits. Let us look first at the obligation upon the parent for the welfare of the child.

First of all it turned the face of the church a full generation ago toward its sons and its daughters.

The second phase of the debt the church owes Christian Endeavor is that under God it was largely instrumental in saving the Christian youth of the last generation to the service of the church.

The third part of the debt that the church owes to Christian Endeavor is quite beyond the power of any human reckoning. It is no exaggeration to say in the light of the testimony at hand that to Christian Endeavor more than to any other one agency the church owes the training of its leaders for the past half century.

The fourth element in the debt that the church owes to Christian Endeavor is the fact that the Endeavor movement has led the way in the whole field of young people's work.

In the fifth place, the modern Christian Endeavor movement is helping to keep the young people of the present generation loyal to the church.

As the sixth element of the debt which the church owes to Christian Endeavor may be cited the inspiring and yet solemnizing fact that Christian Endeavor has blazed the way in the whole modern movement of interdenominational, interracial, and international service and fellowship.

In the seventh place, the church owes the Endeavor movement its one great chance to reach the unchurched youth of the present generation.

In return for this seven-fold debt, Christian Endeavor asks only to be more largely used, more fully trusted, more prayerfully supported, and more diligently directed. Let the church pay its debt to Christian Endeavor by making use of this noble organization to the utmost measure of its capacity for service and to the mighty enlargement of the church's capacity for leadership.

II. What Christian Endeavor Owes The Church.

Christian Endeavor owes its life, its breath, and being to the church. It has always been of as well as for the church. It was born in the heart of the church, fed by its "bread of life," inspired at its altars, and trained in its service.

First, Christian Endeavor owes the church the loyalty of love.

The second debt which rests upon Christian Endeavor in behalf of the church is that of complete identification with the entity and life of the church.

Third, Christian Endeavor owes the church a full measure of attendance upon its services of worship.

Fourth, the support of what people think of as routine church activities rests heavily upon Christian Endeavor.

Fifth, another debt Christian Endeavor owes to the church is that of furnishing the finest material for Christian education and culture. Christian Endeavorers must always be getting ready for larger service.

Sixth, the fires of missionary knowledge and zeal must be kept burning in the church by putting on fresh fuel.

Seventh, among many other things that Christian Endeavor owes to the church the last one now to be named is the investment of its own spirit of courage, energy, devotion and sacrifice in the unfinished tasks of the church and of the kingdom of God.

Church, how does your account stand with your young people? Are there items that are overdue? Pay up! Keep on paying "on account."

Endeavorers, do your books balance with the church? Keep on making your payments on account.

Christ is the real creditor. All others are only debtors.

A nobleman once gave a celebrated actress a Bible, telling her at the same time that there was a treasure in it. She, thinking he meant religion, laid it aside. She died, and all she had was sold. The person who bought the Bible, on turning its leaves, found a note for $2,500 in it. Poor creature! had she read the Book, she might not only have found the note, but the "pearl of great price."

WITH JESUS IN THE UPPER ROOM.

LESSON VIII—MAY 22, 1949

MEMORY SELECTION: This is my body which is broken for you; do this in remembrance of me.—I Cor. 11:24.

LESSON: Mark 14:12-26; Luke 22:7-38.

DEVOTIONAL READING I Cor. 11:23-29.

The Setting.

The institution of what is variously called "The Communion Service" or "Holy Communion" or "The Sacrament of Holy Communion" or "The Eucharist" or "The Lord's Supper" took place in what was referred to then, and now after nineteen hundred years, as The Upper Room. It was a large room, a guest room, a room on the second floor of a home, which has been made ready in advance for this final, farewell meal of the Master with His disciples. It may have been in the home of John Mark, and it was probably the same room in which the disciples later met for prayer, and in which the Holy Spirit came in his fulness and power.

This room had been furnished and made ready. The elements for the Passover Supper had been prepared and set on the table. The divans or the couches on which those who were to participate, were to recline, had been placed around the table, perhaps in the shape of a big U. The candles or the lamps had been lighted, and when the sun had set and evening had come, the Master and the Twelve came quietly and secretly to this place to observe the ancient and sacred Passover, commemorating God's gracious deliverance of His people from the bondage of Egypt. The disciples did not know, of course, that that simple observance would be given a new meaning, or that that Upper Room would be given an undying glory. They may not have realized that it was to be their last meal with the Master, although the circumstances under which they met gave it an added note of solemnity and dignity.

The Simplicity

Could anything be more simple as a memorial than the simple service which our Lord instituted on that night in the Upper Room! He wanted to be remembered—His humanity itself would make that certain. But He wanted to make sure that He was kept in remembrance for their sakes, as well as for His sake. What form should such a memorial take? Should it be some endowment or foundation, a gigantic trust fund of some sort, to keep alive His memory? Should it be a great building or a magnificent monument or marker which would remind those who saw it of Him? Should it be a badge of some kind which all of His disciples were to wear in a conspicuous place, a kind of string tied around their fingers, to remind them of their Lord? Should it be one of the many things or ways in which people try to perpetuate their lives or their deeds in the memory of their followers and friends.

No, the Master, rejected all these forms and instead chose the simple form of a sacrament, itself the essence of simplicity. He simply took two common elements of that day, a bit of broken bread, and a small portion of wine, and told them to eat and drink in remembrance of Him. These elements were symbols of His body which was broken for them, of His blood which was shed for them. They were to do this in remembrance of Him. It was a spiritual masterpiece of association. How can one come to the Communion Table, or even look at it without thinking of Jesus Christ? And through the centuries it has been continuously observed and it is as fresh and powerful today as the first time it was observed. There is nothing that so reminds people of Christ as the sacrament of Holy Communion.

The Strangeness.

Men celebrate their victories and achievements, and not their defeats and failures. But Jesus seems to be calling attention to a defeat and a failure. He says the bread is a symbol of His body broken for them, and the cup a symbol of His blood shed for them, an ignominious death indeed. But no, Jesus was also celebrating a great victory and a great achievement. His death was not defeat but victory. It was the very thing that meant victory. It was the culmination and the heart of His redemptive mission. The last enemy that must be destroyed was death and by His death He took the sting out of death, and triumphed openly over death and the grave. Jesus would have His followers keep always in remembrance the heart of His gospel, that Christ died for sinners, that by His death they might live.

The Significance.

There were and are several factors or emphases in the simple but significant Sacrament of Holy Communion. There was, of course, the memorial factor in it. It had as its background the ancient Passover, commemorative of God's gracious deliverance of His people. Then there was the element of thanksgiving in it. In fact it is sometimes called "the Eucharist" which comes from the Greek word thanks. When He had taken the bread and the cup, "He gave thanks." One should come to the Communion Service with a thankful heart for Him who loved us and gave Himself for us. There is, too, the element of sacrifice in it. Indeed that is the dominant note in it. Christ our Passover was sacrificed for us. One can hardly partake of the sacrament of Holy Communion without being made aware of the sacrifice of Christ for all mankind and for him. And one might as well be frank and admit that there is an element of mystery in it. It cannot be glibly or easily explained. Its deeper meaning eludes even the wisest of us. Men have bowed in humility before the great mystery of the Sacrificial or Atoning act of Christ. The words of Jesus Himself center on this sacrificial aspect of what He did, "My body broken for you," "My blood shed for the remission of sins, or for many." And such sacrifice ought to beget the spirit of love and devotion and sacrifice within us. And thanks be unto God there is an element or note of triumph and victory in it. There is no note of defeat or failure in it all. "Until I drink it new with you in the kingdom of God"—there is the pledge of victory and triumph. Gathered up in and around this simple and significant service are the notes of historical continuity and an emphasis upon deliverance, on thanksgiving, on sacrifice, on mystery, and on victory.

The Song.

"And when they had sung a hymn they went out to the Mount of Olives." What did they sing? How we would like to know what they sang as they went forth. We may be sure that it was a hymn of praise and thanksgiving, a hymn of faith and hope. Here is a parable for all of us. Happy is the man who has to go

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

EFFICIENCY IN USHERING OR "EIGHTEEN MUSTS FOR THOSE WHO USHER."

By DON BUSHGENS, Chairman,
Board of Ushers, First Congregational Church, Mason City, Iowa.

1. As an Usher, you are rendering a very important service to your church. By your personal attention, pleasantness and dignity, you may make such a favorable impression upon visitors that they will be influenced to place their membership in your church.

2. As an usher, you are a representative of the entire membership of your church and for them you express their greetings and welcome to all who worship in their church and your church.

3. The Ushers should meet at the church at least twenty minutes before time service begins.

4. If an Usher is unable to serve when scheduled to serve, he should personally arrange for a substitute or notify the Chairman of Board of Ushers by Friday evening.

5. It is difficult to over-emphasize the importance of the office of an Usher. The first impression which visitors receive on coming into a church is usually from the Ushers.

6. Remember always that the front seats should be thought of as being at a premium. Never apologize for offering a front seat to a worshipper. It is naturally to be assumed that every worshipper would like a seat as near the front of the sanctuary as possible.

7. Be as anxious and as prompt in offering to usher any poor person to a desirable seat as you would be to render such service to the wealthiest individual in the world.

8. Usher all person to their seats promptly but not hurriedly—keeping the aisles clear.

9. Be tactful, gracious and alert. It is poor policy for the ushers to whisper among themselves while people are entering the church.

10. Be courteous! Be cheerful! Be eager to serve!

11. Welcome each worshipper with a friendly greeting and a smile, always keeping in mind that as an Usher you have a special opportunity to help your church establish the reputation of being a "Friendly Church."

12. Seat visitors next to members so far as practicable.

13. Hand a church calendar, having the order of service for the day, to each worshipper when entering pew.

14. Never seat anyone during the Reading of the Scriptures, Special Music, or Prayer. It is very important that this rule, which applies to members as well as to visitors, shall be carefully observed.

15. Help in every way possible to create an atmosphere of quiet and reverence.

16. Inform the pastor at the close of the service of any situation requiring his attention—such as cases of illness of which you have learned, addresses you have received of newcomers to the community, or any emergencies that may have taken place.

17. In the spring, summer and fall, the Ushers should see to it that during the singing of the last hymn the windows and doors should be opened for ventilation, closing same at conclusion of the hymn if desirable.

18. If any worshipper asks for the use of one of the hearing aids, notify the Head Usher.

areas present different situations, but he knows of many good Chinese colleagues who have suffered at the hands of the Communists, some even to death, and, while in certain places hospitals and schools were allowed to continue. "When the church as an institution is strong and influential, when it seems to threaten the new authority, it cannot be tolerated."

Introducing Mrs. Chandler.

"The people of Fukien Province, China, are somehow carrying on in spite of little chance for rehabilitation after years of strife, Japanese occupation, and the civil war now going on; carrying on in spite of inflation and untold suffering, in spite of heavy and disillusioned hearts and with eager yet fearful questions about Communism in their minds," says Mrs. Helen Davis Chandler.

As she tells of conditions in China today, Mrs. Chandler says, "Within this framework the Kingdom of God is a sure foundation of courage and hope for scattered groups everywhere. We have never seen so truly the strength of Christian living in the midst of the hopelessness of life in general. . . . The job of the missionary today is more than ever that of a morale builder—just being there in China means so much."

Mrs. Chandler began her China career in North China in 1910 and during her years of service has experienced famine, flood, civil uprisings and invasion. War, in its various phases, has often furnished a tragic undertone to life. Yet she also has worked creatively through many periods of peace.

It was as a result of the Great Famine in 1920-21 that she founded and directed a remarkable piece of work called the Hsiku Women's Industry in Tientsin, an economic venture to meet the needs of hundreds of destitute Chinese women and girls.

Following one furlough she returned to Tientsin which had been taken over by the Japanese Military and lived there doing relief work, along with her other activities, under a non-cooperative alien government. A terrible flood occurred during this period and Mrs. Chandler worked especially for the refugee children trying to secure for them something approaching an adequate diet, a chance for schooling, and re-establishment in their villages, once the flood was over and their homes could be rebuilt.

Among many other things Mrs. Chandler did an excellent piece of work in helping write the script, and in acting as an adviser, to the motion picture team which filmed the beautiful American Board colored movie, Letter from China.

Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP) will be continued through 1949. It is hoped that our people will give their full support to this program of relief to areas of the world which are in such critical need. Please consult your pastor for ways and means by which you may be able to assist in this program.

The Orphanage

If any of you visited the orphanage last week, when you arrived you surely asked right off, "What's going on around here?" At least half a dozen cars and trucks were to be seen parked around the Baby Home practically every day.

There were carpenters, plumbers, and all kinds of repairmen around.

Hurrah! Hurrah! The kitchen has a new floor. The pantry, dining room and all the bathrooms have new floor coverings of composition tile. They really look nice, too.

The bedrooms all have new closets and cabinets.

There will probably be a wonderful new laundry in the basement, too. One Sunday school class had so much money given for a washing machine that they feel sure they are going to give an ironer, too.

There is a rumor going around that some living room furniture has been bought. Seeing is believing!

Over in Johnston Hall there is a large storage room where clothes and supplies are kept until they are distributed. This room is getting some repair work, too.

A new roof ventilator is being installed in that building, also.

On Thursday one could see cars of the Trustees around Johnston Hall, because a "Trustees Meeting" was going on. They said, "Let the good work go on," and they also said other things that you will hear soon.

Things are certainly looking up for your Orphanage. A new day is coming and you'll be glad.

In Memoriam

HYATTE

Thomas Godwin Hyatte was born in Nansemond County on November 2, 1879, and passed from this life in the flesh to the eternal life in the spirit on April 8, 1949, after a long and lingering illness. He had made his home in Newport News for forty-five years, and was employed until his retirement from active service in 1937 by the Newport News Shipbuilding and Dry Dock Co., as a time-keeper. He joined the local church soon after coming to the city, and was a faithful member and a regular attendant of the Sunday school and church through the years. He is survived by his wife, Mrs. Bessie Baker Hyatte, a daughter, Mrs. Robert Lee House; three grandchildren; two brothers; a sister and a half-sister.

Mr. Hyatte, or "Tom," as he was affectionately called, was a quiet, modest dependable kind of man, devoted to his home, his family, his friends, his church and his Lord. He was dependable in his work and loyal to his employers. He was a good man in the best sense of that word, and had a large circle of friends. A good man has gone to his reward.

H. S. HARDCASTLE,
Pastor.

WILLIAMS.

On March 21, 1949, our church and community was saddened by the death of our friend and brother, John A. Williams.

As a business man and farmer he was actively engaged in his work until death. At all times Brother Williams was an interested and active worker in all civic and community enterprises. Not only was he a loyal and faithful worker in the Franklin Congregational Christian Church, where he was a member of the Board of Deacons from 1916, but he served for many years as a member of the Mission Board of the Southern Convention and for several years was on the Board of Trustees of Elon College.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. Our church has sustained a great loss in the death of our faithful and loyal brother.

2. That we hold in fond remembrance his devoted Christian life and will strive always to emulate those noble and Godly principals of our church for which he so earnestly worked to uphold in his life.

3. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to the family of John A. Williams, a copy be spread on the minutes of the Franklin Congregational Christian Church and a copy be sent to The Christian Sun for publication.

J. VAUGHAN BEALE.
JAS. J. SEAY, JR.,
E. P. JONES,

MORGAN.

Inasmuch as it hath been the will of Divine Providence to call from our midst Mrs. Louvenia Morgan, an esteemed and dearly beloved member of The Woman's Missionary Society of the Liberty Spring Christian Church.

We, as members of the Missionary Society desire to express our appreciation of the kindly Christian life she lived. We shall miss her friendly smile and cheerful greeting.

"She has taken her beautiful journey,
And earth ties so sweet are now broken
But a faith that is clear
Feels her presence so dear
Like communion when no word is spoken."

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That we bow in humble submission to God's will, knowing that our loss is her eternal gain.

2. That the members of the Woman's Missionary Society hereby extend to the bereaved family our heartfelt sympathy and love in their bereavement.

Mrs. WILLIAM T. HARRELL,
Mrs. SHIRLEY H. RAWLES.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

XI. Simon the Zealot.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

Simon was a patriot, a member of a party founded by one Judas of Gamala which rose in rebellion against the census of Quirinius some years before Jesus began his ministry. The group bitterly resented the domination of Rome. He was steeped in the prophetic hope for a Messiah under whose leadership his nation would again become great.

He must have been at least ten years older than Jesus yet recognized and admired the qualities of leadership evident in the younger man. He was a good influence in the group and no doubt helped to raise their spiritual temperatures through his fervent desire to see the Messianic kingdom become a reality.

The great difference between Simon and Jesus was that Simon wanted to wield his countrymen through military and political might while Jesus hoped for a rallying of men under the standard of the love of God. Simon must have been hard put to reconcile Jesus' revolutionary attitude with His pacific principles and it probably taxed his understanding when Jesus said, "My Kingdom is not of this world but within you." (John 18:36.)

A great sense of frustration perhaps almost engulfed him when Jesus was crucified—for was not this the second leader whom he had seen defeated. But with the coming of the resurrection he may well have been one of the first to regain his composure.

Tradition tells us that he became a carrier of the Gospel to Britain where later he lost his life.

forth to meet the hard facts and indeed the seemingly unjust facts of life, and yet who goes with faith in his heart and a song on his lips. That man has already overcome the world.

The Spirit.

There are many ways of knowing Christ and of sharing His fellowship intimately. But it would seem from the testimony of history that Holy Communion meditates His presence and His grace in the most intimate and moving way. Mankind instinctively turns to it, that is, Christian believers turn to it, seeking beyond the sacred page their living Lord.

BIBLE HOMES AND HOMES TODAY

Elizabeth Liggett Reed 152 pages, $1.75

IN learning to appreciate the homes of other times and places the child's horizon is widened and he is led to the discovery of new meaning in his own home life.

The book is divided into two units. The first unit, "Homes of the Bible," is approached through the child's natural interest in the childhood of Jesus. There are stories, suggestions for activities, and detailed plans for ten sessions on village home life in the time of Jesus and for five sessions on early nomadic home life.

In the second unit, "Homes Today," there are two parts: Homes in Other Lands and Homes in America. Stories, factual material, and session plans are included in the text for a study of China, Africa and Japan. Through the study of homes in America the children become aware that all homes are interdependent.

LEARNING FROM JESUS

Armilda Brome Keiser 160 pages, $2.00

THE course is divided into two units and covers five weeks. In the first unit the children get acquainted with Jesus the schoolboy, and Jesus the teacher. The second unit is called "Following the Great Teacher," and encourages the children to try to follow the teachings of Jesus, motivated by a study of how those teachings have influenced the lives of many people.

The activities include listening to stories from the Bible; appreciating pictures; simple research to discover what followers of Jesus have done and are doing; recording the findings on charts and murals; planning and carrying out ways of putting into practice the teachings of Jesus.

EXPLORING GOD'S OUT-OF-DOORS

Rebecca Rice

152 pages, $1.75

THIS is a nature course designed to guide children into a wondering and loving appreciation of the great Mind and Heart back of and in all life. Observation of plant and animal life reveals the provision made for life through protective devices, obedience to the laws for growth, and cooperative community living. A study of the cycles of nature shows laws making an orderly harmonious world on whose laws we can depend.

There are five units in this course, each accompanied by detailed directions and suggestions for activities. Also reliable nature material is provided as background for the teacher unfamiliar with the subjects referred to. The section on stories is a mine of resource material for all teachers, as all the stories are original except the Bible stories. Some of the songs and the section on poetry are also new material.

Junior

FINDING GOD THROUGH WORK AND WORSHIP (New. Ready June 1949)

Mary Esther McWhirter

Teacher's—160 pages, $2.00

Pupil's—64 pages, 40 cents

THE purpose of the course is to help Juniors discover God through work and worship. The leader's text is developed in two units of two weeks each: Finding God through Work and Finding God through worship. The units may be used separately or together.

The book is rich in factual material, stories, activities and recreation. There is an excellent list of source materials.

The pupil's book is in two sections: Finding God through Work and Finding God through Worship. It contains pictures, additional stories and resource materials about workers and ways we worship. Boys and girls will want to keep the pupil's book for their own library.

UNDERSTANDING GOD'S WORLD

Mary Sherburne Warren

184 pages, $2.25

THIS course is planned to help juniors think through their many questions about the physical and the social world. The course is planned in two units of two weeks each; either unit may be used alone or expanded. The first unit deals with the physical world; the second unit with the world of people. The book is rich in factual material, stories and poems, suggestions for worship, activities, things to make, recreation, and contains an excellent bibliography. This course endeavors to help the junior child:

- (1) Gain an intimate acquaintance with God.
- (2) Make progress toward the discovery of satisfying answers to questions about the physical world in relation to his thinking about God.
- (3) Realize that God is the creator of the world and that his purpose is that men shall discover how to live in it and use it for man's best development.
- (4) See that the problems growing out of sin and suffering can be solved only as all peoples learn to live together in harmony.
- (5) Realize that God is at work in the world to lift the level of society to Christian ideals.

Another Atlantic Pact Needed

By CHARLES A. WELLS

If the Atlantic Pact includes only plans for physical armaments and political alliances, it will never be enough. For armaments and politics alone do not cover the basic needs of this hour of international fear and strain. What men believe in, their concepts of truth and justice, are the fundamental elements of civilizations' survival. What binds the western world together far more than politics, economics or military need is what we feel about truth, the sanctity of life and the destiny of man. These concepts of faith and life are most visible and real in the religious institutions of the West. The Communists continually attack the Church because they realize better than we the vital place of religion in sustaining a free society. The Church also must extend hands across the sea, clinging to the cross for support and balance while we help men feel the warm grip of a common faith, a mutual hope, and our divine kinship.

News Flashes

Congratulations to our Oakland Church upon completing the payment of $18,500.00 on its new educational plant.

The dates for Elon Commencement are May 28, 29 and 30. Dr. Smith has given everyone a cordial invitation. Why not attend?

A plaque in memory of Colonel J. E. West west will be unveiled at our Newport News Church on Sunday morning, May 29. Colonel West took an active interest in organizing and promoting the Newport News Church.

The Eastern Virginia Ministers, at their last meeting, elected the following association officers: President, W. B. O'Neill; vice-president, Will Wood; secretary, Ellis Clark; treasurer, R. L. House.

Rev. S. E. Madren assisted in revival services last week in the Newport Church, Rev. R. E. Newton, pastor. We hope to have a report of this meeting to pass on to SUN readers at an early date.

Rev. Robert A. Whitten will be guest speaker next Sunday morning, May 22, at the Evangelical and Reformed Church, Toms Brook, Virginia, on the occasion of Home Coming Day, and the observance of the 130th anniversary of the Toms Brook Church. Rev. Basil Starkey, Boy Scout Director for the Shenandoah Area will speak in our Winchester Church in the absence of the pastor.

PICTURE OF THE MONTH. "The Stratton Story."

If we are to export films to tell the world about the U.S.A., stressing the kind of people we are and the ideals we follow, it is hoped that the distributors will not fail to place "The Stratton Story" high on the list. For in this film M-G-M has not only produced a picture strong in American flavor but also one which, we feel, does a superb job of reflecting the American spirit of enterprise, courage and clean living.

In addition, of course, to all this subtle ideological content, "The Stratton Story" contains entertainment values of a high order. The entire family will love it. It is the thrilling story of a baseball hero—and in this case we mean hero, not just a famous ball player.

It is the story of Monty Stratton, drawn from the real life of the Texas farm boy who became one of the most famous pitchers of modern times. Skillfully woven in is the tender romance between him and the girl he marries, who not only inspires him to reach the top but steadies and helps restore him from tragic despondency when he loses a leg (and, he thinks, his career) following a hunting accident. The manner in which he achieves his comeback is as thrilling as it is satisfying.

It was a wise choice to select James Stewart to play Monty Stratton. He brings to the role of the farm boy who is never spoiled by success just that appealing naturalness which is the acme of the acting art. He masters the game like a professional, and, after the accident and his period of emotional depression, simulates the use of an artificial leg well enough to impart complete illusion.

Playing the part of the girl he marries is June Allyson. Agnes Moorehead portrays the dignified, sensible and hardworking mother. Both render unforgettable performances as they team their efforts to see Monty through his trouble and help him back to victorious normalcy. Throughout the story is revealed the masterful directorial hand of Sam Wood.

Of the social, moral and ethical standards of "The Stratton Story" we cannot speak too highly. It is such a relief to meet in the films an unsophisticated, unspoiled man—not portrayed as a weakling but as a fundamentally strong character who, despite obstacles, can take the means at hand and the greatness within himself and create from them something that inspires and cheers the heart.

Unless we are badly mistaken, you and your family will find yourselves rooting enthusiastically for this picture. (Recommended for adults, young people and children.)

RELIEF AND RECONSTRUCTION FUND.

By HAROLD B. BELCHER.

I have been receiving inquiries from some State Offices about crediting gifts to CROP. Being new at this business, I have been making some inquiries with Church World Service to see just how these CROP gifts work out. According to them, the CROP organization turns over to Church World Service the grain donated and also the grain purchased by the cash donations, and furnishes them at the same time with a report of the churches that have requested credit on their denominational accounts.

I took the matter up with the Allocation Committee and it was their suggestion that if they are to consider that these CROP gifts are a gift to Church World Service, we should do it on the basis of the reports from C.W.S. rather than on the basis of the reports from the churches. This will, of course, mean a little delay in the item getting onto the Relief and Reconstruction books, but eventually the churches will receive their credit. At the time we get the report from C.W.S., and put the credit onto the books, I should think that we should, at that time, send a notice to your office so that you could get it onto your books.

I hope this way of handling it will work out satisfactorily all around. We want to give the churches credit for all that they do by the way of Relief gifts but at the same time, we

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

WHITHER DIXIE?

It is the writer's studied conclusion that we must neither delimit nor deify Dixie. We must insist upon a realistic appraisal of all the problems and possibilities of the South.

The National Planning Association has done just this in its current report: "New Industry Comes to the South." The report is based on a study of 88 large corporations which have located new plants in 13 southern states since the war's end. As a result, it is possible to present a report dealing directly with realities and largely free of theoretical speculation.

The committee began its work under the chairmanship of the late Senator J. Melville Broughton of North Carolina. Dr. Calvin E. Hoover of the Duke University faculty is director of research for the committee.

The report is studded with facts which are eloquent and prophetic. It reveals how new industries are coming to the South: pulp mills, steel mills, chemical plants, great oil refineries, huge rayon plants, automobile assembly units, factories making several types of machinery, food processing industries, mines, oil fields, great electric power systems—a growing diversification of the region's economy.

Many of them are types of manufacturing in which the South has been generally deficient. These new southern industries are turning out finished products, processing mineral resources, and consuming farm products other than cotton. In the committee's book on industrial location in the South there are reports on some 14 types of industries attracted to that market. One of them, for example, is sulphuric acid. Gains in consumption of sulphuric acid in fertilizer, iron, steel, chemical, paint, rayon, alcohol, petroleum refining, and other heavy consuming industries more than offset the drop in military buying after the war. Expansion of industries using forest products has been nothing short of tremendous, the report emphasizes.

Dixie weather is a boon. Many companies decided a generally warm climate would permit less expensive construction and would save on heating expenses. Absence of icy roads and snow storms attracted some plant officials. As the possibility of freezing weather is more remote in the South, many plant executives realize they can save on packing and storage.

Another gratifying thing about this report is its emphasis on the fact that industries are no longer coming to the South because of its "cheap labor supply." These executives listed three principle reasons why they came South: (1) Good markets, (2) Available materials, (3) Good labor supply. It is important to note that a good labor supply does not necessarily mean a cheap labor supply. It is explained that "the supply of labor, low labor turnover and absenteeism and satisfactory labor attitudes were more important to the companies than the South's allegedly cheap labor." There is still a labor surplus in the South owing to the closing of war plants and the mechanization of agriculture.

Does all this have any significance for the church, any relevance to the Southern Convention? It affords sound reason for optimism. It means that we are not operating in a region that is economically sterile. It means that the churches of the South may lift up their heads and look with confidence to the future. It suggests that we have not been laboring in vain down in the southern wing of our Lord's vineyard; that others will reap where we have sown. It indicates that young ministers need not indulge in self-pity on being stranded in the South. It warrants the confidence that our program of stewardship should expand rather than retract. Surely it means that we should give more diligent attention to our home missionary enterprise; that we should zealously conserve every beach-head that has been established in our spiritual warfare, that we should study anew this amazing region for home missionary opportunities and that we should speedily find ways and means of accentuating our program of church extension.

REACTIONARIES IN SMALL MINORITY AS OPPONENTS OF CHURCH MERGER

Dr. Roy C. Helfenstein, member of the Iowa State Conference Board of Directors the past three years, and member of The National Denominational Committee on Inter-Church Relations for the past several years, in commenting on the various derogatory statements appearing from time to time in the press against the Merger between the Congregational Christian denomination and the Evangelical and Reformed denomination as approved by an overwhelming majority of the State Conferences and by overwhelming majority vote at two successive meetings of the National body, the General Council, states that the opposition to the Merger expresses the sentiment of a small minority of the pastors who came into the Congregational Christian Church from other denominations for various reasons. The great majority of the pastors throughout the nation (especially those who have only Congregational Christian Church background—pastors whose entire ministry has been spent in the Congregational or Christian churches) and many of the ministers entering the Congregational Christian Church fellowship from other denominations who have caught the genius and spirit of Congregationalism in its emphasis on Christian unity, are by large majority enthusiastically supporting the promotion of the Merger. The Massachusetts Conference, where Congregationalism is the strongest, voted by the largest majority of any State Conference in favor of the Merger. The Iowa State Conference along with the majority of State Conferences also voted for the Merger.

Dr. Helfenstein states that approximately nine out of ten of the ministers opposing the Merger have come into the Congregational Christian denomination from other denominations, but others who have also come into the denomination from other denominations are strong supporters of the Merger, desiring to share the democratic principles of the Congregational Christian Fellowship with other groups. The background of both the Congregational and the Christian Churches has always been characterized by a strong emphasis on Christian Union. In the case of the former Christian Church, one of its six cardinal principles was: "The Uniting of the Followers of Christ." The very genius of both the Christian and the Congregational Church has always been freedom of thought and the open door of welcome to all believers in Christ. It is difficult to understand how any life-long members of a Congregational or of a Christian Church can possibly be opposed to the Merger. In fact it is his conviction that but very few are, says Dr. Helfenstein. The "big majority of the small minority" who oppose the Merger are people who do not have Congregational Christian background.

The Merger with the Evangelical and Reformed Churches will not affect the status of local Congregational Christian Church in any way—neither in name, property rights nor in any other way. In addition to enlarging and enriching the fellowship of churches and conferences in both groups, the Merger will enable both epenses in their great Home and denominations to reduce over-head Foreign Mission Programs by having a united program with wider outlook and increased efficiency, Dr. Helfenstein emphasizes.

He finds that the great majority of the younger men in the Congregational Christian denomination are heartily back of the Merger. Scores of the young men of the denomination who are in the numerous theological seminaries of the land have expressed themselves that they would be unable to stay in the denomination if the Merger were defeated, as they could not consistently give their lives in serving a denomination which for more than two hundred years had advocated Christian Union, but which now when given an opportunity to unite with another denomination with which it has so much in common, would refuse to practice what it has always preached. The younger ministers realize that Christian Union is the spirit of our day and that unless the churches promote a United Church, they cannot consistently ask for a United World.

missionary program and contributions to missions. The church has selected and sent out, through the American Board, three missionaries and provides the entire budget for them in addition to its regular missionary contributions.

Miss Harriet M. Summerville visited the Reidsville Church the last week in January, 1946, and sailed the next week for Angola. The Rev. and Mrs. Robert C. H. Mueller visited the church the week of August 11, 1946, and sailed for India on December 23, 1946. The church provides the entire support for these missionaries.

The Reidsville Church, with a membership of 625, has had an unusual distinction in that it is the only church in the Southern Convention thus supporting missionaries and in that it is the only church of the fellowship in the Southeast which has commissioned missionaries for the American Board. On October 25, 1944, the Rev. and Mrs. Preston S. Hinderks were commissioned in the church but for health reasons they were not permitted to go to the mission field. Mr. and Mrs. Bueller were commissioned in the Reidsville church August 11 for the American Board. Miss Summerville had already been commissioned when she visited the church.

During the past conference year the church contributed over $6,500 to missions. This is ten times as much as the church contributed annually to missions and benevolences during the same period above named.

In answer to the question, "How do you account for the missionary interest and contribution of the Reidsville church?" the Rev. Joe A. French, pastor of the church for the past eight years prior to taking up his work as pastor of the Congregational Christian Church of Lanett, Alabama, April 1, says: There are three major reasons for the development of the missionary interest in the Reidsville church. First of all, there was an undeveloped interest in the church membership. Second, missions has received its proper emphasis in the church program. Beginning in 1942 the church has been fortunate in having some of the outstanding missionary leaders of our denomination visit and speak to our people. On several occasions we have had these people with us for a few days to hold Mission Institutes in which we have presented the cause of missions to the entire church from the youngest to the oldest members. Among the many

Rev. Joe A. French and Reidsville Church

By REV. W. T. SCOTT, Superintendent.

One of the most significant pastorates in the history of our Southern Convention was that of Rev. Joe A. French at Reidsville, North Carolina, which was concluded on March 31, 1949, after eight years. On April 1 Mr. French became pastor of the First Congregational Church of Lanett, Alabama.

We of the Southern Convention were loathe to see Mr. French with his talented wife and two lovely children leave us. But after all, Mr. French was "loaned" to us by his native Alabama. It is our loss but the gain of Lanett and Alabama to have him return to his native state. Joe French was always generous and faithful in the gifts of his time and talents in the service of our church in the Southern Convention. He served as Chairman of the Board of Publications, Secretary of the Mission Board, Treasurer of the Board of Christian Education, and in many other responsibilities in the Eastern Virginia and North Carolina and Virginia Conferences in which he labored. However, it was his distinctive work in Reidsville which showed his greatest strength, and at the "farewell party" given in his honor at Reidsville in March the church expressed its appreciation and that of the Convention at large of Mr. French's significant and unselfish service. We believe the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN ought to find inspiration in the following report of the work of Joe French and the Reidsville Church during the past eight years.

Without fanfare and without spectacular promotion the First Congregational Christian Church of Reidsville, North Carolina, has come to be a wide awake and active church in many of the enterprises of the denomination, and has made for itself a place of distinction among the churches of the Southern Convention.

The church has come to be known throughout the fellowship of Congregational Christian Churches for its

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

My back bedroom window looks out upon a spacious lawn. Standing in the midst of it is a very tall tree whose branches are now bending and swaying with a load of tender, green leaves. The lawn is beautiful, and the tree is majestic. My neighbor, a blue-jay, fusses and chatters and feeds in its foliage. Lately he has been quiet. It is building time, and he must mind his own business. I suspected him, and perhaps unfairly watched him, because I thought it would be fun to watch him build his nest. Then this morning I was certain for I saw his "air-lift" in full action right in broad daylight. From my window I could not follow his flight, but I know his operations are very near the church. And I wish him good success.

As I watched him a verse from a very old sacred song came to my mind: "Yea, the sparrow hath found an house, and the swallow a nest for herself, where she may lay her young, even Thine altars, O Lord of hosts; blessed are they that dwell in Thy house they will be still (ever) praising Thee" (Psalm 84:3-4). Even the mother bird found the house of God a good place for her young. The singer added "happy are they that dwell in Thy house for they shall ever be praising Thee."

The title of this psalm says, "A psalm for the son of Korah." Now they are a family of the Levites, a tribe set apart for the service of the Lord. We read in II Chronicles 20: 19, "All Judah and the inhabitants of Jerusalem fell before the Lord, worshipping the Lord; and the Levites, the sons of Korah, stood up to praise the Lord God of Israel with a loud voice on high." Somewhere the writer of this psalm was lonely and far from God's house. Perhaps he was walking a dusty road as he made a week or a month's journey, as prophets often did in those days. His thoughts burst into song as he says: "How amiable are Thy tabernacles, O Lord of hosts! My soul longeth, yea, even fainteth for the courts of the Lord; my heart and my flesh crieth out for the living God," and then follows the beautiful verse I have quoted above.

Am I going too far to say that any home provided by the church for the homeless children is a part of God's house, and that in such house those who dwell should find "Thine altars, O Lord of Hosts;" and that they that dwell "in Thine house shall ever be praising Thee?" The divine singer poetically said that even the mother bird hath found a place to lay her young, even Thine altars! May it not be that in such a place nurtured by the prayers and love of compassionate ones that the church should take hold when there is no "mother bird" to look out for her young, and make the song come true when it says "happy are those that dwell in Thy house, for they shall be ever praising Thee"? May it not be that from among those thus dwelling in the church's house, or God's house if you will, there be many "sons and daughters of Korah" who in the years to come may "stand up to praise the Lord God of Israel"? At least the psalmist thought so!

THE CITY'S STAKE IN RURAL LIFE.

By THOMAS ALFRED TRIPP.

Population trends in America reveal some indication of the city's stake in rural areas. Children are born in the country and villages in more than sufficient numbers to keep the rural population growing at a healthy pace, while city birth rates decline below the number necessary for a steady urban population.

Farms and villages, therefore, have more people than they need. At the same time the cities are in danger of declining. City-ward migration of rural people is inevitable because of the lack of opportunities in the rural economy. Jobs in urban areas beckon them. Since the "surplus" of rural youth will eventually migrate to urban centers, the quality of rural people is a matter of great concern to American cities. If many of them come from the disadvantaged class, the city will pay the price of a citizenry suffering from rickets, intellectual poverty and spiritual illiteracy.

It is, thus, an inevitable mutual interest between rural and urban parishes. Town and country churches are interested in what the city will do to their youth who leave the farms and villages, while the city must care about the quality of people it will receive from rural communities. The city churches need to develop a program for the ambitious and often lonely rural youth who come to their communities. At the same time, rural churches have the task of preparing rural youth, not only for farm and village living but for the coming adjustment to the city. Close relations and common aims are necessary between rural and urban churches in order that their partnership in religion for youth may be most fruitful.

RELIEF & RECONSTRUCTION.

want to be sure that Church World Service has received the corresponding amount of supplies from CROP.

P. S.: In making gifts to CROP please request that credit be given your church.—W. T. S.

Churches in North Carolina will join congregations all over America to observe Rural Life Sunday this Sunday (May 22). The event is particularly appropriate for North Carolina because of its large rural population.

First observed in 1929, Rural Life Sunday is the day set apart for emphasizing the meaning of Christianity for rural life; for the invocation of God's blessing upon the seed, the fruits of the soil, and the cultivators of the earth; for the consideration of justice for agriculture and the spiritual values of rural life.

There are no better standards of judging America than by its churches and its farm population. A sound, Christian rural economy is practical, too, because it is the prime necessity for the continued progress of all America and for many parts of the world.

An outstanding example of the effectiveness of America's church-farm cooperation, for which the dividend is a sound economy, is the Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP).

Last year more than 2,120 railroad carloads of unprocessed agricultural commodities, to provide employment as well as relief, were sent from 1,500,000 farm families to the needy in 21 nations. North Carolina farmers sent approximately 57 carloads of wheat, soybeans, milk and corn, with a dollar value of approximately $115,000. Distribution of CROP commodities overseas is made through church channels to the destitute, ill and aged, regardless of race, nationality or religion.

A project like CROP is a life-giving testimonial to the spiritual values of American rural life and the meaning of Christianity for rural life as emphasized in the observance of Rural Life Sunday.

News of Elon College

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

Commencement at Elon College is always an inspirational occasion. We hope that a large number of our church people, alumni, and friends will attend the approaching commencement, May 28, 29 and 30.

There will be certain items of interest to the church and the public. The cornerstone for the new gymnasium will be laid Saturday, May 28 at high noon. We will have the largest graduating class in the history of the college. We have ordered diplomas for 114. These graduates come from many states and different sections of the country. They are a fine group of young people—well prepared for a successful beginning in life. In addition to these graduates, there are a large number of Elon students who have achieved good records in Music, Art and Commercial subjects. Many of these students will be awarded certificates as a part of the concluding service of our 59th commencement.

It is the custom of the college each commencement to confer honorary degrees upon three individuals who have attained marked success in their chosen fields and who by virtue of their character and position will reflect honor upon the college. The Honorable Kerr Scott, Governor of North Carolina, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Laws. Governor Scott is a native of North Carolina, was educated in the public schools of Alamance County and State College at Raleigh, N. C. He has always been interested in Agriculture. He has served as Alamance County Farm Agent and has been connected with almost every interest of the farm and farm life. He was State Commissioner of Agriculture for North Carolina from 1936 to 1948 when he resigned to make the race for Governor. He has made a very auspicious beginning as our States Chief Executive.

Reverend Clyde Clayton Foushee, pastor of the McLemore Avenue Presbyterian Church, Memphis, Tennessee, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity. Mr. Foushee is a native of Sanford, North Carolina, an alumnus of the college of the class of 1930, and received his Bachelor of Divinity degree from Louisville Presbyterian Seminary in 1932. Mr. Foushee is an outstanding minister of the Presbyterian Church.

Miss Lilla Belle Pitts, Professor of Music Education, Teachers College, Columbia University, will be awarded the honorary degree of Doctor of Music. It will be the first degree of this kind that the college has awarded, however, Miss Pitts is such an outstanding individual in the field of Music instruction that the college is entirely justified in recognizing her achievements with an honorary degree. For a number of years she has been connected with Columbia University as Professor of Music, has been visiting professor in more than a half dozen of the leading universities in this country and is an editor of publications in the field of Music of considerable note. She is deserving of the proposed honor and will bear the same with credit to her graduate Alma Mater.

PROSPECTS FOR 1949-50.

There has been some uncertainty about the enrollment in Elon College for the coming school year. Enrollment has been high for the past three years. There is a general decline in the enrollment of veterans in institutions throughout the country. This year, however, Elon College, instead of losing in her veterans' enrollment gained two over last year. Indications at present are that there will be a decline in our veterans' enrollment for the coming year. There will, at the same time, be an increase in the enrollment of non-veterans. In a check yesterday of the present enrollment situation at Elon College for September 1949, it was revealed that at present we have only 86 vacancies in our dormitories. To fill these vacancies we have 126 applications on hand. A number of these will not be accepted. To date, we have returned a number of paid fees and a larger number of applications that were not considered on account of low grades. These facts are given to our churches in the Southern Convention to call attention to the possibility of a repetition of previous experiences. Elon College was founded by the Christian Church to provide opportunities of higher learning for our church young people as well as for others. It is beneficial to the church and to our young people for our high school graduates to enter our own college. This appeal is made to our church and to the homes of our church to please have the high school graduates of their families apply for entrance in Elon College at the earliest possible date. Don't make it embarrassing for us when you apply and there is no room. We are anxious to have our own young people at Elon College but we cannot hold rooms for them unless we know that they are coming. It is time now to make application if you wish to enter Elon College in September. The college has had the best year in its history and is anticipating even greater success in the coming year.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Not many years ago, I was attending a great convention. A group of people arrived. They were thirsty, very thirsty. There was a water cooler in the vestibule of the church. One after the other got a cup and turned the faucet. At first a little water came and then there was none. They were thirsty but no water to quench their thirst. Week after week all through the months of the year, Elon College is needing money with which to pay salaries and current bills of various and sundry types. These financial demands come by the week and by the month. Our chief source of support is our church.

At Home and Abroad

MISSIONS IN SOUTHERN RHODESIA.

By JOHN A. REULING

In many ways Southern Rhodesia is more fortunate than most African countries. The Government has taken early steps to prevent some of the abuses and disasters that have occurred elsewhere. This is particularly true as regards conservation of soil, timber and water resources. Whites and Africans alike are required to farm in such ways as to save the soil and keep the streams from drying up. Lands which have been badly eroded in former years are being rehabilitated, and new areas being opened up are placed under proper safeguards.

The Government is also more sympathetic to the African people than in many countries. This shows itself in the substantial grants made to mission schools in all grades, in the well-built and well staffed African schools which the Government is putting up in the large cities, and in the concern that there is for housing, public health and social welfare. It was interesting to visit a young man, son of our senior pastor, who is employed by one of the large municipalities as Welfare Officer for the large African community. He is a graduate of the Jan Hofmeyr School of Social Work, founded by Ray Phillips, in Johannesburg.

Economically, too, the Africans of Southern Rhodesia are better off than in most. There are still many hardships and difficulties, but these are not as great as elsewhere. African artisans are finding general employment opportunities and wages are gradually getting better. An interesting thing to watch is the proposed political union of three countries—Northern Rhodesia, Nyassaland and Southern Rhodesia—into one country on the federal plan. Northern Rhodesia and Nyassaland safeguard the political and other rights of Africans more than Southern Rhodesia (in these countries Africans, elected by Africans, sit in Parliament). One of the burning questions with regard to the proposed union is, of course, whether it will advance or retard the progress of the Africans. Responsible European leaders of Southern Rhodesia have stated publicly that they now regard the African as having a definite place in the country, and that they regard his advancement of paramount importance. They have further stated that if the Union is brought about it must be on the basis of greater rights and opportunities for Africans. This is particularly significant in view of the present retrogressive and oppressive policies in the Union of South Africa directly to the South.

In spite of all the hopeful signs, the Africans still suffer from many disabilities. They lack proper political representation. Much that is done for them is done because it will bring economic benefit, direct or indirect, to the European section of the community rather than because of any general acceptance of the rights of the Africans themselves.

I have been very proud to note the part that the American Board and its workers have played in improving conditions for Africans throughout the whole country. A senior officer of the Government education department has publicly credited us with having done more for the development of the Africans than any other single agency. A great many teachers and artisans have been trained, and are to be found in all corners of the country, often far from our own area. Even more important is the fact that many of the government officials who have to deal with Africans have been influenced over the years by the Mission and its work, and in their own dealings with the people frequently display a fine attitude.

However, the present situation is exceedingly difficult. Our schools and our mission in general are seriously understaffed and the work is slipping in several directions. Christian forces still have a tremendous responsibility in a country like Southern Rhodesia, and if they do not prove adequate to the task of training leadership and of demonstrating in a positive way that we really believe in the application of Christianity the African people cannot be blamed if they turn away to one or other of the false "gospels" now being placed before them in such attractive form. They desperately want to develop in the Christian way and are making many sacrifices to that end. The Government that rules them is rapidly getting a greater sense of responsibility for the people, but neither of these is as yet sufficient to carry the task alone. The modest contributions of personnel and funds from the stronger American churches is still needed to provide the leadership without which the people will continue to be helpless.

I have been most gratified with a development that was started when I was here in 1946. Formerly the American missionaries formed the body that decided matters of policy and that communicated with the Board. Now a Mission Council has been formed, which includes the missionaries, the four African ordained pastors, and representatives, both men and women, of the church. I attended a session of this joint body which now handles most problems formerly handled by the Mission alone, and was much impressed with its working.

Many of you know one or the other of our East Africa group personally. The Meachams are at Chikore, doing a tremendous job, Mrs. Meacham as Mission Treasurer, and Frank in general station work, which includes the school and agricultural extension work among the Africans who live on the 23,000-acre Chikore farm. The Orners, also at Chikore, are stalwarts, Mrs. Orner devoting her time to the language study of the new missionaries, and Mr. Orner handling a large circuit of Day Schools.

At Silinda Mr. and Mrs. Bill Webb, Miss Torrence, Miss Craig, and Mrs. Haack are kept busy with the work of Mt. Silinda Institute. They have, of course, a number of African and Colonial associates. Teddy Buck has just returned to the hospital as a nurse after an absence of about five years, and you can be sure is very welcome indeed. Pat Williams is just starting her work as domestic science teacher in the Institute after a period of language study. The Mission has been without an American Board doctor since the Lawrences left, and has had a series of local medical people who have come for short periods. We now rejoice in the fact that we have Dr. and Mrs. Masters, who have also just finished their language study. The Masters are English people, who have, however, been appointed as full life missionaries by the Board. They are already making a splendid contribution and we expect much from them.

The Mission is also eagerly awaiting the arrival of Marie Bushong, now completing a special nursing course MOTHER GOES TO THE WOMAN'S MISSIONARY CONVENTION & SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

By MRS. R. A. WHITTEN.

Shall we imagine that it is Monday morning, June 13, 1949? If it were possible for us to take a peep or many peeps into communities where women live who are a part of the Southern Convention, we would find many homes astir. The family is interested. Mother is leaving for Elon. The Woman's Convention and School of Missions is to open at 2:00 p. m. this afternoon, and will continue until Wednesday noon. This is mother's "time off." She has looked forward to these three days and the family is happy that she can go.

Registration is scheduled for 2:00 p. m. There will be an inspiring worship service, reports, and the usual items of interest to be expected at the Woman's Convention. On Monday evening Timothy Chang, our own Chinese student, will be introduced. The climax of the day will come when Miss Helen Kenyon, our Moderator of the General Council, brings the address of the evening.

Tuesday brings more reports and matters of business, each one of peculiar interest to Mother because she loves the work of her church, and is one of its women whose heart is all bound up with love for the woman's work in its every phase.

The sermon to be delivered and communion service conducted by Dr. Mary Frances Thelen should bring that spiritual refreshment so welcome at the close of another busy but happy day.

Wednesday morning brings, after a worship period, more reports, each portraying a different phase of the work of the Woman's Convention and each vitally important to the whole structure. Finally, comes the installation of officers and adjournment.

Mother is ready to return home, after a very happy and helpful attendance at the Woman's Convention and School of Missions. She feels that her time has been well spent because she has learned many things. She has seen, once again, her Woman's Convention at work in session, discussing matters of interest, reporting on the work of the past, planning for the future, prayerfully considering matters concerning the building of the Kingdom at home. She has also caught a new vision of the world's need of her Christ, and of her share in helping meet that need.

Mother has also learned new methods, caught some ideas that she means to try out in her own society. She has been able, too, to share a few of her own methods with some new friends from a group that she had not known before, because this is really a time of sharing problems, ideas, and a sweet fellowship!

Mother has feasted in the fellowship of "kindred spirits" and is returning to her family and society filled with the inspiration of those happy days, helpful days.

Why not join Mother at the Woman's Convention and School of Missions—June 13-15

INFORMATION—CONVENTION AND SCHOOL OF MISSIONS.

(The following is taken from a letter recently issued by Mrs. O. H. Paris, Convention President. Please note.)

While our Constitution says that we must have elected delegates who may vote, this does not mean that only delegates may attend. The Convention and School of Missions is open to everyone. Please bring as large a delegation as possible and remember the cost is only $6.00 per person.

The date: June 13-15.

Registration: 2:00-3:00 p. m. on June 13.

The 19th Biennial Session of the Convention will open promptly at 3:00. Please, please be on time! We have a full, but interesting program. There will be many important matters of business that you will want to vote on; you will not want to miss the reports of the splendid work accomplished during the past biennium. All the information about the coming year's work will be there—plans, programs, packets, literature and so forth. Pilgrim Press will have a display of books for your convenience.

The evening sessions will be full of inspiration. As you know, our first and only woman moderator will speak on Monday night, June 13, and Dr. Mary Frances Thelen of Lynchburg will be the Tuesday night speaker.

Dr. and Mrs. Smith will entertain following the Monday evening session, when everyone will have the opportunity to meet and know our Miss Kenyon. On Tuesday evening after the service, Dr. and Mrs. Scott will hold open house. You had a big part in making it possible for the Convention to have the new home for our Superintendent, and I am sure you will want to share in this house of fellowship.

Of course there will be vespers on the campus; there will be fun, too, as you mingle with old friends and make new ones.

MINUTES OF 1949 SANFORD-ASHEBORO SPRING RALLY.

The Sanford - Asheboro District Spring Rally was held March 31 at the Pleasant Grove Church near Bennett, North Carolina.

The meeting convened at 10:30 o'clock, opening with a hymn, "The Morning Light Is Breaking" with the morning session in charge of Mrs. Boroughs, Superintendent of the Asheboro District.

Mrs. Joe Vestall of the Asheboro Church conducted the worship service that was very inspiring—her subject was "Peace of Mind."

Roll call of the Societies in both Districts with three Societies in the Sanford District and fifteen in the Asheboro District responding with reports on the various activities being conducted.

Our District Superintendents reported their success and drawbacks they had encountered, but all societies affirmed their support that before another rally they would have no drawbacks to report.

Committees were appointed as follows:

Sanford District

Nominating—Mrs. C. C. Dollar, Mrs. Jack Campbell and Mrs. J. M. Riddle.

Asheboro District

Nominating—Mrs. Walter Hall, Mrs. B. H. Lowdermilk and Mrs. Lacy Presnell.

Place—Mrs. Oscar Porter.

Courtesy—Mrs. R. T. Grissom and Mrs. Harry Stewart.

Mrs. Kenneth Register made a short talk on "The Work with the Cradle Roll."

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

IT HAPPENS TOO OFTEN.

Several years ago a young Catholic priest came to our parsonage much distressed. He told us that some children from their parochial school, which is a block from our church, had broken into our church and seriously damaged it. We hastened to view the mess. It was a mess. We have a church orchestra and they practice every week and give monthly concerts. The stands and chairs in the pit were thrown out, a double bass violin and an old cello were badly damaged. Our offering plates were ruined and things generally messed up and scattered. It was kind of the priest to tell us—we wouldn't have known who did it, otherwise. It was done by girls—girls in the seventh grade. They took two little boys about six years old with them, and the boys told. Their parents made good the damage.

A month ago I read in the Richmond newspaper about someone entering the Baptist Building and causing a lot of trouble. No money was taken, things were thrown around, boxes of clothing and toys packed for overseas were literally destroyed, and mimeographed ink was poured over files and valuable papers. The police caught two Negro boys who confessed "We were having fun."

More recently I read an account of Freemason Street Baptist Church being visited by vandals, the name we call people who break in to destroy. When I lived in Portsmouth I sometimes went to vespers at this church and it is one I admire. Dr. Melton has been pastor there for many years and when he looked at the wreckage he said, "I am sick of heart." Clothing was being made for the poor, it was ripped; food in the kitchen was opened and emptied on the walls, pianos, etc.

It happens too often. Not only is this unchristian, it is un-American. As the teacher of eight little boys, I know that beating on things and throwing things is a wonderful pastime. But so far we have found enough old tin cans, sticks and drums. I haven't heard if the people who damaged the church in Norfolk were caught, but I suppose they, too, were having a good time."

Any abandoned building, any unoccupied house, school at vacation time, is a target for rocks and stones. But why? I do not have the answer. But I do know that I was taught to respect other people's property, private and public, and I do know that the children whom I teach shall hear the same words from me.

The sound of breaking glass is not pleasant to my ears. I think of the trouble broken glass can cause: cuts, tire punctures and other related troubles.

Our neighborhood was visited a few days ago by another set of vandals, uncaught, who broke church bulletin boards, street lights and doors in private homes. Having fun!

But it happens too often.

I think the answer lies with us all: parents, children and teachers. As parents let's be a little more lenient about noise and "whooping it up" in the house. As boys and girls let's remember that we have much to lose and not much to gain by willfully breaking other people's things. As teachers let's help our children to have a healthy respect for the house of God. A firm hand will not hurt and it may help.

HOME PARTIES.

By MABEL-RUTH JACKSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Mr. Kennan, the plumber, came from the kitchen, where he had been making repairs, and stopped by the dining-room door. The table was decorated with colored crepe-paper runners. Dainty paper cups, filled with tiny gumdrops, were at each plate, along with odd-shaped place cards.

"Having a party?" he asked.

"Just for the family," I told him, smiling.

"A birthday?"

"Yes—the birthday of our State."

And, because he looked interested and because I knew he had small children of his own, I told him of the plan I had devised and was carrying out.

"My youngsters, like all children, love parties," I began. "But they always used to be fretful and tired after one, and I had trouble calming them down. Then I conceived the idea of having quiet little parties for them here at home—for extra occasions—that would please but not excite them."

"Say, I wish you'd tell me more about it!" Mr. Keenan exclaimed. "I've heard my wife say she dreaded parties because the children were so unmanageable afterwards."

"I find now—that when an outside party does come—my boys take it much more quietly," I said. They're—well, you might say, conditioned.

"I had to hunt for occasions other than the well-known ones in order to give them a party once a month. Valentine's Day and April Fool's Day, also Washington's and Lincoln's Birthdays were easy. I looked up other anniversaries—Flag Day, Arbor Day, Columbus Day and birthdays of persons of note who are not nationally honored.

"This month, as you see, we're celebrating the day our State was admitted into the Union. Every State has a motto and a flower—this helps."

Mr. Keenan looked at the place cards. Maps of the State," he remarked.

"Yes, my older son made these from drawing paper, and my kindergarten boy colored them and cut them out. They needed very little assistance from me."

"Say, that's pretty good!" Mr. Keenan said admiringly.

"The cards aren't very even, but that's not important. The children are so proud of their work they can hardly wait until their father comes home so they can show it to him. I think it's good for the boys to find that things they have learned at school can be put to practical use."

Mr. Keenan nodded approvingly, "You're right about that."

"There's another benefit from these parties," I added. "The children are the guests. We encourage them to talk, but in turn; that is, they learn not to interrupt but to listen carefully to what the other person is saying. This evening their father and I will tell them some simple, interesting facts about their home State and we shall be prepared to answer any questions they may ask."

"Isn't that a rather large order?" grinned Mr. Keenan. "I'd have to study up."

"Oh, believe me, we do, too," I laughed. "Later we may sing our State song and read a poem or story connected with some incident in the State's history or about a famous native son."

"You know," said Mr. Keenan heartily, "I'm all for this! It seems a grand way to get the youngsters to like to stay at home. I'm going to pass the idea on to my wife. Thanks a lot for explaining it to me."

Handbook to Survey Churches
Throughout the World—

To help the Christian churches carry out their world-wide task, two British churchmen, Mr. Kenneth Grubb and Mr. E. J. Bingle, are compiling a World Christian Handbook due for English publication the end of April.

"The task of the Christian Churches," write the editors, "is a world task or else they lose their raison d'être. To define that task in the context of the contemporary setting, to seek to interpret significant developments, to survey the world as a whole in the setting of the coming of God's Kingdom, to provide statistical material which may throw light on the size of the task, these are the purposes which a handbook of world Christianity must seek to serve."

War-Orphaned Missions

Described by Latourette—

"World Christian Community in Action" is the title of a booklet which briefly related the history of World War II and orphaned missions in Europe and Asia. It is published by Kenneth Scott Latourette and W. Riehley Hogg, under the auspices of the International Missionary Council, and is a short, vivid report of the rescue and maintenance of many "orphaned missions" whose existence was threatened by the events of war, and who are completely cut off from their home churches.

Copies of the survey may be obtained from the International Missionary Council, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York, N. Y.

China . . . "And All That Believed Were Together and Had All Things
Common" (Acts 11:14)—

A group of Chinese refugees are building a model Christian socialist village at P'ing Xao, near Hangchow. The moving spirit behind the project is H. C. Maa, secretary of the East China Christian Education Association. He started the project after refugees from Shantung began pouring into Shanghai. He believes that if the experiment works "it may be the Christian answer to Communism."

A gift of 600 bags of flour from the China branch of Church World Service provided funds to help them to start. The refugees themselves, a selected group of 58 heads of families, were each required to contribute three to five silver dollars as an indication of their interest and faith in the project.

When completed, the village will be a community of 250. There are thirty persons among them who already are Christians, and all the others have pledged themselves to receive Christian training. All have renounced personal ambitions and have agreed to share everything.

Amharic Bible To Be Revised By Ethiopian Church—

A complete revision of the Amharic Bible has been launched in Addis Ababa. The project was initiated by Emperor Haile Selassie, who approached the British and Foreign Bible Society to participate in cooperation with the Ethiopian Church.

The revision will require three years for the New Testament and four years for the Old Testament. The Amharic Bible contains books not included in the Bible used by western churches (for example, the apocryphal Book of Enoch).

One of the main reasons for the present revision is that the Amharic language has changed considerably during recent years, whereas the Bible language has remained more or less static. The present revision is the third one undertaken. The first was accomplished in 1840, when the Bible was translated from Gi'is into Amharic by an Ethiopian monk. The second was made in 1886 by a member of the Church Mission, London.

Members of the Commission appointed for this revision will undertake distant journeys into the provinces to make microfilm copies of ancient church manuscripts and docu-

Presbyterians Establish New International Quarterly—

The Presbyterian World, a new quarterly of the Presbyterian World Alliance, has been established at Geneva, Switzerland. The editor is Pastor Marcel Pradervand, general secretary of the Alliance.

Central emphasis of the international publication will be evangelism. "Our most urgent need is as it was in the Primitive Church, to evangelize in the widest sense of the word," writes Editor Pradervand. "But the basis of evangelism is a joyous possession of the Gospel of Jesus Christ, and an assurance that in Him, and in Him only, our life finds its sense and its fulfillment."

The president of the Presbyterian World Alliance, the Very Rev. Edward J. Hagen, says, in his word of dedication to the periodical: "From this sense of our fundamental unity in our Lord there sprang our unanimous conviction that the work of our Alliance ought not only to be maintained but to proceed with even greater zeal and devotion. To this end the plan for the reorganization of our Secretariat was unanimously adopted."

"Our office," President Hagen continued, "has now been opened in Geneva, which is becoming more and more the headquarters of all ecumenical organizations. It is good that our office should be in intimate contact with kindred bodies, especially with the World Council of Churches, and at the same time readily accessible to our constituent churches."

The first number of the Presbyterian World includes contributions from Dr. Visser 't Hooft, Karl Barth, Cumming Thom, W. S. Robertson, W. H. Hamilton and W. F. McElroy.

Copies may be ordered from the General Secretariat of the Presbyterian World Alliance, 17 Route de Maignou, Geneva, Switzerland.

THE TREASURER WRITES CON-CERNING CHRISTIAN SUN
SUBSCRIPTIONS.

If THE CHRISTIAN SUN is to continue, there must be an increase of subscribers. Someone has already started working. The past two months more money has come in on subscriptions than any month since May, 1947, when we received a total of $600.80 on subscriptions. In March, 1949, we received $588.45 and in April, 1949, we received $564.30. Surely we do not want this to drop during May.

Our editor has been busy securing some advertising and more has come to The Board of Publications from this source during the last three months than during the last three years. But this is still not enough and some of our readers may like to lend our faithful editor a helping hand.

Today, May 11, 1949, The Board of Publications has paid Central Publishing Company, printers of THE SUN, through February, 1949. The editor's expense account is paid up to date. Bills for printing THE SUN in March and April are at hand and total $1,434.85. At the moment we have less than $100 to pay for these two months, though some Boards and Institutions owe the Board of Publications a little money from January until today. This reveals our need for more subscribers and the cooperation of all.

Sunday School Lesson

WATCHING AND PRAYING IN GETHSEMANE.

LESSON IX—MAY 29, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Watch and pray that ye not enter into temptation; the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak.—Mark 14:38.

LESSON: Mark 14:32-52; Luke 22:39-54.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 6:1-8.

They had just left the "Upper Room" and were on their way to Gethsemane when Jesus suddenly informed the disciples that that very night they would be "offended" because of Him, and would desert Him. But Simon Peter quick, impulsive, confident as usual, quickly replied that even though all the others might be "offended" because of Him, he would stick by Him. The Big Fisherman knew not what he was saying. Even before the cock would crow in the morning, he would thrice deny His Lord. Thus does pride often go before a fall. Thus should one take heed when he thinketh that he standeth, lest he fall. Thus should one take care, lest in casting doubts on others, he be condemning himself.

A Decisive Battlefield.

Gethsemane was one of the world's greatest and most decisive battlefields. Indeed no other battlefield compares with it in the significance of the critical issue involved in the battle that was fought there. For in Gethsemane what might be called "the will of the moment" came into conflict with the full commitment of Jesus to the will of God, and great issues were at stake. Should He go through with the ordeal that lay before Him? Should He choose the easier way? Should He at the last minute try to save Himself and thus forfeit His ability to save others? Should He go to the Cross with all the agony of the flesh, and even worse the agony of the spirit, or should He decide to compromise? Should He turn back now, or should He go straight ahead, no matter what was the cost?

These are not idle or academic questions. Jesus had it within His own power to make the decisions. He could have compromised. He could have turned back. He could have refused to drink the cup. This needs to be said again. He Himself said that He had power to lay down His life, and He had power to take it again. Gethsemane would mean but little if there had not been the element of personal choice in it, if Jesus could not have made His own choice. The only compulsion in it was the inner compulsion of His own character and the consecration of His own will. God did not make Jesus go to the Cross. Jesus chose to go to the Cross.

A Report from the Battlefield.

We have the report from the battlefield, given by the evangelists in varying forms and with varying emphases. Some of it comes from eyewitnesses, the disciples themselves—how they went into the Garden, how eight of the disciples were left behind as Jesus and James and John and Peter went deeper into the place, and how even these three were left behind as the Master went "a little farther, about a stone's throw," so that He was alone in that fateful hour so far as human companionship was concerned. But a part of the report must have come from Jesus Himself, for the record states that the disciples fell asleep while the Master was in His agony of prayer. He perhaps told them later about How He had asked the Father three times that if it were possible, the "cup" might pass from Him. They may have heard something of what He had said as He prayed, and they evidently saw something of the agony of His spirit as His sweat became as it were great drops of blood. But they could not and did not enter intimately into that significant, solitary, soul-searching hour. Like everybody, Jesus had to go to Gethsemane alone. But beyond the mystery of that great event, is the fact that in Gethsemane our Lord Jesus Christ fought a good fight and won the victory, held true to God's will for His life, and found strength and sustaining grace for the ordeal that confronted Him.

The report from the battlefield reveals several interesting and suggestive things. There is, of course, the lesson so plainly shown that like every other human being, Jesus craved companionship and friendship in critical hours. The true man would share both his sorrows and his joys with others. Our Lord took His disciples with Him into Gethsemane, both because He wanted them to guard against sudden mob violence and the disruption of His immediate plans for His tryst with the Father, but also because He wanted them near Him during His ordeal and agony.

Then there is the truth that after all, we have to go to our Gethsemane alone. The eight went part of the way, the three went farther, but at last Jesus went still farther and fought His fight alone. Even though loved ones and friends go with us even into Gethsemane, at long last we have to come to grips with our inner battles alone. Others may help and do help, but the issue rests ultimately with us.

And of course there is the sad experience of the disciples as they fell asleep even in His hour of need. How often do we "let our Lord down" when He expects us to stand by Him and for Him. After all we but dimly understand or apprehend the compassion or concern of God for His suffering, sorrowing, sinning children. We all too often sleep through the great emergencies of human history, we are slow of mind and dull of heart even in hours like Gethsemane.

Gethsemane speaks eloquently of the spirit of true prayer and petition. We have a right to present our petitions to the Father. We have a right to ask Him for things for ourselves and for others. But we never pray aright or in the right spirit until and unless in word or in spirit we say with Jesus, "nevertheless not my will by thine be done." Only prayer offered in accord with His will is acceptable prayer. Gethsemane shows us prayer at its best and its highest.

And what about prayer, answered and unanswered. In one sense, and in a very real sense, Jesus did not get an answer to His prayer. He prayed that the cup might pass from Him if it were possible, but the cup did not pass from Him—He drank it to the last bitter dregs. In this sense He did not get an answer to His prayer. But He got an answer in that He found grace and strength to do and to endure as He went forward in the Father's will. Luke's words "and there appeared an angel unto Him from heaven, strengthening Him" deal with a fact and not a fancy. He got an answer to His prayer in the sense that He understood what the Father's will was, and found grace to do His will. This is the meaning of prayer at its best.

JUNIOR HIGH CAMP.

July 10-16, 1949.

Boys and girls of our churches in North Carolina will have the privilege of attending the Junior High Camp at Crabtree Camp, between Durham and Raleigh, July 10-16. This camp will be for boys and girls 12, 13 and 14 years of age or who are in the 7th, 8th or 9th grades in school.

The program of the Junior High Camp will revolve about the general theme: "Learn of Me." The required course for all campers is, "And you shall live," consisting of adventures in personal religious living. Other courses are as follows: "Our Youth Fellowship," "A Look at Missions," "How Well Do You Know Yourself," and possibly one on "Symbols of Our Church."

The events of the day shall consist of Morning Watch, songs at breakfast, thinking together in small discussion groups, morning swim, songs at dinner, rest, working at one's hobby or special interest such as handicraft, the camp newspaper, learning to swim, recreation, first aid and dramatics, swimming, supper, vespers on the hill, an evening's fun, "Family Hour" in each cabin, taps!

Leaders of the Junior Camp are to be announced shortly. Most of these leaders have served in camps before and are well prepared for their tasks.

Besides the leaders, the camp is large enough to accommodate only 50 or 55 campers. Churches in North Carolina should begin now to plan to get their young people of Junior High age to the camp. The cost for the period to each camper is $10.00 plus small fee for insurance. Miss Melva Foster, Elon College, N. C., is the registrar for the Camp.

who have come our way have been such outstanding personages as Miss Angie Crew, Dr. Ruth Seabury, Rev. and Mrs. Leonard J. Christian, Dr. George W. Shepherd, Rev. Charles L. Storrs, Rev. G. E. Lindquest, Dr. Merlin W. Ennis, Dr. Albert W.

Palmer, Dr. Ralph Shrader and Miss Pattie Lee Coghill. The pastor has given proper attention in his ministry to the subject of missions.

"The third element contributing to the missionary growth is the part that Christian Stewardship has played in the program and ministry of the church. Stewardship and tithing have been given their proper place in the preaching and educational program of the church."

While emphasizing missions the church has not neglected other aspects of a total church program. The church paid off a debt in 1941 which had been lingering along for several years and during these years has spent several thousand dollars, some $10,000 in improving the church plant. Four classrooms have been provided for the growing Sunday school and more rooms are needed now for that purpose. Last summer the church started a campaign for funds with which to build an addition to the building and provide more classrooms. A new oil burning heating system has been installed in the church building. A three-manual pipe organ is now being installed in the church, along with chimes, and will be ready for use shortly. Miss Peggy Burdell, a graduate of Greensboro College in music, has been employed as organist and choir director.

The young people of the church seem to be getting more and more into the spirit of the church program. In addition to their work in the Young People's Department, in the Church School, Pilgrim Fellowship, Young People's Choir, and Missionary Society, they share in the work of the church and more and more of them are attending college. For three years in the beginning of the pastorate of Mr. French there was not a student in college from the church, but in recent years many of the young people are going to college, with seventeen in college this year. Two of these young people have prepared themselves for full time Christian service and others are looking forward to this work. Miss Helen Collins is now Director of Christian Education in a Baptist Church in Marion, Ohio. Clyde L. Fields is finishing his work at Elon College and is serving as student pastor of two of our rural churches.

Undergirding and supporting the program of the Reidsville Church has been the excellent work of organizing the church for its work. The Sunday school has been organized into departments and the classes graded and increased. The General Superintendent of the Sunday school boasts that he has the most faithful officers and teachers that one could wish for. The Christian Workers Library provides reading for all interests with emphasis on good novels, instruction and inspiration. The library is open every Sunday for lending and returning books. The annual Vacation Bible School and the Pastor's Training Class as well as an educational program on the part of the pastor to provide information and instruction on the Congregational Christian Fellowship in the church. The Woman's Auxiliary is a very active and influential organization of the church and promotes the missionary and other interests of the church through monthly meetings of its circles. For several years the Woman's Auxiliary has been publishing a Program Guide in which an outline of the year's work for the circles is given, and a program for each monthly meeting is printed. On the list of officers for all the church organizations of the church are almost 200 different individuals who feel their responsibility for carrying forward the work of the Reidsville Church.

Because of the emphasis on Christian Stewardship, the church has not had any difficulty with finances. For every project and work the money comes in without pressure or promotion. The church has now some $12,000 in its treasury for current items.

at our Hospital down in Durban, and Bill Barker, who is to take charge of the industrial work. Bill and Marie are to be married shortly after Bill, who is now on the water, lands next month, so the Mission will have a new family.

This particular Africa trip is beginning to run out, with only one more country to visit. To be sure, I shall return via Angola, spending a second very brief period there. On the trip down it was impossible, because of distances and the season of the year, for our missionaries to assemble, so I am planning on getting back there for the last few days of their annual Mission Meeting.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Dr. John G. Truitt, pastor for the past sixteen years of the Suffolk Christian Church, Suffolk, Virginia, has been elected Superintendent of the Orphanage—you have heard the good news, no doubt.

The Board of Trustees is more than happy that he has consented to accept this position. The chairman, who has given unstintingly of his time during the last few months in the search for the right person to fill Mr. Johnston's place and who at the same time has carried on the work at the institution, is not only satisfied but very jubilant over this announcement.

All of you know Dr. Truitt—the fine person that he is, his splendid family and the work he has done. The Board is confident that the Orphanage will go forward with him as its head. There is a big work to be done there, and Dr. Truitt is equal to the task.

Several letters have come to the substitute writer of the Orphanage News recently, and their encouragement has been most welcome.

One letter carries this paragraph: "One of the drawbacks to the Orphanage is the belief of all too many people that the finances of the Orphanage are in excellent condition, and that no special contributions are needed. As a matter of fact, I have heard preachers express that very sentiment, and it certainly delays progress at that fine institution."

This, it seems, is a sad but true statement. Many of our churches show very little interest in their orphanage. One cannot but help feeling that it is perhaps due to an ignorance of true facts. Of course, the $64 question is: Why are they ignorant?

This institution has a wonderful opportunity to build for our church. It is the responsibility of our church. If you were interested enough to learn about its needs, you would know how woefully lacking it is in many respects. If you don't know, why don't you?

Dr. Truitt is going to need your interest and your help. Let us hope that every church in the Southern Convention will inform itself and help in this big job.

SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON.

There is a note of comfort and challenge in this sublime story. How tender, how patient, how understanding the Master is in His attitude toward His sleeping disciples. His gentleness ought to make us great, His goodness ought to make us better.

Gethsemane tells us that we can win victories in advance. "Rise up, let us go" said our Lord. He had already met the enemy and He had won the victory. We are to watch as well as to pray concerning temptation. Forwarned does not always mean forarmed. But it can mean that. And a little thought and much prayer in advance will win many a battle that otherwise might be lost.

In golden youth, when seems the earth, a summer land of singing mirth,
When souls are glad and hearts are light, and not a shadow lurks in sight,
We do not know it, but there lies, somewhere veiled under evening skies,
A garden each must sometime see.
Gethsemane, Gethsemane,
Somewhere his own Gethsemane.

All those who journey, soon or late, must pass within the garden's gate;
Must kneel alone in darkness there, and battle with some fierce despair.
God pity those who cannot say, "Not mine, but Thine," who only pray, "Let this cup pass" and cannot see, the purpose in Gethsemane.
Gethsemane, Gethsemane,
God help us through Gethsemane.

NEWS OF ELON COLLEGE.

We knock at the door of the church and are admitted. We attempt to turn on the faucet that we may have money with which to satisfy the claims of the college. Sometimes money comes in a large sum. At other times it is a mere trickle. This week, there isn't any. We turn the faucet but nothing comes to help meet our needs. If our Sunday schools and churches could be put in the position of financing the college, they would not hesitate to make an effort and to see that that effort is successful. We regret that there are no receipts to report this week but we are confidently looking to next week for a very fine report. The college is always grateful for the church's assistance. Previously reported $2,593.23.

CHARLES DICKENS AND THE BIBLE.

To his youngest son, who went to Australia in 1868, Charles Dickens wrote: "I need not tell you that I love you dearly and am very, very sorry in my heart to part with you. I have put a New Testament among your books, because it is the best Book that ever was, or ever will be known to the world. As your brothers have gone away, one by one, I have written to each such words as I am now writing to you, entreating them all to guide themselves by this Book. Only one thing more—Never abandon the practice of private prayer—I know the comfort of it."

In Memoriam

JONES.

Our Heavenly Father, Who doeth all things well, saw fit, on February 17, 1949, to call to her heavenly home our beloved co-worker, Mrs. Brock D. Jones.

She was a woman of fine Christian character, a sweet and generous nature, and was loved by all who knew her. We shall always cherish her memory and try to emulate her fine example of Christian living.

She will be missed, not only in Holy Neck Congregational Christian Church and the community but throughout the Eastern Virginia Conference in which she had held offices at different times.

Therefore, be it resolved:

1. That in her death we have lost a faithful and loyal member.
2. That we are grateful for what her life has meant to us as individuals and also for what it has meant to those whom she loved and served.
3. That while we shall miss her wise counsel and her presence among us, we will be consoled by the thought that our loss is her eternal gain.
4. That we extend our heartfelt sympathy to her devoted family who ministered to her so faithfully during her illness and pray God's blessings upon them.
5. That a copy of these resolutions be sent to family, a copy to The Christian Sun, and a copy placed on the records of the Missionary Aid Society.

Mrs. J. O. DAVIDSON,
Mrs. W. J. NORFLEET,
Mrs. L. B. GRICE,

RICE.

Deacon Robert L. Rice of Hebron Church, Nelson, Virginia, passed away on Tuesday, April 19, 1949, after an illness of one week. Funeral services were conducted at his home on Thursday, April 21, by his pastor, Rev. Mark W. Andes, and a former pastor, Dr. C. E. Newman. Burial was in the family cemetery.

The church and community feel a great loss in the passing of Brother Rice. He was a Christian gentleman, a loyal churchman, a devoted husband and father, and a noble citizen. He was a man of sound judgment, and his counsel was sought by his church. He became a member of Hebron early in life.

He is survived by Mrs. Rice, two daughters, Miss Myra Rice of Nelson, Va., and Mrs. Jordan Bowen of Williamsburg, Va., and by two sons, Kent Rice of Nelson, Va., and Gracie Rice of Clarksville, Va.

DISTRICT RALLY MINUTES.

In the absence of Mrs. Carl Key, Mrs. Lester told about literature for children.

Visitors were recognized by the host minister, Mr. Presnell.

Mrs. Lester introduced our speaker, Miss Elizabeth McGuffie, who brought to us an inspiring message on the where, why and how in Mission Education.

An offering was taken to be used in the Shaowu Mission Project. This amount was $16.34.

Mrs. Kennedy, our newly elected District Superintendent, presided during the afternoon session and the program was started with the singing of "O Master Workman of the Race," followed by prayer by Rev. C. C. Dollar.

Mr. Clyde Fields made a short talk on a Layman's Evangelistic Clinic of Men and Women meeting together in fellowship.

Mrs. Lester, our President, gave us a summary of things not reported by the Societies at Roll Call. Friendly Service, World Day of Prayer and Thank Offering and asked that we invite people from other churches to our meetings.

Dr. Lester made a very interesting talk, explaining where our mission dollar goes.

Mrs. Sloan of Elon College gave us her "Impressions of Puerto Rico" that she observed in her visit there during the Christmas holidays.

MRS. W. E. CARL.

CHRISTIAN TEMPLE (NORFOLK).

It is a very real pleasure to report that the Women's Missionary Society of the Christian Temple has had a busy, pleasant and profitable year. By doing the things an active society should, we expect to reach the required standard as a natural result. We have stressed going the second mile rather than "just reaching" the goal.

We have tried to have each program brief, interesting, and different, with special emphasis upon some phase of our own work.

In November, the Thank Offering service was combined with World Community Day. The program was made especially interesting by personal messages from our missionaries in Shaowu.

An evening meeting was held in February, when Mrs. J. Frank Morgan brought a great message on our Foreign Mission Study, and present-day conditions in China. For this meeting we had as our guests the missionary groups from three of our nearby churches. A delightful social hour followed the meeting.

The World Day of Prayer was observed with the other churches in Norfolk. Probably the best program since the organization was given. The attendance was large, and the offering generous.

Thirty-one of our women attended the District Rally, which was held at Berea (Norfolk) on April 5.

The May meeting was outstanding. Mrs. T. Roy Jarratt of the First Methodist Church here was with us. She has made an intensive study of our Geographical Frontiers, and as we listened to her marvelous store of information on this subject, we felt it was a great and fitting climax to our Home Study for the year.

In June there will be an evening with pictures on our Foreign Work, and a talk by Mr. Young on "The Greatest Missionary of All."

Once each quarter, we have found it helpful to have a covered dish luncheon, with the meetings a bit more informal around the tables.

A forward step, and one of the highlights of the year, has been the organization of the younger women, who work, into a group called the Pilgrim Guild. They meet the fourth Monday evening of each month, having splendid missionary programs, and a delightful social hour. We are pleased with the interest shown, and the progress they have made.

The success of any organization depends upon the faithfulness and loyalty of its members. We feel indebted to Mrs. Peter Young, a skilled musician, who has been our pianist for four years, having been absent only a few times when out of the city. To our President, Mrs. A. B. Jarvis, we are greatly indebted. She has not missed a regular, special, or even a committee meeting since taking office two years ago.

While there is satisfaction in having met all requirements, and doing some things which were not required, we have vain regrets, and feel very humble knowing few of us have measured up to the great responsibilities of the Church Woman of today.

"Where Is That Good-for-Nothing Indian?"

By REV. HAROLD W. CASE

Often we hear someone repeat that saying of fifty years ago, "The only good Indian is a dead Indian" and again "Indians have no ambition, they live only for the day and never look to the future," etc., all of which goes to show how little the white race has come to know the American Indian.

Listen: On January 5 with a blizzard raging, Ted Baker crossed from Independence some twenty miles away and just about shoveled his way to Elbowoods with a truck of wheat. He was heading for Halliday where he wanted to get it cleaned and be ready for spring's work. It took him seven hours to come twenty miles, and twelve miles from Elbowoods, on his way to Halliday, he had to turn back. He came into the Mission after ten at night asking if he could put his truck into the shed, which, of course, was granted. The next day he tried again and finally got through and was on his way home before dark. One might say that Ted could have put it off until later in the spring but Independence is south of the Big Missouri and west of the Little Missouri River which means crossing is not always certain, especially now since the Ft. Peck Dam has been built, often they have let water out to make up for the shortage of water at Omaha for navigation purposes. Already this year when the ice was perfectly safe for crossing, the side water began to build up at a high rate, which was caused by this practice of drawing on the Ft. Peck Dam supply. Already another Indian lad had lost his horse and saddle this year and came very near losing his life. So Ted reasoned that he had better not wait too long.

Another Indian, Bob Fox, who is a minister, is working on the farm for $100 per month in order that he might be able to help with the church work on Sundays. When possible he and I go out to stations together.

And more — Of last year's high school graduating class of twelve, two joined the army, two went to work (one on his father's farm and one at Garrison Dam), and eight went on to college. Besides these there are a dozen more in college or nurses' training.

Did I hear someone say "An Indian can't be trusted?" A merchant in Halliday, North Dakota, gave me this unsolicited information, "We have done business with the Indians for thirty years. We have never sent them a bill and we have never lost a cent. Every account has been settled."

Some years ago I was soliciting for funds for the Shell Village Church and, of course, went to the merchants from whom our people had made most of their purchases. Meeting with success for the most part, yet one instance always stands out in my memory. The greeting I received from the butcher was, "Not a cent from me. I have lost too much money. I have a whole pile of charge slips, which I can never collect. No, not a cent. Good day!" My reply was to the effect that if he would let me go over the slips and pick out four accounts for which I would give him a receipt for the contribution, I would proceed to collect the accounts. This he agreed to, but when I made the selection and was tendering the receipt to him he changed his mind and took the slips back, knowing that he was in error for the most part. Time is not such an important factor in the Indian thinking, but he knows his indebtedness and will eventually meet it.

Father, Son and "The Sun"

By REV. W. J. ANDES

Mr. E. W. Neville of our Chapel Hill Church wrote the minister of our Winston-Salem Church that his son, W. S. Neville, and his wife were living in Winston-Salem. He sent the address. The son lives in a new development where the streets are named but few are marked by street signs, and Luther Street was not marked. After discovering the street's approximate location, this minister rode along until he thought he had the right place. Before he even stopped the car, he could see The Christian Sun on the mailbox rack. He knew this was the place. The son and wife soon returned home from work and a delightful visit was had with this fine couple.

This father, Mr. E. W. Neville, sees to it that The Sun follows his children. Thus the home church still has a contact with young people moving away. Perhaps there are other churches and other fathers that will seek out young people who have moved from their midst and share The Sun with them. There should be other fathers who will write to the ministers of our churches telling them of children living in their city or near their church. Thanks to Mr. Neville for doing both.

Dollar, Elon College, delivered the sermon; the charge of the pastor was given by Dean D. J. Bowden of Elon College, and the charge to the people was given by Superintendent Wm. T. Scott. The Reidsville choir rendered special music for the occasion. The church was filled for this service and following the service a period of fellowship was enjoyed by the congregation in the social rooms of the church. We anticipate for Mr. Humphries and the Reidsville Church a happy and fruitful work together.

PEN PORTRAITS OF THE DISCIPLES OF CHRIST.

XII. Judas Iscariot.

By SAMUEL LAWRENCE JOHNSON,
Pastor, Park Manor Church,
Chicago, Illinois.

All of the other disciples of Jesus were men of Galilee. Judas Iscariot was a Judean. The surname means "man of Kerioth" and it is quite possible that this fact of his having come from a different part of the country than the rest might have some influence in preventing full sympathy of the rest. However, the others paid tribute to his ability by making him treasurer of their little company.

His life previous to his call like that of the others is hidden from us. About the only source which makes any reference to his early life is the "Arabic Gospel of the Infancy" which makes Judas, the boy, a demoniac, and indicates that the demon took flight when Judas came into the presence of the boy, Jesus.

Whatever his faults he must have had some special abilities otherwise Jesus would not have chosen him as one of His intimates. But when it came time for him to make a choice between Jesus and some good hard cash, he chose the money; making him not too different from many of us.

Judas like Simon is thought by some authorities to have been a Zealot and to have betrayed Jesus in order to encourage Jesus to resort to force to protect himself and thus give cause for his followers to raise up against their overlord. Whatever his reason after he had done that which he could not undo he greatly regretted his deed and would like to have made amends. This of course was impossible and he ended his own life.

Life is a glass given to us to fill; a busy life is filling it with as much as it can hold; a hurried life has had more poured into it than it can contain.—William Adams Brown.

The Christian Sun

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.
A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

DR. JOHN G. TRUITT AND THE CHRISTIAN SUN.*

As Chairman of the Board of Publications and writer of the Suffolk Letter, Dr. Truitt has sustained an intimate relationship with The Christian Sun for lo these number of years. Having put his hand to the journalistic plow and his fingers to the pen, he has never desisted nor turned back. His counsel has ever been: "Go forward." His virile messages have given strength to the publication. His whimsical observations have even made farmers' tobacco chewing a more thoughtful as well as more satisfying experience. And when he writes in a reminiscent mood, we can just visualize the "back-homers" taking off their shoes and settling down in the Kosy Kitchen Korner to enjoy Cousin John's Suffolk Letter.

Yes, his writing has been a dependable feature. Out of a full and busy life has he written. Evidently he has not felt that it was a useless service, or that it was beneath his dignity. His ministry has been magnified thereby, and his weekly column has given stability and readability to our publication.

Iconoclasts, like the poor, are with us always. Now the editor has not agreed with those who insisted that we "cut out the Suffolk Letter." (We have it in writing!) He has stoutly resisted and held at bay those who would lay hold on our publication and tear from its pages that which did not correspond to their particular mental and emotional furnishings. Irrespective of whether or not the Suffolk Letter moved to the right or the left, or moved at all!—regardless of the theology or lack of theology in the Suffolk Letter; regardless of whether or not the editor agreed with or was jealous of Dr. Truitt's choice of adjectives! even though the Letter has proved to be a sermon (!)—the editor has insisted that it remain. Why? (1) Because many people read it. For example, a man in New York, a ranking denominational official, reads the Suffolk Letter every week. (2) Because it is worth reading. Since it is written by a pastor, it is written by one who must live down near where people live. It deals with those problems which are within the circle of our common experience. (3) Because no church and no pastor have been more worthy of recognition than have the Suffolk Church and its beloved pastor. Through the years the two have stood as the shadow of a great rock in a weary land, have demonstrated the strength and dignity to which we as ministers and churches may attain.

There are those who have launched the complaint that there is a "sameness about The Sun." Thank God for that! It has risen regularly, from week to week, with at least a few flecks of healing, we trust, upon its wings. But how could anyone who actually reads the paper get the impression of sameness, when John Truitt brings to it all the colors of the rainbow, all the fragrance of a petal-laden garden, all the emotion of a prophet and all the sensitiveness of a poet? Now his column is tinted with the delicate hues of a mystic; then it is characterized by the bold strokes of a crusader; again it is drenched by the tears of one whose heart has been broken by the sins of his people. Ever and anon it is saturated with the spirit of the lowly Nazarene.

The transition from Dr. Truitt to Uncle John will require some adjustments of course, but will not be too difficult. You see, we have trained him, groomed him for this paternal responsibility. He has acquired, through his weekly practice, the mental and emotional qualifications for his next assignment, the Orphanage Letter! There will simply be a new concentration in his weekly epistle, which we all anticipate, and perhaps a slight intensification of emotional content. We shall not expect any great variation on the velocity, or the density, or the humility thereof. So while we acknowledge our indebtedness to Dr. Truitt, we modestly think we have served in some small way in offering this convenient medium through which Dr. Truitt has built himself up to such enviable proportions. Thus, we bid him an affectionate Godspeed!

VISITATION EVANGELISM.

The report of Mr. Black on the lay visitation program in Lynchburg indicates the type of effort which should be increasingly prevalent throughout the Southern Convention. A study of this report reveals the basic sociological data essential in charting the future of any church. It is the contemporary illustration of the tower builder who sat down to count the cost.

Evangelism which includes an adequate survey and systematic lay evangelism has proven its worth in many communities. Mr. Black states: "It is hoped that the report on the results of the Lynchburg endeavor will create a desire for the programs in the fall." Norfolk has been suggested as a promising area for an effort of this kind.

We are fortunate in having available for use the personnel of the Board of Home Missions. We trust that they may be used with increasing frequency and effectiveness. We rejoice in the healthy and unmistakable signs of progress in Lynchburg.

Gaiety that sweetens existence and makes it wholesome—a sense of humor, a zest of enjoyment—this is the accompaniment of courage which gives it a supreme value. Something of the high laughter of a Cyrano de Bergerac—the world needs it.

—Dr. Herbert Hichen.

A Significant Report on the First Church of Lynchburg, Virginia

By REV. IRA D. BLACK

Department of City Work, Board of Home Missions

Lynchburg, strategically located where the Southern, the Chesapeake and Ohio, and the Norfolk and Western railroads intersect, is one of the progressive and growing cities of the South. The three colleges lend a cultural atmosphere. Industry seems quite diversified with 28 principal manufacturing products listed by Rand McNally. In 1920 the population was 30,070, in 1930, 40,661 and in 1940, 44,541. The estimates place the 1949 population close to 60,000. The city has grown primarily to the north and west. To the north you have the upper middle class areas where most of the better residential building has taken place. The new building to the west, which is in the parish of our church, has consisted largely of the small medium priced homes which average about $7,500-$8,500 in cost. There are now approximately 4,000 people within a one-mile radius of our church. Over one-half of this population has come in since the war in the new single family houses. Ninety-five per cent of the membership of our church is within this mile radius.

Other Churches.

Like most southern cities, Lynchburg is greatly overchurched having 96 Protestant churches. There has been a lack of planning and comity resulting in competition and the waste of resources. This is true in the one mile parish of our church. The following churches are within one mile of our church: Fort Hill Methodist Church (older west side church)—membership, 1,350; Episcopal Church (older west side church)—membership, 150; Baptist (organized one and one-half years ago, planning to build this summer)—membership, 132; Quaker Presbyterian Church (older rural suburban church from which our church split)—membership, 250; Nazarene (purchased corner site and will build soon)—no membership; Memorial Christian Church (organized this year, have already raised $40,000 toward building this summer)—membership, 90; Presbyterian (option on church site where they had a tent last summer conducting services and Vacation Bible School. Plan tent meetings again this summer)—no membership.

Because of the barrier and undesirability of the Southern railroad about three blocks south of our church practically all of the new building is to the west and north which gives the new churches a more favorable site than ours since they are adjacent to the new housing and central from the viewpoint of future building in the developments.

First Congregational Christian Church.

The church was organized and the present building erected in 1925. It was a split from the Quaker Presbyterian Church which is beyond the city limits exactly one mile west of our church. The first minister of our church had been dismissed by the congregation of the Quaker Presbyterian Church. He took some of the congregation with him and organized the new church. On looking around for fellowship with a larger denomination the new congregation applied to the Southern Convention of the Christian Churches for standing. Though located in a promising and growing community, statistics show that the church has done no more than hold its own in membership and church school enrollment during the past twenty years.

In 1930 there was a membership of 114; this dropped to 111 by 1935. Since 1940 it has fluctuated between 115 and 131, the present membership, though 88 new members have been admitted. During the past eight or ten years the average attendance has been less than fifty. During all of this time the church school enrollment has averaged around 100, though it has been less during the past several years. Home expenses in 1930 were $2,456, dropping to $880 in 1935. Since then the average has been something over $2,000, except in 1947 when the total was $13,865 and 1948 with $8,717. The benevolence budget, including apportionments, has varied between $300 and $400, with two marked exceptions, none reported in 1946, and $859 reported in 1948.

During most of its history, the church has been aided by the conference in order to support a full-time ministry. This continued aid has acted as a "crutch" to the church rather than as a stimulus for growth and self-support. After the nine-year pastorate of Rev. J. Howard Smith, 1937-1945, it was difficult for the conference and church to secure qualified leadership, and the church floundered with student pastors until 1947 when Rev. James B. Allen was called as minister.

During the past nine years the church has received 51 members, an average of $5\frac{2}{3}$ per year, which, according to the criteria for growth, would maintain a church of only 79 members. However, the Year Book statistics show an increase from 115 to 131 members. Upon inquiry, I found that the membership list is in bad need of revision. The resident membership, as of May 1, 1949, was 88 and the church school enrollment, including the cradle roll, was 101. The Sunday school attendance on May 1 was 40 and the church attendance, 29. However, it was raining hard, and the usual attendance is about double these numbers.

Finances.

The 1949 budget is $3,861 of which $2,100 is for the minister's salary (the Southern Convention pays an additional $500). Included in the budget is $409 for apportionment benevolences. The budget average is $29.40 per capita for 131 members. This is slightly above the denominational average and is the best in the history of the church. There are 57 pledges to the church which means that probably every possible pledge is secured.

With the coming of Rev. James B. Allan, the church has been stimulated to greater responsibility in giving. In 1947 a parsonage was purchased for $10,000 and has been entirely paid for. Last year an Estey organ was purchased for the church. Special pledges from the people will cover the organ payments as they come due.

Building Improvement.

Because of the coming of other churches to the community, our church realizes that their building must be improved if they are to meet the competition of the new churches. The present chapel (seating capacity about 220) has a sloping floor and center pulpit. There is a complete basement under the chapel which includes a kitchen and classrooms which are separated by partitions. The partitions fold back so that one-half of the basement can be used for social gatherings and dinners. The church building is frame stucco and is badly infested with termites. Therefore, as little as possible should be spent on it. The rectangular shape of the room is good. The platform could be extended for a chancel, a new lighting

CONTRIBUTIONS

SUFFOLK LETTER.

It is not in the record but a poor widow in our church came to the parsonage one day after much talk and a few efforts had been made to secure a 16mm movie machine to no avail and handed me three one hundred dollar bills which she wished to donate toward purchasing such a machine. She wanted to give the entire necessary amount but was unable to give more. It was enough to put the purchase across. Her great love for her church and the children of the church caused her to make the sacrifice to donate that amount. She felt that the children, the youth and their elders would come more and more to realize the value of such an aid to teaching in the church and Sunday school. She has not seen her work materialize to the extent to which she hoped but more and more it is being used, and perhaps it will catch on, and do much greater service in all phases of the church in the months and years to come.

The children are still talking about the four reels they saw at the Christmas party. How thrilled they were! And how thrilled was their unknown benefactress. Churches are a bit cautious about taking on to modern methods of teaching. The schools, many of them, do a tremendous amount of teaching with the movie. Several great pictures have been shown here in our church, and some of them have delighted the congregations which were willing to give them a try. More and better pictures are being filmed every year by combinations of denominations getting together and making really valuable pictures depicting the best loved portions and persons of the Scriptures as well as up-to-date messages from the great movements of the modern church in the world. This will be increased. Those of us who believe in the fundamental truth and right of the church's great message should be quite concerned as to the best methods of getting it across to larger and larger sectors of our society.

There is that old Chinese proverb: "One picture is worth a thousand words." Now with the modern scientific equipment we can have both the picture and the words. The schools, the business institutions, the armed forces, and many other walks of life have fast learned to use the movie to get across their teachings. For a long time the speaker who had the imaginative ability to see in pictures what he was saying and the art to paint that picture in words vivid enough for his hearers to see has had a good hearing.

Nothing can take the place, to be sure, of a man or woman with a burning message, standing up and witnessing the same in sermon or song; nor can the gentle Christian man or woman be displaced as a teacher of faith in Sunday school classroom. These are just as essential as ever, because the man or woman is a demonstrator present in person of much more than half they are saying. Their devotion, learning, experience and good living are God-given assets for their lesson or sermon. But let us have both the preaching and the pictures. They will help each other. And they will greatly aid in the teaching process. There are so many times and places in the round of a week or month where a picture can tell the story in such a way as to cause our youth to catch the spirit of the heroic service the Church is rendering the world. In this oblique way I lift my hat to a little lady who loves her church.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

PARISH EVANGELISM REALLY WORKS.

Rev. Ira D. Black, of the Department of City Work of the Board of Home Missions of our Congregational Christian Churches, came to Lynchburg May 1 to instruct and conduct a Parish Evangelism program for us for four days. His coming has been a point of new awakening in the life of our Church in Lynchburg and it would seem that the program of Parish Visitation Evangelism offers unique opportunities for church growth and effectiveness in the churches of our Southern Convention.

The plan of Parish Visitation Evangelism is a simple one based on Mark 6:7, where Jesus called together the twelve disciples and sent them out, two by two, into the community. They were instructed to visit the homes of the people, to preach the Gospel, and to call men to repentance. Such is the Biblical background for the program.

Each evening the callers met together at the church for dinner and instruction prior to their going out. During the period of instruction the nature of the work to be done and the manner in which the work was to be accomplished were discussed. The purpose of Parish Evangelism is to confront men and women with the challenge of the Christian life. The callers are to talk with the prospects about the nature and mission of the Church and to secure from them a Christian decision to follow the way of Jesus Christ through commitment to the life of the Church.

The first evening the laymen were timid and somewhat apprehensive at the prospect of inviting men to commit their lives to Christ. After all, who were these who were chosen to go forth? They were untrained men and women without a special skill in oratory or argumentation. They were the common laymen found in every church; sincere, earnest Christians striving to following the pattern of Jesus. I confess, I too, shared their doubts and their dubiousness.

It was suggested that each caller reflect on his own life experience and use his own personal testimony as the basis for his presentation of the challenge of the Christian life. The matter of technique was cast aside. This was no campaign of super-salesmanship; we were engaged in a Holy calling with the spirit of Christ impelling us on. The goal and objective of our visitation was the individual life which we approached and no manner of subterfuge was to be used which might defeat the ultimate end of life in Christ.

For four evenings Dr. Black worked with eight men and four women plus the minister, calling on families who had expressed some interest in the church by reason of attendance or personal contact. I had prepared a list of 96 names prior to Dr. Black's coming and these names were used as the basis of our calling with minor additions and corrections.

The statistical results reveal the effectiveness of the program. In the four evenings, 135 persons were interviewed in regard to a Christian decision. Of this number, 38 made the decision to unite with our church; fifteen of these on confession of faith and twenty-three by church letter. Of the remaining number, 45 persons are still prospects for further cultivation. Of the 83 actual prospects interviewed (excluding those individuals contacted who were interested in some other church, commitments were secured from 46 per cent.

CONSTRUCTION OF BRICK WALLS FOR ELON COLLEGE GYMNASIUM BEGINS.

At an impromptu ceremony this morning, Thursday, May 9, at 10:00 o'clock the first bricks were laid in constructing the walls of the Elon College Alumni Memorial Gymnasium. Faculty and students assembled at the northwest corner of the building. The meeting was called to order by the president, followed by the singing of "O God Our Help In Ages past." Dr. W. T. Scott, Superintendent of the Southern Convention, led in prayer. After a few appropriate statements by the president the first brick was laid. The order in which the bricks were laid was as follows: L. E. Smith, President of the College; D. J. Bowden, Dean of the College; A. L. Hook, Physics Professor and Registrar; Jimmy Darden, Alumni Secretary; L. M. Kearns, Jr., Architect; Mrs. Oma U. Johnson, wife of the first athletic coach at Elon College; J. L. Pierce, Head of the Athletic Department and Physical Education Director, James Mallory, Head Inter-Collegiate Coach; Paul Plybon, Field Secretary; Don Kernodle, retiring president of the student body; and Arthur Fowler, president-elect of the student body for the year 1949-50. The exercise was concluded with benediction by Dr. William Moseley Brown.

Mr. Worth Bryan of Burlington, North Carolina, has the contract to erect the walls for the gymnasium. The walls will be of brick and slag block construction. Associated with Mr. Bryan are the grandsons and great-grandsons of the late John Long who was employed to lay the bricks for the first building on Elon College Campus. The grandsons are Garland, Winfred and Jake Johnson. The great-grandsons of the late Mr. Long who will be employed on the job are Carl Smith and Kerns Parks. It is interesting that when we begin to erect a new gymnasium that the descendants of those who had to do with the erection of the first building of the college are employed to lay the bricks and stone for this building.

This exercise was largely for the faculty and students. The foundations for the building was completed last week. It is all steel re-inforced concrete. There are $4,000 worth of concrete and $2,000 worth of steel reinforcing in the foundation. It is guaranteed to be secure and enduring. The big service in connection with the erection of the gymnasium will be on Alumni Day, Saturday, May 28 at 12:00 o'clock. At that time the corner-stone for the new building will be laid. The Grand Lodge of North Carolina, A. F. & A. M., has been invited to lay this corner-stone on that occasion. The Grand Master, Mr. W. P. Horton, Pittsboro, North Carolina, is ill but hopes to be able to participate in the ceremony. It is fitting that the Grand Lodge of North Carolina should lay this corner-stone. The cornerstone for the original building that was destroyed by fire in 1923 was laid by the Grand Lodge of North Carolina. The cornerstones of all five buildings that were erected in 1924 and 1925 were laid by the Grand Lodge of North Carolina. To have masonic ceremonies on this occasion would be continuing the tradition which is worthwhile.

Alumni and friends of the college are invited to be present for the services on May 28. Elon College will be delighted to welcome you.

ELON COLLEGE COMMENCEMENT.

This is to remind the readers of THE CHRISTIAN SUN that the 59th annual commencement of Elon College will be held May 28, 29 and 30. Saturday, May 28, will be Alumni Day. The attractive feature of the day will be the laying of the corner-stone for the new Alumni Memorial Gymnasium and the Alumni banquet at 7:00 o'clock. The Reverend David W. Shepherd, Superintendent for our churches in the Southeast, will be the orator. Sunday, May 29, will be baccalaureate day. Dean Harold A. Bosley, Duke University Divinity School, will preach the sermon. The choir will present Faure's Requiem Sunday evening. Monday will be graduation day. There are 114 graduates and a number of other students will be awarded diplomas and certificates. Lt. Governor H. P. Taylor of North Carolina will deliver the literary address. The Elon College Singers will provide music for all occasions. Parents, friends and the general public are invited.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Since the founding of Elon College the college has had the privilege of looking to the churches of the Southern Convention for support. The college was conceived in the minds of leaders of our churches in the Southern Convention and was officially authorized. The church was exceedingly generous according to its financial ability in the founding of the college and the erection of the first buildings. As the college has grown, the church has grown. The growth experienced entails largely expenditures. The church is far more able, from every standpoint, to support the college today than it was when the college was founded. If we of the church today could have the same interest, the same determination, and the same willingness to sacrifice as did the college's founding fathers, there would be plenty of money for every need and the curriculum could be expanded sufficiently to meet the demands of an expanding constituency and of an expectant civilization.

Unfortunately for the college all of our local churches are not as enthusiastic as they should be, nor are they as generous as the college would like for them to be. As the days pass the needs and the fruits of the college are more extended. I am sure that the support for the college in its great undertaking for the young people of our church and our country will perceptibly increase to the extent of adequate support. The college expresses its gratitude.

When Bonplau, the botanist, climbed one of the loftiest peaks of the Andes he found it a volcano. A rim of the crater was covered with scorïæ, and everything that looked like blasting and desolation, but just in one little crevice there was a tiny bright flower. There it grew in beauty. Like enough the seed had dropped from a bird. The shower had fallen, the sun had shone, and the flower had grown there, waving in the wind amidst surrounding desolation. The flower growing there on the rim of that fire funnel is something like the grand and beautiful love of God. He has planted flowers on the rim of perdition, on the very edge of that rim.—S. Coley.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

SPEAKERS FOR SCHOOL OF MISSIONS AND CONVENTION.

Miss Helen Kenyon.

Miss Helen Kenyon of New York City, nationally known Congregational Christian lay woman and first woman Moderator of the General Council of Congregational Christian Churches, will speak on Monday evening, June 13, at Elon College, where the Woman's Board and School of Missions will be in session.

Miss Kenyon specializes in "firsts." She was the first woman Chairman of the Board of Trustees of Vassar College; the first woman Chairman of the Missions Council of Congregational Christian Churches, and now she is the first woman Moderator of the Congregational Christian Churches—the highest honorary position in the power of the Congregational Christian Churches to bestow upon a member.

With ancestors on her paternal side reaching back to the deck of the Mayflower, Miss Kenyon, like her parents before her, was born and educated in Brooklyn, New York. Perhaps the fact that on her mother's side, Miss Kenyon descends from early Dutch and French Huguenot settlers in the Poughkeepsie (New York) region, may have led her toward Vassar as her Alma Mater.

A confirmed believer in church unity, Miss Kenyon is a strong upholder of the projected union of the Congregational Christian and the Evangelical and Reformed Churches. "As I meet the members of our new family to be," she says, "I am increasingly enthusiastic about the merger. The very fact that our two denominations are different in polity makes our union of great significance. It is our agreement in our faith that is bringing us together. I hope and pray that this union will point the way for many more Protestant denominations to come together."

Miss Kenyon is such a loyal alumna of Vassar and has done so much that when the new athletic building was completed in a depression period it was named Kenyon Hall in her honor.

Just as her father and brothers years ago were the first to establish factories in Brooklyn, to take workers out of home "sweat shops," so Helen Kenyon has always been a fighter for the underprivileged and a worker for interracial good will. For years she has been promoting the work of the American Missionary Association toward better race relations. She is as proud of being a member of the Board of Trustees of Dillard University down in New Orleans as she was of being a Trustee of Vassar College.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill.

Miss Pattie Lee Coghill, Educational Secretary for the Missions Council of the Congregational Christian Churches, will present the new mission study materials for the coming year at the Woman's Board and School of Missions.

In 1945 to 1946 Miss Coghill spent nine months visiting India, Ceylon, Iraq, Syria, Palestine, Lebanon, Turkey, Greece, Italy, France, Switzerland, England and Denmark. She went to India as a member of a special deputation under the American Board of Foreign Missions for a study of its work in that land. While there she spent a day and a night at Gandhi's Ashram.

"No real difference exists between home and foreign missions—the problems here and overseas are essentially the same and so is our purpose as Christians," says Pattie Lee. I was delighted at the positions of leadership occupied by men and women in India who had been trained in Christian schools and amazed at the pervasive influence of six million Christians in the midst of a civilization dominated by Hindu ideals," she reports.

A Southerner by birth and training, Miss Coghill began Christian service in Florida as a Home Board extension worker. When in 1942 the Missions Council was seeking an Educational Secretary, who knew the need of the rural churches, because she had lived in and worked with them, Miss Pattie Lee Coghill was a natural choice.

Dr. Mary Frances Thelen.

Miss Mary Frances Thelen, who will introduce the Bible study, give the Tuesday evening sermon, and conduct the Communion Service at the Woman's Board and School of Missions, has a most interesting biography.

Miss Thelen graduated from the University of California with honors in Philosophy, received her B. D. and S. T. M. degrees from Union Theological Seminary, New York, both magna cum laude, and won her Ph. D. from Columbia University. She is also a member of Phi Beta Kappa, the highest national scholastic honor society.

Professional experiences of Miss Thelen include Assistant in Philosophy of Religion, Union Theological Seminary, New York, 1934-35; pastor of the Congregational Church at East Dorset, Vermont, summer of 1935; Assistant Professor of Religion, Hollins College, Va., 1941-47; Lecturer in the Extension Division of the University of Virginia, 1944-47; and Adjunct Professor of Religion, Randolph-Macon Woman's College, Lynchburg, Va., from 1947 to the present time. She has also served as Director of Religious Education of Congregational Churches in Providence, R. I., and Portland, Maine.

In 1946 the King's Crown Press of New York published her book, Man As Sinner in Contemporary American Realistic Theology.

Miss Thelen was secretary of the National Association of Biblical Instructors from 1945-48 and has been active in the founding of a Southern section at Emory University this spring. Since coming to Lynchburg, she has been in demand as speaker, having appeared at seven different churches and the Woman's Club.

Our Lynchburg Church is fortunate in having Miss Thelen as a member of the church and Chairman of the Education Committee.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

system installed, and the room redecorated for not more than $1,200, provided much of the labor is donated. It is important that this much be spent to modernize the room to make it a worshipful sanctuary. However, a larger expenditure in view of the unsound condition of the building, would be unwise.

Fortunately the church has a large corner site, 200 ft. x 160 ft, and a 50 ft. lot immediately back of the church going through to the next street. A master plan should be made for the use of the land. The members should think in terms of a new church school unit along with remodeling and making worshipful the present church sanctuary. The present basement facilities are undesirable for church school use. The church school unit could be extended to the east from the back of the church making the property "L" shape. Since building costs are less in Lynchburg than in most areas, an adequate one-story wing could be erected for around $25,000 to $30,000. At least two-thirds of the money should be on hand before the church starts construction because any greater debt than one-third of the amount would cut too seriously into the small current expense budget. The church could consider launching a two-year building fund campaign for the purpose of remodeling the chapel and erecting a church school unit. Probably in ten years a new chapel will have to be built. (A sanctuary which would seat 150 people would be adequate for a church of 350-400 members which would seem the maximum potential for the church membership.) The Southern Convention has engaged an architect from Burlington to assist the Lynchburg church and the other churches of the conference in regard to a master plan.

If the church organizes for growth, the maximum potential of the church school would be 200-225 members. This should be kept in mind in planning the new unit. The present distribution of the 101 church school members is as follows:

Cradle Roll (0-1-2 years of age)	15
Beginners (3-4-5)	15
Primary Department (6-7-8)	4
Junior Department (9-10-11)	12
Intermediate Department (12-13-14)	10
High School and Older Young People (15-16-17-18-19)	5
Two Adult Classes	40

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

The Chandlers came to our church. Mr. and Mrs. Robert Chandler, formerly of China and now of Auburn-dale, Mass. They had been to the Valley and went from Richmond to Waverly where the Jacksons lived before they went to China.

They are such nice people. Mrs. Chandler is poised and sweet. He is pleasant and humorous. They told us many things about Mr. and Mrs. Jackson and little Lewis. Mrs. Jackson and Lewis lived with the Chandlers when he was a very tiny baby.

For those of us in the Southern Convention who knew Dorothy and Richard Jackson well, it is such a pleasure to hear how they are, what they have been doing and what we can do for them.

The Chandlers spent thirty years in China. Most of the time they were in the North, but when they went back after the war, they were responsible for Foochow and Shaowu. And so they can report on Dr. and Mrs. Riggs and Leona Burr, too. We have had many missionaries in our home, and it seems that lots of them had been to China. When the Chinese write their names, they use a little seal. This is made on a little piece of metal and usually stamped with red ink, or the Chinese characters may be written. I have seen the seals of Miss Flora Heebner, Leonard Christian, Guy Thelin, George Shepherd and the Chandlers. Miss Heebner gave me a Chinese name which I once could say, but have now forgotten!

You will be interested to know that in spite of conditions mail still goes through to the Shaowu Mission. So please continue writing and sending packages. American currency may still be exchanged and is very valuable. You may send a dollar—don't send more than that as it may be lost—to any one of the Shaowu family. The first time they have an opportunity they may exchange the American money to good advantage.

China is a vast, fascinating country. We are living in a time when that country is making history. It will be interesting to see what is the outcome of their civil war. Work done by our missionaries will make a difference in the final victory.

Mr. and Mrs. Chandler were going to the Norfolk-Suffolk area over the week-end and then travel into North Carolina. I hope that many of you have heard or will be hearing and seeing them.

BEFORE THEY GO TO BED.

By SARA EMERALD NELSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

Fortunate are the children to whom bedtime means story time! And fortunate are the mothers who have established the custom of reading or relating a story to their youngsters before tucking them in for the night! Sharing a story is one of the keenest pleasures for all concerned that one can find in the rearing of a family.

"I'm not really a good reader," one mother may protest. Well, little children are not too critical, so begin passing on stories to them when they are quite small, and, as the mutual interest grows Mother will find she improves with practice.

"I don't know what stories to choose," another mother may say. When children are very young the jingly nursery rhymes are most appealing. Even today's babies, brought up by the most modern methods, like to clap their chubby little hands:

Pat-a-cake, pat-a-cake, baker's man,

Bake me a cake as fast as you can.

And surely there will ever be a void in the life of any baby who has not had his fingers and toes tweaked to:

This little pig went to market,

This little pig stayed at home.

One can scarcely call these baby-talk rhymes, stories; yet, they do form the groundwork for story-telling. The child's interest is caught—he gives quiet attention—and so he absorbs something outside of his nursery sphere. Following after such rhymes as the two quoted come many well-known old stand-bys. Jack and Jill and those other two Jacks—Jack Horner and Jack Spratt—can be accompanied with just enough action of the hands to make them fun for little listeners.

Music can be correlated most pleasantly with the stories. The mother of three small lads, whom I know well, is very musical; she taught her sons to sing nursery rhymes almost as soon as they could talk.

Of course, we should not restrict our story time to nursery jingles alone. Short, simply-worded tales from the Bible, from fairy love, and from those that are in the children's sections of good magazines may all help to form a nucleus of the children's own library. The practice, too, of making a scrapbook, containing any worthwhile stories which you cull from periodicals, is increasingly beneficial.

"If I have children of various ages, how can I choose stories to suit all their tastes?" is the question troubling some mothers. Present-day child educators tell us that we must not "talk down" to a child. It is better to use a few words that he does not understand than to speak in the babyish terms he thinks are beneath him. Taking this advice, Mother or Daddy should read or tell a story suited to the oldest child of the group.

Such is the procedure followed by the young mother of three whom I mentioned earlier. Her sons are five, three and twenty months. If one should peep in on them at the story-telling time, it would be noticed that the eldest in the pyjama-clad group was "eating up" each word, the three-year-old was deeply engrossed, and the baby—bless his little heart—was just so happy to be with his two older brothers before toppling off to dreamland that the sound of his mother's voice was like a soothing lullaby in his ears.

Childhood habits are easily formed, and the habit of getting ready for bed and then gathering for a cozy story time together is a most comforting habit for children and parents alike. If you have not done this, try it and see!

Several years ago a woman, with her little baby, was riding in a stage-coach in western Montana. The weather was bitter cold, and, in spite of all the driver could do to protect her, he saw that the mother was becoming unconscious from the cold. He stopped the coach, took the baby, and wrapping it warmly, put it under the seat, then seized the mother by the arm, and dragging her out upon the ground drove away, leaving her in the road. As she saw him drive away, she ran after him, crying piteously for her baby. When he felt sure that she was warm, he allowed her to overtake the coach and resume her place by her baby. Can we not imagine her gratitude when she realized that he had saved her life? He had done as God sometimes does, to shake us out of soul-lethargy and moral sleep which would end in death.—H. F. Sayles.

Youth at Work in the Church

THE HAPPY HOME PILGRIM FELLOWSHIP.

The Happy Home Church has an active Pilgrim Fellowship, consisting of about forty-five members, and having monthly meeting in the homes of the members.

As a special project for Youth Week, a contest between the Junior High Group and Senior Group was staged to increase the membership and attendance in Sunday School. The Junior High Group, being the winner, was entertained by a weiner roast. At the close of Youth Week, the entire worship service was conducted by the Pilgrim Fellowship. Miss Theodosia Carter, President, was in charge. Scripture readings and prayers were also by members of our group. Miss Ruth Helen Gunn brought the morning message using as her topic, "What Does God Expect of Youth?" As one listened to her it seemed fitting that we silently offer a prayer of thanksgiving for her recent return to us.

The Pilgrim Fellowship has planned to present a play in the early summer, the cast being selected from our group with some outside talent. We are very fortunate to have an experienced director, Mrs. E. A. Autry, a teacher from our high school, to direct the play for us.

Special guests at our worship service on May 15 were graduates from our group. Five were graduates from the eighth grade, seven from high school and two from colleges. The Junior Choir, under the direction of Miss Gunn, sang a song of congratulations. Miss Toots Shelton of our group rendered the Offertory Solo, "Our Best." Gifts were presented to each graduate from Pilgrim Fellowship and the Sunday School. The pastor, Rev. Thurman F. Bowers, brought a timely message, using as his topic, "My Choice."

SOUTHERN CONVENTION YOUNG PEOPLE TO MEET.

This is an invitation to everyone of you to the first meeting of the Southern Convention Young People that has been held in two years. This is a very important meeting!

This meeting is to be held on Sunday, June 19, at Elon College, at 3:00 p. m. This meeting has got everything from a business meeting to worship service by Dr. Reynolds.

The purpose of this meeting is to discuss a new constitution for the young people of the Southern Convention. It is important that every member of young people's societies, P. F. groups, C. E. societies, in fact, every young person of the Southern Convention to be present.

Following is the schedule for the day:

3:00 Registration.

4:30 Meeting of the Southern Convention Young People.

6:00 Picnic Supper (Community Church Parish House next to Parsonage).

7:00 Vesper Service.

7:30 Challenge to Youth Service.

You are to bring your own picnic supper; drinks will be furnished by the Elon College Young People.

LYNCBURG CHURCH.

It is important that the church develop its building and financial plans in council with the Church Building Department of the Board of Home Missions. The church should continually write Mr. William Newman so that each step taken is the very best.

Visitation Evangelism Program.

A school of training in lay visitation was conducted from May 1-4. Fourteen workers were secured (including the minister and director) with the result that for three evenings there were six teams calling and one evening seven teams. The minister prepared a list of 96 prospects and other names were added later. This list was prepared from names secured from the normal outreach of the church and from the religious census the church had taken the year before. In the four evenings, 135 people were interviewed in regard to membership in the church. Of this number 38 made the decision to unite with the church. (Fifteen of these on confession of faith and 23 by church letter.)

Of the remainder, 52 were dropped as not being prospects because of their having a relationship with another church. Forty-five were to be continued on the prospect list for further cultivation. It is probable that some of these will make the decision in follow-up visits before the membership Sundays (Mother's Day, May 8, and Pentecost Sunday, June 5). Of the 83 actual prospects interviewed in regard to a decision, commitments were secured from 46 per cent. As a result of one week of visitation the church will have an increase of 43 per cent in its resident membership.

Recommendations.

1. Aid to the church from the Southern Convention should be gradually reduced over a period of three to five years so that the church will have a challenge to continue to grow and reach new families who will support the church.

2. The school of training in lay visitation should result in a permanent organization of lay visitation evangelism in which the minister and laymen will work together each month, perhaps giving the second Sunday and Monday for calling on new families. In addition to this, the minister could set aside a minimum of one evening a week when he could team up with a layman in evangelistic visitation. In a year's time he could take every man of the church with him as he called to build the church membership. The first Sunday in every month could be Membership Sunday with an objective of reaching three new families per month or a minimum of 50 members per year.

3. It would be very profitable to organize the parish into eight community groups for the care of the membership and the development of an evangelistic spirit which would permeate the whole church. Every one of the church members should be on the lookout for the two to four new families that move into the community each week. It is when people first move into the community that they are looking for a church home and want to make new friendships. The neighborhood groups could be given specific assignments for the cultivation of neighbors for the church. (The other churches of the community are well organized as we learned during our visitation. Several of the people on whom we called who had attended our church or church school regularly for a period of time, had already made the decision two or three weeks before to unite with another church

JESUS SENTENCED TO DEATH.

LESSON X—JUNE 5, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: Christ, when He was reviled, He did not revile in return; when He suffered, He did not threaten.—I Peter 2:21-23.

LESSON: Matthew 27:19-26; Mark 14:53-15:15; Luke 23:4-12; John 18:13-14, 19-24; 28-40; 19:1-16.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Matthew 27:17-26.

A Sordid Story, A Shameful Picture.

The story of the trial of, and the sentence on, Jesus does not make very good reading. It is a sordid, sorry, shameful mess. One does not get a very good impression of human nature as he reads it. It is a sad and somber thing. The only bright and redeeming feature about it all is the dignity and the majesty of our Lord Jesus Christ Himself. As we look at Him during the trial we feel like saying with the centurion at the Cross, "Truly this man was the Son of God." Let us take a look at those concerned in this tragedy which He turned into triumph.

There is, of course, Judas, himself one of the Twelve, who for thirty pieces of silver, betrayed his Master. To be sure he had passed out of the picture before the end came, but he opened the flood-gates of the torrent of abuse and mistreatment and ultimately of the crucifixion itself, by betraying Jesus into the hands of His enemies. Judas is to be pitied, but he cannot be praised, or excused. His was a disgraceful and dastardly act.

Then there are the disciples themselves. They forsook their Master and fled at the first hint of danger. They left Him to fare for himself. Like rats deserting a sinking ship, they got out while they thought the getting was good. To be sure John and Peter followed their Lord unto the house of the high priest, but Peter basely denied his Lord there, openly and profanely asserting that he never knew Jesus and that he had no part with Him.

Take a look at the high priest and the lesser priests and the leaders of the people—what a sorry lot they are. They were blind and bigoted leaders of the blind and the bigoted. They had no case against Jesus and they knew it, so they had to trump up a case. They got witnesses to lie against Him. They aroused the people until they were a senseless, blood-thirsty mob like unto modern mobs that lynch a man. They played upon the weaknesses of Pilate and shrewdly played one man off against another. They brought false charges against Jesus. They passed responsibility on to Pilate. They finally persuaded the people to demand Barabbas instead of Jesus, and prevailed upon Pilate to deliver Jesus to be crucified. One would have to look far and wide to find a group of men who present a more sorry or sordid picture than this gang who posed as the religious leaders of the nation. There is only one word to describe them—they stink.

What shall we say about Pilate? Basically he was not a bad fellow. He had an innate sense of justice and he tried to see that justice was done after a fashion. He saw through the scheme of the priestly gang—he knew that for envy they had delivered Jesus unto him. He was willing to release Jesus, and have done with the case. But, alas, poor Pilate was, at heart, a politician. He wanted to sit on the fence. He did not want to make a decision that might alienate the people. He did not have any moral backbone. He was cursed by the plague of indecision on a great moral and ethical question. If one, by exercising a little spiritual imagination, gets in Pilate's place, he can readily understand just how uncomfortable the poor fellow must have been. He was between the upper and the nether mill-stone, between his own sense of justice, his conviction that Jesus was innocent, his desire to let Jesus go, and the shrewd and unscrupulous schemes of the priestly class. They played their trump card when they insinuated that if he let Jesus go he was not Caesar's friend. Come to think of it, he might lose his position. Why should he run that risk just for the sake of seeing that justice was done to what he thought was a rather harmless idealist and crank? His indecision, and then his decision, made him famous in an infamous way. To-day after nineteen hundred years his name is held in ignominy as millions repeat the words of the Creed, "Suffered under Pontius Pilate." What a dramatic gesture when he takes a basin of water and washes his hands of the whole matter. But what a futile and meaningless gesture!

The soldiers do not look very good either. They strip Jesus and put a purple robe on Him, jam a crown of thorns on His head, give Him a slender reed as a symbol of a scepter, blindfold Him and slapping Him in the face ask Him to identify the one who slapped Him. They laid many stripes upon Him with a thong on the end of which were tied pieces of hard bone or some other sharp material. They even spat upon Him, and mocked and ridiculed Him. One would expect better behaviour from soldiers under discipline. Here was human nature in the raw.

And the crowd. Normally they were probably average men and women, decent, fair-minded, law-abiding, friendly as individuals. But alas they had been whipped into a frenzy and into an unthinking and bloodthirsty mob by an appeal to religious prejudice, self-interest, which seemed to fire a spirit of cruelty and of sadism within them. Thus it was that as in the case of lynching, these people as a mob said and did what they never would have dreamed of saying or doing as individuals, and actually cried out that Jesus be crucified. And they spoke words that have been tragically and terribly fulfilled when they said, "His blood be upon us and upon our children." The mob spirit and mob law are terrible and dangerous things. Human nature can be callous and cruel upon occasion. And alas its cruelty is sometimes at its worst in the name of religion. Men have suffered cruel martyrdom at the hands of those who did them to death in the name of religion.

Yes, we see human nature at its worst in the actors and the witnesses of the trial and the sentence of Jesus. There is in the picture that which ought to give us pause. But we see something else in the picture in the person of Jesus. Here is human nature at its best, here is human nature in its divine aspects. Calm, dignified, courageous, strong, silent, forgiving, long-suffering, confident—truly this man was the Son of God. When He was reviled, He did not revile in return; when he suffered, He did not threaten. Much of the secret lay in the experience in Gethsemane. The Master gained the victory there. He had already overcome the world in secret and that which He had won in secret God declared openly.

As to the trial itself, it is a travesty

CHURCH SCHOOL EXPERIENCES.

Reported at Oberlin Section Meeting of the General Council.

"We have the Board of Education separate from the teachers. We don't believe you can use Privates in the General's Staff. We have a Sunday school of 600 and have found it necessary to separate the Board of Education and the teachers. It is helpful if the Board can consist of people who have had many years of teaching service, for then they are more competent to see the whole picture." (Lakewood, Ohio.)

"New people coming into the church are asked what they are going to do in the church. In this way, new material has been discovered." (First Church, Waterbury, Conn.)

"If a class is without a teacher, they go without a teacher until we can secure one who has had a Christian experience. We ask ourselves the questions: Does she have the kind of Christian personality young people should be with? Has she had a Christian experience? If a person can fulfill these qualifications, we feel she can be taught about the Bible and techniques."

"One thing is done in many churches which I feel very strongly should not be done. It is bad policy for churches to use the calendar to broadcast an appeal for teachers, which is really advertising that anyone will do. If you feel this must be done, make the stipulation that you want teachers who will bring up the quality of the Sunday school."

"I have found that it is easier to get teachers when the qualifications are held high, when you state that there is a big job to be done and big people are needed. People are willing to do a big job which requires their qualifications." (Cuyahoga Falls, Ohio.)

"The approach to people chosen is very important. We make a list of members of the church who are considered to have the qualifications necessary to teach and write them each a letter telling them that they have their share of responsibility in helping to set up the entire program of religious education. We give them something they can put their teeth into." (South Hadley Falls, Mass.)

"Plan to give them ways to prepare themselves so that they will be ready to teach. We do this when prospective teachers are approached." (Millinocket, Maine.)

"Each year in the fall, if a person is going to teach, she is given to understand that her services are enlisted for one year only. This serves two purposes: (1) possible to eliminate unsatisfactory teachers without hard feeling; (2) eliminates the feeling that if they teach for one year, it means they have a lifetime job. At the end of the Sunday school year a letter is sent to each teacher thanking her for her serving. This letter has received many favorable comments, since for many people it is the first time they have ever been thanked for teaching in Sunday school. At Christmas time we try to give the teachers some recognition for their services. One year we gave a year's subscription to Advance; another year a new translation of the New Testament." (Barrington, R. I.)

"The plan we have used the last two years has worked very well for us. We asked our teachers to serve for nine months. For two months of the summer the Board handles a joint program of visual aids, and all teachers are excused. Everyone has a vacation in August. We have found that both the pupils and the teachers are eager to return in September. We have found it of great value to have on hand reserve teachers. At our teachers' meetings, held twice monthly, we ask people who are interested in that kind of thing to attend. In this way, we have built up a teacher reserve, and the lack of teachers no longer continues. This reserve of teachers accomplishes two things: (1) the reserves feel important; (2) it gives the regular teachers a feeling of security. In the Bible course The Life of Christ, we had a very definite study program, and there was noticeable improvement in the attitude of the faculty." (Salem, Oregon.)

"We have strengthened our church school program and have helped in the substitute program by inaugurating a program of class Mothers and Dads. A small class has either a Mother or a Dad, a large class has both. These Mothers and Dads are parents of the pupils in the class. At the beginning of the year, they are given a Quarterly. They have two duties: (1) when a teacher needs a substitute, she calls her colleague, eliminating the need of contacting the

DEAR FRIENDS:

Now that summer is coming, you, perhaps, are planning that long-delayed trip down to Elon College in order to visit the Orphanage.

When you come, you will see how much has been done there and, too, you will hear of more of the needs that have been mentioned recently.

The laundry we hinted about a few weeks ago is really progressing. There are two large rooms in the basement of the Baby Home that are crying to be used. And it looks as if one is going to be a laundry.

The room needs some remodeling and a coat of paint. Then the equipment can be put in. One Sunday school class is giving a washing machine and an ironer. A dryer is the next thing in order.

Today, the orphanage's laundry bill runs close to $100 Monthly, so in the long run, a new laundry will constitute a big savings.

Your chairman thinks that the second empty room in the Baby Home's basement should be repaired and turned into a cold storage room, with several large freeze lockers. Another Sunday school class already agreed to give one of these units.

This seems to be an excellent idea. When eggs, chickens and so forth are plentiful, they must be sold cheaply. And then some of these foods must be purchased later when they are scarce and expensive. These freeze lockers could take care of storing much of this surplus and consequently cut down on expenses later.

Many of the children at the orphanage are taking part in the various school activities at this time. Just a short time ago, all of the matrons were busy making costumes for year-end school events.

Three of the girls are graduating from high school this year, and one girl finishes her business course at the college. They have done well and we are justly proud of all four.

of justice and violation of even the elemental and basic rights of a trial. A noted lawyer once made a study of the trial of Jesus and pointed out that it involved a large number of unjust and unfair factors which are commonly accepted in courts of law in our day, and which indeed were characteristic of common justice in that day.

As to the sentence, it was of course unjust because the trial was unjust. The Jews had no power to execute the death penalty, hence their appeal to Pilate. No Roman citizen could be crucified—it was too disgraceful and shameful. But Christ became obedient unto death, even the death of the Cross.

LYNCHBURG CHURCH.

in the community.) If we do not organize to reach new families as they move into this growing community, we will continue as we have the last twenty years, making little or no progress, and we will soon see the religious leadership in the community pass to the new churches.

4. The religious census of a year ago was of little value because children (and their ages) were not listed on the cards. Much of the census was taken in cooperation with other churches and the other churches received most of the cards. It is important that our church have a complete file on every home within its radius. The neighborhood groups, the women's groups or a special committee should be given responsibility for taking a complete religious census of the community. Ten workers could secure information on 300 families within the radius of the church in an afternoon. A survey could be taken of a section of the church parish each month until completed, to furnish the visitation evangelistic workers with additional prospects. A parish look-out or monitor system should then keep the census up to date and file the two to four cards of new families moving to the community each week.

5. Geographically the church is isolated from other Congregational churches and lacks the fellowship and encouragement from other churches of our type. Until recently very little encouragement and assistance, other than financial aid, was given the church. A church receiving financial help has a responsibility to the conference and should make a monthly report of activities and progress. The conference in turn, should work very closely with the church from month to month to give all possible assistance in seeing that the church is well organized for growth so that it can adequately serve the expanding community in which it is located.

PARISH EVANGELISM.

ship Sunday following the program, 26 persons joined our church with the remaining 12 persons committed to join on our next Membership Sunday June 5.

The program of Parish Visitation Evangelism really works. The church not only increased its resident membership 43 per cent but the spiritual uplift which the church has felt cannot be measured in numerical values.

First Church of Lynchburg would like to take this opportunity to make public a statement of appreciation to Mr. Black for his visit to our church and, also we commend him to the churches of the Southern Convention for leadership in a program of Parish Visitation Evangelism.

SCHOOL EXPERIENCES.

Superintendent; (2) these colleagues help in class projects." (Laconia, N. H.)

"For a time we had difficulty with our high school class teachers, until we allowed the pupils to make up their own list of people they would like to have as teachers. From this selected list, they decided upon those people they would most like to have and approached them. The people are then willing to teach, when they know they have been selected by the pupils because they are wanted." (Danville, Iowa.)

"We forget the inspiration needed by teachers. In our church we hold two inspirational retreats for our teachers. We go up the Connecticut River and get acquainted with one another once again, pray and play together. Then we have a high inspirational meeting. Then the leaders return to teach, and we hope this experience lasts until after Christmas. We have another inspirational retreat just before Easter." (South Hadley Fall, Mass.)

"I suggest that you try reality practice at the workers' conferences. Have the teachers become students, for often we misunderstand the children we teach. It will help you to know how to put things across to them. The minister could be the teacher, but he should teach at the level of the young people, so you can learn how to get to them and the minds can come together." (Pleasant Hill, Ohio.)

"Mine is a rural church. You have to consider the farmer who has chores until 7:30 or 7:45 p. m., and the program has to be arranged about that. In rural areas you have to face the possibility of Sunday as the only day to hold church activities. Association meetings attract a small number. Women's Fellowship, Laymen's Fellowship, and Pilgrim Fellowship all meet on the same day. We have an attendance of 300, which is one-tenth of the total Association. About four days ahead of the regular meeting, we contact each person and send him a copy of the agenda, so that they will have time to think about it. I have found this very successful in church school and Board meetings. We save 85 per cent of our time." (Creighton, Nebr.)

"In order to express gratitude to our teachers and Religious Education Committee, we got together enough money so we could offer to pay one-half the expenses for these people, or any others interested in Religious Education, to attend one of the summer camps or conferences. This plan has been very successful. Whenever we find ourselves running short of money, one of the church groups comes through." (Ontario, Calif.)

"I feel we don't start young enough to teach our people to be Christian homemakers. We try to prepare them for everything but what they are going to be. We should spend some time teaching young people, at an early age, to help them to a Christian understanding of their relationships to living together in homemaking.

"We also conduct the Ministry of Music program. It has been said this program can be carried on successfully only in large church school. This is not true, for our church school is small, and we have been very successful. It has given the children a sense of importance. It is set up as follows: Children's Choir—grades 5 through 7; High School Choir—grades 8 through high school; Adult Choir—after graduation.

"We have a Worship Center in our home, which includes a lighted candle. While the candle is lighted, it is understood no one talks. When the candle is extinguished, then the service is conducted." (Waterbury, Conn.)

"During the church year, we send the families three letters with material for a worship service for the two great church celebrations. The Christmas mail includes a service of worship to be conducted in the home on Christmas Day. During Lent we send a service of worship to be conducted in the home on Easter Sunday. Also at Easter time we send a copy of Thoughts of God for Boys and Girls to the parents."

"We started a circulating library for our younger departments, at the suggestion of Miss Grace Storms, who also recommended the books for this library. Several of the children come from non-church homes. They take the books home and make their parents look at them and read them. This project has been very successful." (Fargo, N. D.)

"Ministers can let it be known when preaching their sermons that they are available when people are meeting critical situations and feel they need help."

"We have Family Night suppers every three weeks. Many of the younger parents bring their children, who are cared for during the evening program. Speakers are chosen to give suggestions for family worship together and other family activities. We have a growing lending library for the parents." (Bridgeport, Conn.)

"We have a weekly church bulletin, independently planned, and sent to every home in the parish, including the homes of church school children."

THE GREAT DIVIDE

By CHARLES A. WELLS

It comes with a shock sometimes when we realize how far man has advanced in material things and how primitive he remains in things of the spirit. Flashes of nobility come to him at times when some vision of an ordered world arises, ruled by moral force and not physical violence—motivated by spiritual concepts and not by hatred, greed or passion. Then the noble vision fades and there he stands again, club in hand! If the world loses faith in the power of ideals again, and we enter another era of vast rearmament, it will do us no good to blame it all on others. For nazism, fascism and communism have not been the products of certain peoples but the failure of the whole world to meet the needs of men. None of these curses would have overtaken us if we had not all failed spiritually. Men must be awakened to the only way our world can grow spiritually to match its physical and material achievement—a new birth of the spirit of God in the human heart.

Thoughtful and Generous Church Helps Provide Car

Rev. Kenneth Register, Pastor of Union Church, Burlington, North Carolina.

One of the most pleasant surprises of this pastor's ministry came on Easter Sunday morning when at Sunday School assembly $850.00 was presented to him as a gift from the church and community to be applied on a new car.

The balance due on the new car after trading the old one in was loaned to him by a faithful member of the church with no interest whatsoever.

Preachers are sometimes accused of talking too much, but on this particular morning this preacher was so completely floored that he could hardly say anything. Speechless here, would be the proper word.

The people of this church and community probably will never know how much what they did is appreciated. For words say so little when one has so much to say.

Now these folks would probably have done the same for any pastor who might have been serving this church at the time under the same conditions. But this pastor is just selfish enough to be mighty glad that he was the fellow who was pastor at the time this act of kindness was done.

A most grateful pastor,

KENNETH D. REGISTER.

News Flashes

The many friends of Rev. B. J. Earp, 911 Tryon Street, High Point, North Carolina, will regret to learn of the critical illness of Mr. Earp. He is a patient at the Boulevard Hospital, High Point, N. C.

Special Evangelistic Services were held at Turner's Chapel Church, near Sanford, the week of May 15. Rev. Mack V. Welch assisted the minister, Rev. Raymond T. Grissom in these services. Ten new members were received into the church as a result of the special services.

Rev. W. A. Grissom has accepted a call from the Church at Franklin, Virginia, to become its pastor. Mr. Grissom has been supplying the church for some months. We extend to the Franklin Church congratulations on securing Mr. Grissom's services and we wish Mr. Grissom much success in his new work. He is a member of the Liberty (Vance) Church, near Henderson, is a graduate of Elon College and of Yale Divinity School.

Don't forget your Cent-A-Meal contributions for missions. The Mission Period ends in June and we earnestly hope that on or before the last Sunday in June our churches will gather in the Cent-A-Meal contributions and send them to the Mission Board of the Southern Convention, Elon College, North Carolina. The Cent-A-Meal gifts will credit on the Home and Foreign Missions apportionment of the churches or they may be designated for the Shaowu Mission or for any other Home or Foreign Mission enterprise.

The Committee on the Ministry and the Executive Committee of the North Carolina and Virginia Conference were in session at Elon College on May 23. After due examination of candidates for the ministry, Clyde L. Fields, a senior at Elon College, was approved for ordination. William T. Scott, Jr., who will complete his work at Elon College at the conclusion of the summer session, expects to enter seminary in the fall. He was approved for license to preach.

The annual Homecoming and Memorial Day services were held at the Pleasant Ridge Christian Church in Randolph County on Sunday, May 22. Rev. Clyde Fields is the pastor of this church, and a large number were in attendance at these all-day services. Mr. Fields delivered the sermon in the morning and Superintendent Scott spoke in the afternoon. The Pleasant Ridge Church is now constructing a parsonage near the church, and it is hoped that it will be ready for occupancy in the early fall. This church is making consistent progress, and is one of our grand old churches in the Western North Carolina Conference.

The annual Homecoming and Memorial Day services at Belew Creek Congregational Christian Church were held Sunday, May 22. Supt. William T. Scott, a former pastor of Belew Creek, delivered the morning sermon and Rev. William J. Andes, minister of our church in Winston-Salem delivered the sermon in the afternoon. Rev. Allen L. Hurdle is the minister of this church. Belew Creek and Salem Chapel churches are proceeding with plans for the erection of a parsonage to be located at Belew Creek. It is expected that the parsonage construction will begin in the near future. These two fine churches are to be commended on the forward step which they are taking.

The constituency of the Southern Convention extends to the Timber Ridge Church in the Virginia Valley Conference sympathy in the severe damage done to the church building on May 22. As has been previously reported in THE CHRISTIAN SUN the damage was extensive and repair costs will approximate $2,000. The Timber Ridge Church has recently completed a parsonage at some sacrifice. We are certain that any contribution to the Timber Ridge Church repair fund will be gratefully received. Any reader of THE SUN, or any church, wishing to share in the cost of restoring the Timber Ridge Church may feel free to do so. Contributions may be sent to The Mission Board at Elon College, N. C., or sent directly to the Timber Ridge Christian Church, c/o Rev. Roy D. Coulter, pastor, High View, West Virginia.

Mrs. Arthur P. Pratt, wife of the Reverend Arthur P. Pratt, D. D., sustained a triple fracture of the ankle, on May 19, at White Post, near Winchester, Virginia, when Mr. Pratt, to avoid a collision with a big truck, was forced off the road. In some manner the door of the car swung open and Mrs. Pratt was thrown from the car. She was taken by ambulance to the Winchester Memorial Hospital where she is recovering. Dr. Pratt and Mrs. Pratt live at present in Mt. Dora, Florida, and were on their way to Maine for the summer when the accident occurred. For twenty-five years Dr. Pratt was the pastor of the Second Congregational Church in Greenfield, Massachusetts, one of our larger churches in that section of the State. Dr. Pratt delivered the morning sermon in our Winchester Church on Sunday, May 29. His message was a challenge and an inspiration to an appreciative audience.

INTERESTING MEETING HELD AT BURLINGTON, N. C.

A very interesting meeting was held at the First Congregational Christian Church, Burlington, North Carolina, Tuesday, May 24, attended by laymen from the Congregational Christian Church and the Evangelical and Reformed Church of Burlington. The purpose of the meeting was to think together concerning Church Extension in the Burlington area. It is hoped that other such meetings may be held in the future and that any plans for Church Extension in the area will be done on a united basis between these churches which in all probability will become the United Church of Christ in 1950. Rev. W. Millard Stevens, pastor of the Congregational Christian Church of Burlington and Rev. Harvey Fesperman of the Evangelical and Reformed Church are much interested in undertaking this important work as a joint enterprise. The meeting held on Tuesday night was unofficial, but we are hoping that the churches will officially approve the appointing of a permanent committee which will confer on this important matter in the future.

AN APPRECIATION.

We of the Piedmont Ministerial Association wish to express our regret that Rev. Joe A. French has left this section to become pastor of our church at Lanett Alabama. Brother French was a most active member of this Association and will certainly be missed. We feel sure that anywhere Joe goes he will do a swell job. Joe's leaving this section is our loss but it will be Lanett's gain. Our prayers and best wishes are with you and yours, Joe, and the very best of success to you and your new pastorate.

Established 1844 by Rev. Daniel W. Kerr.

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

WORSHIP: PRIVILEGE AND DUTY.

"How shall we sing the Lord's song in a strange land?" This ancient lament reminds us of the poverty, the loneliness and heartache of the Exiles. Uprooted and transplanted, their plans and habits were frustrated. Deprived of the sacred associations of the temple and the usual accoutrements of worship, song died on their lips. Today there are many exiles. The vast upheavals caused by war have sent many people into strange lands. It is estimated that between 20 and 30 million people in Western Europe were moved from their homelands during the five years following the outbreak of the war. When hostilities ceased, all but a million and a quarter returned to their homes. These, for fear of their lives or liberties, were unable to return to their homelands. Contemplate their unutterable loneliness as they live in isolated and concentrated colonies, deprived of life-long associations.

How fortunate, how privileged we in America are! We are blessed with a stable economy, architectural variety and beauty, and countless aids for our worship. Our worship is unmolested. Organs and instruments, vested choirs and trained voices, ushers and orders of worship await the eager worshipper. One can hardly find a community of any consequence in America where there is no opportunity for corporate worship. And yet many of our citizens never avail themselves of the opportunity for worship. Some who attend never really worship. Their lips remain sealed during the singing of the Doxology as if God had shut the windows of heaven and withheld his grace and mercy. For others the ancient text should read: "How shall we sing a strange or new song in a familiar land?" If it be true that "to whom much is given, much shall be required," then there devolves upon privileged America a solemn and inescapable responsibility for the maintenance and leadership of worship. For your guidance in worship, turn to page sixteen.

PENTECOST, 1949.

"Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

That was the question the tiny group of Christian believers asked of the apostles at Pentecost.

Today, in a time of "blood and fire and vapor of smoke," in a time when the sun is still darkened with the dust of rubble cities, millions of Christians on every continent ask, as that little group asked at Pentecost—"Men and brethren, what shall we do?"

Peter said: "Repent!" And the depths of our need for repentance today have been measured by the Message of Amsterdam: "We have tried to serve God and Mammon, put other loyalties before loyalty to Christ, confused the Gospel with our own economic or national or racial interests, and feared war more than we hated it."

Peter said: "Be baptized in Christ." Across 1900 years of division, of clashing creeds and churches, the words ring out: "Be baptized every one of you in the name of Jesus Christ for the remission of sins." And that command admits no higher loyalty, no cleft of purpose.

Peter gave a promise—"Ye shall receive the gift of the Holy Ghost"; and on Whitsunday of each year we see again the hope of that promise. And in that hope, Christians the world over are spiritually "with one accord in one place," as they were at Pentecost. Through missions, through church union, through the World Council of Churches, we draw nearer the fulfillment of that promise, nearer the time when they day of Pentecost is fully come.

Peter said: "For the promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off." It is to all faithful people in the Church Universal to the ends of time and to the ends of the earth.

PRIMER ON ECUMENICITY.

To the average church goer, the ecumenical movement does not mean a great deal. This has been due to a lack of information about the movement in action. Also by the seemingly "top level" nature of some ecumenical conferences.

One of the first booklets to help dispell this condition has just been published by the International Missionary Council. Entitled "The World Christian Community in Action," the 42-page document is written by Kenneth Scott Latourette and William R. Hogg.

The booklet deals with the inspiring story of missions during the war and the means to keep alive "orphaned missions"—that is missions cut off by war from their home base. The story is told in simple, graphic terms, and presents one of the most moving chapters in missionary history.

At the outbreak of the war, one-half of the total missionary personnel came from North America, three-eighths from Britain, and slightly more than one-eighth from the continent. Expenditures showed almost identical proportions. Yet Continental missionaries reached more than 22 per cent of the entire missionary field.

The booklet describes how through the heroic and sacrificial efforts of Christian groups in nations at war with each other, these Continental missions were permitted to survive.

As late as December, 1940, not a Protestant mission anywhere in the world had been suspended or abandoned. As the war grew in intensity, missionaries around the world "tightened their belts." When the war ended, the non-Roman Catholic missionary enterprise remained pretty much intact.

Danish missionaries in Syria lived on as little as $10 to $16 a month. Part of the money for their support came from German missionaries living in Palestine.

At the same time, German missions were aided by Christian groups from enemy countries. Funds to continue their work came from such widely scattered countries as New Zealand, the Congo, China and Japan.

The hardships endured by missionary groups can be gathered from these facts: The original minimum annual budget considered necessary to support orphaned missions was $2,000,000. Yet in no single year, did contributions exceed $1,000,000.

Copies of World Christian Community in Action may be obtained for 20 cents a copy from the International Missionary Council, 156 Fifth Avenue, New York City. For quantity orders generous rate reductions are provided.

The Liquor Advertising Problem Again

An Editorial in The Voice

Once again the matter of liquor advertising is looming on the congressional horizon.

Mr. Bryson of South Carolina has introduced a bill into the House of Representatives which, if adopted, would bar liquor advertising from interstate commerce. A bill will be offered in the Senate which will not be exactly the same as that introduced by Senator Capper in the Eightieth Congress, but will certainly be an effort to curb some of the more outrageous features of liquor advertising.

Meanwhile the liquor traffic has its story prepared. It is this: Liquor advertising does not make drinkers nor does it increase the consumption of liquor; it is only a weapon used in the warfare between liquor manufacturers for the "business" which already exists and would exist under any circumstances. Absolute purity is a rare thing, but this is undoubtedly nonsense in its purest form. Meanwhile, the liquor traffic knows that it is rapidly advancing toward a corner where trouble is going to be found. Mr. John Orr Young, founder of Young and Rubicam, and now head of his own public relations firm, recently warned the liquor business that "beer and liquor advertising is headed for trouble." It is characterized, he said, by "newspaper ads featuring illustrations of boys and girls having a happy time in the swankier saloons." Mr. Young attacked the "man of distinction" ads as "bowl-ing over the youth of the nation." He also advised the breweries to confine their advertising to the "adult approach," which the "home life in America" series clearly indicates they have no intention of doing. The New Hampshire Liquor Control Commission says that all the companies are pressing them to loosen up on advertising restrictions. "Beer, wine, and liquor firms alike are anxious to introduce 'atmosphere' into their ads showing their product consumed by socially prominent people in richly furnished homes or being enjoyed by a group of happy week-enders in a hunting lodge."

Around Capitol Hill, an increasing number of men are remarking that entirely too much money is being spent for liquor advertising anyway, while measures have been considered in Georgia, Indiana, North Carolina, Minnesota and Tennessee which would sharply curtail liquor advertising. One measure would forbid the circulation within the state of any magazine carrying such advertisements.

Beer advertising has quite openly been directed to the promotion of the drinking custom among young people, and among women. A series of Schlitz ads is quite obviously intended to induce young people to begin the habit. Schafer has been quoting sports heroes in an appeal to youth. The "Miss Rheingold" ads exploit young girls, and this same appeal has been spotted in Goebel advertising. In Michigan, brewery sponsorship of the Detroit Tigers Baseball broadcast, has aroused a good deal of feeling.

As for the "man of distinction" ads, what sort of human being is it who will allow himself to be advertised as a "man of distinction," anyway? He makes himself a figure of fun, but does not mitigate the iniquity of the whole concept.

In Spirits Magazine for March 1948, we find some interesting information as to the amount of advertising in various publications. The January to December advertising in Colliers, was 18 per cent liquor promotion. The percentage for Life was 12; for The New Yorker, 18; for Cue, 26; for Newsweek, 10; for Time, 12. Among the general monthlies, American Legion gives 26 per cent of its display advertising to intoxicants, and this hurts: first, because of the great numbers of American Legion Veterans who are sons of abstaining homes and who maintain such homes themselves; and second, because of the terrible ravages of alcoholism among veterans. Other magazine records: American, 22 per cent given over to liquor advertising; Cosmopolitan, 18 per cent; Gourmet, 47 per cent; Liberty, 16 per cent; True, 26 per cent. Too many of the outdoor and sports magazines carry liquor advertising. From January to December, the Field and Stream record was 8 per cent; Outdoor Life, 9 per cent; Sports Afield, 10 per cent. This is just promoting tragedy.

The liquor advertising issue will not down; it is coming before Congress until Congress does something effective about it. In the Federal field, it is an immediate point at issue, and Congressmen will have to take their stand for the American home or for the American saloon.

DP'S—FATE OR FORTUNE?

An effort to secure at least 4,500 assurances for displaced persons from Congregation Christian Churches is being called for by the Congregational Christian Service Committee, according to Howard Kester, newly appointed director of the denomination's Displaced Persons Program.

June has been designated as "DP Action Month" by all the agencies co-operating in the Displaced Persons Program, and Mr. Kester points out that the Protestants of America are lagging far behind their Roman Catholic and Jewish neighbors in providing assurances for the heart-sick and hopeless Protestants in the DP camps of Europe.

"The Founders of our Faith and Fellowship were the first Pilgrims; we must not forsake the 'delayed pilgrims' who seek a new faith and fellowship on these shores," said Mr. Kester whose headquarters are at 110 East 29th Street, New York City. Continuing, Mr. Kester said he hoped the denomination would be willing to provide "blanket assurances for hundreds of displaced persons so that we may begin to achieve the basic task of getting the people settled." It appears from available data that as of the middle of May approximately 150 assurances have been secured through Congregational Christian sources.

Out of a total of 80,886 sponsorships received in Washington for the 205,000 persons admissible under the DP Act, only 8,365 have come from Protestant and Eastern Orthodox sponsors in America. While 35% of the DP's are Protestant, the Protestant bodies of the nation have provided only 13% of the assurances.

SUFFOLK LETTER.

People can ask the most annoying questions. I wanted to tell once, for instance, how many new members I had received into the Suffolk Church and how I received them; and before I could get started I was asked: What did you do with them? Now that we have that so quickly "unsettled" perhaps I shall go ahead with saying I have received, up to now, 869. I shall come to the question a bit later. Let me first go ahead with the How.

Of that number 250 have been boys and girls who have come to the warm, friendly sessions of a pastor's class for five meetings. There I have had the joy of their friendship and comradeship in the learning what comprises being a Christian, and a member of the church. We have talked about God as Creator and Father, about Jesus as a loving Friend and Savior, and how His Spirit is with us still. To these three lessons we have added one on where the Bible fits into this picture and how it may be a friendly guide to growth in Christian character and usefulness. Lastly we have looked at the practical help of the church and the joyous privileges of helping others through it as well as thanking God for all His goodness in worship. Some of the most pleasant of all my memories linger about these fine boys and girls.

In the course of my ministry I have had the experience of talking with a number of young fathers and mothers on the occasion of the Christening of a child. Sometimes it happens that such a mother has never made a profession of her faith in Christ and united with a church, but more often it has been the father. How thrilled I have been to present the call of Christ to them, and to see them yield their lives and become members of the church. Frequently I have had some young person in a group of two or three who have dropped into the study to have a friendly chat with the pastor to see what was in my heart and come back later to discuss uniting with the church.

The largest number is that of those who have transferred their membership to the church from some back-home church. This comes about by being constantly alert to new people in the community, and by watching every organization's membership roll to see who was on such a roll but not on the church roll. Of these a special list of some twenty-five or thirty are placed on a card and attached to the desk lamp where at least the light of the lamp shines constantly on them! That fact calls me to prayer and work toward seeing if I cannot let the light of God's love shine upon them until they find it a joy to be a part of His Church. Practically every month and often two or three Sundays in a month see new members being received into the church.

Now a word about what we have done with the members received. Many of them are filling positions of honor and trust in the church. Five of them are on the board of deacons. Literally scores of them have some special trust in the organizations and choirs of the church. A large number of them are teachers in the Sunday school. It is a rather hard job to find front rank positions for that many but all of them have found a friendly fellowship, and have served to help keep a great church growing.

JOHN G. TRUITT.

ALTHOUGH A STRANGER IN A LARGE CITY, HE FOUND THE CHURCH THERE.

Tommy Shoemaker of our Pleasant Ridge Church (R), near Ramseur, North Carolina, came to Winston-Salem to enter Barber School. For the first several months, he returned home each week-end. Encouraged by Si Pell of the Pleasant Ridge Church, Tommy called the minister of the Winston-Salem Church. Then Tommy really "found the Church there." He was a constant attendant at any and all of the services of the church in Winston-Salem and at Pfafftown. He took part in the young people's work each Sunday, attended the North Carolina and Virginia Conference of Young People in Reidsville, assisted the young people to serve an Alumni Supper for Elon College Alumni at the Winston-Salem Church. Not only that, he was always ready to help in the work of the church. From mopping the basement floor to assisting in pastoral visiting, Tommy was always ready to serve. He led in prayer for each church in their morning services of worship. He served as an Usher in the Moravian Easter Sunrise Service, along with workers from the local church. We in Winston-Salem and Pfafftown are glad that Tommy has come our way and are grateful for his presence with us.

As this is being written, Tommy is taking his State Board Examination and is hoping to be able to find a successful life among the barbers of our nation. Beyond this he hopes to find work near his home church and there be active in its work.

ORCHIDS TO THE LAYMEN'S FELLOWSHIP.

On June 23, 1942, the Unit Plan was inaugurated at the General Council, meeting at Durham, N. H. In the drafting of the Plan, members of the Laymen's Fellowship took a prominent part. The endorsement of the Plan by the Fellowship supplied encouragement without which it could hardly have been undertaken. The initial gifts, made while the Council was in session, came largely from members of the Fellowship. Donald Adams served as an executive officer of the Plan during its earlier years. Ronald Bridges and Alfred C. Howell were charter members of the National Committee.

Throughout the seven years of the promotion of the Plan, the Fellowship backed it loyally. In many states the Laymen's organization and the Conference Unit Plan Committee have been identical. In every state the Unit Plan has depended upon the Fellowship for workers and promoters.

Last February, when the Unit Plan seemed to be hesitating within $10,000 of its goal, it was the Laymen's Fellowship who contributed the final push that brought it to completion.

On April 30, 1949, the Unit Plan reached its goal of $1,200,000. The National Unit Plan Committee, the Annuity Fund for Congregational Ministers, the churches of our denomination, and above all the ministers and widows who depend upon the Original Plan of the Annuity Fund for their living in the closing years of their lives, turn to the Laymen's Fellowship with heartfelt gratitude.

News of Elon College

By PRESIDENT L. E. SMITH

ELON COLLEGE MEMORIAL GYMNASIUM CORNERSTONE LAYING.*

Elon College was chartered by the State of North Carolina in 1889. The first building was erected and the doors of the college were opened for the matriculation of students in September, 1890. In the early morning hours of January 17, 1923, this original building was completely destroyed by fire. Five modern fire-proof buildings were erected to replace the one destroyed. The Masonic Lodge, the Grand Lodge of North Carolina, laid the cornerstone for the original building. The Grand Lodge of North Carolina laid the cornerstones for all five of the new buildings erected in 1923. It is certainly fitting and proper that the Grand Lodge of North Carolina should lay the cornerstone for our new Memorial Gymnasium now in the process of erection. This building is being erected as a memorial to the Elon College men and women who lost their lives in World War I and World War II. These men and women gave their lives, their all for home and country and for freedom and justice. It is fitting that a memorial to them should stand on our campus. The alumni and friends of Elon College are glad for the opportunity of erecting this memorial. Many of us could not go. Our lives have been spared. In gratitude we should make our offering in partial payment of the debt we owe. We all want to do our share. No one will want to neglect this opportunity and be counted remiss in duty by his own conscience.

This memorial gymnasium is 137 feet wide, 186 feet long, and when completed will contain offices, press rooms, broadcasting booths, classrooms, and all facilities required in a modern gymnasium. The building provides for a playing floor with three basketball courts and a seating capacity of 4,200 for basketball purposes. For assembly purposes it will seat more than 6,000. This building is located in Alamance County. It is an Alamance County building. It will be available to the citizens of the county for basketball games, tournaments and public gatherings of all kinds.

Contractors of the state and adjoining states were asked to submit bids for the construction of this building. Low bids on all requirements of the building totalled $237,000.00. The Board of Trustees voted that the college should act as its own contractor. Totalling contracts that have been awarded and an accurate estimate of the costs of other facilities indicate that the building itself will be constructed $150,000, certainly not to exceed $175,000. The building and furnishings will approximate $200,000. We shall need your help, the help of all of our friends, and we are confident that you and they will give it.

The erection of this gymnasium is a very important step in the program of advance for Elon College. We have completed the power house. That was necessary. The gymnasium is equally necessary for a well-rounded curriculum to meet the demands of this day. Elon College has a very fine Physical Education Department. It includes health, physical training and intercollegiate sports. Our faculty for this department is A-1, first class. This building, together with ample room and facilities for an inclusive program of physical education will give Elon College equipment to match its department and personnel for health and physical education with facilities that are modern and efficient in every particular. I take this occasion to express the college's appreciation of every contribution and cooperation contributed for the purpose of erecting this building and to express the hope that our friends, the citizens of Alamance County, and all will stick by until the job is completed and paid for.

Also, I express warm appreciation and genuine gratitude to our friends, the Grand Lodge of North Carolina, particularly, the Grand Master and his official associates, for their presence and the dignity with which they have conducted these services in helping to lay the foundation for what we believe to be a monument to the youth of our county, state, and nation.

APPORTIONMENT GIVING.

Elon College is aware that as summer comes on some of our Sunday schools and churches are likely to become less responsive to the needs of the college. The "leveling off" in contributions for the college seems to be rather early this year. We trust that our churches would be reminded that the needs of the college are greater really during the summer months than any other time. Salaries are earned in nine months but paid on a twelve-month basis. Consequently our payroll is greatly increased during the summer months by additional salary stipends for work done by the teachers. A reminder of this additional strain on the college's finances should be sufficient to elicit additional contributions for the support of the college. All contributions are credited on conference apportionments and college expresses its gratitude for continued support.

REV. DAVID W. SHEPHERD SPEAKS AT ELON.

Rev. David W. Shepherd, D. D., Superintendent of the Southeast Convention covering the States of Alabama, Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee, with headquarters in Atlanta, Georgia, was the Alumni speaker in connection with the Elon College Commencement. Dr. Shepherd is a graduate of Elon College and was ordained by the North Carolina and Virginia Conference. Following his graduation from Elon College, Dr. Shepherd attended Vanderbilt School of Religion and then engaged in serving rural churches in Georgia for a number of years. He became Pastor-at-Large serving in Georgia, Kentucky and Tennessee and later became the Superintendent of Congregational Christian Churches in that area appointed by the Board of Home Missions. Dr. Shepherd was a member of the Bethlehem Christian Church, near Elon College, throughout His early youth.

A young soldier, who had led a careless life, but had become afterwards a Christian, described very well the change that had been wrought in him when he said: "Jesus Christ said to me, Right about face! And I heard and obeyed Him in my heart." That is exactly what we call "conversion." It is a turning-about of the face—from the world to God. But with the face it is a turning also of the heart.—C. A. Salmond.

*This address was given by Dr. L. E. Smith at the ceremonies for the laying of the cornerstone on May 28 at 12 o'clock noon.

Christian Missions

At Home and Abroad

MISSIONARY CAREER IN AFRICA.

Miss Lois Opal King, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. I. King of Chicora, Pennsylvania, has been appointed as a career missionary in Africa by the American Board. Miss King will be a teacher and general Christian worker in Portuguese West Africa.

Born in Concord, Pennsylvania, Miss King was educated in the local Township High School of Butler County and then went to Maryville College in Tennessee, after which she earned her M.R.E. at the Bible Seminary in New York writing a thesis on "Recreation in Rural Communities in Relation to the Church." This was followed by special study at Cornell University along the line of agricultural work in the mission field and a course in Columbia University in Library Science.

A MISSIONARY JEEP.

When Miss Florence C. Malcolm, Massachusetts Christian teacher, sailed back to her work among the Ovimbundu people of Chilesso, West Africa, last December she took with her "Pal," a jeep pick-up, gift of friends in America. Living 72 miles from the nearest railroad with only two trains a week Pal was a necessity for Miss Malcolm, who is a Congregational Christian missionary under the American Board.

"The road for the first 50 miles up the coast was terrible," writes Miss Malcolm of her return trip, and Pal learned the sad lesson that the roads she travels on are not like the highway from Boston to New York, her previous trip. I am glad I have a jeep pick-up for it is much more practical for the work here in the jungle."

Miss Malcolm, who was born in Somerville, Massachusetts, is the sister of Wilbur Malcolm of Carlisle, Massachusetts. When she reached Chilesso she found over 300 persons waiting patiently in front of her home to sing songs, present flowers and greet her. Miss Malcolm is principal of Swanson Memorial Mission School as well as supervisor of some 100 branch schools in the kraal.

"Grandmothers clapped their hands and said to me: 'Our child has come!' while the youngsters said, 'Our mother has come!' Many thanked me for bringing the jeep and some for having brought a red-colored jeep!"

The jeep Pal will enable Miss Malcolm to visit more of her rural schools than when, earlier in her career, she had to travel by bush hammock carried by two African men. Inside of a week Pal has made her first trip into the jungle visiting a young Christian Umbundu pastor and wife, former pupils of Miss Malcolm, who are responsible for the religious, educational and agricultural work among 30 villages.

DEATH CLAIMS KOBE COLLEGE TEACHER.

Word of the death on May 11 of Miss Marguerite Rose Rasmussen, 23-year-old teacher of English in Kobe College, Nishinomiya, Japan, has just been received by the American Board.

Miss Rasmussen graduated from Rockford College, Rockford, Illinois, last June and was one of two girls sent from that college to teach in Kobe College. Rockford College has been a sister institution to Kobe College since the early 1920's and students have come to Rockford from Kobe under an exchange basis. Miss Rasmussen went out under a fellowship granted by the "Friends of Kobe College" sponsored by the Kobe College Corporation, Chicago, Illinois.

Kobe College, a Christian institution founded by missionaries of the American Board of Foreign Missions in 1875, is now an interdenominational institution. The purpose of Kobe College is "by means of a Christian education, to train young women into a harmonious development of body, mind and spirit, thus to equip them for useful service to God and their fellowmen." Many of our readers associate Kobe College with Miss Angie Crew.

AGRICULTURE AND MISSIONS.

Dr. Walter C. Lowdermilk, former assistant chief of the U. S. Soil Conservation Service and technical consultant to Agricultural Missions, Inc., has left the States for a ten-month survey of soil conservation problems in six African countries.

The main objective of his tour will be to promote better land use and to consult with local governments and British and American missionary societies. He will visit Sierra Leone, the Gold Coast, Nigeria, Northern and Southern Rhodesia, Nyassaland and other territories.

Mr. John H. Reisner, executive secretary of Agricultural Missions, who arranged the tour in cooperation with the British Colonial Office said the scientist's visit was in line with the "historic missionary tradition of making scientific knowledge available to so-called backward areas."

Terming the continued deterioration of African lands as "one of the greatest threats to the future of Africa," he said that emotional and economic appeals made by the government and missionary groups had not appreciably altered the problem of land conservation.

"The chances of dealing with the land problem successfully will be much greater with an aroused African conscience," he continued, "and by developing an understanding of the long time issue involved."

Dr. Lowdermilk, whose tour is financed by the Carnegie Corporation of New York, will make special soil erosion and water conservation studies in cooperation with local government agencies.

Church Women at Work

With Emphasis on Missions

MRS. W. J. ANDES, Editor

637 S. Sunset Drive, Winston-Salem, N. C.

TO THE WOMEN OF EASTERN VIRGINIA CONFERENCE.

DEAR FRIENDS:

Some time ago I wrote a letter to the presidents of societies asking that the name or names of delegates to the Convention School of Missions be sent me. There are over 40 societies in our Conference and I have received 15 replies. Does that mean that the others are not to be represented? I hope not! If you haven't sent your delegate's name please do so at once.

It has been our aim to have every church represented. I hope that it will be so. It is not only a pleasure and a privilege to go, but a Christian duty. Too often women criticize the policies of the Board and Convention when they have stayed at home and not tried to help form the plans of our body. Now is your chance!

In addition to the inspiration of the speakers about whom you have already read, there will be the opportunity to see old and new friends, and to undertake important business matters. The Thank Offering, new resolutions, new officers are a part of the agenda. Let us have a representative group present to set the pattern for the next two years. If you do not go or have your organization represented please do not complain to me about anything done or left undone at the meeting.

If your memory is short, write down the dates or tie a string on your finger:

June 13-15
Elon College, N. C.

A few people have written asking how to get to Elon. If you drive, go on the route nearest your home leading to Burlington and you will find Elon a few miles beyond. Greyhound and Trailway Bus Lines make connections either there or in Burlington; also the Southern Railroad. It is a very accessible spot. If you have a spirit of adventure there is airplane service into Greensboro, which is not too far from Elon. So there are not any excuses about not being able to find a way to go.

It is true that it takes time. But it isn't very long. From Monday noon until Wednesday noon seems like a few hours in the life of any busy woman. And we shall be busy!

As president of the Conference I am expecting a good attendance and will be greatly disappointed if we have just fifteen or so. We are expected and we shall, I trust, be there. To serve in our Church is such a privilege and such a sacred trust. Let us dwell on these matters as we plan to go.

Yours for traveling Southward

FOR THE CHILDREN

MRS. R. L. HOUSE, Editor

DEAR BOYS AND GIRLS:

It is June and vacation time. School is over and for many of you there is more time for play and fun. Many of you will be going to Bible School, some of you to camps and the beaches or to the mountains. City children will want to visit the country and the country children like to come to town. No matter what, I hope you have a wonderful vacation!

* * *

Two weeks ago I was writing about vandals breaking into churches. Last week four boys broke into a church near ours. They destroyed the church office and set fire to parts of the building. Fortunately the fire was confined to small spots. A juvenile court officer caught these boys a few days later and learned their story. They were 11, 11, 13 and 14 years old. They often spent the night on the street and their mothers didn't know or didn't care that their beds were empty. The oldest said: "We had to do something so that's what we did." No respect for God's House. No companionship or friendly ties with home. All of them came from moderately well-to-do homes and lived in a better-than-average neighborhood. Be bigger than that boys and girls. Take pride in beautiful buildings, especially churches.

* * *

June is also the month of brides. Weddings are lovely and pleasant to see. I know that many little girls dream of growing up and having a beautiful wedding and boys think of a pretty girl they can sometime love. In our country we act like falling in love, getting married and staying married is so sweet and charming. And that is not so. Of course it is fun to fall in love but it is more important to be a real friend and have a real friend in the one you marry. Two people living together have a lot of hard work to make a marriage happy. I have seen a great many marriages and heard the woes of a lot of people who wished they weren't married, and I still think that 49 times out of 50 they could have made their marriage work if they really had tried! If you are thinking about a June wedding in 1969 you can begin making your wedding preparations right now. If you are a girl you can learn to cook, sew, clean, do home nursing and care for small children. If you marry into a rich family and never have to do these things you will still have to supervise. Nothing can take the place of these womanly arts, creative and satisfying. Girls were created by the Heavenly Father to nurse, mother and care for the race. Boys can learn some homework, too! In our modern time it is essential that parents divide work and how pathetic is the young man who can't scramble eggs or bathe a baby. Yes, boys, I know some manly fathers who do—one a six-foot tall airline pilot.

Both boys and girls can learn of God's will and the ways He has planned for us by reading the Bible, talking with parents and going to church school. You can learn about sex. Just a biology or hygiene course in high school isn't enough. Your dearest older friend—parent or aunt or teacher or your minister should help you with this basic problem, far more than the biological factor of sex there is the emotional part.

Then stop being romantic in a gushy, glamourized sort of way. Be practical. There are more girls than boys. So every boy has several choices and each of them might make a good marriage. Good looks help, but a godly spirit, the same religious beliefs and emotional maturity are really more important. Happy wedding bells in a distant June!

BUYING GOOD BEHAVIOR (?)

By HILDA RICHARDSON.

Issued by the National Kindergarten Association.

The visitor listened with surprise to the promise her cousin was making to her little family. It was a raw, bleak day, and none of the children had reason for feeling jubilant; all would be forced to stay indoors, unless the weather changed or an errand took them out in raincoats and rubbers. Even the grownups felt the influence of the gloom.

"Well," the mother was saying thoughtfully, if everything goes satisfactorily I think we could manage to have the members of the Sunshine Group for a little party this afternoon."

"Goody, Goody!" cried the children. "We'll be careful all the time," said one. "And if we go out we won't wade in puddles or do anything else we ought not to do," said another. "We want a party! We want a party!" they all exclaimed.

When the hubbub had subsided and the children were debating the merits of apples, candy, oranges, and other things as refreshments for the coming party, the visitor expressed her perplexity. "Mary," she said, "I am surprised at you. I thought former school teachers were models regarding discipline, but here you are practically promising to pay Sue and Billy and Joe to be good. You can't camouflage your motives to youngsters, you know. They realize they are being bribed."

"I suppose in a way I am bidding for their good behavior," said the hostess. "But, whatever you call it, it works well. Anticipation can give a lot of pleasure, and it costs nothing. You know my Aunt Laura, who brought me up, never, never let me know that if I succeeded in a difficult undertaking she would reward me. She thought that would be buying good behavior."

"Your Aunt Laura was a very upright woman who never shirked what she thought was her duty, Mary, but I would scarcely like to have her methods used in bringing up my two children. I remember you never knew, even a day before, whether you were to have a birthday party or not."

"Aunt Laura did her best, as she saw it, and I am very much indebted to her, but I did lose all the pleasure of anticipation and the joy of helping in the preparations. I know I'll be beset with questions from now on until our little party comes off, but it doesn't matter. All the dear, delightful, separate surprises that will be enjoyed will have a double meaning to the children, and the interest they will have in helping me to plan these surprises will keep them on their best behavior."

"That is a new way of thinking," said the guest. "I must acknowledge I have been following a very different course. Threatening, however, does not stop my Barbara and Jimmy from loitering when I send them on an errand; they do dilly-dally so much. It seems as if they find every little puddle, and they will kick through each one, no matter whether I scold or quietly reproach them regarding the condition of their clothes. The street crossings are in a wretched state of disrepair, you know, and the children either forget or never even hear their mother's warnings."

"The Bible abounds in promises," said the hostess. "Long life, happiness, peace of mind, and other blessings are in store for those who do what is right. No one would consider this, in any sense, bribery. Two ways are set forth, and great good is assured to those who keep God's laws."

"That is very true, Mary, and I thank you for your help. I'll try your way of managing in my family for a while. I think we, too, shall find the time for a Sunshine Group very soon. The hours I spent cleaning Jimmy's suit and shoes yesterday would have been ample in which to get refreshments ready. If the plan works for you, it can be made to work for us."

"I am sure it will," was the encouraging answer.

NOTICE!

Any church in the North Carolina and Virginia Conference which would like to entertain conference this fall should contact Kenneth D. Register, Route 2, Burlington, North Carolina, at the earliest date possible. Since conference met at Lynchburg last year, we should meet somewhere in central North Carolina this time. However, if you would like to have us meet at your church, please let us know.

JESUS' DEATH AND BURIAL.

LESSON XI—JUNE 12, 1949.

MEMORY SELECTION: I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep.—John 10:11.

LESSON TEXT: Matthew 27:57-61; Mark 15:45-47; Luke 23:46-47; 24:1-6; John 19:23-37.

DEVOTIONAL READING: Mark 15:16-25.

There is mystery and majesty and magnetism about the Cross of Christ. There have been many theories about its meaning and there is still a sense of mystery about just what it means. But through the centuries Christian thought at its best has steadily held to the belief that what happened on the Cross had significance and saving power for believers, that as the Scriptures state, "Christ died for our sins" that He loved us and gave Himself for us," that "we have redemption through His blood," that "by His stripes we have been healed," and that "we have been reconciled to God through His death on the Cross." There is mystery here, to be sure, but it has been a sound Christian instinct that has held steadfastly to this central fact amid all the changing interpretations of the centuries.

This gives the Cross a majesty. As the hymn writer wrote, it does tower o'er the wrecks of time. It is the glory of the Christian religion. By the strange alchemy by which Jesus transformed everything He touched, that which was the shame and disgrace of the ancient world has become the glory and boast of the Christian religion.

This in turn gives a strange magnetism to the Cross of Christ. Men insistently and instinctively turn to the Cross of Christ. It has a strange fascination for people, especially for the sinner. Here is the pledge of God's unfailing and redemptive love and the assurance of divine forgiveness. Here is the pledge of victory over the worst that the world can do to us. Here is the assurance of the extent to which God will go to save unto the uttermost His children. Jesus Himself said that if He were lifted up, He would draw all men unto Himself, and His words have been vindicated through the intervening centuries.

The fact of that Man hanging on the Cross has tremendous drawing power.

Facts About the Cross.

As was the case in the arrest and trial of Jesus, so is it true that human nature does not appear in a very good light at the Cross of Christ. There were the soldiers, assigned the task of executing the grim crucifixion, one of the worst forms of death ever invented by the devilish instincts of man, and carrying out their gruesome assignment with cruelty and callousness. Having nailed the victims to the cross they threw dice for the personal possessions of the victims, and then to pass the time away, played a game of chance, impervious to the sufferings of the victims.

The rulers, chief priests and scribes were no better, although we might have expected more from them because of their superior intelligence and their greater privileges. They scoffed at Him, suggesting that if He really were the Christ of God He could save Himself, and would save Himself. They just could not imagine a man having power and not using it in his own behalf! They said they would believe on Him if He came down from the Cross. As if He had not already given enough evidence that He was the Son of God and the Christ!

The people like sheep followed their leaders. The crowd around the Cross and those who passed by on the nearby highway, railed on Him, wagging their heads, and reminded Him that it was He who had said that He could rebuild the temple in three days if it should be destroyed, but that He could not save Himself.

Pilate was not there in person, but he sought to add indignity to the occasion by ordering a superscription put up above Jesus' head with the ironic title, "This is Jesus the King of the Jews," in the three great languages of the day, Latin, Hebrew and Greek. It was a dirty dig.

Strangely enough one of the thieves crucified with Jesus also railed upon Him and heaped indignity upon Him. He was bitter and blatant even unto the last. But the other malefactor was of a different stripe or at least of a different spirit. He paid a fine tribute to Jesus, asserting His innocence, and implored the mercy of Jesus when He came into His kingdom.

Thus far the faces about the Cross do not speak very well for human nature in the raw. But there was a saving element there. Reference has already been made to the second of the malefactors who had a sense of decency and a spirit of penitence. Some of the disciples were about the Cross, at least John was there, for Jesus committed His mother unto John's tender care. And there were other friends of Jesus present at the Cross, other women who had followed Him and ministered unto Him, and who had even come up from Galilee with Him. And, of course, the mother of Jesus was there. That was just like a mother. Even if she could not spare Him from His suffering she could go through it with Him. And only a mother can know the agony of spirit with which she looked upon the scene.

The Figure on the Cross.

There is one completely redeeming factor in the sorry picture. It is the strange figure on the Cross, our Lord Jesus Christ. Here above all other places we see the majesty of His character. Look at Him when He refuses to partake of the wine mingled with gall, a narcotic provided by the merciful women of Jerusalem to deaden the pangs of a crucifixion—He will pay the last full measure of devotion and go through with it with clear senses and clean heart. Listen to Him as He prays even as He is nailed to the Cross, "Father, forgive them for they know not what they do," as He in the midst of His suffering makes provision for His mother, as out of the darkness of the consciousness of the world's sin He cries out, "My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken me?" as with all the limitations of the flesh He cries out, "I thirst," as with infinite tenderness and mercy He assures the penitent thief, "This day shalt thou be with me in Paradise," as in significant words He says, "It is finished," and finally how in perfect trust and child-like faith He says, "Father, into Thy hands I commit or commend my spirit"—listen to these words and look at this Man and then you can readily understand how the centurion would say, "Truly this Man was the Son of God":

When I survey the wondrous Cross,
On Which the Prince of Glory died,
My richest gain I count but loss,
And pour contempt on all my pride.

Where the whole realm of nature mine,
That there were a present all too small,
Love so amazing, so divine,
Deserves my soul, my life, my all.

CHRISTIAN EDUCATION

CONVENTION PERSONNEL: JESSE H. DOLLAR, Chairman; JOHN L. GWIN, ROBERT LEE HOUSE, BERNARD V. MUNGER, KENNETH D. REGISTER, H. SHELTON SMITH, LEON EDGAR SMITH; MESDAMES W. J. ANDES, J. D. STRADER, W. E. WISSEMAN.

THE PURPOSE OF CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

It is the purpose of Christian education to assist persons to live in right relation with God, their heavenly Father, through faith in Jesus Christ as their personal Saviour and Lord, and in right relations with other persons through the development in themselves of the spirit of Jesus and the expression of that spirit in all their relationships. Thus the establishment of the kingdom of God on earth in all human institutions will be sought. This statement of purpose emphasizes two essential and inseparable phases of religious experience: The God-and-man relation and the man-and-man relation. The curriculum of Christian education seeks to provide materials and to stimulate experiences that will insure Christlike living on spiritual and moral, or religious and ethical levels.

The curriculum of Christian education is concerned with giving assistance to the whole life of persons in their growing Christian experience. It is concerned to assist growing persons more and more to see God as he is made known in Jesus Christ; to yield themselves in loving and loyal obedience to the will of God; to grow in that fellowship, human and divine, that is an ever-deepening fellowship with the heavenly Father and with all his believing children. It is concerned with the preparation of growing Christians to live as Christians in the midst of an unchristian world. It is concerned that such an impact may be made upon that world that the Christian people may find their lives in losing them, and may increasingly leaven the lump, so that the kingdom of God may be an ever-coming kingdom, and that more and more his will may be done on earth.—Curriculum Committee of The Methodist Church.

I BELIEVE IN CHRISTIAN EDUCATION.

I believe in Christian education, which is the development of the life of the individual and of the community according to the pattern given us by the best Teacher the world has known.

I believe in Christian education because it is education motivated by the loftiest ideals that any educator or system of education ever had—that of love.

I believe in Christian education because ignorance, superstition, unchristian motives and practice have long cursed the world—and all these are marked by Christian education for extinction.

I believe in Christian education because it seeks to go beyond secular education in that it bases itself on the existence of a Father-God and on the brotherhood of man; its ultimate objective is the building of the kingdom of God on earth.

I believe in Christian education because its exponents have from the first sought to make it a quest for truth, for reality, for God, for right relation between men of every race and creed.

I believe in Christian education because of the fruitage it has yielded in every age and land where it has been cherished and nurtured and because I believe its greatest career lies in the days ahead.

I believe in Christian education in spite of the slow progress it has made through the years and in spite of the indifference that there is on the part of the uninformed regarding it, for our day is witnessing a new interest in it and a new passion to make it accessible to all. God is taking men into partnership with Himself in bringing them to the abundant life.

—Charles J. Lotz.

Division of Christian Education

Recommends That . . .

1. We call upon every church in our fellowship to reach and teach the unreached. We recommend that each church set as its goal for the biennium a net increase of at least 10 per cent in church school enrollment.
2. We urge every pastor and board of Christian Education to adopt a comprehensive curriculum for the church school which, year by year, helps the pupils to grow in the understanding, experience & expression of the Christian religion.
3. We recommend the holding of monthly teachers' meetings, or workers' conference, in all our churches.

4. We urge that the churches of our fellowship use and extend all available opportunities for week-day Christian education.
5. We call our churches to extend their ministry to meet the needs of young men and women who are preparing for and sharing in college life.
6. We recommend that every church attempt at least one new project in the Christian education of adult members in its parish.
7. We urge that every church, during the next two years, make an earnest attempt to enlist parents in a program of Christian nurture, and that it use available means of guiding them in this important work.—Harry Thomas Stock.

THE CHRISTIAN CONVENTION AT DUKE.

The ministers of the Congregational Christian Churches should avail themselves of the opportunity presented at Duke University, June 7-10, 1949. Here is the Christian Convocation (sponsored by Duke Divinity School, The North Carolina Pastors' School, the North Carolina Rural Church Institute and the North Carolina Council of Churches).

Among the outstanding speakers will be Dr. Thomas A. Tripp of the Congregational Christian Church. He will present the rural church and its problems. He was there last year and they liked him so much that they invited him again this year. There was only one Congregational Christian minister there to hear him last year. There should be more of us this year.

The program gets under way at eleven o'clock the morning of June 7. There will not be any advance registration, but rooms will be assigned when guests arrive. All those who wish to be entertained on the campus will be housed in the dormitories as guests of the University, and although most of the University facilities are for men, it is hoped that a limited number of ladies may be accommodated. Each person attending the Convocation will be required to pay a registration fee of $2.00 upon arrival at Duke. Meals can be bought in the dining rooms of the University.

This is one of the greatest meetings in this area and Congregational Christians ought to be in on it.

W. J. ANDES.

The Orphanage

DEAR FRIENDS:

Nice, fresh, green peas, onions, lettuce, etc., are beginning to appear on the tables at the Orphanage. Vegetables from the garden are always most welcome. It looks as though there will be plenty of different things soon.

The fields all look good. The corn has been planted and potatoes are coming up.

The dairy is doing its part, too. The children are having all the milk they want to drink, and then the surplus is being sold.

The repair work in the various buildings continues. It is very difficult to live in a building when so much work is being done both inside and out. So we hope everything will be finished up soon, now.

We appreciate the interest one young lady is taking in our Business School graduate. She took her to Burlington and fitted her out in proper clothes for a graduate. Both of them, no doubt, had a wonderful time doing it.

School will be out soon and the usual routine will change somewhat. The older boys will help on the farm and in the dairy. The girls will have more cooking and house work to do. There will be more time for play for the younger children. Now we are coming to the point. There just isn't much playground equipment and it could be used. Of course, when you were young children didn't have to have slides and swings and all the other contraptions. But your grandfather didn't have to have an automobile either. Times do change. And we do need playground equipment bad. Don't you think so?

ASHRAMS SCHEDULED.

For the tenth successive year Ashrams—a corporate quest for a larger understanding and a better realization of the Kingdom of God—will be held in five states this summer under the sponsorship of the Department of Evangelism of the Federal Council of the Churches of Christ in America.

Ashrams will be as follows: Bard College, Annandale-on-Hudson, New York, July 5-15; Green Lake, Wisconsin, July 18-28; Blue Ridge, North Carolina, August 6-13; Camp Sierra, California, August 16-26.

In making the announcement of the Ashrams for the Department of Evangelism, Dr. H. H. McConnell said that the growth of the "cell" idea has been one of the quiet but significant developments in American Protestantism during the last decade.

"Since the Ashrams were introduced in 1940 in this country approximately 1,000 men and women each year have attended. They represented a cross section of our nation's life. The result has been that, to a great degree, those who have attended have returned to their vocations and their churches with a life yielded more completely to the mastery of Christ and a higher conception of the relevance of the Christian program to all areas of life.

"The Ashram schedule for each day is unique. The day opens with a period of corporate silence. The entire group gathers in the open and spends a half hour in silent meditation, devotional reading and prayer. Then follows an opportunity for all to share with the group the spiritual insights they have gained from the meditation. Another unusual feature is the Work Hour. All share in manual labor as a means of developing creative fellowship.

"The total impact of an Ashram cannot be described—it must be experienced. Its greatest recommendation is the enthusiastic endorsement of those who have come under its influence."

In announcing Christian leaders who will serve as members of the faculty at one or more Ashrams, Dr. McConnell said that Dr. E. Stanley Jones, the internationally known evangelist, will return to the United States to give two messages daily at all five Ashrams.

"ART OF LIVING" & "HIGHLIGHTS OF THE BIBLE" TO RETURN TO AIR IN JUNE FOR 17 WEEKS.

NBC's Summer Schedule of weekly Protestant programs will begin with the return of "The Art of Living" on Saturday, June 4, and Highlights of the Bible" on Sunday, June 5, each for 17 weeks.

"The Art of Living"—talks on the application of Christian principles to everyday living—will again be conducted by the Rev. Dr. Norman Vincent Peale. On June 4 (6:15-6:30 p. m., EDT), Dr. Peale will talk on "How to Have Peace of Mind." Other topics: "Relax and Renew Joyous Power," June 11; "How Obstacles are Removed," June 18; "Formula for Eliminating Your Worries," June 25.

"Highlights of the Bible" (Sundays, 10:00 a. m., EDT) is a period of Sunday devotions with the Rev. Frederick K. Stamm officiating. Dr. Stamm's sermon topics for June will be "Life Drives Its Bargain," June 5; "Forces That Lead Us Astray," June 12; "The Peril of Surface Living," June 19, and "Learning to Speak Out," June 26.

General Grant, speaking of charges of cowardice, says: "The distant rear of an army engaged in battle is not the best place to judge what is going on. The stragglers in the rear are not to make us forget the intrepid soldiers in front." But how many judge the Christian Church and religion by its worst representatives!—H. O. Mackey.

IMMORTAL LOVE. C. Rexford Raymond. Southern Printing & Publishing Co., Charleston, S. C. $1.00.

Richard Roberts once wrote: "I agree that poetry—the real thing—at its highest is akin to prayer. Both are of the nature of aspiration." One is inclined to agree to this statement after reading Dr. Raymond's Immortal Love. It is gratifying to realize that we do not have to hark back to Robert Browning for material on this great theme. The author refuses to relegate to Hollywood all responsibility for describing life's supreme and immortal experience of love. Sweethearts, husbands and wives, mothers and fathers should read this volume. Love is a neglected theme in many a home. The cohesive element is gone. A perusal of these sonnets should inspire many to recapture the note of chivalry in family life.

Dr. Raymond dedicated his sonnet sequence to the memory of his wife who passed "beyond the shores of time" June 18, 1948. "In the main," he states in a letter to the editor, "it is a collection of love sonnets which I wrote to her and about her during the last twenty or more years. As I collected them, I found here and there intimations of my faith in personal immortality, so I wrote an Epilogue accentuating that note. I hope the book may not only comfort other bereaved people but may also stimulate a more confident faith in personal immortality, concerning which I find considerable doubt and vague ideas."

The preacher may become the poet. More preachers should be poets. Perhaps this book will stimulate the poetic urge in many readers.

STEPS TOWARD A SINGING CHURCH.

Donald D. Kettring. The Westminster Press. Philadelphia. $4.50.

Out of a rich and varied experience in the development of a multiple-choir program, Mr. Kettring traces the intricate steps in such a development. His analysis is lucid, practical and comprehensive. He sets forth the advantages of a multiple-choir arrangement and describes the factors involved: the physical setting, organization, equipment, personnel, budget, rehearsal procedure, choir standards and records, repertory, vestments, corporate worship and choir festivals. Those who do not contemplate a multiple-choir program will find help in this detailed presentation.

Much of the material in this book grew out of experience in the First Congregational Church in Columbus, Ohio, where the author served as organist-director. Mr. Kettring is an ordained minister of music. This is a good book for your church library, and should be required reading for every music committee.

MOVING HEAVEN AND EARTH. Donald F. Ackland. Iverson-Ford Associates, New York.

This is the story of R. G. Letourneau, champion earth-mover, a story which confirms and illustrates the statement that "truth is stranger than fiction."

Mr. Letourneau came up the hard way, developed multiple plants for the production of earth-moving machinery, and has endeavored to conduct his vast business with Christ as the Senior Partner.

His phenomenal success in devising and adapting machines for a great variety of purposes will be of particular interest to the mechanically minded. His vital interest in religion, his evangelistic zeal and missionary fervor, his far-flung program of stewardship will be of particular interest to those who like to see the Gospel in action. The contemporary "success story" is told in a simple, moving style by the English writer, Donald F. Ackland. We commend this book especially to business men.

PICTURE OF THE MONTH.

Home of the Brave.

During the past year or two, we have witnessed several courageous attempts by movie-makers to diagnose race prejudice. The best of such films to date were Gentlemen's Agreement and Crossfire. We applauded both, on the basis that such pictures, when presenting their themes dramatically and with understanding, can do much to clear the air and lead to dispassionate consideration of vexing social issues.

American movie-goers, of whatever section or prejudice, have proved that they can "take it," can benefit from it, and though they may not always emerge from viewing such films to undertake crusades to correct the evils presented, they at least are broad-minded enough to profit from their consideration of "the other side."

Now comes Home of the Brave, a clinical look into Negro-white relations. It is a powerful drama, brilliantly performed and having unusual entertainment values entirely apart from its tastefully and tactfully rendered "message." This Stanley Kramer production, and released by United Artists, thus joins other Hollywood presentations in revealing not only an encouraging awareness of social problems but a skill in packaging them.

The story focusses on a small group of American soldiers on a dangerous reconnaissance mission on a tiny enemy-held island in the South Pacific. Under the leadership of a young officer, a quartet of soldiers, one a Negro, comprises a tight little unit wherein all the attitudes toward race are represented. Their "Negro problem" is a close and ever-present one, for the white soldiers and for the Negro boy alike.

A Japanese sniper brings the situation to a climax. During the action, the Negro soldier suffers violent shock as a result of inner conflicts and is taken back to the base for treatment. Under the ministrations of the hospital doctor, he conquers the problem within himself.

A satisfactory ending is achieved by the decision of the Negro and one of the white soldiers to become business partners in a restaurant project upon their discharge from service. (We wish, however, that there were no "bars" in the projected restaurant; this may somewhat spoil, for some people, what otherwise would be considered a happy conclusion.)

Some of the talk among the boys, while under strain, is not of the gentle variety though consistent with time and place. But, viewed sympathetically for its overall message, "Home of the Brave" can be of help in evaluating one's own racial attitudes as well as imparting a glimpse of the deep psychological struggle every human being has to face at one time or another. (Suitable for adults and young people.)

The great trouble today is that there are too many people looking for someone else to do something for them. The solution of most of our troubles is to be found in everyone doing something for himself.—Henry Ford.

Ten Commandments for Effective Worship

By DR. JESSE H. DOLLAR

- I. Be in your Pew before the Prelude begins.
 - II. Use the music of the Prelude as an aid to prayerfulness—not as an accompaniment for pew gossip with the person beside you. “Be still, and know that I am God.”
 - III. Accept the courtesy of your usher. To sit down before you reach the pew the usher has picked for you is gross discourtesy.
 - IV. If the service has begun when you arrive, wait for the usher to show you a seat. Never interrupt the reading of the Holy Scriptures by your late entry. Wait outside the door. The usher will seat you at the proper time.
 - V. Join heartily in the singing of the hymns and congregational responses. If you can't sing, open your hymnal and read the words of the hymn while they are being sung.
 - VI. Bow your head and close your eyes during prayers. To sit erect and look about reflect bad breeding and inexcusable irreverence.
 - VII. If your purpose in attending church is to criticize what goes on, both you and the service are penalized by your presence.
 - VIII. Look for something in the service that will help you, and you will surely find it.
 - IX. Pray for those who have the responsibility of ministering to your spiritual needs.
 - X. Before leaving pray that God will help you add to your life the good you have felt, the truth you have heard and the beauty you have seen.
- He who doeth these things sincerely hath worshipped God effectively.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because God surely does. He creates them beautiful and lovable, he renews the life and the hope of the race through them.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because they have so much innate goodness. They are free from many of the weaknesses and prejudices that adults possess.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because they are teachable. The delight in following noble examples of right living.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because they inspire a youthful outlook and spirit. They keep the world young by their boundless activity and their overflowing energy.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because their needs compel their elders to give themselves to consistent living and worthy enterprises. Parents count it a high privilege to devote themselves to their children. God put a yearning into every human heart to father or mother a little child.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because I believe in the future and in the ultimate triumph of good over evil. Children will have much to do with that triumph.

I BELIEVE IN CHILDREN because I believe that they are gradually coming into their birthright, and that in the near future this shall be a better world for children to achieve the abundant life which God intendent they should enjoy.—Charles J. Lotz.

News Flashes

The Editor is in Greensboro this week attending the Southern Provincial Council.

The picture, "Suffer the little children to come unto me," by Margaret W. Tarrant, is used on the front page through the courtesy of Hale, Cushman and Flint.

It has been announced that Dr. James E. Walter who for the past twelve years has been a member of the Missions Council has become president of Piedmont College.

Dr. and Mrs. W. W. Sloan left Elon College Monday, May 30, for New York where Tuesday they took a plane for Stockholm, Sweden. They will return to New York by plane August 31. While in Europe they will visit Sweden, Norway, Denmark, Finland, Germany, Switzerland, France, England and Scotland, and Mrs. Sloan will spend five weeks in Spain studying at the University of Madrid. Dr. Sloan will spend some time at Upsala University in Sweden. Dr. D. J. Bowden, dean of Elon College, will supply the pulpit of the Shallow Ford Church during the absence of the pastor. Dr. Sloan's radio program, "God Marches On; People, Places and Events in the World's Progress," aired each Sunday by WFNS, Burlington, since last January, will be resumed the first Sunday in September.

SHALLOW FORD CHURCH.

Recently my board of deacons asked me to write up a report on the Shallow Ford Church for THE CHRISTIAN SUN. It is nearly midnight and I have several hours' work to do before starting to Europe tomorrow, but here goes.

Attendance at the morning church service continues to increase. Ten adults were received into membership at a sacramental service the Thursday night before Easter. The adult group meeting each Sunday night for fifteen months has just completed a comprehensive course in the New Testament and is looking forward to starting a two-year course in the Old Testament to begin the last Sunday night of September. The young people's society recently presented a musical program on the parsonage lawn, using the side porch of the parsonage as the stage.

Numerous physical improvements to the church plant have been made. Last fall in addition to placing a furnace in the church (the furnace room was excavated by volunteer labor) a power lawn mower and fire-fighting equipment were purchased, and the parsonage lawn was graded and seeded. This spring the entire interior of the main floor of the church, sanctuary and classrooms was completely redecorated. The boulders which have always disfigured the church grounds have been removed—one proved to be a ball eight feet in diameter—and the grounds are being graded and arranged for separate lawn and parking court.

JUNIUS EDGAR WEST MEMORIAL PLAQUE UNVEILED.

A simple, but impressive service was held in the First Congregational Christian Church of Newport News on Sunday May 29 when a Memorial Bronze Plaque honoring Colonel J. E. West was unveiled at the morning service of worship. The wording on the Plaque reads as follows:

TO THE GLORY OF GOD AND IN MEMORY OF JUNIUS EDGAR WEST

Christian Steward, Statesman, and Missionary Leader. His Vision, Generosity, and Sustained Interest Were Largely Responsible For The Organization And Steady Growth Of This Church.

This Plaque will be placed on the wall of the Foyer of the Church in honor of Colonel West and in memory of His contribution to this Church. For it was he who saw the need of a church in this city and took the initiative in having a church organized here. And it was he who for two years paid personally the salary of the first minister, Dr. N. G. Newman. And through the years, as Chairman of the Plans Committee of the Christian Missionary Association, and as a leader in the missionary work of our denomination, he saw to it that the church received missionary aid until at long last it became self-supporting. It is most appropriate, therefore, that the church take this means of honoring him and of perpetuating his memory in the church.

We were very happy to have with us for the Unveiling Service, Mrs. West, Colonel's devoted and beloved wife, and Margaret, their only child, and her husband, Mr. Henry Bowen Frazier, Jr., and their three sons, Henry Bowen Frazier, III. West Frazier and William Tyler Frazier, as well as Mr. and Mrs. C. D. West and members of their family, and Mr. and Mrs. Rosser West. Two of the sons, Colonel West's grandsons, Henry and West Frazier, at the appointed time unveiled the Plaque which had been temporarily mounted and placed on an easel, and which was thrown into sharp relief by a spotlight when the beautiful dark maroon drapery was reverently drawn aside by the boys.

We were happy, too, to have present for the service Dr. N. G. Newman the first pastor of the church, whose salary Colonel West had paid personally for two years, and who laid a firm foundation on which others have built through the years. Dr. Newman offered the dedicatory prayer after the Plaque was unveiled.

The service itself was simple but effective. After the singing of a part of the hymn, "For All the Saints Who from Their Labors Rest," the congregation joined in an especially appropriate responsive reading. The writer who had served as Colonel West's pastor for ten years, and who had been associated with him in many capacities for many years, then spoke briefly on some impressions he had of Colonel West, emphasizing his integrity of character, his independent thinking, his Christian gentlemanliness, his devotion to his home, his loyalty to the church, his effectiveness as a Sunday school teacher, his faithfulness as a steward, his aggressive missionary spirit and leadership, and his generous and sustained friendship for the local church. The grandsons of Colonel West then unveiled the Plaque and Dr. New Newman offered the dedicatory prayer. Then the congregation sang the remaining stanzas of the hymn and remained with bowed heads during the organ meditation. The church feels that it has honored itself in thus honoring Junius Edgar West.

H. S. HARDCASTLE.

A state, in which the citizens are compelled or actuated by means of a dictator to obey even the best laws, might be a tranquil, peaceable, prosperous State; but it would always seem to me a multitude of well-cared-for slaves, rather than a nation of free and independent men with no restraint save such as was required to prevent any infringement on right.

NEW PARISH HOUSE FOR ELON COMMUNITY CHURCH.

Though Elon College has been generous in providing facilities for the activities of the Elon College Community Church, founded simultaneously with Elon College itself in 1889, the Community Church has been faced with the need for a community meeting place because of the large number of new residents in the community, and the new Parish House of the church just completed under the leadership of Rev. Jesse H. Dollar,

D. D., minister of the Community Church, is a realization of this objective.

The church was able to purchase a United States Army Post Chapel at Camp Davis near Wilmington, North Carolina. The chapel was dismantled piece-by-piece and trucked to Elon College. It was reconstructed as the Parish House of the Elon College Community Church on a new lot purchased from the college and is located adjacent to the parsonage on the beautiful corner lot across from the campus on which the permanent church structure will be erected. The Parish House is the first church structure to be erected in the Elon College Community, since the college has furnished church facilities through the years.

The Parish House is 80 feet by 38 feet. It affords facilities for a fellowship hall 36 feet by 46 feet, a modern nursery room, an up-to-date electrically-equipped kitchen, a small church parlor, rest rooms, and a large room where the Young Adult Class meets. Two additional rooms at the rear of the building are now being used as storage rooms, but will be finished for the expanding program of the church. The fellowship hall is being used by the Community Bible Class for its sessions on Sunday and the Community Church will hold its services in this room during the summer months. It is furnished in such a way that it is being used for fellowship suppers, recreation and community meetings.

The building is heated by an oil

A Religious Weekly for the Home, devoted to the interests of the Kingdom as represented by the Congregational Christian Churches.

Our Principles.

1. The Lord Jesus Christ is the only Head of the Church.
2. Christian is a sufficient name for the Church.
3. The Bible is a sufficient rule of faith and practice.
4. Christian character is a sufficient test of fellowship and Church membership.
5. The right of private judgment and the liberty of conscience is a right and a privilege that should be accorded to and exercised by all.

PREMIUM FOR VISION*

"Her prophets also find no vision from the Lord," cried Jeremiah in his Lamentations. Jerusalem had fallen on evil days. Her former glory had departed. Why had this happened? In addition to the social, political and economic reasons for this condition, Jeremiah pointed to the delinquency of the prophets. Central among all explanations of misfortune or tragedy is the religious one. Like windows which refuse to be opened because of long disuse, these prophets of the Most High had become blinded by secularism, luxury and indulgence. The trysting place with God had been abandoned, and their corporate neglect had added up to tragedy.

One of the indispensable elements in a solvent civilization is a vision from the Lord. But there must be a medium through which the vision is received. The prophet, disciplined by study, purified by sacrifice, and made receptive through meditation, is God's time-honored medium of revelation. Revelation is a reality. The Bible and church history offer abundant evidence of this truth. And no influence has been more formative in the shaping of our civilization than the vision of the prophet.

Today we need a new vision of the Church, the towering ministry of a spirit-filled church in a secular age. The prophet must stay near his watch-tower to read the signs of the times, to catch the authentic accents of God's fresh revelation. The Church dare not trust to its own momentum as it faces up-hill problems of the future. It must have the fresh momentum and guidance of new visions, hopes and victories.

We need a new vision of the Church here in our Southland. We, too, have our derelict prophets, our miss-spent energies, our deserted altars, our visionless voices. In a land deeply scarred and handicapped by our corporate sins of omission and commission, we stand in need of a vision from on High. And however vaunted our opinions, however successful our endeavors, we should be humbled by the realization that we never get beyond the realm of possible misfortune and disaster. Unforeseen captivities await us, just as surely as we forget God.
